ROMMEL RENEWS BID FOR NILE VALLEY, SUEZ

Nazis Deepen Wedge Toward Stalingrad, Report

CHINESE NUTCRACKER DRIVE THREATENS KINHWA

NOT CAUGHT OFF GUARD

London, Sept. 1 (CP).—A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Cairo said today that an axis thrust on the south of the El Alamein-Qattara line in Egypt had achieved an advance of about eight miles through British minefields.

An axis attempt to punch through the central line has been contained, however, this report said, and enemy armored forces are in contact with British light forces.

The main attack, in the area of El Hemimat, near the Qattara Depression, came after a successful night raid by New Zealanders and a weak Italian attack which was repulsed with heavy losses.

London, Sept. 1 (CP).—Tank-led German columns, the vanguard of an axis force estimated as high as 140,000 combat troops between El Alamein and Bengasi, were smashing at the British lines in the southern sector of the Egyptian front today in what may be a great Nazi campaign for the Nile valley, Suez and the strategic Middle East.

Although there was no official word in London that the new assault was the opening of a new German offensive, there was no doubt in unofficial but well-informed circles that Field Marshal Erwin Rommel had started a large-scale offensive, synchronized with the great battles in southern Russia.

Four German divisions—the 15th and 21st armored divisions of 17,000 men and 200 tanks each, the 90th light motorized division of 14,000 men and the 164th infantry division of 17,000 men — were said to form the spearhead of the axis attack.

Parachute troops which arrived in North Africa at the same time as the 164th division also are believed to be attached to this force.

Italians In North Africa.

Two Italian armored divisions, the Ariete and the Littorio of 8,000 men and approximately 150 tanks each, also supply some of the enemy armor. There are six Italian infantry divisions of 10,000 men each in North Africa.

London, Sept. 1 —(CP)— Allied forces battled against a new Axis offensive on the southern flank of the desert battle line in Egypt today in what may be Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's renewal of his bid for the Nile Valley, Suez and the strategic lands of the middle and near east.

The war office, announcing the new offensive, said it is too early to tell whether it is "on a major scale," but all the signs of recent weeks indicate that Rommel is about to test Prime Minister Churchill's recent pledge to "fight for Egypt and the Nile Valley as if

DUAL LAUNCHING

Burlington, Vt., Sept. 1 — (AP) - Warcraft floated on Lake Champlain today for the first time since the War of 1812, as a pair of subchasers were launched at the Shelburne Harbor shipyards.

The dual launching marked a break in a century-old treaty between the United States and Canada barring armed ships from the lake. The treaty was signed after the War of 1812.

Safe Blast Smashes Beef Into Hamburger

Malden, Mass., Sept. 1 — (AP)— Cracksmen blew a heavy safe apart in the Malden Public Market during the night, obtaining more than $1,000 in cash, but the loss was much greater.

Police found that the thieves had wheeled the safe into a big ice chest, and piled it high with sides of beef to muffle the sound of the nitro-glycerine explosion.

Only Ordinary Leaves Granted Over Labor Day

Ottawa, Sept. 1 (CP).—A spokesman for National Defence headquarters said last night that military authorities throughout Canada have been instructed not to issue more than ordinary leaves to soldiers and officers during Labor Day week-end.

He said the order, described as a move to prevent overtaxing transportation system, was aimed only at special extension leaves and did not apply to ordinary leaves, which may be granted.

"In other words," he added, "Labor Day week-end will be regarded as an ordinary week-end in the army."

The spokesman said that originally all leaves had been ordered cancelled for Labor Day week-end but a supplementary order permits the granting of ordinary leaves.

Aerial Battleship May Be Produced

London, Sept. 1 —(CP)— Colin Bednall, air correspondent of the Daily Mail, declared today the success of the United States Flying Fortress in Europe is likely to start a race between the United Nations and the Axis to produce a plane "akin to an aerial battleship."

"Just how well it has established itself within the short space of a fortnight is now the subject of close study by startled experts on both sides of the English Channel," he wrote.

The Fortresses, he said, have carried out more than 100 offensive sorties against the enemy in daylight without loss of a single plane.

"No other bomber has such a record in Europe," he wrote.

"In the course of these operations they have destroyed or severely damaged at least 11 Focke-Wulf 190s . . . which attempted to intercept them. Their bombing, all done from a great height, has been exceptionally acurate in every case."

R. A. F. SCORES HITS ON KALEWA

New Delhi, Sept. 1—(CP)—R.A.F. planes bombed and machine-gunned the Japanese base of Kalewa, on the Chindwin River in Burma, scoring hits on buildings and river boats last Sunday, a headquarters communique said today.

Blood Freezing and Drying Plant Will Keep Blood For Eight Years

LONDON, Sept. 1 — (CP) — British scientists are spending a legacy of nearly $100,000 on a blood freezing and drying plant which will carry development of life-saving plasma still another great stride forward.

Building of the machine, largest yet erected for the freezing and drying of plasma, will put Britain ahead in a field of science which is being diligently studied, for peace as well as war, by all fighting nations. It was made possible through a gift to the Medical Research Council by trustees of the late millionaire chemist, Sir Henry Wellcome.

The machine resembles a giant refrigerator coupled to a group of tall cylinders. It will freeze and dry each week the blood gifts of 10,000 donors. Next week — or even eight years from now — the frozen dried plasma will give life to sick and wounded in any climate because it retains its quality indefinitely.

Dried plasma is saving lives in Egypt today and British warships, fighting their way to Russia, or Malta, carry the flake-like substance to save lives in the middle of intense actions or raging gales.

GREAT EXPLOSIVES DUMP CAPTURED NEAR BELFAST

Was to Have Been Used by I. R. A. Against Forces So Police Claim

17 PERSONS DETAINED

Belfast, Sept. 1 (AP)—United States troops have been ordered to stay off the streets of Belfast tomorrow, it was announced today as tension mounted with a report that the outlawed Irish Republican Army was planning attacks on British and American troops in Northern Ireland.

There was no explanation of the order but presumably it was issued to lessen any chance of incidents among American forces and Pro-I.R.A. elements in Belfast. Neither was there any indication how long the order would remain in effect.

Arms Dump Captured

Belfast, Sept. 1 (CP)—Police announced today that a great arms and explosives dump captured near here Sunday night was to have been used by the outlawed Irish Republican Army in armed attacks on British and United States forces in Northern Ireland.

A police statement said the special manifesto issued by the I.R.A. calling the presence of United States forces in Northern Ireland an act of aggression made it clear that "this illegal organization had been preparing for attacks on members of the armed forces of the Crown, police and United States forces stationed in Northern Ireland.

Police said seventeen persons had been detained for questioning as all available officers concentrated on investigation of a plot which, they said, had reached a point where the organization was able to amass explosives enough to wreck half this Ulster capital.

One man armed with a tommygun was killed when the arsenal was uncovered yesterday in a raid on a farm five miles from this city. Authorities said they suspected he was an important member of the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

All police leaves were cancelled amid a situation growing more tense as the hour approached for the scheduled hanging tomorrow of Thomas J. Williams, 19-year-old I.R.A. member, for the slaying of a policeman last Easter morning. Security forces were on guard against any disorder.

Police said they believed the arms and ammunition dump was an arsenal of the I.R.A. It contained ten beer-barrel-size kegs of nitroglycerine, gunpowder and other explosives.

Strenuous efforts went on, meanwhile, to gain a reprieve for Williams, convicted with five other Belfast men of killing the policeman who was on patrol against anticipated disorders on the anniversary of the 1916 Easter rebellion.

All were sentenced originally to be hanged. Williams took full responsibility for the shooting, however, and the other five were given a reprieve. The Lord Mayor of Dublin is among persons who have sought leniency for him.

Russians Still Menace German Flank Within The Big Don Bend

Soviet Cavalry Recapture Nazi-Occupied Village South of Krasnodar to Put Nazi Army in Caucasus on Defensive in That Sector

ITALIANS OVERWHELMED AT LETSKAYA

(By EDDY GILMORE)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Sept. 1 (AP) — The Russians said today the Germans had deepened a wedge toward Stalingrad from the southwest and infiltrated that city's northwestern defences, but emphasized the casualties suffered by the invaders all along the front.

Scattered details reported in the mid-day communique indicated Germany's loss of at least 48 tanks and about 2,000 killed.

After fighting in which about 400 Germans were killed, "one Soviet unit withdrew to new positions" before the Kotelnikovski-Stalingrad pincer claw, the Soviet information bureau said. Tank crews were declared to have repulsed numerous attacks on other sectors of that area.

Red Army men still menacing the Axis flank within the Don Bend waged both offensive and defensive warfare and reports from the Caucasian battlefields were highlighted by a declaration that Soviet cavalry recaptured a Nazi-occupied village south of Krasnodar.

Naval Sorties Being Crushed

German naval parties are attempting to raid the Caucasian coast in conjunction with the overland drive from Krasnodar, but these are being smashed, a Pravda dispatch from the Black Sea fleet declared.

The Communist Party newspaper said Russians were striking at German-held ports with gunboats, torpedo boats and planes.

Tremendous new forces of men and machines were reported moving up to bolster the Axis assault upon Stalingrad.

Pravda said the Germans, hurrying ammunition, food and fuel to their forces fighting between the Don and the Volga, were using squadrons of transport planes and long lines of trucks guarded by tanks.

The midnight communique said no material changes took place at the front yesterday, but it reported the Germans had wedged into Soviet lines southwest of Stalingrad and "infiltrated into our defence positions" northwest of the city.

Red Army artillerymen and air crews blasted a column of Field Fedor Von Bock's reserve troops, arms and supplies into retreat northwest of Stalingrad, destroying most of its trucks, Soviet reports said.

Italians Overwhelmed

Other Soviet forces overwhelmed Italian regiments assigned to a Don Bend salient in the area of Kletskaya, the Russians said.

Prisoners and such material as 38 field guns and 265 machine guns were captured in the Kletskaya action, which dug into Axis positions protecting the Don Bend crossings.

Indicating a relatively heavy use of planes in the western Caucasus, the Soviet information bureau said 18 German craft were shot down south of Krasnodar. Cossacks wiped out 200 parachutists landed behind the Russian lines, it was announced.

Seven German tanks and 22 trucks were destroyed and more than 200 Germans were slain during continued fighting for strategic central Caucasian highways about Prokhladnenski.

The midnight communique made no reference to the Russians' central front offensive, but said Soviet troops on the neighboring Kalinin front had captured three settlements in fighting which cost the Germans 800 casualties.

Farther north, a Red Army force was declared to have destroyed 28 Nazi blockhouses and pill-boxes and

WILL SOON APPLY MEAT RATIONING IN UNITED STATES

Civilians Will Receive Approximately 2½ Lbs. of Meat Per Week

"MEATLESS DAYS"

Washington, Sept. 1 (AP)— Americans will be asked by the government soon to forego the extra steaks and chops they are able to buy with their record-breaking pay envelopes, and in about four months all meat will be rationed.

Agriculture Secretary Claude Wickard announced Monday night the Food Requirements Committee had decided on rationing as the best method of assuring an equitable distribution of what he termed the largest livestock production in history.

(J. G. Taggart, Foods Administrator of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, said at Ottawa there is no need of meat rationing in Canada "so far as our domestic situation is concerned."

(He added that "of course, I can't say how future developments outside of our domestic sphere might affect meat—or any other commodity for that matter." Any unusually heavy demand from Britain for meat might necessitate rationing in Canada, he said.)

Meanwhile, a conservation campaign, possibly including "meatless days," will be instituted to limit civilian consumption of red meats to about the same average amount as has been eaten per capita during the last 10 years.

2 1-2 Pounds Per Week

"It will give our civilians approximately 2 1-2 pounds of meat per person per week," Wickard

GENERAL PEARKES TO COMMAND PACIFIC AREA

At Present V. C. Wearer is Commanding 1st Canadian Division Overseas

53 YEARS OLD

Ottawa, Sept. 1. (CP)— Defence Minister Ralston announced today that Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, at present commanding the 1st Canadian Division Overseas, shortly will arrive in Canada to assume the appointment of General Officer Commanding-in-Chief, Pacific Command.

Gen. Pearkes, who is 53, won the Victoria Cross as a major at Paschendaele in the First Great War. He has been in command of the 1st Canadian Division since July, 1940.

Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, chief of the general staff, took over temporary command of the Pacific area last June. Col. Ralston announced at that time that this appointment was made "to deal with organization plans arising out of expansion of army forces in that command".

There was no indication in the announcement as to who would succeed Gen. Pearkes as Officer in Command of the 1st Division.

It said "Maj.-Gen. Pearkes at present commanding the 1st Canadian Division will shortly arrive in Canada to assume the important appointment of General Officer Commanding-in-Chief, Pacific Command".

ALLIED BOMBERS LEAVE JAP AIR BASE BATTERED

10 TONS DROPPED

By MURLING SPENCER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

A severe night attack was made on the Japanese air base at Lae, 400 miles to the northwest, and skirmishes on land developed at nearby Salamaua. Other sharp fighting was reported at Kokoda at the base of the towering Owen Stanley range half way to the most advanced allied base at Port Moresby.

The known Japanese surviving the allied ambush at Milne Bay were pushed back into a narrow peninsula north of the bay. Day-long reconnaissance flights failed to uncover any evidence of Japanese troops, installations, or stores beyond in the thick jungle. The pilots, however, saw three damaged barges and three tanks bogged in the muck and mud, all mute evidence of the stoutness of the Australian land forces.

Ten Tons Dropped.

Allied bombers dropped ten tons of explosives on the Lae airdrome, leaving it smoking and battered.

United States B-17 and B-26 bombers delivered the attack on Lae, starting fires visible for 30 miles and damaging a number of grounded planes. The enemy was caught by surprise because no planes rose to intercept and only meagre ground fire was thrown up.

The Aussies at Milne Bay reported the Japanese abandoned large quantities of material. In one spot, 50 dead enemy troops were found.

The belief was expressed that the Japanese who fled by warship Saturday night had been hard pressed, because the enemy seldom leaves bodies, for religious reasons, and because valuable notebooks, papers and maps often are found on the corpses.

Difficult communications hid the exact strength of the remaining enemy units.

Australian troops fighting in the jungles of the narrow peninsula north of Milne Bay, at the southeastern tip of New Guinea, are wiping out the scattered enemy units unable to escape by sea from the trap sprung after their landing last Wednesday, a communique announced.

"Seven enemy fighters made a weak attack near the (Milne Bay) air field," it was announced. "No damage resulted."

Japanese dispositions were tested by ground patrols in the mountainous Kokoda area 60 miles from the Allied base at Port Moresby and Allied fighter pilots swooped low with machine guns chattering to in the region of Salamaua, on the northwest coast. Bombers struck at

London, Sept. 1—(CP) — Three years after Hitler hurled this war machine against Poland and sowed the seed of global war, a key to Allied strategy lay today in the great middle east land bridge from the Egyptian desert to the Caucasus.

Fighting rages at both ends of the bridge—on the sands west of the rich Nile Delta, where Field Marshal Erwin Rommel has opened a new campaign, and around Stalingrad, where the Russians are fighting to save their arsenal city of the lower Volga.

That bridge must be held, in the opinion of qualified but unofficial and unidentifiable observers, if the United Nations—in the midst of plans for invasion of Europe and an amphibious campaign for control of the pacific—are to make the fourth year of the war a year of great offensives leading to ultimate victory.

Should the Allies hold in the desert and the Red army keep the Germans in check until spring, and draw enough strength from Allied factories to mount an offensive in 1943, the prospects for a successful invasion of the continent are regarded as extremely good.

The crippling of Soviet Russia through the fall of Stalingrad and

Japs Ambushed As They Move Up Railway Line

Enemy Fails In Frantic Effort To Halt Kai-Shek's Forces Near Kinhwa

CHINESE TAKE TANGKI

Chungking, Sept. 1 (AP).—Chinese forces storming across Chekiang have intercepted and routed reinforcements rushed up by the Japanese in a frantic effort to halt Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek's forces approaching Kinhwa, one of the last enemy-held air bases in the coastal province, the Chinese high command announced today.

The Japanese were ambushed as they moved up a branch railway line running between Kinhwa and Lanchi while another Chinese column made further progress in a drive along the main rail line from Tangki toward Kinhwa.

A military spokesman said Tangki, 15 miles west of Kinhwa, had fallen to the Chinese. With the occupation of this town, he said that Kinhwa is menaced by a Chinese nutcracker offensive shaping up along the two rail lines. The Japanese have been in possession of Kinhwa since last May 28.

In Kiangsi, the army spokesman said, the Chinese had advanced closer to Nanchang, main Japanese base in that province. He reported that Chinese troops captured Kiangsmancheh, on the east bank of the Kan river below Nanchang, last Saturday after an engagement in which the Japanese lost heavily.

Heavy Penalties Are Provided

Ottawa, Sept. 1. (CP)—Heavy penalties are provided for violation of new manpower regulations, Selective Service officials said today.

Persons committing a breach of regulations are liable to a fine of $500 or 12 months imprisonment or both.

This penalty clause applies to all the regulations, including the requirement for seven days' notice in writing before a worker leaves a job or before an employer lays off a worker, the compulsory employment of persons now unemployed who must remain on their new job unless they have permission of a Selective Service officer to leave and the employment of all new help through an employment

PURSUED ACROSS CHANNEL

A Southeast Coast Town, England, Sept. 1 (CP)—Fighters pursued a flight of German Focke-Wolf 190's across the channel today after the Nazis bombed a small southeast coast town and machine-gunned the streets shortly after noon.

The raiders swept in at 20 feet, causing some damage and casualties.

Former Minister Warns Against Wishful Thinking

Cincinnati, Sept. 1 — (AP) — Leland B. Morris, United States Minister to Iceland and former Charge D'Affaires in Berlin, cautioned last night the Allies must "not be misled into the belief that the German people were recalcitrant or unwilling to make war sacrifices." He told the 43rd Annual Encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars that they "want to be the top dog amongst nations, and they are not particularly concerned from a moral viewpoint how that ascendancy is to be arrived at."

Friends Honor Queen Wilhelmina

New York, Sept. 1.—(AP)—The 62nd birthday of Queen Wilhelmina of The Netherlands was observed at a celebration in the Hotel Astor last night attended by 1,000 persons—many of whom had been exiled like their queen from their native land by the Germans.

Declaring wherever her subjects gather they think of their Queen, G. H. C. Hart, chairman of the Board of Commissioners of The Netherlands East Indies affairs, declared:

"From a beloved and honored ruler, whose reign had given us nearly 40 years of peace, prosperity and happiness, she has risen in these bitter years to be the shining and eloquent symbol of all that is free and pious, great and good, true and proud in the people of her kingdom".

The celebration was sponsored by the Algemeen Nederlandsch Verbond, a Union of Netherlands Societies in New York City, and the entire program was conducted in Dutch

Munro Made Honorary Member Essex Scottish

Toronto, Sept. 1 —(CP)— Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent who reported the commando raid on Dieppe less than a fortnight ago, today is an honorary life member of the Essex Scottish, one of the regiments in the main attack—and he has an Essex Glengarry to prove it.

Last night, in publicly thanking Munro for an address he had just made at Windsor to 15,000 relatives and friends of the Essex Scottish overseas, Col. Alan C. Prince announced the honor conferred on the 28-year-old newspaperman. His son, Lieut. Jack Prince, was one of the Essex raiders mentioned in Monroe's address.

After the meeting and before Munro took the night train to Toronto, Col. Prince personally thanked him for coming to speak to the Scottish relatives, then removed his Glengarry and presented it to Munro. Munro, overwhelmed, grinned and stammered: "Gosh, Colonel, thanks—I've always wanted to be a member of the Essex Scottish—now I am."

AIR SERVICE TO LINK MEXICO CITY, MONTREAL

Montreal, Sept. 1 (CP).—Regular direct air service between Mexico City and Montreal will be inaugurated Sept. 5. Planes will leave Dorval Airport at 5 p.m., and arrive at Mexico City at 1.40 p.m. the following day. Mail and express will be carried as well as passengers.

LEGION AUXILIARY HOLDS MEETING

On Monday evening the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion was held at 8 Victoria Avenue with a large number present. President Kent was in the chair. A new member was initiated and several applications were favorably received. A section of knitting was displayed and a number of dresses and different articles presented. Comrade Bradford, Corbyville, treasurer gave her report.

Comrade Camken, zone representative, was present and addressed the gathering on the recent meeting in Kingston. Comrade Ellarby, past president and Comrade Starks, Charlette Street were reported ill. The annual report of the Grand Rally was read by Secretary Carr. Comrade Carr was winner of the draw on the lucky prize. The singing of the National Anthem brought the meeting to a close.

BATTERY STARTS FALL TRAINING ON WED.

Fall and winter training for the 34th Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery, Reserve, will start on Wednesday evening at the Armouries, it was announced by battery officers last night.

Special courses for potential officers and non-commissioned officers will start in the immediate future. All members of the battery are expected to be present at the Wednesday night parade.

RE-APPOINTED TO O.M.A. EXECUTIVE

County Treasurer James Haggerty was re-appointed to the executive of the Ontario Municipal Association at its annual convention held in Toronto. During the convention, held in the Toronto City Hall, Mr. Haggerty was appointed chairman in charge of the rural section.

NO FURTHER WORD ON POWER RESTRICTIONS RECEIVED BY P. U. C.

No word has been received as yet of the proposed restrictions of electric power which, it was stated earlier in the year, would probably go into effect on September 1st. Chairman George A. Reid, of the Belleville Public Utilities stated this morning that he had heard nothing thus far of any action to be taken along these lines.

Canadian Provost Corps Seeks Recruits

Kingston, Sept. 1 — Intelligent young men between the ages of 21 to 35 years, and older men up to the age of 45 years, are being sought to fill immediately vacancies in the Canadian Provost Corps field formations overseas and in Canada, and Home War Establishments.

The work of the Canadian Provost Corps necessitates good personality and tact, and applicants should be active and smart of appearance. Although previous police experience is desirable it is not essential.

Applicants for the corps who wish to be attached to field formations, overseas or in Canada, should be between the ages of 21 to 35 years; height 5 foot 9 inches to 6 foot 1 inch, with a weight not exceeding 185 pounds, although exceptions may be made if the man has an athletic build.

Home War Establishment posts are open to those between the ages of 25 to 45 years, height 5 foot 8 inches to 6 foot 1 inch, and also with a weight not exceeding 185 pounds.

In both the field formations and Home War Establishments the men have to be no lower than B1 medical category.

Applications should be forwarded to Major E. Watts, Deputy Assistand provost Marshal, M.D., No. 3 headquarters, Kingston.

Interned Flier Makes Escape From Eire Camp

Calgary, Sept. 1 (CP).—Flt.-Lt. Grant Fleming of Calgary, interned in Eire since his bomber crashed last winter, has escaped, according to a cable from him received yesterday by his cousin, Jack Fraser. Fleming won the D.F.C. for piloting a crippled flying boat over the Atlantic last summer.

This break-away followed an unsuccessful attempt early in the summer of Canadian and English airmen to flee from the Curragh internment camp. Whether Fleming was a participant then was not known.

Names of the participants never were made public but stories reaching Rathdrum, over the hills from the Curragh in County Wicklow, told of a rough-and tumble attempted mass escape which came to grief because of one thing—"ersatz" bolts in the ladder joints. When the ladders collapsed the guards rushed in.

Among the Canadians known to be at the camp with Fleming are P/O R. G. (Bob) Keefer, Montreal; P/O Jack Calder, Goderich, and Sgt. Pilot Paul Webster, Vancouver. Sub-Lt. Bruce Girdlestone, a New Zealander in the Fleet Air Arm, is also interned.

(Keefer is a former football player at McGill University. He and Calder, a Canadian Press editor at Toronto prior to enlistment, were members of a bomber crew forced to bail out over neutral Eire last autumn.)

LANDS IN NUDIST CAMP

London, Sept. 1 (CP)—R.A.F. planes have landed in a lot of unusual places but one instructor and his pupil made a forced landing—in a Midland nudist camp.

"The pilot and passenger looked surprised," said Mrs. S. Burgess, who runs the camp. "But they stayed for lunch, went for a swim and joined in our activities.

Ald. Thomas Marshall Gives Notice of Motion to Reduce City Council to Nine Members

If Passed in Council, Ratepayers Will be Given Opportunity to Vote on Question

NEED SPECIAL ACT

Members of the City Council will at their next regular meeting vote as to whether a question will be placed before the electorate at the next municipal election for an expression of opinion of asking the Legislature of the Province for a Special Act to reduce the Belleville City Council from the present membership to a Mayor and eight Aldermen according to a Notice of Motion introduced by Ald. Thomas Marshall at the first meeting of that body following the summer recess. There was no discussion on the Notice of Motion but it will be debated and voted upon at the next meeting. Mr. Francis Potter, who was a candidate at the last municipal election and defeated for the thirteenth position on the Aldermanic Board, took his place in the City Council last night to fill the unexpired term of Alderman A. M. Kennedy, who died some weeks ago. Mr. Potter is an engineer with the C.N.R. and has been a resident in the city for many years and well known among all classes of citizens and will no doubt bring business ability to the Board.

Bedecked in New Chain

When the Council was opened for the fall term, Mayor Thompson appeared bedecked with the new chain of office, purchased during the recess. It is a beautiful piece of work and will replace the other chain of office, which so mysteriously disappeared during the last term. Although the Council has been inactive by not meeting during the summer the business brought before the body was not heavy as much departmental work was done during the summer holiday and everything is in shipshape. One delegation appeared before the Council asking redress from payment of their share of the Sinclair Street sewer. The resident appearing requested that he be not charged for his part of the sewer as he had already spent $190 in having a lateral placed in from the sewer on another street but that it had not been satisfactory because it caused flooding in his cellar. The Mayor and Chairman of Public Works promised that a full investigation would be made and a report given to the council for their guidance in the matter.

Ordered Sign Removed

The Council ordered the sign removed immediately on Evans St., in front of Mr. Wood's place and H. G. Green was refunded five and one-half months of his butcher's licence, he having gone out of business in the city. The City Solicitor and Treasurer were ordered to collect at once the business tax from the Midtown Tailors and Bailey's Garage. The Market bylaw will be amended to provide for the hours of opening and closing the market and to provide also that all fuel to be weighed dry in all cases. A committee of Aldermen Butler, Armstrong, Follwell, and the City Solicitor was appointed to look into this matter and prepare the necessary amendments. Mr. G. T. Woodley and Cort Miller, merchants on Front Street, requested the council to place lights in the rear of the stores in their section and the council will consider the request at the next committee meeting.

Petition Received

A petition from residents of Cedar and Isabel streets was presented to the Council protesting the mink farm, which is situated in that area on account of the obnoxious odor especially in the hot weather. The petitioners claimed they were unable to sit on their verandahs in the evening and if the windows were opened the odor permeated into the homes. The petition was passed on to the City Clerk for the checking of names and if found correct the Council will act on their suggestion. An Alderman complained of the smoke nuisance from the evaporator on Pinnacle Street and Ald. Harvey stated that residents in that area should have some protection. Ald. Rollins also protested about the high growth of weeds in vacant lots in the city and Ald. Armstrong promised an investigation immediately. Ald Follwell asked if any lights were to be placed on the west side of North Front Street north of the overhead bridge and Ald. Allin said the matter was in abeyance until the government moved in respect to power shortage and what curtailment was to be made.

No Complains Received

Ald. Pringle asked the Mayor if any complaints had been received from the C.N.R. with respect to water shortage during the summer and was answered in the negative by the Mayor. Ald. Armstrong wanted to know what arrangements had been made with respect to bearing of the cost of the Sinclair Street sewer and Dufferin Street and Mayor Thompson informed the Alderman that the Commission had promised to pay part of the cost of digging on Sinclair Street and thought the same arrangement would be made with respect to Dufferin Street. A committee of Mayor Thompson, Aldermen Rollins and Clarke will look after the delegates coming to the city for the General Conference of the United Church next week. The City Engineer prepared a statement on the cost of the footbridge and the Council ordered the money owing to the Blyth Construction Company be paid.

Report Given

The report is as follows:

August 26, 1942.

His Worship Mayor Thompson and Alderman of the City Council,
Belleville, Ontario.

Gentlemen,

Re: New Footbridge Contract

Balance due Setember 10, 1942	858.58
	$9281.08
Original Contract of September 15, 1941	$ 7962.00
Revision to Handrail (approved)	323.00
Temporary Footbridge (approved)	512.00
Additional Concrete in bridge (approved)	484.08
	$9281.08

CHARLES A. MOTT,
City Engineer.

The Belleville City Council will act on the suggestion that September 6, be observed as "A Day of Prayer". Special services will likely be held in all the churches in the city on that day. There being no further business the Council adjourned.

Obituary

LATE MRS. A. A. MAYBEE
(Murray Township)

Frankford (Special)—The funeral of the late Mrs. Augusta Arvilla Maybee took place from her late residence in the 7th concession of Murray on Friday, Aug. 28th at 2 o'clock. The Rev. H. H. Lackey, pastor of Frankford United Church conducted the service.

The late Mrs. Maybee who was in her 92nd year was born in Brighton township, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Pickle. She was the widow of the late Mr. Elias Maybee and was a member of Carman United Church. She resided in this locality for the past fifteen years. She passed away at the home of her daughter Mrs. James Bates, after having been in failing health for some time. Left to mourn her loss are one daughter Mrs. James Bates, Frankford and one granddaughter, Miss Hazel Bates, Rochester.

The bearers were all nephews of the deceased Messrs. Milton Maybee, Wesley Maybee, Ezra Maybee Manley Maybee, Clinton Pickle and Lloyd Ames. Interment was in Carman cemetery.

LATE MRS. ELLEN BYRNES
(Marmora)

Marmora — (Special) — The funeral of the late Mrs. Ellen Byrnes was held on Monday morning from the residence of her son, Mr. T. J. Byrnes, to Sacred Heart Church where High Requiem Mass was sung by Rev. H. J. Farrell. The members of the Catholic Women's League, of which the deceased was the oldest member, formed a guard of honor. The pall bearers were M. J. O'Connor, E. D. O'Connor, Dan Shannon, George Forestell, John O'Neill and S. Stephens. Interment took place in Sacred Heart Cemetery.

HARRY GERALD BULPIT

Harry Gerald Bulpit, age seven months, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Bulpit, 181 Station Street, died in the Belleville General Hospital this Tuesday morning. The child was a twin; the other infant died at birth. The parents will receive the sympathy of friends in their bereavement.

MISS ELIZABETH McCAFFREY
(Formerly of Madoc)

Madoc —(Special)— Miss Elizabeth McCaffrey, native of Madoc, passed away on Monday in hospital at Vancouver, B.C. The late Miss McCaffrey was a daughter of the late John McCaffrey and Elizabeth Sinclair McCaffrey. She was a member of the teaching profession and for several years was an exchange teacher visiting many countries. For some time she made her home in Vancouver and death followed a lengthy illness. Interment will take place in Madoc.

Eaton Returns $55,000 Profit on Military Uniforms to Ottawa

Ottawa,—A cheque for $55,000, representing the 1941 profits on orders placed with the T. Eaton Co. Limited for the manufacture of military uniforms, is acknowledged by Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply, in a letter to R. Y. Eaton, company president.

It is the second cheque to be received by the department from the company. An amount of $42,000 was returned by the T. Eaton Co. in December 1940, as the result of the increased volume of work and economies effected in the new clothing factory.

On request of the department of munitions and supply, the T. Eaton Co. established in 1940 a separate factory in Montreal for the manufacture of uniforms. In doing so, the company determined upon a non-profit policy for all war orders.

Letter to The Editor

STIMPSON CORRECTED

The Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sir:

I certainly was "surprised" to read this statement in your paper of Aug. 27th.

King Haakon of Norway married Princess Maude, daughter of King Edward VII (not 8th) of Great Britain. She was not his Mother, but his wife, and an Aunt of our present King George. Perhaps no one else would notice this mistake; but the man who wrote it, (and I presume he is an American) has made a gross mis-statement. Queen Maude died before Norway was invaded, and she was a frequent visitor in England, as everyone knows, and how this George W. Stimpson ever made such a mistake amazes me. Besides, King Edward VIII, now the Duke of Windsor, had no children as everyone knows.

Yours very truly,

Retail Stores May Be Required To Stagger Hours

Ottawa, Sept. 1 — (CP) — The golden age of the Canadian shopper — infinite variety of goods on the shelves and plenty of time in which to buy them — appears to be entering its twilight.

Already wartime restrictions have reduced the number of articles for sale, especially non-essentials, and taxation is reducing the amounts of money Canadians have to spend. A further step was indicated today with the disclosure that the Wartime Prices and Trade Board has invited study of ways of shortening and staggering the hours retail stores are open for business.

Prices Board officials said that no order on hours had been issued, but that suggestions for hours' adjustments had been made to Edgar Burton, retail administrator. Proposals had been formulated and now were receiving consideration of the trade throughout Canada.

Nine Hours for Druggists.

An indication of the steps which may be taken was the announcement in Ottawa today by Irwin H Derby, president of the Retail Druggists Association, that Ottawa druggists soon will be operating on a nine-hour day basis. At present most Ottawa drug stores are open fifteen hours daily except Sunday.

The Ottawa decision was made after a questionaire had been sent to druggists asking their opinion of shorter hours and what they should be.

It was understood that similar steps to obtain the views of the trade are being taken elsewhere.

When any trade group agrees on hours which may be established, the prices board has the authority to make such hours applicable to the community, or generally throughout the country if this is desirable. But no action was anticipated in any case until the trade concerned had been consulted and its views obtained.

Ottawa authorities said that shorter hours and staggered hours would assist in two ways. In many cases, where long hours mean two shifts of employees, the shorter hours would mean the release of men and women for other employment, such as that in war industries. Staggered hours would help to ease the strain on transit facilities in cities, often overburdened at rush hours.

POLICE COURT

A case of non-support against Meyer Littman, recently of Cobourg but for the past week operating a business on Front Street in Belleville, was the phincipal item on the agenda at a brief city police court session held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd today.

Crown Attorney Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan in presenting the case stated Mr. Littman had failed to contribute toward the support of his wife, but the accused asked for an enlargement of two weeks in order that he might procure documents to prove his wife was not destitute.

"That doesn't matter," returned the Crown Attorney, "she is your wife and you're responsible for her support."

Col. Donnan recommended, that Mr. Littman be remanded in custody until Friday's court but agreed to grant temporary freedom if the accused could raise money to pay immediate expenses of his wife.

Remanded Till Sept. 8th.

The case of Glen McAlister brought back from Toronto to Belleville yesterday charged with breaking and entering the Elite Jewelry Store here on the night of Aug. 26th., appeared in court but was remanded until September 8th. when enlargement of the case was asked by the Crown Attorney.

Promises to Appear

A man arrested on August 29th on a charge of intoxication had his case enlarged for a week, when he promised to return to his farm and appear in next week's court.

Several motorists were charged with illegal parking and paid the conventional one dollar fine and costs. All traffic cases were settled out of court.

Plans Nearly Complete For One Of Finest Fairs Ever Held Here

Plans for what is said by officials to be one of the finest fairs ever held in the city of Belleville are rapidly nearing completion, according to Secretary Erle Denyes of the Belleville Agricultural Society.

Entries in the livestock classes, especially those of the horse classes, are exceptionally heavy and compare favorably with those of the years before the war. Exhibitors in many classes from Western Ontario have written asking for application forms and the demand for prize lists indicates a widespread interest in the exhibition.

Meanwhile officials are busy readying the Exhibition Grounds. The cattle sheds and other livestock housing structures are being treated to a new coat of whitewash, while other ground activities are well under way.

According to the secretary the entry list in the trials of speed will be an imposing one, and some of the best horses in Ontario will be here. Novelty events such as contests for airplane models and horseshoe pitching are receiving their share of interest, while the Conklin Shows have guaranteed one of the finest midways seen here in years.

The secretary's office is a bustling hive of activity, and no stone is being left unturned to make the 1942 edition of Belleville's fair an imposing one. Members of the armed services will be admitted free at all times and special arrangements have been made to admit the school children of the city and district.

United Nations On Offensive In All Sectors

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

The greater world war that Hitler loosed in Poland on a tragic September morning turns into its fourth year today with many symptoms that is rounding more than a dateline corner.

Battle reports from all fronts are beginning to form a pattern that must give Berlin pause. Despite tremendous Nazi military achievements in Europe and huge Japanese conquest strides, nowhere has the triple Axis yet been able to clutch decisively of victory. Instead, the portents of this Sept. 1 all favor the United Nations fellowship, only now beginning to bring into play its matchless resources in war making.

It is still too soon to say that Hitler's "victory-offensive" in Russia has been stemmed. The great Russian oil fields on the shores of the Caspian Sea are all but cut off in the Caucasus fighting. A Nazi spearhead column may be actually on the banks of the Volga south of Stalingrad.

It is not too soon, however, to say that the prime objective of the Hitler campaign in Russia is still beyond its reach. He has poured out German blood and that of his Allies without breaking Russian will to resist. Another winter is coming on, only weeks away, and Russian armies of the North before Moscow are on the attack, not the retreat.

More than Diversion.

The real scope and purpose of a mounting Russian offensive west and northwest of Moscow is still to be disclosed. However, the mere fact that foreign war correspondents have been permitted by Moscow to go to the Rzhev front to verify Russian advances in that sector indicates that it is more than a diversion attack to ease pressure on Stalingrad.

Henry Cassidy, Associated Press correspondent on the scene, reports a nine-mile Russian break through Nazi fortified lines about Rzhev. There are indications moreover, that Russian Central Armies are pressing against the German holding front all the way from the south flank of the Valdai Plateau above Rzhev to the Kaluga region southwest of Moscow.

It may be the beginning of a Russian major counter-offensive on a 100-mile front or more, timed to catch the Nazi thrust in the south too deeply engaged to be halted. At the worst, a prolonged siege of Stalingrad seems impending, with German supply lines badly extended and the autumnal rains already beginning in the north to flood the Volga and Don deltas in due course.

The essential fact, as Cassidy noted, however, is that regardless of the German advances in the south, Russian armies in the centre and the north are on the aggressive. They have found the strength to batter through Nazi lines heavily fortified in depth, using many American trucks and tanks. They have also found the bombing planes to batter at German cities from the east as British and American Air Forces are blasting at them from the west.

Meanwhile American troops, planes and fighting gear have been pouring into the British Isles virtually unimpeded and American naval and air power has been already sufficiently expanded to deal Japan heavy blows in the Pacific, in China, in Burma, and to organise in India. For whatever reason, Japan is on the retreat again in China, and Nipponese tentacles reaching out to seize or blockade Australia have been lopped off.

Berlin explains Japanese backtracking in China as due to accomplishment of a mission. What mission is not stated. It seems clear, however, that the China offensive which followed the fall of Burma has neither broken Chinese fighting ardor nor relieved Japan of the peril of long-range American bombing from Chinese bases. That is coming certainly, as certainly as the long nights of the on-coming winter season will see British, American and Russian bombing over Germany make it a season of terror there such as Britain knew in previous war winters.

There are bright aspects to this Sept. 1 for the United Nations fellowship as well as bitter memories. It may prove in retrospect a convenient date from which to reckon the ebb of the Axis war effort.

Attempt to Fire 40,000 Cords Of Pulpwood Foiled

Thorold, Ont., Sept. 1 (CP).—An attempt to set fire to a pile of 40,000 cords of pulpwood was frustrated at the Ontario Paper Company here yesterday, it was announced today.

Gasoline soaked rags, newspapers and old magazines were found stuffed under the huge woodpile by one of the company guards, Harry Burgall. It is believed the person responsible had been frightened away earlier when another guard passed on his beat. The company is surrounded by a 10-foot fence.

Police said they believe the attempt was spite work rather than sabotage.

Prices are Set For Small Packages of Tea

Ottawa, Sept. 1 (CP)—Thomas K. Wade, tea administrator of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, announced today a schedule of "appropriate" prices for small packages of tea—now in demand under coupon rationing—based upon maximum retail prices established by the board last January.

Noting that the January schedule did not "anticipate" the small packages now brought into general use, the announcement set forth the following schedule:-

For tea with a maximum retail price of 85 cents a pound, the retail price will be 23 cents for a four ounce package and 12 cents for a two-ounce package.

For tea with a maximum of 90 cents a pound the four-ounce package will be 24 cents; the two-ounce 13 cents.

For tea with a maximum of $1 a pound the four-ounce package will be 26 cents and the two-ounce 14 cents.

The announcement said maximum prices for four-and-two-ounce packages of qualities not specified in the January schedule will be determined upon application to the administrator, who will also determine prices on tea bags for ultimate sale to consumers.

Firm Names Disappear From Help Wanted Ads

Ottawa, Sept. 1 (CP). — Firm names will disappear from all "help wanted" advertisements under a ruling made by selective service officials today.

New orders governing manpower and employment make it necessary for firms to fill all employment needs through employment offices. To make this plan effective "help wanted" and "situation wanted" advertisements can only be placed in newspapers through the employment office.

Officials said today that the present policy would be to have these advertisements appear over the name of National Selective Service and the applicant would not know the name of the firm sponsoring the advertisement until he applied at the employment office.

Youngsters Hunting "For the Band"

"We were hunting for the band," stated three-year-old Frankie Howard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Howard, Boswell Street, as he and Jerry Doyle, 3, son of Mr. J. Doyle, also of Boswell Street, were found in Victoria Park on Monday following a frantic three-hour search.

The two young lads had disappeared during the morning and were not missed by their mothers until some time later when a casual search of neighboring streets failed to discover the wayward lads. A more extensive search by the Doyle lad's elder brother during the noon hour revealed they had wandered to Victoria Park, where the Howard boy apparently expected to find the band.

Frankie had remembered going to Victoria Park last summer to hear the Belleville Municipal Band on their Sunday evening performances and had found his way back yesterday, where he expected to find his father, who is a member of the local band.

Former Organizer Fined $1000 and Costs

Toronto, Sept. 1 (CP).—Richard Steele, former organizer in the United Steel Workers of America, was convicted in county police court yesterday on two charges under the National Registration Act and fined a total of $1,000 and costs or six months.

Steele was arrested March 31 by R.C.M.P. officers and held on an internment order. His sentence yesterday was dated back to his first court appearance April 22, which makes him eligible for release at the end of this month. Release on the expiration of his sentence however will depend on disposition of the internment order.

U.S. FORCES TO PARADE THRU LONDON WEDNESDAY

London, Sept. 1 (CP).—United States armed forces in dress uniform will parade through London tomorrow for the first time since the American Expeditionary Force landed in Britain. About 3350 soldiers, sailors and marines will be entertained by the Lord Mayor at a luncheon and an official welcome will be tendered at the Guildhall.

NO ESTIMATE OF DAMAGE

North Vancouver, B. C., Sept. 1 — (CP) — Officials of the North Van Ship Repairs, Limited, today surveyed damage done by a fire which swept through the shipyard's machineshop for four hours before being brought under control by the yard's volunteer brigade and the North Vancouver Fire Department. There was no estimate of damage.

ESCAPES INTERNMENT

Calgary, Sept. 1 — (CP) — Winner of the D.F.C. for piloting a crippled flying boat over the Atlantic last summer, Flt. Lt. Grant Fleming, Calgary, has escaped from internment in Eire, said a cable received here yesterday by his cousin, Jack Fraser. Fleming was interned last winter when his bomber crashed.

You can't go 'ALL-OUT' If you feel 'ALL-IN'

These days most people are working harder, worrying more, sleeping less. This strain on body and brain makes physical fitness easier to lose—harder to regain. Today's tense living lowers resistance—increases body and mental fatigue. Overwork; hasty meals; irregular hours; worry—any of these may upset proper kidney action.

When kidneys get out of order, excess acids and poisons remain in the system. Then backache, headache, rheumatic pain, disturbed rest or that "tired-all-the-time" feeling may soon follow. To help keep your kidneys in good order—to help guard against physical let-down—use Dodd's Kidney Pills, for over half a century a favourite remedy for faulty kidneys. TOGO RESIGNS FROM JAP CABINET

Tokyo, (From Japanese Broadcasts), Sept. 1, —(AP)— Foreign Minister Shigenori Togo has resigned "for personal reasons" and his office has been taken over by Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo, the government information department announced today.

Togo had held the foreign ministry portfolio since formation of the present government last October.

The announcement of his resignation, broadcast by the Tokyo radio, recalled that in the course of his diplomatic career Togo had been stationed in Germany several times, the last time as Japanese ambassador in Berlin in 1937.

ALLIED STRATEGY

Baku, these sources said, would force the western Allies to reconsider plans for such an invasion and lengthen the war considerably.

More Hopeful

Nevertheless, they saw the situation as hopeful in comparison with Sept. 1, 1940, and Sept. 1, 1941, especially in view of the growing might of Allied air forces in western Europe, Africa India, China and the southwest pacific.

Officials say there is nothing to indicate the swift collapse of Germany or Japan, through military defeat or internal revolt, and both are conceded to be capable of tremendous offensive drives.

But it is considered obvious the power of the Axis has passed its maximum.

Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski, premier of the Polish government in London, in a statement marking the anniversary of the invasion of Poland, said he thought a "period of gradual exhaustion" had started for the Germans that would "prepare the way for final triumph."

The entry of the United States into the war "automatically decided the final result," he said, and he declared the Canadian-led raid on Dieppe "proved that an invasion of the continent is absolutely feasible."

Unless maritime communications with Russia are improved, observers find it difficult to see how the Soviets can achieve an offensive in eastern Europe.

A union of German forces from Africa and Russia in Iraq or Iran would almost isolate Russia and India and would foreshadow a junction of the Japanese and Germans in a vast military structure.

The Nazis then would be able to transfer at least 150 divisions to western Europe.

Here is an outline of the world strategical situation as seen in London as the fourth year of the war opens:

War In The Air.

The R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. has balanced German superiority over the Red air force by a series of paralyzing raids on German industry. Enemy defences have proved inadequate and the average British loss in these "saturation" raids is well under 10 per cent.

The Fighter Command of the R.A.F. and allied air forces combined to exercise air superiority in the commando raid on Dieppe, 70 miles from the nearest allied air field, with great loss to the enemy.

This feat indicated to Britain that the time is at hand when allied fighters will be able to spread the necessary air umbrella over any invading forces in western Europe.

But German and Italian air power has virtually closed the western Mediterranean to all but heavily-escorted convoys.

War at Sea:-

The British and United States navies are regarded as having recovered from the crippling blows dealt them by the Japanese in the first months of the Pacific war. Japanese sea power has been weakened by Allied victories at Midway, in the Coral Sea and in the Solomon Islands.

The anti-submarine campaign is declared to be progressing more favorably than anyone hoped six months ago.

Added to American measures, pilots of the R.A.F. coastal command are smashing at U-boats in American waters and the Bay of Biscay, while the bomber command has hit repeatedly at German submarine yards and engine factories.

War on Land:-

China, the senior Allied combatant, is seen as being slowly encircled by the Japanese who are reported to be waiting for some significant Russian defeat, such as the fall of Stalingrad, to launch an attack on Siberia.

As a result of the battle of the Solomons, communications between the United States, Australia, and New Zealand may be kept open and material and men can be gathered there for an attack on Japan, observers said.

A thumping defeat for Field Marshal Rommel would change Egypt from a desperately-held base to a concentration area for an Allied drive across North Africa which would place soldiers and aircraft of the United Nations in a position for an invasion of Italy.

Last, and most important, Britain—the unsinkable aircraft carrier—is the staging area for an invasion of Europe which it is taking for granted will be attempted in the fourth year of the war by every new technique, including "saturation" bombing, parachute troops and air-borne infantry.

This photograph was made of Dieppe, France, during the height of the nine-hour attack by Canadian commandos, British, U. S. Rangers, and other units. An R.A.F. plane soaring over the battleground filmed this photograph. A big fire can be seen burning near the waterfront, and the smoke of battle can be seen at the LEFT.

U. S. Marines are shown charging up the beach at Guadalcanal Island in the Solomon group, with guns and packs. Some of the "leathernecks" may be seen in the landing barge that brought the party to the beach. The forces of the United States are well established on six of the Solomon Islands, according to a report from Washington. This photo has been approved by the U. S. Navy.

Hitler Arch-Enemy

The names of Hitler and Germany are cursed throughout the world for the misery, desolation and suffering they have brought upon the earth. No man in all history has been so hated as Hitler, Hun No. 1. In the New York Times an editorial writer says, "What Hitler has achieved in three years of war is to make a German Europe forever impossible, whatever happens. No leader in history has made so many enemies for his country, or done so much to ruin its chances of taking its place in the comity of nations. To all of Europe—allies and captives—Hitler is the arch-foe, and the idea that he can set the boundaries of that continent and re-organize the life he has wrecked shows the nightmare of reality in which he lives."

Hitler's brutal attempt to seize Europe has done one thing — he has made the flame of patriotism burn with fiercer glow than it has ever burned in lands unfortunate enough to lie in the path of his war machine. He has by his mad dream of world power made nations conscious of the rich worth of democracy and sacrifice. Every land that Hitler's bloody deeds have stained is rich in the spirit of loyalty and nowhere has he a following among the states which he has claimed for his new order.

Britons' love of Britain, China's love for China, Russians' deep well of patriotism and the patriotic fervor of other nations have accounted for many successes against superior Hun forces. Love of country, of the soil that gave them birth has stirred men everywhere to defend it with the last drop of blood. Hitler's way has been marked by bloodshed and suffering which the brutes who accompany his forces have practised on men, women and children. On this foundation of terror he has aimed to build an empire or an organized Europe. But not while a patriotic thought glows in the heart of man will that be. Hitler will have for the time being but the broken remnants of bodies, the shattered and blasted lands to claim in sway but he will never build thereon a superstructure. When does this mad person think he will begin to have a semblance of order in these lands where if he has any supporters they are of the type of the Norwegian Quisling? No sign of the structure of a new Germanic Europe has been raised or even proposed in detail—all is just the mad incoherent dream of a neurotic turned sour and bitter against humanity and the noble institutions and customs of other races.

His deeds can mean one thing, the dreadful retribution which is to come. Europe at heart is what it was, that is it is loyal to its ideals and no steam roller can flatten, no blitzkrieg can destroy that. Heaven gave man life and spirit while Hitler and Nazi Germany have tried to destroy the very principles of life, which make society posible. He fails though he has gained territory by force and might and treachery for the time being.

The arch-enemy of mankind has run against the obstacle that no man of evil has ever conquered—the human will, the human desire for better things, for peace and security, but above all for liberty. From the first days of the world there has been this development toward freedom. Men like Hitler have tried in the past and in some small degree suppressed others but they will have never downed the heart of man. There glows the spark that will destroy Hitler's sway. Hitlers of the past have been but as a breath of wind, long since passed, however they strove with slaughter and treachery to make men slaves.

And liberty will always be. It is the cause of the hope of the world.

Hitler's victories will be hollow because though he has killed men by millions through his deeds, widowed like millions, orphaned countless millions and has tried to break down the rich young life of the world, yet he does not win, because men are so incurably free agents that they will die before they yield. This is the glorious manhood and womanhood of the world that Hitler has never known, the manhood and womanhood of Russia, China, Britain. United States and all the nations which have known liberty and home.

Hitler, Mussolini and the Jap war-mongers—the three unholy conspirators against humanity—will be doomed at last with their henchmen and their dreams of power shattered.

CUFFNOTES OF A VACATION

The Lady Bountiful — Yellow tobacco waving gracefully in the warm breezes near Leamington, Kingsville, Harrow and Essex; big yellow peaches, scarlet-blushed, peeping from the heavy green foliage of trees in close-packed orchards; big baskets overflowing with yellow and red peach gold, selling at 15c orchardside prices; motorists pausing at farmside booths loading their cars with fruit and vegetables, "at their own prices"; waving fields of corn with stalks from eight to twelve feet in height. brownish yellow bouquets of tobacco drying in gaunt kilns. The beautiful farm homes, with close-cropped lawns extending to the highway, along the Kingsville-Windsor road; canteloupe-cobbled fields awaiting pickers that never come; the scarlet splashes of ripening tomatoes; the vivid green of cucumbers (15c the basket.)

The Inner Man — The bar at the Edgewater-Thomas on Riverside Road; the Detroit skyline, hazewashed, so near and yet so far; pickerel dinners at the Menard Inn, the fish fried a beautiful golden brown with all you can eat for a buck, plus the trimmings; peach-munching in a Harrow orchard, your shirt juice-splashed and black pits on the ground; chicken dinners at Mother Walsh's, where they put the chicken on a big platter, "Your fill of chicken for a dollar"; Second helpings . . . Lobster at the Savarin, Toronto.

City Heartbeat — Windsor, the morning the Dieppe story broke . . . the trickling news of the gallant Essex Scottish who led the charge up the beach . . . Women, wide-eyed, anxious, whose sons are in the famous kilted regiment, dreading the sounds of a telephone, or a knock on the door . . . A city, suddenly awakened to war . . . Crowds milling about newspaper offices, fearing to read the casualty lists . . . Windsor, stricken suddenly her people with a new, more determined light in their eyes; people talking in hushed groups in taverns, on the pavement, in restaurants, as the force of the first war blow came home to them . . . The gallant Windsor mother whose four sons are reported "missing, believed killed" . . . the brave auld Scottie who read of his two sons-in-law reported missing, muttering as he buttoned his coat, "The b......'s canna dae this tae me," and strode off to the nearest recruiting office . . . The sad-eyed yet smiling mother who received the cable of her son's gallant end off the Dieppe beaches, and his call for srvice within the hour . . . What a system . . . Casualty lists and yet more casualty lists . . . And Windsor standing up to it like her hero soldier sons.

Kaleidoscope — "Eliza's Cabin" at Amherstburg . . . Old Fort Malden in the same place . . . Foreigners buying chickens "on the hoof" in the Windsor market, $1.60 the pair . . . They wrap 'em up like any other parcel and carry 'em home in baskets . . . Yellow pickerel, 20c each . . . Peaches, 20c the basket, and they are peaches "what are peaches" . . . Cucumbers, 10c the basket . . . Italians, Poles, Norwegians, rubbing shoulders . . . The never relenting business of an industrial city . . . Factory workers, their eight-hour shift done, building cottages everywhere . . . Cape-Cod style, with blue roofs and shutters . . . Government houses in military formations . . . Point Pelee, the most southerly part of Ontario jutting out into Lake Erie like a dagger . . . fishermen, surf-casting for pickerel and hooking them about six to the hour . . . weight from one to two pounds . . . sturgeon lay eggs on the sands, but you can't invite 'em home to dinner i,t's "agin" the law . . . No swimming off the Point, too many cross currents . . . The majestic sight of the new aircraft carrier "Ceeandee" passing beneath the Ambassador Bridge . . .

WE SAW IT

From Cedardale comes the story of a strange new fish. Jack Darlington, suntanned Isaak Walton of these parts, hooked a pike Sunday afternoon that is believed to be of a new stone-swallowing variety. The pike, a bit sad-eyed, when it flopped over the side of the boat after giving John a stiff battle, rolled over and gestured toward its throat. Its sadness was explained. In its gullet was a large-sized stone. It is thought to be one of the rare pea-eating fish, which mistook a submerged hard-head for its favorite food.

NAZIS EXECUTE SEVENTEEN

(Common newspaper headline.)

It is published every day:
"Seventeen the Nazis slay!"
Twenty-eight or thirty-four,
Every day they slaughter more.
Every dawn, and none knows why,
Men are ordered out to die.
Helpless men and women fall
At some German firing wall.

Why the Nazis? Why not say
"Seventeen the Germans slay?"
Why from such a deep disgrace
Hide and shield the German race?
'Tis the German hands are red!
Why say Nazi then instead?
We say British, French and Dane.
Why with German not be plain?

It is published every day:
"Twenty-seven the Nazis slay."
"Fire!" the German captains cry
And their helpless victims die.
By the Aryan and the Hun
All these vicious deeds are done.
Why then hide such dreadful shame
Underneath the Nazi name?

Done with Nazi I would be!
Every crime on land and sea
And the stain of them, I swear,
I would make the Germans wear.
Broken promise, pillage, loot
All are German, stalk and root!
Why then cover German shame
Underneath a spurious name?

ESSEX SCOTTISH STORY IS TOLD

Ross Munro, C.P. Correspondent, Gives Eye-Witness Account of Dieppe to Windsor Audience

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 1 (CP) — The story of the gallant part played by Canadians in the Dieppe commando raid was told here last night by Ross Munro, war correspondent for The Canadian Press, who spoke to 15,000 persons in his first address since arriving in Canada from England Sunday night.

The outdoor meeting in Jackson Park was arranged by the Windsor Daily Star and special guests were relatives of members of the Essex Scottish Regiment, whose officers and men distinguished themselves in the engagement.

Munro devoted most of his speech to members of the regiment. He also paid tribute to other units.

"I want you to remember," he said, "I was behind the boys with the machine guns."

Tribute to Regiment

He told of the brave part Windsor men played in the engagement and assured them they could have "nothing but pride for the Essex Scottish." Munro paid special tribute to the gallantry of the officers of the Windsor unit.

In his talk, Mr. Munro paid high tribute to the Allied air umbrella given the fighting forces, with Boston Bombers, Mustangs, Spitfires and Hurricanes helping out in a tough situation during the actual combat and providing a smoke screen for the withdrawal.

During his reference to the attack of the Scottish, Mr. Munro related how the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry was fighting on its right. "These two united merged practically into one battalion and fought like an all-Canadian regiment," he added.

Forced Luftwaffe to Act

An important outcome of the Dieppe raid, he explained, was the enforced action of the Luftwaffe.

"For six months the R.A.F. had gone up and down the Channel trying to bring the German planes out. The Canadian forces were not decoys; they were there for more important reasons, but they did succeed in causing a sad day in Berlin.

"The Germans thought it was the real thing otherwise they would not have brought out their air force like they did and by it certainly got a shellacking," he said.

CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE

The term "civil disobedience" was popularized, if it was not coined by Henry David Thoreau, American philosopher, naturalist and writer.

The author of "Walden" was a student and admirer of Hindoo philosophy and literature.

In his younger days Mohandes K. Gandhi, the Hindoo political, social and religious reformer, became a student and admirer of the writing of the Concord recluse.

Thus, indirectly, Thoreau has had a profound influence on the lives and thought of hundreds of millions of people on the other side of the world.

Thoreau, like his friend and neighbor Amos Bronson Alcott, was an advocate of passive resistance as the most effective protest against slavery.

In 1845, while living at Walden Pond, Thoreau was arrested for non-payment of his poll tax. An aunt paid the tax and Thoreau was released after only one night in Concord jail.

Thoreau set forth his theories of passive resistance to and non-cooperation with the state authorities in "Resistance to Civil Government," published in 1849 in Elizabeth Peabody's periodical "Aesthetic Papers."

Later he gave this essay the title "On the Duty of Civil Disobedience."

Thomas Jefferson had written: "That government is best which governs least." Thoreau went the Father of American Democracy one better by advocating "That government is best which governs not at all."

It was a political and religious movement designed to redress governmental abuses in India by relying solely upon truth and spiritual forces.

Gandhi deprecated violence and active opposition of all kinds and advocated civil disobedience through the refusal to cooperate with the government.

It is only natural that advocates of civil disobedience should single out some particularly obnoxious and unpopular tax.

Gandhi and his followers, in order to dramatize their movement, aimed their early civil disobedience campaigns against the "salt tax."

It was merely the old Massachusetts poll tax in a breechclout instead of overalls.

Both the theory and practice of civil disobedience are as old as organized government.

Boycotts, sit-down strikes and sabotage in its original sense are specialized forms of passive resistance and non-violent non-cooperation.

said, "as contrasted with the one pound to the British civilian, 12 ounces to the German, five ounces to the Belgian . . ."

Discussing the rationing decision, he said:—

"We ought to manage the supply so that the housewife who can't get to the store until afternoon won't be forced to do without; so that everyone has a chance to buy his fair share of the total."

Minimum requirements of the fighting forces and their Allies for the present marketing year will be 6,000,000,000 tons, Wickard said. "On top of that, our civilian population, with the highest incomes on record, working harder than ever before, want more meat than ever before. They would take about 21,000,000,000 pounds this year.

Demand More Than Supply

"The total demand adds up to more than the total supply, 27,000,000,000 pounds of demand; 24,000,000,000 pounds of supply."

Pending the installation of rationing machinery, packers' sales for civilian use will be curbed by a war production board order assigning marketing quotas. The order, expected in about two weeks, will apply to beef, veal pork, lamb, mutton and sausage.

The food requirements committee, headed by Wickard and including representatives of the army, navy, lease-lend administration, and other agencies, estimated national income this year at around $115,000,000,000, compared with $90,000,000,000 in 1929.

Enemy Learning Answer to Question Says President

Bethesda, Md., Sept. 1—(AP) — The enemy is learning the answer to his taunting question of "where is the United States navy?" says President Roosevelt.

Speaking here in suburban Washington yesterday at the dedication of a towering new naval medical centre, the President said the enemy learned in the Atlantic, the Coral sea, off Midway and is learning now in attempts to recapture lost areas in the Solomon Islands, that the navy is where it has always been—"In there fighting."

In a radio broadcast carried throughout the world by shortwave,. . .Roosevelt said the United States is dedicated to the defeat of German, Italian and Japanese tyrants and to removal "of the injustices and inequalities which create such tyrants and breed new wars."

At the same time, he cited the "almost incredible total" of 42,000,000 man days lost last year through industrial accidents, and declared that among those killed or disabled were men and women "who could have helped to build planes, tanks, ships and guns."

Kingston's New Radio Station Formally Opened

Kingston Ont., Sept. 1—(CP) — Kingston's new radio station, CKWS, went on full time broadcasting today after formal opening ceremonies last night.

The station, a link in the Allied broadcasting company, in which W. Rupert Davies, publisher of the Whig Standard is President, was formally opened when prominent Kingstonians went on the air and extended best wishes to CKWS.

Hon. Angus MacDonald, Minister of National Defence for naval affairs, was one of the speakers who briefly extended best wishes to the new station.

CKWS is broadcasting on 960 kilocycles and will be on the air daily for 16 hours.

SOUTH END OF LINE

it were the soil of England itself."

Quiet for two months, except for the occasional fire of patrolling machine-gunners and the daily crump of bombs, the southern end of the battlefield has been alive for more than 24 hours with the thunder of tank, artillery and infantry fighting.

The war office announcement early today said Rommel has sent his forces, "including armor," forward in the region of El Himeimat, 25 miles due south of El Alamein, early yesterday morning.

Immediately Engaged

"They were immediately engageed by our light forces and fighting is proceeding," the announcement said.

The German thrust in the south was accompanied by a "weak" Italian feint against the Allied lines to the north, but the war office said the Italian move was "repulsed with loss to the enemy."

The Axis action did not catch the strengthened and rested Allied forces off guard because "for some days past there have been signs of renewed activity on Rommel's front," the communique said.

It was June 18 that the Axis launched the offensive which recaptured the stronghold of Tobruk and penetrated Egypt to within 65 miles of Alexandria in 12 days.

Since July 1, Rommel's army has been stalled along a line running from the Mediterranean at a point about 10 miles west of El Alamein north to the Qattara depression, which he apparenly is attempting to skirt on his new drive, launched under more favorable weather conditions.

Allied Forces Active

For weeks Rommel has been receiving supplies and reinforcements, repairing tanks and equipment. His air forces have been bombing Allied airdromes behind the lines. Newly-arrived parachute troops have been acclimating themselves in the desert.

Allied forces also have been busy. Gen. Sir Harold Alexander succeeded Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck in the Egyptian command. New supplies and reinforcements have been streaming into the desert.

Rommel's tanks are only some 75 miles from Alexandria and about 120 miles from Cairo and 180 miles from the Suez Canal.

Beyond is the strategic link of land which ties the Egyptian front to the battered Russian lines in the Causasus.

Rommel's new drive may well be a jab of the southern claw of the pincers which Hitler hopes to clamp around all the countries of the middle and near east. The northern claw already has bitten through the northern Caucasus and stands now in wild and difficult foothills of the Caucasus mountains.

Between the two claws stand the British 9th army and other Allied forces, preparing for such a manoeuvre for months. There are the Persian Gulf ports, through which Britain and the United States had been supplying both the Allied forces in the near east and the Russian armies. There, in Iraq, are rich oil fields. And, in the middle, is Turkey, beset on all sides by the armed forces of belligerents, but still neutral.

RUSSIANS STILL

Silence Nine Nazi Batteries

Soviet artillery on the Leningrad front silenced nine German batteries and destroyed 23 enemy blockhouses and dugouts while Red army scouts and snipers killed more than 150 of the invaders, the information bureau said.

A German-held settlement in the Voronezh area on the upper Don was raided by Russian tanks. The armored forces were reported to have wiped out Germans and destroyed equipment, including 15 field guns, eight mortars, 15 trucks.

Savagery of the fighting northwest of Stalingrad was illustrated by a declaration that a Soviet unit repulsed three attacks, destroyed six tanks and killed more than 250 Germans.

A German infantry and tank force attacked Soviet positions in the Kletskaya area (apparently after the Russian-Italian action) and about 30 German tanks were disabled by grenades and gunfire, it was announced.

"The rest of the tanks retreated to their original positions," the communique said. "The enemy infantry, deprived of tank support, also retreated, sustaining heavy losses."

Searing Heat at Stalingrad

A searing heat wave beat down upon the Stalingrad front and Soviet dispatches said the only relief found by soldiers fighting across the sun-parched steppes was in the partial shade provided by smoke rising from the battlefields.

Water was becoming more and more of a problem for both sides because normally-filled streams had run dry. In some sectors one canteen of water had to suffice for a two days' ration.

In one area the opposing Russians and Germans were locked in a struggle for a well situated in no-man's-land.

Even at night the heat was described as so intense that candles melted in dugouts.

In a recapitulation of aerial losses in August, the Moscow radio reported destruction of 1,788 German planes against 936 Soviet craft. It said that in the last week alone 498 enemy planes were destroyed compared with 206 Soviet losses.

Water Becomes Urgent

The battle for water between the Don and Volga became so urgent that tanks were converted into water carriers loaded with everything from pots and buckets to barrels.

At one place the Germans sent four tanks to guard a well. Russian snipers were declared to have blown up every one of the tanks, enabling Red infantry to capture the well along with all surviving Nazis.

The heat wave was local, for Moscow was enjoying the coolest days since last spring while to the west of the capital rains drenched the fighting front, slowing operations.

The government newspaper Izvestia said that northwest of Stalingrad the Germans had failed to achieve even the smallest success in the past two days despite the arrival of a storm trooper division and Italian, Hungarian and Rumanian reinforcements.

Izvestia said that Soviet marines had joined the fighting in this sector and that their counter-attacks aided in capture of fortifications guarding a communications line.

NOT SO EXCLUSIVE

Philadelphia, Sept. 1. (AP)—Five thousand dollars buys a luncheon date with Hedy LaMarr today. The screen star, helping in the Treasury Department's drive to sell $1,000,000,000 in War Bonds this month, is lunching at the Midday Club and the price of a seat at her table is a pledge to buy $5,000 worth. The luncheon was a sell-out—400 had reserved seats.

ALLIED BOMBERS

assist.

Skirmishes again developed also enemy ports on both sides of Salamaua—at Buna, the beachead of the Kokoda salient, as well as at Lae.

Attacked From Low Level

Of the Buna raid the communique said: "Our heavy (four-motored) bombers attacked an enemy camp from a low altitude, starting fires and silencing anti-aircraft positions.

Medium and light bombers were credited with general destruction of the Lae airdrome installations.

"Ten tons of bombs were dropped among grounded enemy aircraft, buildings and installations," it was announced. "Five large fuel dumps, many buildings and many aircraft on the ground were destroyed. Fires were visible 30 miles away. The enemy did not attempt to intercept the planes. All our planes returned.

An Allied spokesman said the Australians fighting about Milne Bay, commanded by Maj.-Gen. Cyril Albert Clowes, had destroyed three Japanese tanks. He said the invaders had moved about half-a-dozen armored machines ashore before learning they could not be manoeuvred effectively on the terrain.

Japs Lose Initiative

He did not estimate the size of the Japanese forces remaining on the peninsula, but said they were fighting only defensively and had lost the initiative throughout the area.

Walter Lucas, a London Daily Express correspondent accredited to Gen. Clowes' headquarters said it is unlikely Allied casualties there will be high. Indicating the toll among the invaders might never be known he said the Japanese survivors are removing their wounded and dead.

Japanese parties, seeking to establish themselves on a sea flank of the Solomon Islands, and less than 250 miles east of Port Moresby formed for marching rather than fighting when they landed.

They assembled in columns of threes and moved along a trail from the fore-shore until the ambushed Australians struck. Lucas said Japanese naval gunners put up a heavy and sustained barrage, but the shells exploded harmlessly on a hillside.

Japs Launch Attack

London, Sept. 1. (CP)— The Japanese have launched a strong attack on the Kokda front of New Guinea, mountainous no-man's land between Japanese-held Buna and the Allied advanced base at Port Moresby, a Reuters News Agency Field dispatch said today.

Some Australian advance posts were abandoned under vigorous Japanese pressure, but the Allied positions were being restored after heavy fighting, the dispatch said. The main defence line was reported intact.

Although the invaders struck hard, the Australians escaped being trapped and many casualties were inflicted in close fighting, the dispatch said.

PERSONALS

Miss Wray operator of Cummins' Beauty Salon, is taking holidays beginning this Saturday, September 5th. 81-3t

Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Gordon of Newark, N.J., are spending three weeks' vacation at their summer cottage on the River Road.

Mr. and Mrs. Beecher Doolittle, Everett St., have returned from a vacation in Montreal.

Mr. J. L. Yome, H.M.C.S. Training School St. Hyacinthe, Quebec, spent the weekend with his wife and son, Bobby and also his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Doran and Jack and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Doran, are vacationing at Montreal, Quebec, and St. Anne de Beaupre.

Lieut. Fred Wallbridge, Calgary, is spending furlough with relatives in the city.

Dr. and Mrs. J. R. Christian have returned to Ottawa, after vacationing at the Sandbanks.

Miss Myrtle Reid, who spent the summer in Toronto, was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. G. Bristol, before returning to her home in Ivanhoe.

A.W. 1 Irene Camken, Rockcliffe, spent the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Camken, 23 Station Street, and accompanied them to Brighton on Sunday to visit friends.

Miss Grace Hogle was hostess at a delightful miscellaneous shower held at the Country Club on Friday evening, in honor of Miss Berna Foley, bride-to-be. About twenty-five guests were present and bridge was enjoyed during the evening, with Mrs. Al Nicolson winning the prize. Miss Foley received many lovely gifts for which she graciously thanked her friends. The tea table was most attractive with its pink and white decorative scheme, and pink tapers. Mrs. J. B. Foley poured tea.

Corporal Wallace Marner has returned to Ottawa, C.A. B.T.C., after spending two weeks' leave with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Marner, Queen Street.

After spending the summer holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Chapman, Miss Aletha Chapman left for Toronto, today, to spend a few days with her sisters before proceeding to Windsor on Monday to resume her duties on the Victoria School staff.

On Friday evening a very enjoyable surprise party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Marner, Queen Street, in honor of their son, Corporal Wallace Marner, of Ottawa C.A. B.T.C. Friends and relatives presented him with a Waterman pen and pencil set and a handsome Active Service watch. After games and dancing a light lunch was served and the party broke up in the small hours.

The Department Heads of the Belleville-Sergeant Company gathered in the Plant Superintendent's Office on Friday afternoon, to make a presentation to Miss Marie Parks, who is relinquishing her position with the Company. In a very nicely worded address Mr. Willerton, plant superintendent, presented Miss Parks with a twin-travelling set and a leather purse on behalf of the employees. Later in the Secretary-Treasurer's office, Mr. Vanner presented Miss Parks with a cheque from the Company in appreciation of her many years of faithful service. Although taken entirely by surprise, Miss Parks made a very suitable reply.

PANS TOO LARGE

Dallas, Texas, Sept. 1 (AP)—Sam Weinstein, baker, blames the war for his $25 fine for selling loaves of bread that were too large. State law prescribes 16-ounce loaves; one of Weinstein's weighed 19 1-4 ounces. He said his baking pans were too large—and he can't get priorities to buy smaller ones.

Exercises to Reduce Hips

By HELEN FOLLETT

MISSUS HIPPY has a sad life. She's always looking for a man sized chair. When she enters a public conveyance she can't squeeze into small spaces as can slimpy creatures. She can't bear the sight of her bulky shadow. Well, the poor dear should have started to fight tonnage when the first extra pounds accumulated. She postponed the day for regulating diet and getting enough exercise to burn up adipose tissue.

Trimming Down Hips

One way of trimming down hips and heavy thighs is this neat little stunt; place the feet five or six inches apart, send the hands out on a level with the shoulders, palms downward, come to a squatting position until the buttocks rest upon the heels. Back to first position slowly. Yes, madame, the supplicant for the willowy figure is likely to take a tumble, but what's that in the cause of pulchritude. This exercise pulls hard on all the muscles from ankles to waistline.

Another Exercise

Lie flat on the back in bed, hands under the buttocks for support. Lift the legs slowly until you are fairly standing on the back of your neck; lower them slowly. Five minutes night and morning.

She who has an abundance of flesh amidships can't be too particular about the fit of the foundation garment. A model that is properly fitted is a wonderful help. It picks up fat from one spot and packs it away elsewhere. The length must be exactly right. An experienced corsetiere can select a corset that improves the silhouette.

Always, when adipose tissue abounds, there must be restrictions on the intake of fats, starches and sweets, the arch enemies of the lady who is built like a cream puff.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Condones Husband's Escapades

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been married ten years and have a little boy and a girl—one seven and the other five. My husband has always been a good provider and is devoted to the children and they to him. There is very little friction in our home, so I am quite happy, with one exception.

I have known my husband to have affairs with other women since we were married, and I am quite sure there is one at present. My husband makes friends so readily, especially with women, that he always has some one "on the string". Don't suggest that I imagine these things and am jealous. I really admire his cheerful and friendly ways.

I've known of two affairs which became intimate, but I knew nothing of them until they were over, and then I thought there was no use bringing up old stuff which might break up our home. I believe my husband loves me and we've always been such good companions that I hesitate to speak of this matter.

Considering all the other assets of my married life, is this one of the imperfections I should accept in my mate?

B.

You're more philosophical about your husband's shortcomings than many of my correspondents, and as he has great charm to balance his flirtations, your point of view is the right one for a woman not of the possessive type. Many women in your position have divorced these honey-sipping husbands, and then nearly died of unhappiness when the break was final.

You would, I think, be most unhappy if you divorced this charming philanderer.

Fair to Win Her Away From The Other Boy?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Just before school dismissed I met a girl with whom I feel deeply in love. For a while I took out this girl, but being 'short of cash", I had to quit dating her and she started going with another boy.

I've been able to earn a little money on the side, and as she has shown me that she still cares for me I would like to ask her to go out with me again. Would it be fair to try and win her away from the other boy, and how would I go about it?

Lonesome

As you youngsters are all of high school age and are not thinking of becoming engaged, it would be proper for you to invite her to a movie, or ask permission to call, now that you're supplied with ready cash.

Soldier's Family Objects to His Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My boy friend and I have been going steady for three and a half years and became engaged at Christmas. He is expecting to leave for the army next month so we decided to marry before he left and bought the wedding ring.

Now he has changed his mind because his family tells him not to marry, although he's very anxious to go ahead. He's so afraid of his people. We're both 21 years of age and would like your advice in this matter. He said he would do as you say. We are devotedly in love.

S. B. J. K.

The fact that you and your fiance are both only 21 years of age may account for the family's disapproval of their son's marriage. On the other hand, I'm going to be quite frank with you and say that a good many families object to soldier-sons' marriages because they do not like to think of a young girl getting a wife's allotment and then being more or less on her own if the boy is sent overseas.

This may seem like a sordid point of view. Nevertheless, in a good many instances, it's what is back of the objection.

Waterloo Bridge Opened Quietly

LONDON, Sept. 1 — (CP) — Big Ben chimes 10 strokes. A giant crane dipped in salute and a foreman steel fixer, Charles Barnard, removed seven red flags from the south approach and the new Waterloo Bridge was opened. It meant a five-year-old dream had come true and a 16-year-old cyclist pedalled furiously over the bridge, first to cross the structure.

At present pedestrians must still use the temporary Waterloo Bridge while there are only two traffic lanes open on the new one. Soon, however, there will be six and then the new bridge will be in full use. The temporary bridge across the Thames is to remain. War being what it is, it may prove useful.

WEDDINGS

ALLIN—DOUGLAS

A quiet wedding took place at eight o'clock on Saturday evening at the residence of the officiating minister, Rev. J. W. Flatt, 262 Bridge Street East, when Eileen daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Douglas, Maynooth, Ont., became the bride of Earle Allin son of Alderman and Mrs. H. J. Allin, 135 North Front Street.

The bride wore a blue and rose ensemble and was attended by Miss Winnifred Douglas, who was attired in blue. The groomsman was Flight Sgt. H. Levick, R.A.F.

Mr. and Mrs. Allin have taken up residence at 92 Victoria Ave.

McRAE—REID

For the second time in its 150 years' history, the beautiful old church at Fourth Line, Odessa, was the scene of a wedding at three o'clock Wednesday afternoon, August 26, when Marjorie Helen, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Reid, Morven, became the bride of George Alvin Minor McRae, only son of Mr. George McRae, and the late Mrs. McRae, Lonsdale.

Rev. Walter Merrick, Selby, officiated and Mr. Harry Atkinson, the Fourth Line minister, assisted at the ceremony.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with ferns, gladioli and other summer flowers.

Wedding music was played by Mrs. James Robson and during the signing of the register the Misses Mary and Helen Reid sang, "I Love You Truly".

To the strains of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin the bridal party entered the church. The pretty bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white chiffon over taffeta, fashioned on classic lines, with wide shirring at the waist and softly draped neckline. Her full length veil was of fine net, falling gracefully from a coronet of lace and pearls. She carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses and bouvardia with a tiny spray of Scotch heather. Her only ornament was a beautiful pearl necklace belonging to her grandmother, Mrs. Curran.

The bride's sister, Miss Edna Reid, was maid-of-honor. She wore a heaven blue gown of chiffon with a matching brocaded bolero. The groom's cousin, Miss Mary McRae, was bridesmaid, wearing a gown of blush pink chiffon in jacket effect. Halos of matching flowers graced their hair and they carried Colonial nosegays of asters, gladioli and roses.

The best man was Claude McRae, cousin of the groom, and the ushers were Clifford Boothe and Harold Kimmerley.

Following the wedding ceremony, Roma Marguerite, the baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Reid, and first cousin of the bride, was christened. She was dressed in a lovely embroidered pink silk dress with matching poke bonnet and carried a tiny bouquet of pink and white sweet peas.

The bridal party left the church as the organist played Mendelssohn's Wedding March.

A reception was held at the Superior Restaurant, Napanee, where the bride's mother received, wearing a becoming gown of navy alpaca crepe with white embroidery, and a large navy hat. She wore a corsage of pink sweet peas. Mrs. McRae, aunt of the groom, chose a blue sheer frock with matching hat and accessories.

The two grandmothers also received the guests. Mrs. Helen Curran wore a gown of figured sheer with navy blue accessories. Mrs. C. P. Reid chose a gown of black alpaca crepe with white embroidery and black accessories. Both wore corsage of mauve sweet peas.

Dinner was served to about 70 guests. The beautiful wedding cake, which adorned the bride's table, was made by her grandmother, Mrs. Reid. Mr. Ryckman Reid, uncle of the bride, was toastmaster. Guests were present from Kirkland, Marysville and Ottawa.

The groom's gift to the organist, the maid of honor, the bridesmaid and the soloists were gold-filled compacts and to the best man and ushers leather billfolds.

Upon their return the young couple will reside at Lonsdale.

GIRLING—MIMMS

The marriage of Miss Dorothy Mae Mimms, Reg.N., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Mimms, of Notre Dame de Grace, to Mr. Walter Richard Girling, of Picton, Ont., son of Mr. Francis Girling of Hounslow, Middlesex, England, and of the late Mrs. Girling, took place on Saturday afternoon at half-past three o'clock in Wesley United Church, Montreal, the Reverend R. B. Brown officiating.

Mr. J. G. W. Rendall, organist of the church, played the wedding music and Mrs. Stuart Tait was soloist. Pink and white gladioli were used as decorations in the church.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a floor-length gown of china blue crepe with embroidery trimming, a finger-tip length veil of tulle illusion and she carried a bouquet of Joanna Hill roses.

Miss Margaret McLachlan, as maid of honor, and Miss Roberta Bosnell of Toronto, cousin of the bride as bridesmaid, were dressed alike in floor-length gowns of dusty pink crepe. They wore hats to match and carried bouquets of Talisman roses.

Mr. George Smith acted as best man for Mr. Girling and the ushers were Mr. Noel Crooks and Mr. Frank Matthews.

Mrs. Mimms, the bride's mother, wore a gown of grey crepe having a yoke of matching lace. Her hat and accessories were of burgundy and she wore a corsage bouquet of American Beauty roses.

The reception was held in the Green Room of Victoria Hall Westmount, where garden flowers were used to decorate.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. Girling left for the Laurentians, the bride travelling in a tailored suit of brown tweed with hat and accessories of dark green and brown.

COURNEYA—O'CONNOR

Sacred Heart Church, Marmora, was decorated with gladioli, snapdragons, cosmos and asters for the wedding on Saturday at 9.30 a.m. of Margaret Elizabeth O'Connor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. O'Connor and Donald Francis Courneya, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Courneya, of Tamworth. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. J. Farrell, who also said the Nuptial Mass. Rev. F. D. Hyland of Madoc, was in the Sanctuary. The wedding music was played by Miss Rita Deacon and Mrs. James McGrath sang Rosewig's "Ave Maria", at the Offertory. Hymns were also sung by the choir. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore white brocaded satin, with fitted pleated bodice and train. A finger tip veil of white tulle illusion fell from a gathered headdress in Dutch style, and her flowers were a cascade of white gladioli.

Miss Jean Courneya, sister of the groom, was gowned in honey yellow, her dress and headdress matching that of the maid of honor, and carried a cascade of mauve gladioli.

Mr. Breen O'Connor of Toronto, brother of the bride, was groomsman. Ushers were Mr. Michael O'Connor, brother of the bride, and John Kerby of Peterborough, cousin of the bride.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at Tipperary Hotel, Crowe Lake. The bride's mother wore a rose beige ensemble, redingote style, with large black felt hat and corsage of Talisman roses. Assisting her in receiving the groom's mother wore wine crepe with black hat and corsage of Talisman roses.

The couple left on a trip to Montreal, the bride travelling in a wool costume of Romance blue, rust beret, red fox scarf and matching accessories. They will live in Oshawa.

Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Courneya, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Courneya, Tamworth; Mr. and Mrs. Rivers, Stoco; Rev. F. D. Hyland, Mrs. J. Jackson, Miss Margaret Stewart, Madoc; Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Donnelly and children, Niagara Falls, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Keating, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Jackson and Marilyn, Mr. F. Bosely, Toronto; Misses Stella, Lillian and Ethel Courneya, Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Toal and family, Mr. John Kerby, Peterborough; Miss Gertrude Lumsden, Mr. Vincent Jackson, Ottawa; Miss Joan O'Connor, Miss Mary A. Murray, Mr. Ted Blute, Kingston; Mr. Leo Hogan, Miss Annie Hogan, Misses Aileen and Loretta Hogan, Millbridge; Mrs. Bosely, Queensboro; Crawford O'Connor, Lockslah, Ont., and Corp. Leo O'Connor, Nanaimo, British Columbia.

TOMATOES GROW AS SIDELINE

Timmins, Ont., Sept. 1 — (CP) —Influenced by campaigns for top production, a potato vine in the garden of Mrs. Roy Gilder here patriotically grew a crop of tomatoes as a sideline. The vine has produced potatoes and tomatoes all season.

Popular Girl Is Sure of Etiquette

"Did I Do Something Wrong?"

That ghastly feeling that you've done something wrong, that people are laughing at you (or wincing!) may sometimes be perfectly right.

People DO look down on you when you commit some obvious breach of etiquette.

Like walking across a dance-floor alone! After a dance a girl who knows what to do asks her partner to take her back to her friends or wherever she may wish to go.

And a well-bred man, of course, will never leave a girl in the middle of the dance floor — any more than he'd give his order first in a restaurant—or neglect to offer his arm to his girl when crossing a crowded street or getting out of a car.

The popular girl knows her part is to receive such courtesies graciously, not with a crude "Don't bother." That's why she's dated, rushed!

You could be, too, if you were sure of the rules. Our 32-page booklet tells both girls and men how to act on dates—whether dancing, dining, motoring, at the theatre or sports events. Tells what to say in introductions, on the telephone. Discusses office and travel etiquette, petting.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of "How to Improve Your Vocabulary" to The Ontario Intelligencer, Home Service, 166 Front Street, Belleville, Ontario. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Week-End in the Country

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

A woman whom I have met in my Red Cross work has a house in the country, and she has invited me to spend the last week-end in September with her. I don't know her very well, but I like her enormously and, of course want to make the very best impression I can. There are several questions about this visit that are bothering me, and I would be grateful to you if you will answer them.

1.—Although she has invited me for the week-end, should I, if she urges me to stay longer, accept her invitation to stay?

2.—I think, from what she has said, that she has one maid, and maybe there are more. Should I tip this maid when I am leaving? If so, should I give her the tip when the hostess is present, so that she will know that I have done what I should do? About how much should the tip be for a week-end visit?

3.—Is it necessary to write a thank-you letter to the hostess for a visit as short as a week-end, when you thank the hostess when you are leaving?

4.—She has one child, a little girl. Should I take her a present?

Barbara

1.—Even if your hostess urges you to stay, you should not yield to the temptation to extend your visit. Some hostesses are so hospitable that they do urge guests to extend their visits, graciously regarding this as another evidence of their hospitality. Intimate friends might accept this suggestion to extend the visit, since they are naturally more capable of judging the real desire and convenience of the hostess. But since you don't know this hostess very well, you would be wise to leave at the end of the week-end and take no chances of wearing out your welcome. Another hint: the wise and accustomed visitor has a reason for her departure all ready to use, when necessary!

2.—Yes, you should tip each servant when you leave. But do this unobstrusively . . . never when the hostess is present. The amount you give depends on what you can afford—one dollar to each servant is sufficient for a week-end visit. If there is only one maid and she does some special service for you (such as pressing), you might give her two dollars, if you can afford it.

3.—Yes, a guest should write the hostess a bread-and-butter letter for a week-end visit, even for a one-night visit. In your case, for every reason, this is a most important letter. Thank her for her thoughtful invitation, for her hospitality in general and specifically for special plans she has made for your comfort and happiness. Use warm-hearted and enthusiastic words. In your letter to her, express your thanks to her husband for his friendliness and hospitality.

I suggest that with your letter, or very soon after, you send her a gift, somethnig that you sense will be welcome to her, either personal or for her home.

4.—Yes, by all means take with you a gift for the little girl—not candy, but a book or a puzzle or toy, or one or two of the enchanting new handkerchiefs with a flower or her name embroidered on it.

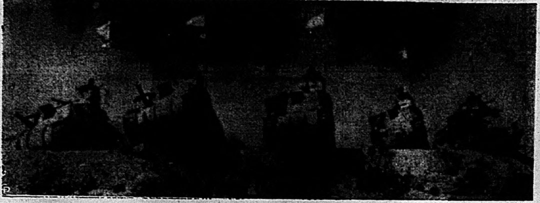
Desert Training for Tanks of Uncle Sam's Army



Uncle Sam is now training his forces in the art of desert warfare in real surroundings in California. Here we see a tank detachment coming up from a ditch in manoeuvres now going on. The way the tanks take the holes and traps laid for them it seems as though nothing can stop the steel monsters.

FIRST OF THE "WAVES" ARE NURSES

Mr. Power Sees R.C.A.F. Station in England

Air Minister C. G. Power is visiting Royal Canadian Air Force squadrons in Britain. Above he is pictured discussing the job of an army co-operation squadron with Squadron Leader R. P. Begg of Vancouver, the commanding officer of the squadron. The air minister, with Air Marshal L. S. Their interest was heightened by the fact that squadrons of this type played a large part in the operations at Dieppe.

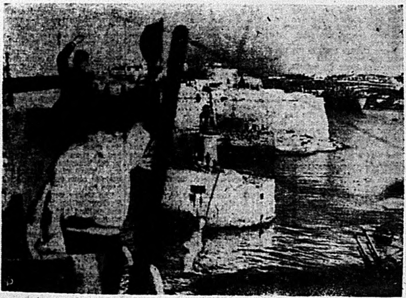
Garrison Cheers as Vital Convoy Reaches Malta



The battle-scarred bastions of Malta harbor were crowded with watchers that never saw a more welcome sight than the big convoy that recently fought its way through with supplies although under constant attack by Axis bombers. Here's a view of the scene as a ship of the convoy went through. In FOREGROUND are members of the garrison of the most-bombed community in the world. The ack-ack guns at LOWER RIGHT are on an escort vessel of the convoy.

Crashed "Fortress," Loaded With Bombs, Gets Doused

This American Flying Fortress was taking-off for a raid upon Jap-held positions in the Southwest Pacific when it crashed with its full bomb load. The crew scrambled to safety—all of them unhurt—while ground-crew members rushed to the scene with fire-fighting equipment and extinguished the blazes which started in two of the motors. The bombs, luckily, did not explode. ABOVE shows the fire-fighters in action. The craft can most likely be salvaged.

Why You Can Safely Visit The Tuberculosis Sanitorium

When a member of the family or one of your friends is found to have tuberculosis and is sent to a sanitorium, you may wonder if it is safe for you or others to visit him. You know that tuberculosis is spread from one person to another by the organism (tubercle bacillis) floating in the air. You naturally wonder that with so many of these in the air of a room or ward of a sanitorium, it would be safe for you and others to venture there unless you wore a mask or other device to prevent you from breathing in these organisms.

However, if you think further, you realize that the physicians, nurses, and orderlies all enter the rooms and wards and examine, apply treatment, serve meals, and clean the floors and dust the furniture, yet they do not contract tuberculosis in any greater numbers than other individuals.

In the Quarterly Bulletin of the Seaview Hospital, Staten Island, New York, Dr. Harry L. Katz, states that in order to prove that physicians, nurses and orderlies can perform their duties safely, he and his associates investigated the common ways tuberculosis is passed on to others and the means of its prevention.

"Tubercle bacilli may enter the body (a) by breathing in the air of the room or ward, (b) by eating food containing the bacilli, (c) through the mucous membranes (lining of nose and throat) and (d) through cracks or cuts in the skin."

What did these investigators discover? They found that the air breathed out by a tuberculosis patient during ordinary breathing "does not contain tubercle bacilli." During coughing and sneezing however, droplet thrown out from the mouth and nose "frequently contain the organisms."

The members of the staff whose ward duties required close contact with advanced cases of tuberculosis were selected for this study. Smears from the washings from their nose and throat were obtained before they went on duty in the morning and when they went off duty after the day's work. They wore no masks.

The washings after the day's duty were injected into guinea pigs and caused no tuberculosis as tuberculin tests of the animals at monthly intervals thereafter were all negative.

One of the first things taught patients is to cough and sneeze into special receptacles. This prevents infecting visitors or members of the staff.

LIVING ON GRASS

Chungking, Aug. 31 —(AP)— The worst flood in 50 years in South Kwangsi Province had routed 300,000 Chinese from their homes today and inundated 32 districts. About 700 were reported dead and another 60,000 were said to be starving. Some 20,000 were reported living only on grass.

U.S. PLANES TO RELAY RED CROSS SUPPLIES

Washington, Aug. 31 (AP)—In the face of Japan's refusal to allow a neutral ship to carry food and clothing direct to imprisoned Americans under International Red Cross supervision, the United States has proposed that these supplies be relayed in American and Japanese Red Cross ships meeting at Portuguese East Africa, the State Department announced tonight.

The proposal was made in a note dispatched by the Acting Secretary of State, Sumner Welles, to the Tokyo government through Swiss authorities.

Kingston Victorias Easily Win First Game of O A S A Playoffs Shelling Bawden off Mound

Winners Score Twelve Runs After Two Were Out in Two Frames

SCORE IS 13 TO 3

Taking full advantage of three walks and an equal number of Belleville errors, Kingston Victorias pounded two Belleville hurlers for a total of 15 safeties at the fair grounds last evening to defeat the local Army and Navy Veterans in the first game of their Intermediate 'A' softball playdown series by a lopsided 13-3 score.

Playing one of their worst games of the season and with Johnnie Bawden decidedly off color in his effort as starting twirler, the locals were no match for the hard-hitting Kingston nine with the visitors being full measure for their rather easy win.

Paced by Collins, their hard-hitting receiver, and by Belleville's own one time hardballer, Sonny Green, the visitors shelled Bawden from the mound in the fourth inning after nine runs had crossed the platter, five of them in the third inning. Jim Hunter came in to stem the tide but the damage was already done and the game in the bag for the Kingston lads.

Scrutton pitched steady ball for the visitors and scattered seven Belleville hits well, only two of the locals' hits coming in the same inning. Mike Whalen drew a walk after one was away in the eighth, advanced on Cy Barriage's drive through short that went for a single and later scored on a passed ball for the first Belleville run. Kiser then pinch-hitted for St. Louis and conked out a rather cheap homer as Rawley in centre played his drive badly.

Hurlers for both teams were rather wild with Bawden walking three, all of which later developed into runs. Kingston scored five runs in the third after two were gone and chased seven across in the next inning, also after two were out.

Sonny Green's triple in the third with the bases loaded was the straw that broke the camel's back as the locals never fully recuperated from the long lead the visitors established. And the same Sonny pulled the old hidden ball trick on Jim Hunter for the final out of the game. Jim had hit into a forceout at second and then stepped off the sack to have Sonny put the ball on him for the out.

MONTY RETIRES

Pitcher Monte Pearson, above, has notified Manager Bill McKechnie of the Cincinnati Reds that he has decided to retire from baseball. Pearson, one-time star of the Cleveland Indians and New York Yankees, was granted a year's leave of absence last spring in the hope that the rest would improve his ailing pitching arm. Now, Pearson says, he is convinced his arm will never regain its old skill.

TIGERS BOW OUT OF PENNANT RACE FOR THIS YEAR

Eliminated When Beaten by Atley Donald of Yankees by 8-3 Score

DODGERS GAIN

(By JUDSON BAILEY)
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

One by one the also rans are bowing out of even a mathematical change at the pennants as the September sprint starts in the major leagues.

Detroit Tigers dropped out yesterday, leaving only the first division in the American League still contending with New York Yankees. Pittsburgh Pirates may go today, leaving the National League with the same situation, and even Cincinnati Reds who were picked for the pennant by some observers last Spring, may meet their doom this week.

Thus the big margins separating the first and second place clubs in each circuit from lesser rivals will reduce the championship competition to basic principles in short order now.

The Yankees themselves took care of the disposal of Detroit with an 8-3 triumph that was Atley Donald's first over the Tigers in five years of labor in the American League. He pitched two-hit shutout ball for eight innings, but his jinx threatened to catch up with him in the ninth, when the Tigers tallied three times on an error and four hits before Johnny Murphy rushed in to put out the fire.

The Pirates, who are within half a game of being eliminated from a pennant chance, were nosed out 5-4 in 11 innings by Brooklyn and the Dodgers have a chance to apply the finishing punch today.

Dodgers Boost Lead Margin

The Dodgers pushed across the winning run on two singles and a wild throw by Elbie Fletcher to boost their lead over the idle St. Louis Cardinals to 3 1-2 games.

New York Giants bagged their sixth straight conquest with 7-6 decision over Chicago Cubs. But it took a two-run pinch single by Buster Maynard to turn the trick after Harry Feldman had flown a five-run lead.

The weak-hitting Reds surprised their followers by manufacturing a five-run inning and overpowered Philadelphia Phils 8-1 in a night game in which Elmer Riddle pitched five-hit ball.

Boston Red Sox kept within eight games of the Yanks by setting down St. Louis 8-6, but they had to stave off a five-run rally by the Brownies in the ninth inning. Three of the tallies in this uprising came on Chet Laabs' 23rd home run.

The victory went to Cecil (Tex) Hughson, giving him 18 successes and putting him in front of all pitchers in both leagues in total triumphs. However, he had to have help to survive the ninth.

In the day's only other American league action Chicago White Sox swept a double bill from Philadelphia Athletics 3-1 and 5-0. In the first game Johnny Humphries held the A's to five hits, one less than the Sox collected, and in the nightcap Lefty Edgar Smith scattered nine for a shut out and his fifth victory against 19 defeats.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By The Associated Press)

Johnny Humphries and Edgar Smith, White Sox—Former pitched five-hit ball and latter hurled shutout, although allowing nine hits, to sweep doubleheader from Athletics

Buster Maynard, Giants—Hit two-run pinch single in seventh inning to defeat Cubs.

Atley Donald, Yankees—Pitched two-hit ball for eight innings and although needing help for final out in ninth, beat Tigers for first time in five-year American League career.

Curt Davis, Dodgers— Making second relief appearance in two days held Pirates hitless for 1 2-3 innings to gain 15th victory.

SIX HAVE CHANCE TO MAKE THREE PLAYOFF BERTHS

Toronto Leafs Only 1½ Games Out of the Fourth Slot

LOOP ENDS MONDAY

By The Associated Press

Although the Newark Bears have the International League pennant stowed away and are assured of playoff berth, one of the hottest fights in the league's history continues for the remaining first-division spots.

After yesterday's curtailed program, in which Jersey City defeated Syracuse, 4-3, and Montreal downed Buffalo, 8-3, the standings of the first seven clubs was:—

Clubs	W.	L.	Pct.
Newark	87	56	.608
Jersey City	71	67	.514
Montreal	74	70	.514
Syracuse	72	71	.503
Toronto	72	73	.497
Baltimore	70	71	.496
Buffalo	70	77	.476

Only the first four clubs compete in the playoffs and with one berth already allotted Newark, six clubs still have a chance for the remaining three.

The season ends next Monday with Labor Day doubleheaders and it is possible that the contenders in the post-season competitions won't be decided until then.

Bobby Coombs, recently recalled by the New York Giants, kept the Little Giants in the runnerup role last night by besting the Chiefs although the Syracuse Club threatened and scored all its runs in the final two frames.

Montreal moved into a percentage point tie with the Giants behind the six-hit pitching of rookie Steve Nagy. Catcher Dixe Howell was the big gun for the Royals with two long doubles and an outfield fly. The combination drove in five runs.

Tennis Championships Getting Down To Real Play

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Sept. 1 (AP) — The National Tennis Championships began to get down to cases at Forest Hills today, and after nearly a week of extremely boresome competition it was about time.

A couple of promising third-round matches were on tap. In one, Sidney Wood, Jr., the veteran New Yorker who won a Wimbledon championship a decade ago in short pants, ran into Alejo Russell, champion of the Argentine.

In the other, Harris Everett, former University of North Carolina star, faced Pancho Segura, the jitterbug from Ecuador.

Only two other men's singles were scheduled, Ted Schroeder, Jr., the tournament's top-seeded star, playing James Evert of Chicago, and Seymour Greenberg, the National clay court champion, meeting Robert Smidl of Chicago.

The Wood-Russell affair looked like a toss-up. Wood, once one of the game's supreme stylists, has made a determined enough comeback this summer to be seeded fifth among United States players. Russell proved himself in winning the only match he has played from Bob Falkenburg, the National Interscholastic champion.

Two players, William Talbert of Cincinnati, and Lieut. Gardnar Mulloy of Jacksonville, already have won their third-round matches. Talbert defeated Vincent Paul of New York yesterday, 6-3, 6-2, 6-4, while Mulloy triumphed over Tom Brown, Jr., of San Francisco, 6-0, 6-3, 4-6, 5-7, 6-1

Bums they are, but champions, too. The Brooklyn Dodgers, pennant-bound again, the riding high in the senior circuit and should nab the flag without too much trouble from any of the other clubs, including the Cardinals, chief threat. This is the first time in many years that the National League race hasn't been tighter than a drum throughout most of the season. Manager Leo Durocher has a well-balanced club again this year, getting plenty of good pitching, sparkling infield and outfield play and timely hitting. Pete Reiser, the young centrefielder, is the club's leading hitter. Dolf Camilli's big home run bat is booming. Whit Wyatt and Larry French are the stars of the Dodger mound staff and Joe Medwick is enjoying a banner year both at the plate and in the field. With only a month and a half to go, the Dodgers appear set for their second pennant in a row.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1 — (AP) — The United States college football season gets under way today with the "official" opening of practice in most sections … and here are a few of its problems: Pre-season practice will be on a one-session schedule at a lot of schools where the academic speed-up has changed the usual opening dates; and what about late practice sessions in the dimout areas where the coaches can't turn on the lights? … what team will be known as "Army" — West Point, the Army All-stars (East and West units) or the camp teams that survive the blitz against spectator sports? … if the folks in Washington are serious about cancelling the Army-Navy game at Philadelphia, why not let them play without spectators and make the most of the broadcast that has been sold for $100,000?

The Baltimore fight promoters, who have had a pretty good thing in the Leo Rodak-Slugger White series, want to put on another episode — this time at 15 rounds …. according to the American Field Service, which has just received a $10,000 donation from Tom Yawkey, Tom's Boston Red Sox are second in the American League "behind the New York Giants."

TORONTO, Sept. 1 — (CP) — The only village in the world with a trophy on every mantelpiece is Dalroy, Alta., with a population of 21 men, women and children.

Dalroy Bearcats won the provincial intermediate softball "B" title a few days ago over the R.C.A.F.'s No. 3 Service Flying Training School. The personnel of the school is a military secret, of course. But it won't be violating any trust to say that it has many more than 21 students, all youthful and able-bodied.

For many cities 1,000 times Dalroy's size one provincial title in a season would be a good showing. For Dalroy, it is only average. Despite its limited manpower resources, Dalroy has won the Alberta Senior and Intermediate "A" softball crowns in the past in addition to numerous minor championships.

Eric Lauritzen, one of the big pushes behind Dalroy's softball prowess, has estimated for Tom (Calgary Albertan) Moore that a city the size of Calgary would have to win 4,000 championships to equal Dalroy's record on a pro rata basis.

Complaint Dept.

George Perley, Ottawa Rough Riders secretary, takes issue with this bureau's statement last week that the Eastern Rugby Football Union folded "when it became apparent that only glory was left" as a reward for operating a football club.

He told the Ottawa Journal: —"There was no question of withdrawing because the league might not draw enough money to keep the teams going. The league folded up for the simple reason that there were not enough teams after the air force and army decided not to enter. The league would have been unbalanced … it might be remembered that Rough Riders in other years stayed in the Big Four Union when the crowds were small and our club couldn't meet our financial obligations."

This is quoted from the Journal in fairness to Mr. Perley, who is among the most estimable of Canadian sports officials. We won't argue the point again at length. But the "unbalanced" angle is shaky. The Western Interprovincial Union carried on quite successfully, producing a reasonable proportion of Canadian champions, while operating with only three clubs. Several years ago it was Winnipeg, Regina and Calgary and later Winnipeg, Regina and Vancouver. The distances, too, were far greater than those the Eastern Clubs would have to face.

NORMAN NEWSON IS TRANSFERRED TO THE DODGERS

Roy Cullenbine of the Senators Sent to Yankees for Cash

New York, Sept. 1—(AP)—Brooklyn's two-tone baseball ensemble of Leo Durocher and Larry MacPhail becomes a trio today with the arrival of Louis Norman (Bobo) Newsom, one of the American League's most travelled and articulate pitchers.

Newsom, who has played for 13 clubs in eight leagues, became a Dodger yesterday just 12 hours before the world series player deadline and less than 24 hours after Manager Durocher publicly, announced he wasn't worried about the St. Louis Cardinals, now only three and a half games in back of the Dodgers.

It was the second deal of the day for the Senators, who earlier had released Roy Cullenbine to the New York Yankees for cash. Cullenbine was acquired as outfield insurance following Tommy Henrich's enlistment in the coast guard. He also will be eligible for the world series.

The Newsom transfer to Brooklyn will make the third time in a Dodger uniform for the righthander. He came up as rookie in 1929.

Two weeks later he was in the minors again because of wildness. He failed to stick again in 1930 and soon began his moving around among St. Louis, Boston, Washington and Detroit in the American League.

His best year on a won and lost basis was 1940 when he helped Detroit win the American League pennant with 21 victories and only five defeats.

Police Seeking "The Phantom"

Kitchener, Ont., Sept. 1—(CP) — Police today are seeking a man who calls himself "the phantom" and who broke into the office of the Household Finance Corporation of Canada here during the night for a $300 haul.

The thief left a note which said: "This was the toughest safe I've ever tackled. It took me exactly four hours to get it opened. Next time leave more money."

Hinges of a filing cabinet were sawed off, police said, the door pried open and cash box containing the money forced open.

The note was left on a typewriter.

Washington, Sept. 1—(AP)— The Japanese people, who were told after the battle of the Coral seas that the United States Pacific fleet had been annihilated, now are being warned to be prepared for new attacks by a "superior force," the office of war information reported today.

It quoted Capt. Hideo Hiraide, Japanese naval spokesman, as saying, "the enemy could not be completely annihilated," and warning the people to expect fresh attacks.

HOG-RAISING FARMERS DOING A "FINE" JOB

Canadian Producers With Alberta Leading Meet Britain's Demands

NEW AGREEMENT

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Sept. 1 — (CP) — The grunting of millions of Canadian hogs is beginning to sound something like a paean of victory to Dominion agriculture authorities.

With charts of hog production pointed upward, Canadian bacon board officials said today farmers raising hogs have done "a fine job" even though more hog marketings are required to supply all the needs of the United Kingdom for bacon.

Increase has been piled on increase in the demand for more bacon for shipment overseas, and thus far Canadian producers have met the demand.

Bacon exports totalled 170,837,000 pounds in 1938; 187,824,000 in 1939; 345,804,000 in 1940 and 464,614,000 in 1941. This year, the bacon board hopes to ship 600,000,000 pounds or more.

Hog Gradings Up

Agriculture department records showed today that hog gradings to Aug. 22 this year totalled 3,859,069, against 3,564,848 for the corresponding period of 1941.

Three factors have made possible the bacon export achievements of the past year, officials said:—

1. Canadians generally have eaten less bacon, leaving more for export.

2. Farmers have concentrated more extensively on hog production.

3. The average slaughter weight of hogs has been increased. This has meant that while the hog gradings show an increase, the actual gain is larger than is thus shown because the animals marketed are heavier and more bacon is made available.

Prairie Provinces High

As was the case last year, the prairie provinces have carried the main share of the increased production, with Alberta well in the lead.

Hog gradings in Alberta to Aug. 22 numbered 1,130,647, an increase of 251,544 compared with 1941. Saskatchewan gradings numbered 414,569, an increase of 149,035, and Manitoba 703,526, up 101,457. The Maritime provinces showed a gain of 3,459 with total gradings 45,039.

Concentrating on the production of cheese, butter and other dairy products, Ontario and Quebec produced fewer hogs this year, with Ontario gradings down 53,434, at 1,143,116 and Quebec down 134,383 at 335,763. A drop of 23,457 to 86,409 was reported for British Columbia.

Officials said that the United Kingdom wanted all the bacon Canada could provide because it is a food which keeps well, has high food values and can be shipped easily.

The contract to supply 600,000,000 pounds of bacon to the United Kingdom in a year was entered into last Nov. 4. A new agreement is

AT THE BELLE

"Reap The Wild Wind"

When bigger, better and more spectacular motion pictures are made there's only one man in the business who will make them and that's the Old Master himself, Cecil Blount DeMille. His latest and best film, Paramount's "Reap The Wild Wind" a roaring, roistering, blustery tale of the wild winds of the Caribbean, is now on the Belle Theatre screen and this writer bows low in tribute to the Old Master's mastery of the cinematic art.

In this broad-canvassed Technicolor picture of the early days when American's only lifeline was the sea, when, as the prologue puts it, tall sailing ships were the only link between the lush Mississippi Valley and the teaming industrial states of New England, DeMille tells the story of a girl, Paulette Goddard, and of two men who battle for her love, Ray Milland and John Wayne.

Lavishly Told Tale

DeMille has told the story as only he could tell it, on a lavish scale. He has always worked that way. He could not do less with "Reap The Wild Wind," the picture that marks the 30th Anniversaries of himself as a producer and of Paramount Pictures.

"Reap The Wild Wind" is spectacle. It is powerful, magnificent, flamboyant, made with all the power and punch that Hollywood's greatest producer-director could put into it. Great sailing ships, driven helplessly before the howling hurricane, break on the jagged shoals of Key West. Lawless men, captains from the seven seas, pray like vultures on the derelicts, actually lure vessels to destruction for purposes of piracy and salvage. Fathoms below the surface of the sea, men in divers' gear fight to the death against a giant squid.

Love and Savagery

All this adventure is in "Reap The Wild Wind." But there is more to the picture than that. Its savagery and wickedness is matched by romance in the love of Ray Milland and Miss Goddard, by the tragedy of Susan Hayward and Robert Preston, by the great-hearted honesty of Lynne Overman, and by the retribution that comes to John Wayne when he turns ship wrecker.

Raymond Massey, as King Cutler, leader of the pirate gang, is the main villain of the piece and he contributes a mighty bit of acting. Charles Bickford, Walter Hampden, Martha O'Driscoll and Janet Beecher are others who make the picture's cast one of the most important ever assembled in a single production. The screen play was written by Alan LeMay, Charles Bennett and Jesse Lasky, Jr., from a Saturday Evening Post story by Thelma Strabel.

Fathoms Deep Thrills

An extra word must be said about the battle with the squid, the fight in which John Wayne gives his life to save Milland and his rival for the heart of Paulette Goddard. If there is another sequence in any other picture ever made that half matches this one for thrills, this writer would like to see it. DeMille himself donned diver's helmet and gear to go fathoms deep into the water to direct his actors. Technicolor points up the sequence tremendously. You can actually feel the chill of the greenish blue water and feel the horror as the giant tentacles reach out to crush and kill.

The simplest description of "Reap The Wild Wind" is to say that it's "DeMille," and that in motion pictures is a synonym for greatness.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Sky Devils"

A picture that took a year in the making and cost more than a half million dollars is "Sky Devils" starring Spencer Tracy, which opens next at the McCarthy Theatre.

An air-fleet of 55 planes was used in filming the sensational flying scenes in "Sky Devils" and in one sequence alone 50 ships are shown in thrilling combat above the clouds. The story of "Sky Devils" has many unusual twists, and the dialogue sparkles with humor. It moves at a terrific tempo, from start to finish and piles laugh upon laugh and thrill upon thrill as the action unreels on the screen. Besides Spencer Tracy the cast includes Ann Dvorak, William Boyd, George Cooper and scores of fighter pilots. The added feature on the program is the comedy-drama "Not A Ladies Man" featuring Paul Kelly, Fay Wray and Douglas Croft. Make a date now to enjoy these attractions this week at the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Atlantic Ferry"

"Atlantic Ferry" which is now showing at the Capitol Theatre, has an inspiring "hands-across-the-sea" theme. It is a story of the founding of the Cunard line in 1840 and of the first efforts to institute regular steamship sailings between England and America.

"Too Many Husbands"

The added hit is "Too Many Husbands" starring Jean Arthur, Fred MacMurray and Melvyn Douglas. There are laffs from start to finish as the two men battle it out for the love of Jean. Fred MacMurray returns home to find his wife already married to another man, and then the fun starts.

Drug May Control Disease That Cripple Children

Brain hemorrhage, no matter at what age it happens, is in too many instances a crippling disease. When it occurs in an infant or child it often disables the small patient by causing the development of a disorder known as cerebal spastic palsy. Children with this affliction have stiff or rigid muscles in the arms or legs or both. Of course, this crippling condition interferes with the normal, healthy activity of a child, and brings tragedy into the youngster's home.

Unfortunately, up to the present time, no treatment which is very satisfactory has been developed. A study was undertaken by Drs. Eric Denhoff and Charles Bradley of Rhode Island to determine the effects of a drug known as curare in treating spastic paralysis in children. The patients varied in age from seven to twelve years and were all of normal intelligence. The most satisfactory way of giving the drug proved to be by injection into a muscle. It was necessary to give the drug in various doses to determine which amount proved most satisfactory. Once the proper amount was determined, that dose could be continued. The injections were given at intervals of one to four days, depending in the effect.

Following the injection of the curare, the children complained often of being dizzy and feeling heavy. These symptoms seldom lasted more than ten minutes. Later on when larger doses of the drug were given symptoms developed, such as slow breathing and excessive sweating, but these symptoms disappeared within about forty minutes. For the succeeding twelve hours, however, the muscles of the body were definitely relaxed although the children were listless.

Under the treatment with curare, a training program could be easily carried out for each child. It was noted that with this drug improvement in speed and accuracy occurred. There was no effect on the urine or the blood, as shown by the laboratory examinations. It was found that the following improvements in the children's activities occurred: Their co-ordination was smoother and more rhythmic. The children could move their muscles better when the drug was used than when it was not. The best results seemed to appear about twenty-four hours after the injection was given. The fact that the children were able to do better seemed to stimulate them and thus brought even further progress. The children also seemed to develop better muscular strength and control.

It would appear that further tests with this drug should be carried out to determine its exact value in treating spastic palsy.

Extra Sugar For Applesauce

In order to encourage greater consumption of the earlier varieties of apples which because of the loss of export markets, are in surplus supply this year, S. R. Noble, Sugar Administrator, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, has announced that "until further notice," domestic consumers may purchase by voucher extra sugar at the rate of one pound per eight pounds of such apples consumed in the household. This is equivalent to one pound of sugar for a six-quart basket of apples, or five pounds per bushel box, crate or hamper.

As apples are not preserved, this fruit has not hitherto qualified for the issue of sugar on purchase vouchers, but it is recognized that it is desirable to stimulate the use of early varieties which are not keepers and are mainly used for cooking purposes. To the extent that they can be brought into additional consumption by an allowance of sugar, this will tend to reduce the demand for imported dried fruits.

The extra allowance of sugar now authorized may be regarded as inadequate to take care of full requirements for cooking apples, but the prevailing coupon ration of sugar, one-half pound per person per week, is intended to cover ordinary cooking needs. The extra allowance is, therefore, an encouragement to housewives to do more cooking of these early varieties than otherwise would be the case and an additional incentive to make the best possible use of the large supply of early apples.

MAJOR HAL ROACH MARRIED

Dayton, O., Sept. 1 (AP)—Maj. Hal E. Roach, 50, originator of "Our Gang" comedies, and Miss Lucille Prin, 29, of Los Angeles were married here last night. Roach has been at —right Field army air corps material centre, for about three weeks working in the training film production laboratory.

Soldier's Story Said To Be False

Edmonton, Sept. 1—(CP)—Royal Canadian Mounted Police here reported last night that Pte. B. Schweigert, 30, of the R.C.A.S.C. Training Centre here had admitted under questioning that his story of being bound by the Germans and left across railway tracks was false and that he had attempted to commit suicide.

(Report from Red Deer said Pte. Schweigert had been returned to the army camp from Red Deer hospital and army authorities had refused permission to interview the soldier.)

The first story told by Pte. Schweigert after a C.P.R. freight train had stopped inches from him was that two Germans after being unable to get any details from him about the army camp had bound him and left him straddling the tracks.

Police said that under questioning Pte. Schweigert had admitted a hoax and that his suicide attempt misfired when the train stopped.

No further information was available immediately at Edmonton.

CHAPTER 15

Task Completed

As time went on and the story grew, she learned to love Rusty, the copper-colored horse, to know and understand his gentle mistress. This was a love story, a novel that wove through death, happiness, destruction—an entire generation of intense living.

There was little actual conversation between Linda and Steve during those first few weeks aside from a discussion of the book. At the start their association was rather like that of employer and employee. As soon as her working day was done and dinner was over, Linda escaped to her room, but her thoughts were frightening — filled with the remembrance of Greg and all that had happened.

"Perhaps it is equally hard for Steve," she thought one evening when the solitude of her bedroom seemed more than she could bear. "Perhaps we can help each other—to forget."

Quickly, before she could weaken in her resolution, Linda brushed her hair carefully, powdered her nose, and then, wearing the houserobe of soft blue velvet which had been a wedding gift from Mary, she went down to the living room, stricken by the sight which met her gaze. Worn by work and little sleep, Steve had fallen asleep upright in his chair, with the notes of the last week's work scattered on the floor around him. The bright lamplight shone on his face, revealing haggard lines and pallor.

"He looks almost ill," Linda decided, and was doubly thankful that she had come downstairs. Hastily she went to the kitchen for hot tea, arranged the tea things carefully on the table before the fire, turned the lamps low, and then called softly to Steve.

"Sa-ay," he demanded, rubbing his eyes as they rested on Linda, seated on the hassock before the fire, "what is this?"

"I thought—" she colored a little. "It was such a bleak night, and I thought perhaps you were lonely, so—"

"So you fixed tea for me. I'm glad you did, Linda."

Later, when the fire had burned to the embers and their constant flow of conversation had died away, Linda rose to go to her room. She felt happier than she had been in weeks, more content with her lot. Steve stopped her as she started up the stairs and his voice was grave and kind.

"I can remember my mother preparing tea for my father many times, as you did this evening, Linda, and I'm very grateful to you. "I—I didn't realize until this evening how lonely we both have been."

Gradually Linda and Steve spent more of their time together. When the book was laid away at night, he read aloud or they played bridge, never referring to the game by its name—Honeymoon Bridge.

Christmas came and passed, scarcely noticed. There was a tree. A few gifts arrived from Prairievale. In return, Linda sent her parents a small amount of money from the precious hoard that remained of her savings, and wrote a gay, happy letter to Sally.

Steve's gift to her was a lovely, jeweled compact, and she gave him a warm, hand-knitted scarf that had taken hours of her time, and thought.

Mary Baridon came to Hillsacres to spend New Year's Day, bringing a tall, sober young man whom she introduced as Phillip Ross. Mary was in love. That much was obvious for it showed in her starry eyes. She sparkled over with happiness, and when dinner was over and the men had gone out to inspect the horses, she confessed that love to Linda.

"We aren't engaged yet," she said sweetly, "because Phil is a struggling young architect and he won't marry me until he has something better in view than he has at present".

Linda caught Mary's hand anxiously. She was urgent, remembering her own problems, "Don't wait too long. You love each other and that's all that matters. Phillip will try much harder if he has something to work for. Let that be you, Mary, before something happens to spoil your happiness".

Mary looked at her sister-in-law with an expression of surprise at the outburst. "What could possibly happen?" she queried. "We love and trust each other. Surely if that isn't enough——"

Linda flushed "I'm sorry", she apologized stiffly. "I'm very fond of you, Mary, and I want you to be happy. Naturally you and Phil must do what you both think is best".

After they had gone Linda locked herself in her room and sobbed. She had thought she could forget, in time, all her own suffering, but when Mary had said sweetly, "It was love at first sight for Phillip and me—Pouff, and it happened! Just like that!" the innocently-spoken words revived all of her own pain and yearning for Greg Hollister.

"Oh, Greg . . Greg", she moaned softly. "How could you have been so cruel—to make me love you and never return my love?"

After that, Linda resolutely put all thought of Greg out of her head, and threw herself enthusiastically into her work. She was so engrossed that she hardly knew when winter had passed and spring made its appearance at Hillsacres.

Then, one morning early in April, Steve tossed his pencil aside and said quietly:

"We've been sticking at this business too hard, Linda. I'm growing stale. I need to get the cobwebs out of my brain. And you look like a ghost".

Linda was vaguely surprised. "Perhaps you need exercise", she suggested, uncertainly.

"We both do, young lady, and from now on we take a morning canter every day".

Bundled into a cast-off riding habit that had once belonged to Mary, Linda was led to the stables and patiently taught to ride old Topsy, gentlest of the horses. With her usual desire to make Steve proud of her, Linda was determined to learn to ride, and she took it all in her stride.

Day after day they rode over the countryside, Steve astride Rusty, as beautiful and shining and proud a horse as his father before him had been. Linda always rode Topsy. For her an entirely differtnt mode of living had been introduced—that of gentleman farmers. She grew to be completely at ease with the horses, practically living in jodhpurs and riding boots. And now that she and Steve had weathered the Winter together, she grew to be completely natural with him, facing the Spring and Summer with confidence.

"The book will soon be finished", Steve said one day when they had ridden for miles without speaking, drinking in the beauty of the newly-green countryside, "and then I'm depending on you to get it in shape so I can turn it over to a literary agent".

"And then what?" This was all strange to Linda.

He shrugged. "If the agent thinks it's worthy of publication, he'll contact all the publishing companies and sell it to one of them".

"Steve"! Linda was suddenly struck by a new and frightening thought. During her long months of work it had never occurred to her that Steve might not be successful as a writer, so great was her confidence in his ability.

"What if it doesn't sell?"

She was unprepared for the hoarseness in his voice, and the way his face darkened with anger.

"It's going to sell," he answered so violently that she shrank from him in fear. "I've put my soul into that book, and with the money I get from it I'll have all the power I need. I can build and destroy. I can command anything or anyone. I'll be the master now!"

The master! Linda knew now what lay behind the man's amazing fortitude and drive. Not the thrill of success or recognition, nor yet the pleasure of serving the reading public had made possible his remarkable book. Instead it was the desire to have Brenda kneel before him in subjection—to know that in the end he was the conqueror instead of the loser.

The thought was so awful, so out of keeping with Steve's good natured self that for a moment Linda could not speak. She felt as though they were thousands of miles apart. Then, when he had calmed sufficiently, she murmured softly; "I'm—sorry, Steve. I didn't mean——"

The man's good humor was restored now. "Forgive me for blowing off at the handle like that, but I've spent a good many sleepless night just wondering how things will turn out".

How things will turn out! Linda closed here eyes, feeling a sudden desire for Greg, that left her trembling and weak. Would she ever see Greg again? She knew that she had changed, had developed poise and ease, but inwardly she had not changed. The desire was still there, smoldering a little, yet ready to burst into flame. Would she—could she ever forget?

Linda never mentioned the subject of failure again, and before May set in, Steve's book was finished.

The farm was beautiful in May time. The rambling house had been made lovely with sweet, wild flowers, with sprigs of apple and cherry blossoms, and now that Steve was no longer tormented by working on his book, a sort of harmony crept into his relationship with Linda, an easy comradery that had been lacking despite their apparent friendliness before.

Seated in her cherry bedroom, deep in her work one morning, Linda heard the shrill ring of the telephone and started nervously. Telephone messages were infrequent here, and she felt a swift premonition of danger and Mrs. Delaney summoned Steve to take the call. But after Steve had engaged in a brief, low-toned conversation, he bounded the steps, breezed into her room, and said jubilantly: "Mary just called me. Dad is arriving here on the train this afternoon".

"Your father?" Linda said slowly. "Coming here?"

Steve nodded, and then, catching sight of her wry face, he laughed. "What's the matter? You are not getting shy about meeting the old man, are you?"

"I'm afraid he might not like me", she said childishly.

"He won't be able to help himself", Steve said, so soberly that Linda looked up in some surprise. It was the nearest thing to a compliment she had ever received from this handsome, cynical man. Steve seemed embarrassed by his own words, for he said rapidly, "Let's see, the train gets in around two o'clock. Like to come to the station with me?"

She shook her head, eyes downcast to hide her smile at his small-boy attempt to cover the awkward situation. "I think, Steve, it would be nicer if you two had a little while to yourselves—well talk things over. Don't you?"

Steve was grateful for her solicitude. "Perhaps you're right", he said. "It might make things a little easier for all of us".

"Is Mary coming out?"

"She said Phillip would drive her out around four o'clock. They'll be here for dinner, if—" he looked toward her anxiously. "—if it's all right with you".

The Baridon family assembling for dinner. It struck fear in Linda's heart, but she nodded and smiled. "I think that sounds lovely, Steve. Suppose we have tea on the terrace around four. Your father may be tired after his trip, and like to rest a little while".

Steve seemed young and enthusiastic. "If I know Dad he'll demand that we ride for awhile to work up an appetite. But—" he seemed to sense that Linda's suggestion to have tea was to help in her new role as mistress of Hillsacres, to prove to the elder Baridon that Steve had not make a mistake in marrying a girl who had never known such luxuries —"the tea will be very nice, Linda. I'm sure Dad will be pleased".

Expecting a tall, rugged man, Linda was not disappointed in his appearance when Marshall Baridon arrived that afternoon. Clad in a white dress, her eyes clear and calm, Linda was standing on the flagged terrace, hands clasped before her, looking sweet and serene and expectant when they arrived. She couldn't know that Marshall Baridon saw in her the woman he had loved and married. The first mistress of Hillsacres Farm.

EDUCATIONIST HAS PILOT'S LICENCE

Dr. George MacNab, govesnor of Rotary District 168 who was the guest speaker at the Belleville club luncheon yesterday does not have to depend on motor cars or trains for transportation.

The 65-year-old educationist, who is chief public school inspector at Guelph, an M.A., a doctor of philosophy and a doctor of paedagogy, among his many other accomplishments, owned and flew his own airplane until a year ago. He has a pilot's licence and his private plane carried him on many long aerial jaunts in the course of his business.

He didn't mind landing his ship when it "wore" wheels, or skis, he said, but was a bit careful when landing on pontoons in the water. He disposed of his plane about a year ago due to war exigencies.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 1 (CP).—Industrial and gold groups today slipped back for moderate index losses in the early session. Base metals were slightly higher.

Bralorne, MacLeod - Cockshutt, Preston, Little Long Lac and Teck Hughes were among the weak issues while McIntyre and Pioneer improved narrowly. In base metals Waite-Amulet was conspicuously weak and Ontario Nickel was off ½ to 13. Noranda posted a minor gain.

Dominion Bridge and Steel of Canada ruled higher and other industrials leaned to the down side, Walkers, Massey-Harris Pfd. and Ford A weakened moderately.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 1—(AP)—Leading stocks, with scattered exceptions, displayed a distinct lack of recovery power in today's market. Declines of fractions to around a point were the rule near the fourth hour.

Stocks in the backward column during the greater part of the proceedings included Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, United Aircraft, Anaconda, Kennecott, Pan American Airways, Du Pont, Westinghouse and U. S. Gypsum. Occasional plus marks were exhibited by Great Northern, Montgomery Ward, American Can, Texas Co. and Western Union.

Amongst Canadian issues Dome Mines and Distillers-Seagrams were off fractions while Lake Shore gained 1-8. Canadian Pacific, Hiram Walker and Canada 4s were unchanged.

CLAIMS QUEBEC LOSES RIGHTS

Claim is Made by Maurice Duplessis of Union Nationale Opposition

Joliette, Que., Aug. 31 — (CP)—Maurice Duplessis, "leader of the Union Nationale opposition in the Quebec Legislative Assembly, said here Sunday that "Quebec is losing all its rights one by one while undergoing the gravest crisis in its history."

Mr. Duplessis, addressing an open air political rally attended by several thousand persons, singled out radio broadcasting.

"Radio broadcasting is a provincial matter especially since it has become one of the most powerful means of educating the masses," he said. If the Union Nationale were back in power, one of the moves made would be to attempt bringing broadcasting within the provincial orbit.

"Quebec is entitled to manage its affairs according to its needs, its requirements and its religion," he said.

Traces History

Tracing the history of the Union Nationale while in power from 1936 to 1943, Mr. Duplessis said "If it had not been for the Union Nationale party the Nazis would have had an ideal base just off our main centres, Anticosti Island In 1938, English-speaking capitalists tried over and over again to persuade us that it was all right for a Nazi holding company to purchase Anticosti. We stood firm and despite pressure from many points, we refused to allow such a transaction to take place."

He added that "English capitalists sold arms to Germany. They fed the Nazis for years and enabled the German government to obtain vital raw materials for the Nazi war industries. While that was taking place I, as Quebec Attorney General, was ordering Nazi-made propaganda motion pictures seized [illegible] German clubs closed."

Says Party Is Loyal

Mr. Duplessis, who several times during his address told his audience that "the Union Nationale party is loyal and respects the country's laws," said the national resources mobilization act was "conscription brought about in the most odious, the most hypocritical way possible. After 1940, our young men were first called up for a month, then for four months, then for the duration and finally told they may be shipped away anywhere in the world."

"All means are being taken to enforce conscription. The case of the unemployed is one among many — all relief works having been stopped, paupers are left with but one alternative."

"Hunger and destitution are used in an enforcement of a most odious, a most hypocritical conscription," he said.

Building More Active During Month of August

Building permits for ten residences were taken out in the city during the month of August, representing one of the best building months this year, it was revealed this morning by the records kept at the city hall by City Engineer Charles Mott. Fourteen building permits were taken out during the month, with a construction value of $23,950.

Residences either in the course of construction or planned during the month included a $2,500 residence on Ridley Avenue by Mr. George McCoy; while also on Ridley Avenue was one for William Warham at $3,000. R. D. Crea will construct a $2,500 residence on Dufferin Avenue; Harold Keller one on St. Paul Street at $1,000; Harold Morris on Station Street at $1,250; David Wardle a two-storey dwelling on Chatham Street at $2,500; Mrs. Fred Rawson on Bleecker Avenue a residence at $3,500; R. D. Finlayson a residence on Queen Street at $3,500; H. J. Scott a bungalow on Parker Street at $1,500 and Mrs. F. B. Wright an addition to present dwelling at 50 Moira Street at $1,500.

Alterational jobs were contemplated by Mr. Joseph Imlah at his residence on Church Street at $400; Mr. Jim Rankin at residence on Forin Street at $250; W. E. Meens will build a small cottage on South John Street at $500 and Fred Fraser will construct a garage on Cannifton Road at $50.

Newest Bombers Go Into Action

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 1 —(AP)—The newest United States medium bombers to arrive in the Mediterranean war theatre—twin engined B-25's which the British airmen call "Mitchells"—have gone into active battle with complete American air force crews.

The bombers inflicted heavy damage on the Axis on the El Alamein-Qattara line before dark yesterday and damaged enemy transport in strong attacks on Axis land convoys in the desert.

(The B-25's are the planes which Brig.-Gen. Jimmy Doolittle led over Tokyo in the American air ataack on Japan's home islands last April.)

2 NAZI PLANES DESTROYED

London, Sept. 1 — (CP) — British Beaufighters of the Coastal Command shot down two of three German seaplanes encountered over the western approaches of the English Channel yesterday, the Air Ministry announced today. Two British planes were reported missing from yesterday's daylight patrols.

Fort Erie, Ont., Sept. 1—(CP)—Johnny Thomas, veteran Niagara River naturalist has a "whatzit" in a barrel near his home here. The "whatzit" is egg-shaped, has no tail, a fibrous, beak-like nose, and a vicious temper.

PETAIN SPEAKS AT CEREMONY

Assails What He Refers to as "Backward - Looking Frenchmen"

Clermont Ferrand, Sept. 1 (AP)—Marshal Petain, speaking at a picturesque ceremony on ground where Gallic Chieftains opposed Caesar, Sunday assailed "backward-looking Frenchmen" who labor at "treason" against his Vichy regime.

The Marshal's first political speech since he exlained the circumstancer of the appointment of Pierre Laval as head of the Vichy government last April was made at an Imperial soil-mixing service on the second anniversary of the founding of the French Legion, the only sanctioned political movement in unoccupied France.

He told the Legion members that a "sect mocking the noblest sentiments pursues its labor of treason under cover of patriotism."

While the Marshall insisted the Vichy government will carry out its program of "revolution" despite all obstacles, he did not elaborate on details of French domestic politics his international policy, or the government's present drive to send workmen to Germany.

Passes Over Subject of Dakar

He also passed over a subject on which the French press was expressing concern—the status of Dakar.

The papers published dispatches from Berlin charging that the United States fleet is preparing to take possession of Dakar, the Azores, the Canary and Cape Verde Islands as soon as the rainy season is past.

The expression prevailed that Dakar and other French territories in Africa have assumed tactical importance because of Brazil's entry into the war.

(The comparatively short distance between Natal, part on the "eastward budge of Brazil," and Dakar last week prompted Col. Lysias A. Rodrigues of the Brazilian air force general staff to call it the "Straits of Dakar" and to call Brazil a great promontory favorable for offensive action.

(Rumors reported in Stockholm dispatches said Laval was about to agree to demands from Berlin to permit the sanctioning of a German division at Dakar to protect French territory.)

Employment and Claims Office Sets Up New Branches in District

In preparation for the expected increased amount of work necessary in issuing work permits to persons seeking employment under the National Selective Service, new employment offices have been opened in Picton and Trenton to look after workers in those districts, it has been announced by Mr. H. H. Reed, Manager of the local Employment and Claims Office.

The new offices were opened to look after workers in the above districts who would be inconvenienced in coming to Belleville to obtain a permit to seek work. Staffed by a manager and one stenographer, the district offices will be under the local Employment and Claims Office and for the present will handle only the placement of workers. All claims will be handled as usual through the Belleville office.

"It would be grossly unfair to ask a worker to drive from Colborne to Belleville merely to obtain a work permit," stated Mr. Reed in explanation of the reasons for opening the new offices.

Work of registration of unemployed women between ages of 20 and 24 which will be compulsory near the middle of September is not expected to be a big job in Belleville, according to Mr. Reed. Neither has there been any rush of potential workers seeking work permits which will be necessary starting today for any person seeking employment.

Requiem Mass For French-Canadians Who Fell at Dieppe

Montreal, Sept. 1—In memory of French-Canadian soldiers killed in the assault on Dieppe, a solemn requiem mass will be held in Notre Dame Church, Montreal, for the repose of the souls of the gallant Quebeckers. It is understood that Monseigneur Joseph Charbonneau, Archbishop of Montreal, will officiate at the ceremony which will probably take place on September 3. Several bishops of the diocese will assist.

Brigadier E. de B. Panet and officers of M.D. No. 4 are planning military participation in the ceremony. Details of the military observances preceding the religious ceremonies will be available in a day or two.

Invited specially to the event will be high ranking military officers bereaved families of the men, and civic officials. The entire population of Montreal will render posthumous honour to their valiant compatriots who were killed in the Dieppe raid. Prayers will also be offered for the French-Canadian regiments now on active service and in training.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were waiting for Nora to ring the dinner bell for supper, and I said to pop, Hay pop?

Absolutely, pop said, and I said, Does the government still want rubber?

It not only wants it but needs it with urgent imperiousness, in other words very much, pop said. Rubber is one of the vital sinews of war, and war without sinews soon degenerates into an inglorious peace, he said, and I said, Well I did give a lot of stuff the last time.

Yes, I remember your contributions, and I'm sure the government was very grateful, pop said, and I said, Sure, pop, G wizzickers, I contributed my inner tube with only 2 holes in it and my spare football bladder with no holes, and I contributed my solid rubber airplane model and my old rubber boots and 3 used tennis balls and the little erasers out of about 15 pencil stumps, and I contributed a lot of all kinds of different other things too, I said.

Am I to infer that there is something you haven't contributed, or to put it more bluntly, that you are holding out on your native land? pop said, and I said, Well, the only thing I'm thinking of is my rubber band ball that I've been working on so long and it's not even finished yet. That's what I mean, pop, how about that? I said.

Well, it seems to me that anything that's had that much loving application and attention to detail lavished on it falls in the classification of works of art, and in the interests of culture I'm quite sure the government is not yet ready to make sinews of war out of works of art that are still in progress, pop said.

Making me feel so lucky I ate 3 helpings of everything for supper instead of maybe just 2 of some.

NATIONAL SELECTIVE SERVICE REGULATIONS

★ EFFECTIVE: SEPTEMBER 1, 1942

★ THOSE AFFECTED

ONE GROUP of regulations (A) applies to all workers, male and female, and their employers, except any persons employed:—

As female domestic servants in homes where there is not more than one servant employed; By a provincial government; As ministers, priests or clergymen; In casual labour; As professional engineers or science workers under the Wartime Bureau of Technical Personnel; In part-time subsidiary employment which is not a regular occupation; In agriculture, hunting, fishing, trapping; As teachers; As nurses and probationers; As students at work after school or on holidays other than long summer vacation.

The other Group (B) applies to all workers.

★ THE REGULATIONS

GROUP (A)

1. No worker may quit his job without giving his employer seven days' notice in writing.
2. No employer may lay-off or discharge any worker without seven days' notice in writing.
3. No employer may interview or engage any worker unless such worker has a permit to seek employment.
4. Permits to seek employment may be obtained from National Selective Service officers in Selective Service offices, formerly the local offices of the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

GROUP (B)

5. A National Selective Service officer has the power:
   - (a) to order any person to report for an interview at the local office;
   - (b) to order any person who has been unemployed seven days to take any suitable work; and
   - (c) to order any partially employed person to take any suitable full-time work.
6. No person ordered by a National Selective Service officer to take a job may quit such job without permission of the officer.
7. When a worker has to travel to a distant job, the National Selective Service officer may pay the cost of transportation and certain other special allowances.
8. If a worker at the request of the National Selective Service officer changes from less to more essential work, he may claim re-instatement in his former job when the more essential work is finished.
9. Any employer, employee or other person who violates any provision of the regulations or any order made under them is liable to a fine not exceeding $500 or a jail term of not more than 12 months or both.

Note:—Agricultural workers may take seasonal or temporary employment outside agriculture with the consent of Selective Service Officers when such work will not interfere with farm production and by taking such work they will not lose their right to postponement of military service.

★ EMPLOYERS

Read the orders-in-council setting up the regulations and the Explanation of National Selective Service Regulations which can be obtained from Selective Service offices.

★ EMPLOYEES

Read the orders-in-council setting up the regulations and the Workers' Handbook which can be obtained from Selective Service offices or offices of trade unions.

No Medicine Ever Helped Me Like Syntona Did She Says

Suffered Years with Stomach Troubles, Headaches, — Couldn't Sleep. Felt Nervous, Fatigued and Rundown.

Painful gas and bloat—indigestion after meals—sleeplessness — nervousness — burning sensation and pains in the chest — sharp pains in the side—palpitation and shortness of breath due to gas, headaches, backache and rheumatic pains due to excess acidity—weak, wornout feeling. These are some of the penalties of an Upset Stomach. Many local people have suffered that way for YEARS. But now, Syntona Herbal Tonic is relieving them by the hundreds. Here for example, is the experience of Mrs. Annie Ward, 592 Maitland Street, London, according to her recent report:

"For several years I suffered with stomach trouble, constipation and bilious spells. I couldn't get a good night's sleep and I had become so nervous and rundown that the least bit of work played me out. After eating, my stomach became so bloated with gas that I could hardly draw a full breath and I was subject to frequent sick headaches. There was a bad taste in my mouth, my breath was bad and my complexion was sallow.

"I had tried so many different medicines and tonics without getting any real benefits that I didn't think anything would help me any more.

MRS. ANNIE WARD

But a friend who had got good results from Syntona persuade me to try it, and I was surprised at how quickly it began to help my stomach. In the few weeks I have been taking this medicine, it has rid me of all that gas and indigestion. I don't get headaches or dizzy spells like I used to and my general health has improved wonderfully. My nerves are relaxed, I sleep better and I have more energy than I had in years previously."

Every weak, ailing, rundown man or woman is cordially invited to call at Dolan the Druggist, Belleville, and learn the plain truthful facts about this pure herbal compound that is doing so much good here.

Allies' Readiness To Meet Rommel Seen In Sally by British Forces

BRITISH TANK POWER

Cairo, Sept. 2 (AP)—British forces were locked heavily in battle with Axis armor all day yesterday in the southern sector of the Egyptian front, British headquarters announced today.

The war bulletin, issued jointly by the headquarters and the R.A.F., said United States army and air force planes participated in extensive air operations over the entire area in which an Allied battle line was braced against the expected shock of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's powerful tank forces, again trying to grind forward toward Alexandria, the Nile and the Suez Canal.

The readiness of the Allies to meet Rommel's challenge was indicated by the communique's report that British forces made their own sally Monday night on the northern flank of the El Alamein line and brought back a batch of German prisoners.

Ground action yesterday centred between the Ruweisat Ridge in the centre and El Himeimat, on the southern wing near the Qattara depression, the bulletion added.

Large Scale Coverage

Despite swirling sand beclouding the battle zone, it said, "the Allies air coverage was on a large scale and the hail of bombs which fell on the enemy was both "intensive and accurate."

"At least two large Stuka formations were attacked by our fighters and the enemy was on many occasions forced to jettison his bombs," the bulletin said.

"During the day at least six enemy bombers and five fighters were destroyed in these operations.

"More than a dozen were damaged. Our long-range fighters successfully attacked enemy motor transport on the coastal road between Gambut and Sidi Barrani."

30-YEAR TERM IMPOSED ON BAHR

Convicted at Newark of Conspiracy to Serve Germany as Spy

Newark, N.J., Sept. 2.—(AP) — Herbert K. F. Bahr, convicted of consiracy to serve Germany as a spy, received a 30-year prison sentence today.

The sentence was the maximum prison term possible under espionage states, but the court could have ordered his execution.

Judge William Smith in sentencing expressed belief Bahr still is protecting Nazi colleagues.

A native of Germany, Bahr obtained derivative United States citizenship through his father's naturalization. After a brilliant career at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy, N.Y., he went to Germany as an exchange student in 1939.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation charged Bahr dropped his academic studies in Germany to enter the Gestapo's Espionage and Sabotage School for training as a spy. He was intercepted June 30 on the exchange liner Drottingholm when he arrived back posing as a refugee from Germany.

Soviet Marines Defeat Rumanian Cavalry Divisions

Moscow, Sept. 2 —(AP)— Soviet marines have defeated the 5th and 9th Rumanian Cavalry Divisions, destroying 70 per cent of their strength, in a battle of growing severity for Black Sea coast positions, a Red fleet dispatch reported today.

The dispatch did not indicate where the action occurred.

(Apparently, however, it was in the area along the Caucasian coast of the Black Sea where the Nazis are trying to reach Novorossisk, one of the Red fleet's best remaining bases. The Germans claimed yesterday that Rumanian troops had occupied Anapa, a Black Sea port north of Novorossisk.)

ITALIANS LOSE SUBMARINE

Rome, (from Italian broadcasts), Sept. 2 (AP).—Loss of an Italian submarine was announced by the Italian high command today. A communique also claimed the sinking by Italian naval action of an unidentified allied submarine.

A DEAR LUNCHEON

Philadelphia, Sept. 2 (AP). — Philadelphia business men spent $4,547,350 to take Hedy Lamarr to lunch. The price of admission to a luncheon which the brunette screen star attended was a pledge to buy $5,000 or more in war bonds. The "take" was announced by the Treasury Department.

ALL-CANADIAN AIR COMMAND OVERSEAS IS AIM

'We Have Enough Men To Do It' Says Major Power in Press Conference

ARMY OVERSEAS HAPPY

Quebec, Sept. 2 —(CP)— Air Minister Power, just returned from a two-week visit to Great Britain, said in a press interview here today that his ministry was attempting to form an all-Canadian air command overseas and that "we have enough men to do it." He did not elaborate on the statement.

Maj. Power, who visited a number of Royal Canadian Air Force squadrons while in England, said that the men seemed to be in the best of health and spirits. He told of visiting one squadron, the majority of whose members are French-Canadians, commanded by Wing Cmdr. G. W. St. Pierre of Montreal and of how he asked one man in French where he came from. Getting only a blank look Maj. Power tried again in English to which the man answered with a smile, "I'm from Georgia, suh."

Army Regiments Happy

Maj. Power said that all the Canadian army regiments he visited seemed to be happy and well. "Most of the men seemed to want to come back to Canada for about a month," he said, "and return to finish the job."

The Minister also told of opening the first airdrome built by Canadian engineers overseas. "It was the fastest job ever done over there and you can be sure that the Canadians were proud of their work."

Maj. Power also spent a day in Dublin with the Hon. John Kearney, Canadian High Commissioner to Ireland. He will leave for Ottawa this afternoon.

Judgment Reserved In Hoarding Charge

Timmins, Ont., Sept. 2—(CP)—Judgment was reserved yesterday by Magistrate S. Atkinson here in a charge of tea hoarding against the Empire Hotels Ltd.

The charge against the hotel company followed a check-up June 9 by an official of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, when 29,840 tea bags were found in the hotel store rooms.

The crown produced figures supplied by the hotel showing 1,340 bags had been used since the first of the year. The hotel manager claimed this was a discrepancy and that 5,900 bags had been used. Crown counsel said that even at the revised figure the hotel had enough tea for three years and for 9 years at the original figure.

NO MATERIAL CHANGE ON OTHER FRONTS

By EDDY GILMORE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Sept. 2 (AP).—The Russians fought hard today for Stalingrad against hordes of German tanks that had struck deep into the defence system and nowhere was there a sign of Soviet weakening which might lead to a major German break-through.

On this, the seventh day of the battle for the great industrial city on the Volga, Field Marshal Fedor von Bock threw waves of tanks against the city's outer fortifications while his air force continued almost ceaseless bombings of the Red army and the city.

The crucial sector was southwest of the city. Northwest between the Don bridgeheads and the Volga, the situation appeared in hand after a vigorous Russian counter attack had eliminated a German wedge forcing the attackers back to their original positions.

East Prussia Bombed.

(The Germans said they had reached the lower Volga north of Stalingrad, referring possibly to the wedge which the Russians said had been eliminated. Russian planes again bombed East Prussia and Poland last night starting several fires in Warsaw, the German communique added. German and Rumanian troops were declared advancing along the Black Sea littoral southeast of Anapa despite tough resistance.)

Further success in the Russians' counter-offensive in the rain-soaked Rzhev sector 130 miles from Moscow was reported by the Soviet high command, which said several more settlements were captured.

Hold Positions.

Deep in the Caucasus near the Grozny oil fields, the Russians said they were holding all their positions and occasionally counter-attacking in the Mozdok and Prokhladnaya areas.

Further clashes south of Voronezh were reported by Izvestia which said the Germans were beaten off on an attempt to take a large settlement on the west bank of the Don.

The German left knifed deep into northwestern defences of Stalingrad also yesterday, but the invaders abandoned 240 dead and retreated to their original positions under pressure of counter-attacking Russians, the Soviet information bureau said.

Several more settlements were reported added to the hundreds recaptured in the Russian central front offensive and the information bureau said "our artillery inflicts heavy losses on the enemy."

Large German tank concentrations drove another wedge toward Stalingrad from the southwest yesterday and "our units are waging fierce battles with a group of enemy forces which has infiltrated into our positions," a gravely-phrased Soviet communique announced at midnight.

Withdrew on Command

"On another sector our troops, by order of the command, withdrew to new defensive positions," the communique said.

(Again the extent of the German penetration was not announced. The Nazi high command claimed Monday the pincer arm which was swung up from Koteinikovski had cut to a point within 15 miles of the Volga River industrial centre)

Red army men, marines and factory hands posted on the steppes northwest of Stalingrad and Soviet task forces harrying the Axis flank within the Don Bend were reported to have slain 600 Germans and knocked 15 tanks out of action in defensive engagements.

ARMORED TROOPS BY THOUSANDS NOW IN BRITAIN

Gen. Worthington Flies to England to be There for Arrival

OTHER UNITS LAND

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, Sept. 2—(CP Cable)—The Canadian "Dagger at the heart of Berlin" was sharpened today with the addition of thousands of troops for Maj.-Gen. F. F. Worthington's armored division.

The main body of the division's regimental formations and the commander himself have arrived in Britain, it was disclosed last night, to join the officers and men who preceded them here several months ago to undergo special training courses.

Airmen and ground crews of the R.C.A.F., and the first contingent from the Air Force's Women's Division to come overseas also were in the convoy, but it was "Worthington's Wallopers" who formed the bulk of the force, and they were anxious to "get going" in a resumption of training.

Gen. Worthington flew to Britain last week to be on hand for the arrival of the troops, but his presence here could not be announced for security reasons until the men had landed. The general was on hand along with Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner, and Emrys Evans, parliamentary secretary of the Dominions Office to welcome the troops to Britain.

JAPS INSTITUTE HEAVY OFFENSIVE IN KOKODA SECTOR

JAP LOSSES HEAVY

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Sept. 2—(CP)—Japanese troops—frustrated at Milne Bay—have hit with increasing strength toward Port Moresby in the Kokoda sector of New Guinea and "our ground forces are closely engaged," an Allied communique announced today.

"Allied fighters, in close support, made two heavy strafing attacks on the enemy positions and lines of communication," the communique said.

Australian bush fighters and Japanese vanguards have been sparring for weeks in the jungles about Kokoda, a small native settlement east of the Owen Stanley mountain range and 60 miles by air from the advanced Allied base at Port Moresby.

Allied bombers have smashed the makeshift airport which the Japanese seized there.

Despite the quickening of the action, an Allied spokesman said there was no indication the Japanese were preparing for a major push in the Kokoda sector.

He said Japanese casualties in

GUARD AGAINST VIOLENCE AS I.R.A. YOUTH EXECUTED

U. S. Troops in North Ireland Ordered to Stay out of Belfast to Avoid Clashes

ASSEMBLIES BROKEN UP

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Sept. 2 (CP).—The appearance of two United States soldiers on Belfast streets touched off the first disorders today soon after Thomas J. Williams, 18-year-old member of the outlawed Irish Republican Army was hanged in a heavily-guarded jail for the killing of a policeman.

When police sought to disperse a crowd of about 300 persons, angrily shouting at the Americans, "why don't you stay at home?" two demonstrators hurled missiles.

The police charged with drawn batons and the crowd quickly scattered. Other throngs had collected outside the jail where Williams was hanged, but, save for a mild street demonstration, there had been no other outbreak.

Crowd Sings Irish Songs.

This Northern Ireland capital had been declared out of bounds for United States troops and the presence of the two soldiers, neither of whom was harmed, was not immediately explained.

The crowd was singing Irish Republican songs when the soldiers first were seen. The Americans were greeted with stiff-arm Nazi style salutes and jeering comment.

Two demonstrators were arrested on charges of rioting and were sentenced to three months' imprisonment.

All United States troops in northern Ireland had been ordered to stay out of Belfast today to avoid any violence against them on the part of I.R.A. members who opposed the execution and have claimed the right to clear northern Ireland of British and American forces by "Whatever measures present themselves."

Fearing the hanging would be the signal for widespread violence, especially after the discovery Sunday outside Belfast of a cache of explosives and arms, police were mobilized and a special force was posted around the prison early today. Only residents of the immediate area were permitted within 200 yards of the prison gate.

Broke Up Assembly

When an official posted the notice of William's execution on the prison wall, a crowd of hundreds of women began a procession toward the centre of Belfast, singing "God Save Ireland." As they pass-

Canada's Newest Fighter Ace Holds Record in Malta Battles

(Written for the Canadian Press by Hugh Burns)

Valetta, Malta, Sept. 2 (CP). — Canada's newest fighter ace, lanky, flaxen-haired Sgt. George Frederick Beurling, D.F.M. and bar, of Verdun, Que., is a quiet youngster with a pleasant manner and engaging smile whose appearance belies his deadliness in the air.

The 20-year-old pilot, a born flier who builds model aircraft in his spare time, has his own theory about blasting axis machines out of the blue skies of the Mediterranean and it is a sound one.

"The trick in fighting," he explained, "is to go straight and always remember there's sure to be another getting on you rtail. Jerry is crafty and cunning, always lurking in the sun trying to catch you unawares."

Beurling, whose record is 18 enemy aircraft destroyed, holds the individual fighter pilot record for Malta. He has shot down 16 aircraft over this strategic island in the three months he has been here He destroyed four axis machines in one day and received an immediate award of the D.F.M. He was given a bar to the medal after his sixteenth Malta victory.

Besides his confirmed victories, he has a third of a share in another, two probables and six damaged. He was shot up four times and was forced to crash-land once.

Beurling was born with flying in his blood. He first flew when he was 14 and before joining the Royal Air Force two years ago worked in an aircraft factory. He spent all the money he made on training and tuition flights. In his off time, when he's not building model planes or making up for lost sleep, he is bathing in the warm waters of the Mediterranean.

Pressed for his recollections of the day he shot down four enemy planes —July 27—this diffident youth explained it was all such a mix-up that distinguishing details was difficult.

"It all took place in a matter of 1¼ hours," he recalled. "There were two waves of enemy bombers coming in groups of nine each and about 40 fighters. Our lot numbered seven. We slapped into them and there was a general mix-up—pressing the button the instant a Jerry appeared in the sights, then swerving away in case there was another on our tail.

"I touched down once but it was hard going all the time."

Centre of Great Steel-Producing Area Flattened

Strong Force Of British, Canadian Bombers Takes Part In Raid

VERY FEW LOST

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F., Somewhere in England, Sept. 2 (CP).—Saarbruecken, centre of western Germany's railway system and hub of a great coal, pig-iron and steel-producing area, was "Cologned" during the night by a strong force of British and Canadian bombers.

The raid was described by members of one of the participating Canadian squadrons as "another Cologne" and use of the term "Cologned" followed the German practice, during the heavy raids on this country, of "Coventrating" cities in the same manner as Coventry was bombed.

"Destruction in the town must have been terrific," said Flt. Sgt. Nick Turnour of Saskatoon and Vancouver.

The squadron of which Turnour was a member returned intact, the only damage being flak holes in the aircraft piloted by Sgt. Allan Ross of Holland, Man.

Wing Cmdr. Arthur Walsh of Winnipeg, leader of another squadron, reported the town "well flattened" after the series of raids launched against it.

A "Strong Force".

In London the Air Ministry described the attacking squadrons as "a strong force"—indicating that hundreds of planes participated. However, only three bombers, an unusually small proportion, were lost.

"The weather was good," the Air Ministry said, "the targets were clearly seen and the attack was an outstanding success."

It was the second aerial blow on Saarbruecken in a week. With daylight, it was followed by formidable flights of Spitfires skimming over the channel to France.

P/O Bill McGuffin of Calgary said that if there were any buildings in Saarbruecken that are not mouldeirng or smoking it will be a big surprise to him.

"We got there early," he said. "Coming in there were no lights but there were lots of fires burning when we got there. As we sat up there over the target we could see a tremendous flash, probably one of

Suggest Rommel May Risk Attempt To Cross Deep Sands

London, Sept. 2 (CP). — Axis concentration on the southern flank of the El Alamein line, nearest the Qattara depression, suggested to some British observers today that Field Marshal Erwin Rommel might risk trying to cross the deep, shifting sands of that sub-sea level desert alley.

A military commentator whose identity may not be disclosed said the depression might be negotiated and that such an attempt, being in line with Rommel's past tactics, has been anticipated by the British commander-in-chief, Gen. Sir Harold Alexander.

He conceded that the eight-mile progress of the enemy through the British minefields was important, but he said the defences there were in depth and the advance did not mean they had been pierced.

Labor Legislation To Be Introduced

Toronto, Sept. 2 (CP). — Hon. Peter Heenan, Ontario's labor minister, announced yesterday following a cabinet meeting that, at the next regular session of the OnOtario Legislature, labor legislation "to provide for freedom of association and collective bargaining" would be brought down.

He said the bill will be designed "so that workers can lawfully negotiate with their employers conditions under which they are working and means of settling grievances."

Premier Hepburn, commenting on the proposed legislation, said it was similar to a type now in force in Nova Scotia and added:

"We are at the stage now that we have agreed on a principle it is recognizing the principle of collective bargaining by legislation with provisions for penalties for both industry and labor. In that respect it is double-edged. As the labor minister pointed out it seems to be the only way to obtain industrial and labor peace which is so essential in these critical days."

Farmer Killed 'Breaking' Colt

Napanee, Ont., Sept. 2 (CP) — Bryon Damon Storey 67, a farmer of Richmond Township, was instantly killed yesterday while helping a neighbor to break in a colt hitched with another horse.

The team ran away and Storey was thrown from the lumber wagon and suffered a broken neck. Luther Gaylord, owner of the colt, sustained a broken collar bone and other injuries and was taken to hospital in Kingston.

DNB Claims Large Scale Landing Manoeuvres Conducted at Gibraltar

Berlin, (from Germn broadcasts), Sept. 2 (AP).—DNB, German news and propaganda agency, claimed in a dispatch today from Algeciras, Spain, that British forces are conducting large-scale landing manoeuvres at Gibraltar with the land garrison and naval and air forces engaged. It said one bomber engaged in the operations crashed and exploded.

(There has been no report of any such manoeuvres, which might be designed to test the defences of the rack.

NOT SLOLWING UP STILLS

Austin, Tex., Sept. 2 (AP).—Sugar rationing didn't slow up the moonshiners. State and federal agents found a still in Leon County using a mash of watermelon juice and post-oak grapes.

20,000 to 25,000 In Call-up

Ottawa, Sept. 2 (CP)—Between 20,000 and 25,000 Canadians will receive their call-up notices during September, officials of the National Selective Service and the Department of National War Services said Tuesday.

Calls for compulsory military service in District "C", including Ottawa and Kingston, may be somewhat smaller this month because of serious depletion of manpower in the area, the officials said. However, many Ottawans between the ages of 20 and 40 have received notices to report for medical examination within the next three days

Requisitions for the October call-up are in the hands of officials but there is no indication of the number to be called during that month.

British Prisoners Taken in Dieppe Raid To Be Handcuffed Says Nazi Command

Berlin, (from German broadcasts), Sept. 2 (AP).—The German high command announced today that British prisoners taken in the Dieppe raid would be handcuffed in retaliation for what it said was a captured British order directing that hands of captured Germans be tied to prevent destruction of papers.

(The bulk of the Dieppe force was Canadian, with a Canadian officer, Maj.-Gen. J. H. Roberts of Kingston, Ont., in command of the expedition. Presumably Canadian prisoners are covered by the generalization "British" used by the German high command.")

The handcuffing of the British—both officers and men—will start tomorrow and continue, the announcement said, "until the British government by means of an official statement withdraws the above-mentioned order concerning the manacling of German prisoners of war."

"The GeGrman high command further declares," the announcement said, "that if in the future allied governments adopt similar measures constituting defamation and disrespect of brave German soldiers, the German high command will reply by adopting drastic reprisals.

"German troops as proved by a number of photographs taken at Dieppe have so far treated captured British in a true, sportsmanlike manner and the German high command leaves it to the British command to judge whether more German or British prisoners will be affected by this treatment instituted as a result of the British government's attitude."

TIED MAIN SHEET DOWN TO BAIL OUT BOAT BUT WENT IN BAY

The simple but not recommended expedient of tying the main sheet down while he bailed out the boat gave an unidentified man an unexpected ducking in the Bay of Quinte Tuesday afternoon, when a sudden squall turned his sailboat over and precipitated him into the water.

The man promptly clambered back onto the overturned craft where he stood w ing to attract attention but onlookers on the shore spent an anxious three-quarters of an hour while rescue attempts were being made wondering how many occupants there had been in the boat.

The Belleville Fire Department was notified and members secured the use of a motorboat to go to the unfortunate sailor's assistance but his plight had been noticed by residents living near the fish hatchery and they quickly rowed to the rescue leaving the sailing craft in its overturned position from where it was towed ashore. The water-soaked sailor, who resides near the fish hatchery, discreetly withheld his name, claiming he wanted "no newspaper publicity."

POLICE REQUEST GYPSIES TO MOVE

Reports of a band of gypsies having camped in the neighborhood of O'Brien's Bridge, south of Plainfield, have been given to the provincial police, it was stated by Inspector Frank Gardner this morning. The band expressed their willingness to tell the fortunes of the residents of the neighborhood, but police will request them to vacate the premises and move on to other parts.

BOILER ROOM SLIGHTLY DAMAGED

Slight damage was caused to the roof of the boiler room at the Belle Cleaners on Coleman Street early Wednesday morning when sparks or an overheated smoke-stack set the roof afire. The fire department were summoned and succeeded in extinguishing the blaze with the use of the booster tank before any material damage was done by the fire.

KITTY HAD BLACK STRIPE ON BACK

J. P. Schroner, Pittsburg, loves animals. He wouldn't hurt one for the world. So when the kitty parked itself in the road in front of his automobile yesterday afternoon near Rednersville, Schroner, naturally stopped.

He waited for the animal to move, but the kitty apparently was content to play in the roadway. Schroner tooted his horn three or four times, but the animal never budged. Finally with a look of disdain at the car and its occupants, it walked slowly from the highway and disappeared in some bush.

Schroner heaved a sigh of relief as he started his car.

The penalty for violation of the migratory bird laws is a fine of not more than three hundred dollars and not less than ten dollars, or imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months, or both fine and imprisonment.

Trenton Flier Safe and Well

Anxiety for the safety of Flying Officer Olan Vanderwater, son of Mr. Albert Vanderwater, Trenton, who previously had been stationed with the Royal Air Force in the Middle East Command, was allayed recently with an airgraph letter being received by his father from his former commanding officer notifying him of his son's transfer to another unit.

According to the communication received from Wing Commander A. P. Johnson of No. 203 Squadron in the Middle East, Flying Officer Vanderwater had been transferred to an instructional unit and is reported to be in good health.

Flying Officer Vanderwater is well known in Trenton where he attended school. His inherent love of flying caused him to proceed to England in June, 1939, where he became attached to the Royal Air Force and graduated as a pilot when 19 years of age. He had been stationed in Egypt prior to his transfer to Kenya.

No direct word has been received by Mr. Vanderwater of his son since last Christmas and some worry was felt over his safety. Besides his father FO. Vanderwater has two sisters in Canada, Miss Caroline Vanderwater, now training for a nurse in Picton Hospital, and Mrs. Robert Smithring of Trenton. An aunt, Mrs. J. W. Coulter, lives at R. R. No. 1, Belleville.

GETTING REFUELLED FOR DIEPPE

These pilots of a famous Royal Canadian Air Force Spitfire squadron commanded by Squadron Leader Keith Hodson of London, Ont.; were pictured on the day of the Dieppe assault as they waited for their aircraft to be refuelled and rearmed so they could return to the thick of the fighting over the beaches of occupied France. In the group, LEFT to RIGHT, are Flight Lieut. Jim Whitham of Edmonton, who shared in the destruction of an FW 190 two days previously and who secured a "probable" and a "damaged" over Dieppe; Flight Sergt. Bob Reesor of Peace River, Alberta, who also scored a "probable" and a "damaged" on Dieppe-day. The large number of "probables" was the result of the rigid R.C.A.F. rule that the enemy aircraft must be seen to crash before its destruction can be "confirmed." In the thick of the Dieppe fighting the pilots had no time to follow their Nazi victims to the ground, but most "probables" can be considered as "sures."

MANY GAMES

The annual Kiwanis Fall Karnival which opened Tuesday evening in Belleville's downtown section was off to a rousing start from the very first. Belleville citizens, who have always accorded Kiwanis projects their loyal support, were present in hundreds and their cooperation and contributions to the success of the Karnival were most gratifying to its sponsors. The proceeds this year are for the Blood Donor Clinic Building Fund and the public showed its sympathy with this fine Kiwanis undertaking by their whole-hearted support of the Karnival.

There was everything to entertain and amuse young and old, General Chairman Jack McVeigh and his committees having worked tirelessly to provide plenty of amusement and surprises. Kiwanians took charge of the booths, which attracted large crowds all evening. The Kiwanis Queens were equally energetic, selling tickets on the handsome hope chest and its lovely contents and assisting in the refreshment booth.

Tots' Beauty Contest

Starting off the evening's program was the introduction of the Tiny Tot Bathing Beauty Revue under the direction of Mr. George Forhan. The diminutive beauties in bathing suits or sun suits, blondes, brunettes and red heads, their curls topped with ribbons, paraded on a specially arranged platform. Some were so tiny, that they insisted on having mother with them when they went across the stage. The very smallest of the lot was little Violet Lindemann, 13 Brock Street, only sixteen months old, who caught everyone's fancy. The ages ranged from this to about five years, with thirty children taking part, all very winsome and appealing. The list included:

Sponsored by Merchants

An interesting feature of the Tiny Tot Bathing Beauty Revue was the fact that local merchants sponsored the entries and little ones wore banners with the name of their sponsor, giving quite a professional and grown-up touch to the affair.

Each Given Doll

Each child in the Revue was presented with a lovely doll, and some of the bathing beauties were so small that it was a puzzle to determine, which was the doll and which the recipient. A flag and candies were also given to each child and the delight of the tiny tots as they clasped their dolls to them was an added enjoyment for the spectators.

Providing entertainment during the revue was Miss Barbara Diment, popular and talented dancer, who was seen in several numbers and received an ovation from the crowd.

The climax of the Kiwanis Karnival was the drawing for the two twenty-five dollar Victory Bonds which took place about eleven o'clock. The lucky winners proved to be A. J. Poke, Keele Street, Trenton, and F. Fobertt, South John Street.

Wednesday and Thursday evenings the Karnival continues with new and interesting entertainment features and fun for everyone.

POLICE BLOTTER

As the result of recent frequent complaints of bicycle equipment such as handle-bar grips, tools and parts being stolen, local police this morning issued a warning that persons found interfering with or molesting bicycles on the street would be brought to the police station for investigation.

The most recent complaint of this nature was the report yesterday by Miss Ruth Muir, that her bicycle had been stolen but which had later been recovered in the west end of the city, when police surprised a party in the act of dismantling the wheel. The party in question eluded police and drove away in a car leaving the bicycle on the street corner.

Constable Wright and Arnott reported following a car, which was proceeding at a fast rate of speed on Church Street and which failed to stop at the Station Street stop sign. The car was later clocked on Cannifton Road proceeding at 45 miles per hour.

No less than six inebriates have been rounded up by police since early Tuesday morning, when four men were apprehended on the city gas works building. Last night two men were apprehended on the city hall steps in an intoxicated condition, one sustaining a cut on the temple as he fell and struck the concrete steps. He was admitted to the Belleville hospital, where stitches were required to close the wound.

Police were called to a Murney Street address during the night where a man was reported beating up his children. The man was found to be intoxicated and was warned by police.

TWO SMALL GIRLS EARN SUM OF $3.10 FOR RED CROSS

Two little girls, Kathleen Mills and Joan Toms, of Chatham St., Tuesday earned $3.10 for the Red Cross. Mrs. Mills baked a cake and the children went from door to door charging five cents for ticket. After lunch Mr. McGie chose the winning ticket and Mrs. Jack Ireland, Chatham St., won the cake. Kathleen and Joan took the proceeds of the sale to the Royal Bank for the Red Cross.

CENTRE OF GREAT

those two-tonners. Everything seemed to go up in the air. Then there were clouds of black smoke as though it may have hit an oil tank."

A Strong Force

It was a quiet trip, he said, a fact he attributed to their being sent to this particular spot on a last-minute change of target.

"Anyway, they didn't seem to be waiting for us," McCuffin said, "but for a last trip it was a good do.

"It really was just luck, anyhow," he added, "for the thing is that no matter how good a pilot you are most of these trips are tough. You know what I mean. All you've got to do is zig when you should zag and then maybe you make it and maybe you don't."

Wing Cmdr. Walsh, describing the attack on Saarbruecken, said "I circled around looking for a place to bomb and could see the city quite clearly in the moonlight."

"There were big fires burning and we met with little opposition," he added.

Saw Eight Good Fires

Sgt.-Bombaimer Phil Owen of North Bay, Ont., saw eight "good" fires raging and about 20 others starting. Another member of the squadron said the southwest, northeast and southeast sections of the city were burning.

Sgt. Bruce Bazley of London, Ont., whose life lives in Montreal, said he was in a machine behind one which dropped a two-tonner.

"When it dropped and burst," he said, "we could see everything go up in the air and in a big flash. Everything seemed to be lifted and a big ball of flame shot up, followed by dense black clouds of smoke."

PO. John Higham, 22-year-old wearer of the D.F.C. from Assiniboia, Sask. who completed his first tour of operations with the raid, said the northeastern section of the city appeared to be a mass of flames.

..oots Up Freight Train

Not content with the successful bombing of their target and a narrow escape from three enemy night fighters, PO. William Sanderson of Duff, Sask., took time out to shoot up a freight train.

"We figured it might slow up their effort a bit," smiled the rear-gunner, Sgt. Norval Lewis of Assiniboia. Sask., whose mate, Sgt. Donald McCleod of Edmonton, said their tracer bullets smacked the locomotive in a steady stream and stopped the train.

Coal mines stretch for miles around the city and important steel and iron mills are located in it. On the occasion of the last raid, Aug. 28, other R.A.F. bombers attacked Nuremberg.

Bad weather had forced the R.A.F. to close out its August operations with a three-night lull but it was able during the month to cary out a total of 12 night raids against Germany, an aerial offensive augmented toward the end of the month by Russian night raids against Berlin, Koenisberg and Danzig.

Better Than in August

Striking into Germany on the first night of September, the bombers were at least starting out better than they did in August, when weather conditions hampered them until the night of Aug. 4.

Residents along the south coast of England heard a great number of heavy bombers heading out across the channel about midnight last night.

They returned in a steady stream three to four hours later.

German activity over England during the night was slight. Attacks were directed against northern England and an authoritative statement said a few bombs were dropped, causing some damage and a small number of casualties.

This morning R.A.F. fighters and a United States fighter squadron passed over the east coast of England headed for France.

Shortly before mid-day observers at Folkestone reported many squadrons of Spitfires were returning from the direction of the French coast, between Nazi-held Boulogne and battered Dieppe.

Giant Bomber Reaches Canadian Factory

Picton and District

Picton, Sept. 2. —Mr. Wilson Vance, who has been a patient in Kingston General Hospital for the past month has returned home much improved in health.

Mrs. D. E. Wark returned home on Thursday from a three weeks' visit with relatives in Stratford.

John Mulholland

There passed away at his home on Union Street on Saturday, August 29, John Mulholland in his 83rd year. The deceased was unmarried. He is survived by his sister, Mrs. Jas. Barrett; nieces, Mrs. Thos. Wells and Mrs. John Shaw and a nephew, Earl Mulholland. The funeral service was largely attended at the home on Monday afternoon, with interment in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Cunningham and daughter, Carol Ann of Winnipeg, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cunningham and of Mrs. Dick Gilead.

Dr. and Mrs. Frank O'Connor of Kingston, have spent the past week at Picton Manor and visited friends in Prince Edward County.

Mrs. Arthur Storms has accepted a position in the Bank of Montreal.

Former Teacher at Albert College Was Chaplain on Dieppe Operation

Capt. Rev. W. E. L. Smith Also Was Pastor at Grafton and Selby

RETURNS SAFELY

Rev. W. E. L. Smith, Ph.D., now chaplain in the Canadian Army Overseas and a former member of the teaching staff of Albert College was with the troops at the Battle of Dieppe, word from Capt. "Pete" Beach, formerly athletic director at the college, to Mr. Taylor Franklin, registrar, states. The message briefly stated that Capt. Smith had been at Dieppe action and had returned safely to England.

Capt. Rev. Dr. Smith was teacher of French at Albert College in the year 1927-8. He then took a post-graduate course at Oxford University and returned to the college for three years, 1931-4. Latterly he had been United Church minister at Grafton.

Captain Smith was the chaplain who was reading the sixth chapter of Ephesians to the troops at the service as their vessel was on the way across the channel just before the Dieppe landing. The chaplain read by flashlight.

Empey Hill — It will interest many people of Napanee and district to know that the padre who accompanied the troops in the recent raid on Dieppe and whom the dispatches described reading the sixth chapter of Ephesians to the troops on shipboard, by flashlight, was Rev. W. E. L. Smith, formerly pastor of Selby circuit. He returned from the exploit to France, safely.

"PUDDING" FOR ROMMEL

This style of New Zealand cookery—the pudding bomb—is said to be much more potent than the Molotov cocktail for rendering German tanks hors de combat. The "pudding" has already been used with good effect in the Egyptian desert. Thrown at a tank, the explosive pudding sticks to the side of the vehicle until it goes off. That's all, save it will be useful against Rommel in his current drive against Egypt.

Canada Three Years at War

Wartime Changes Ancient Capital to War Workshop

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, Sept. 2. (CP) — Three years ago, this was the quiet, easy going capital of French-Canada, a year-round playground for tourists, a port of entry and exit for overseas travellers and a small-scale industrial centre nestled in the shadows of walls and fortifications of another era. Quebec glorified in its distinction as only qualified city in North America.

Now, like many other cities in Canada, it is a bustling centre of activity, a nerve centre of the Allied production line and an armored place where the men and women of the forces and war workers have replaced the sightseer. The changes didn't come overnight.

Quebec's citadel, towering on Cape Diamond, and the thick stone walls look almost the same as they must have looked when built by the British in 1832. The steep, slanting roofs are still as steep and as slanted as some of them were in the days of 1759 when Wolfe defeated Montcalm on the Plains of Abraham to win Canada from the French. The narrow, crooked streets are still as narrow and as crooked as they were when Canada declared war in September, 1939.

In Many War Plants

But today Jean Baptiste, who doesn't like to be rushed and his English-speaking fellow citizens realize that there is a job to be done and they quicken their steps down the twisting streets which lead them to their war work. They are among the thousands working in shipbuilding yards, in ammunition plants, in gas mask factories or in work-shops where they made uniforms and boots for the fighting men.

Under the steep, slanted roofs and in some more modern buildings is crowded the city's population of 160,000 which has been swollen by the thousands of men, women and youths who flock in from surrounding districts to work in war plants.

Shipyards are regularly turning out corvettes, minesweepers and 10,000-ton cargo ships. A small arms ammunition plant is turning out more ammunition of that type than any other arsenal in the world. Shoe factories have turned their peace-time facilities to making thousands of pairs of boots a week for fighting men.

All this is being done in a city which in peace-time had comparatively few large industries. Then the railways, shipping companies, a pulp and paper mill, the provincial legislature and the city were the employers of most hands.

Many Are Serving

While the older Jean Baptiste, his daughter and sometimes his wife carries on on the production line, the younger men are in the forces at home and aboard. Some of them have lost their lives and others are missing. About 600 youths from the district were with the Royal Rifles of Canada when they made their last-ditch stand at Hong Kong. The fate of many of them remains unknown. Hundreds of other boys are serving in the navy and air force.

The ancient capital is truly a bustling centre of war activity. As Mayor Lucien Borne puts it "we are doing our utmost to support the war effort of our country and to contribute to the great victory to be achieved eventually by the Allied armies".

Work of Service Never Done, District Governor G. MacNab Tells Belleville Rotarians

The work of service will never be finished. There is a greater need and scope than ever for the improvement of work and spirit to promote the finest and best in each community, Dr. George MacNab, Guelph, District Governor of Rotary District 168 here on an official visit told the Belleville Rotary Club Monday.

Speaking at the weekly luncheon at the Hotel Quinte yesterday, the distinguished Rotarian, who is a member of the Board of Directors of Queen's University, and a doctor of paedagogy, gave the clubmen an inspiring address on the philosophy of Rotary.

Modern scientific achievements, he said, had made the whole world a neighborhood. Radio and airplanes had brought distance to a minimum, and had assisted greatly in the tremendous task of nations learning to live together.

Relaxation Important

In these dark days, Dr. MacNab said, there is no need to increase the tempo of living. Burning the candle at both ends means inevitable collapse. People should learn to waste a little time in keeping down the increasing tempos of life. Relaxation is just as important as the job at hand, and people must relax if they are to keep on an even keel.

This, he added, would lead to an increased business and professional efficiency.

The world at present, Dr. MacNab stated, is based on work and sacrifice. Much of the success in life is due to sacrifice and attention to the little things. People lose the completeness of life and living if they ignore the smaller things and look to only the big ones.

He likened Rotary to the bonds of the British Empire, "something powerful, intangible but stronger than bands of steel". He defined it as a philosophy of life which enables the individual to sacrifice to the pursuit of the happiness of mankind and the wellbeing of his community.

Before anything can be achieved, he said, it must be prompted by some motivating ideal. Idealism in Rotary is evidenced in its ability to expand all over the world.

Rotary's task is unfinished, he added. He urged its clubs to extend their membership and assist in the formation of more clubs. Like the Olympic athletes of old, they should carry the torch on to greater and better things.

Rotary, Dr. MacNab said, is like the world and religion. It is based on a structure that was not built by master craftsmen, but by the music of the happiness of underprivileged children, and service, and fellowship, in a world filled with suspicion and fear. It is not built at all but is built forever.

The Rotary structure will go forward with hope and courage, with its efforts in the future undimmed by life's shadows and unshaken by life's tempests.

Dr. MacNab was introduced by Past District Governor J. O. Herity, with the club's appreciation appropriately expressed by Rotarian Bill Morrison.

Prior to the luncheon the District Governor met the directors and chairmen of the various committees with whom he discussed important problems. President Lloyd Hicks was in the chair with Harry Moorman acting as song-leader and Alec Gordon at the piano.

GALLANT DUTCH PLANES

London—(CP)— In less than a year, people of the Netherlands have presented to the R.A.F. 96 fighters, 32 bombers and a number of night fighters. On fighter has destroyed at least 30 enemy aircraft.

Former Choir Members Assist in Music At Summer Services

Tweed — During the month of August services were held in Tweed United Church on Sunday morning, while the pastor, Rev. H. L. Morrison B.A., was absent, enjoying a well-deserved holiday, Rev. Merritt Price of Actinolite, was guest preacher. His series of five thoughtful and instructive addresses was greatly enjoyed by the large congregations which gathered each Sunday morning.

The choir and organist, Miss Lois Richardson who had given such faithful and inspiring leadership of music throughout the year, also enjoyed a well-earned rest. Their places were taken largely by former choir members and visitors whose contributions greatly enriched the church services.

Among the former members of the choir who contributed beautiful solos were Mrs. Fred Houston, Belleville and Mrs. Dorothy Goldie, Peterboro, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Sager, Tweed. They are always most welcome at their home church. Miss Margaret Houston, Belleville, also sang a delightful number in the church which she attended as a small girl. Mr. Robert Bourdon, Montreal, while visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Porritt, also assisted the choir.

Assisting guest organists were Mrs. Fred Watson organist of Westmorland United Church, Toronto, Mrs. Fred Houston and Mr. William Navan, blind organist, Belleville.

Miss Lois Richardson resumed her duties as organist last Sunday when Mrs. F. Houston and Mrs. S. H. Connor blended their voices in a beautiful duet "Hark, Hark, My Soul" (Shelley). Rev. Price's concluding address was based on a verse from Revelations "And I saw a new Heaven and a new earth."

Rev. and Mrs. Atton of Orton, Ontario, spent a few days with their son, Mr. Caran Atton and Mrs. Atton.

Mr. Morley Atton of Fergus, also visited his brother, Mr. Carman Atton at the cottage on Sugar Island during the past week.

Mr. Edmund Fitchett spent the last week in Toronto with his daughter, Mrs. George Wright whose son was killed in action at Dieppe.

Mrs. Keith Wilson is convalescing at her home here following a serious operation in Belleville General Hospital.

Mrs. K. A. McNeil and children have returned home after holidaying in Western Ontario.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Watson, John and Ruth have returned to their home in Toronto from their cottage on Sugar Island where Mrs. Watson and the children had spent the month of August.

Miss Joan Connor and Miss Lois Wilkinson left on Monday for Toronto where they have enrolled at Shaw's. Their mothers, Mrs. S. H. Connor and Mrs. Jack Wilkinson and Mr. Bill Wilkinson accompanied them.

Mr. George Ketcheson of London, England, is spending a few weeks as guest of his brother, Mr. W. L. Ketcheson.

Mr. and Mrs. John Smith of Yorkton, Sask., were recent guests of Dr. and Mrs. M. G. Deles.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the Anglican Church, Morrisburg, when Delina Jean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Pipe, Tweed, was united in marriage to William Alfred, youngest son of Mr. J. L. Thurston, Madawaska. Rev. G. Owen Davies performed the ceremony.

The family of Mr. Percy Holman, C.P.R. agent at the local depot, has moved to Tweed. They will reside in the home lately vacated by Mr. T. J. Calnan.

Cpl. Clancy Carleton member of the Essex Highlanders which took part in the raid at Dieppe returned safely to England according to a cablegram which he sent to his mother, Mrs. Clancy Carleton of this village.

LAC. 2 Chas. Jones, R.C.A.F., son of Mr. and Mrs Allan Jones, Tweed, has arrived safely in England

Pte. Leonard Rashotte son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Rashotte, Tweed was reported missing following the Dieppe raid.

Navy League Needs Books Magazines

The Magazine Department, Ontario Division, Navy League has been made particularly happy this week with a batch of letters from officers and men on our corvettes, to which ships they have been continuously sending cartons of magazines, books, games and portable phonographs. The letters were delayed to the Navy League through the Naval Vessels Reading Service at Halifax.

One letter reads "I would just like to put in writing our very sincere thanks. At this very moment the boys are up on the upper deck clasping books— your books—and reading happily in the sunshine. It makes all the difference to them after a 12 hour working day!"

From an officer of H.M.C.S. Corvette—"All our ships are greatly in your debt for the very excellent work you're doing in supplying us with books, magazines etc."

"The purpose of this letter is two fold" writes a mate in the R.C.N.R., "to thank you most sincerely for your kindness and to express our admiration for the hard work and unselfish devotion you are putting into the job of keeping us supplied with reading material. Your books and periodicals appear in almost every ship in the Fleet!

From Freetown, Sierra Leone, a naval officer writes on behalf of the base "Please accept our thanks for the 120 bundles of Canadian and American magazines which arrived today. These are being distributed to auxiliary craft such as trawlers and corvettes and will be greatly appreciated".

"From the Naval Vessels Reading Service itself", stated Mrs. J. H. Rooney, convener, "one of eleven distributing agencies we supply with materials for our sailors, comes the statement, 'Wonderful shipments are continuing to arrive from you, and we cannot repeat too often how much we appreciate the great work you are doing for us and rely on you for our main supply'."

"Donations of books, magazines, etc., are urgently needed at 337 Front Street, or 'Phone Mr. Harvey Stewart, 218 George Street, 1483W or 2154.

FRONT WALL BLOWN OUT

None of the 150 employees was injured but a piece of flying glass inflicted a deep arm cut on the driver of a milk wagon standing in the street.

The resulting fire was quickly brought under control.

22 EXECUTED BY FIRING SQUAD

Berne, Sept. 2. (AP)—A dispatch from Budapest said today 22 persons, mostly young men and women, were executed by firing squads after sentence by a Croatian Court Martial on charges of taking letters, food and medicine to insurgents, of possessing arms or of listening to the London radio and spreading anti-Axis reports.

Empey Hill

Mr. and Mrs. Roy McMath received a cablegram from Great Britain on Monday announcing the safe arrival of their son McGillivray of the R.C.O.C.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Winter attended the marriage of the latter's niece, Miss Helen Reid to Mr. Alvin McRae of Lonsdale, which took place Wednesday afternoon in 4th line United Church and was performed by the Rev. W. R. Merrick. Mr. Harold Kimmerly of Empey Hill was one of the ushers.

Miss Beverley Kimmerly of Clayton, N. Y., is holidaying with her cousins, Misses Jean and Ruth Tucker.

Miss B. Mowers of the Ottawa Civil Service is spending a two-weeks' vacation with her parents.

Mr. Jay McMath spent several days last week with his mother, Mrs. James McMath and brother Mr. Roy McMath and Mrs. McMath.

Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Ashley of Belleville called on friends in this community on Sunday afternoon.

Visitors at the Mowers home on Sunday included: Mr. and Mrs. Bert Mowers and children; Mr. and Mrs. J. Gibson and Vera of Gananoque, Mr. Gerald Cline of Moscow, and Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Osborne of Lonsdale.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Abbott and son spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Rogers at their cottage on Hay Bay.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Hutchinson were dinner guests on Friday of Mr. and Mrs. F. Denison, Selby.

Congratulations are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Harvey, who were married on Saturday at Woodlawn, Ont. The bride was formerly Miss Martha Penny, a former teacher here.

Bridge Company Unable to Meet Interest Charges

Brockville, Ont., Sept. 2.—(CP)—War restrictions on travel have forced the Thousand Island Bridge authority to suspend semi-annual interest payment of $64,812 due Tuesday on $3,050,000 outstanding bonds owned by bridge authorities.

Although operating costs have been sliced to $39,000 for the current fiscal year—a 35-per-cent reduction over 1939-40 expenses—officials said revenues have declined so sharply it will be impossible to meet the interest payment.

Careful Parceling

Parcels for members of the Canadian forces overseas should be packed so that senders are assured of their reaching the destination. But some persons packing these cannot have exercised the utmost care for in seven months no fewer than 11,581 parcels were found in damaged condition when they arrived at Ottawa. The most of these were repacked. At the same time those preparing parcels should realize that glass may be easily broken and that certain types of contents can destroy perhaps an entire parcel or even cause damage to another parcel beside it. Parcels are subject naturally to a certain amount of handling and there is also the pressure of weight of large number of parcels which may crush an improperly packed box.

Those who are packing these would be sorely disappointed to learn that their boxes did not reach their relatives in the forces. There must be many who do up parcels indifferently. For satisfaction to the man overseas who needs these gifts and comforts and also the thrill of getting a parcel, a little more time might be taken.

A resident of Montreal who is often in Belleville visiting relatives told a newspaperman the other day that he always took extreme care with his parcels and then over the container sewed a wrapping of cotton and over that he tied a wrapping of stout paper. The name and address of the son to whom he is sending parcels, is written on the parcel, printed carefully on the cotton wrapping and also on the outside wrapping paper. The cotton he says assures that the parcel will remain intact.

This man's son is serving in the Air Force in Egypt. He finds when he sends to Egypt a good heavy cake in a tin and closely wrapped with thicknesses of waxed paper it reaches Egypt months after in the finest condition. He advises cake of this kind for parcels for those in the Egyptian theatre of war and also fruit juices which he says are a rare treat to the soldiers in that hot clime. Incidentally it may be mentioned that now is the time to send parcels for men in the Egyptian theatre of war, this father says, for it takes sometimes many months for a parcel to reach the Middle East.

As Christmas is less than four months away Canadian relatives of the men overseas in Britain and elsewhere will now be giving some thought to the forwarding of gifts to the Old Land.

Ruses and Secret Weapons

Ruses in war are as old as the first battle that ever was fought and they still succeed.

The other day the Russians, adept in psychology, made a feint attack in one direction at an important section of the front somewhere the enemy knew there was going to be an attack but was unaware when and just where it was to be. The Russians' trick was to throw an attack against the Germans in one direction hours before the real attack was to begin in another part, thereby drawing the enemy's attention to the wrong sector and allowing the first Russians to leave that scene and the Russian guns to pound the Germans repelling the feint attack. This ruse also allowed the Russians to succeed in their real attack. Just this week the world learned of the American ruse at Milne Bay, in digging in before the Japanese and there awaiting them in ambush. Japanese forces were practically wiped out.

Secret guns and weapons are also a part of the armor of a nation against its foe. The Russians give great credit to a secret gun "Katsuisha" which played its part in helping to defeat the Germans.

Now the British and Americans are reported to have in production a new secret gun which will be a "real surprise" to the Germans. In the last war the British tank was rightly credited with a great deal of success and though the Germans copied it, the Germans were always at a disadvantage as compared with the British and their Allies who got the better of the Germans in the matter of tanks.

When Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, commanding the Canadian Army Overseas was last in Canada he stressed the high place of invention and new devices in warfare and held before Canada the vision of a nation which was doing its utmost in research and investigation along inventive lines.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

FALSE PRIDE

Of all of life's varied, vainglorious ventures,
There's none that surpasses the thrill of new dentures.
Such straight, bright bicuspids, incisors and eye-teeth!
When I look at myself I exclaim, "Are those my teeth?"
And the memories of painful and dolorous days
Fade from sight in the light of my arrogant gaze.

Once you've made up your mind.
And are fully resigned,
That your teeth must come out, both before and behind,
The worst of the battle is over and won—
That is, till the pulling is really begun.
Then the sight of those mean-looking nasty old nippers
Sort of dampens your ardor for new china clippers.

But when your mechanical molars are in,
What a welcome relief to be able to grin,
And to feast fairly freely on foods you can chew,
While telling your friends about all you went through.
It's a joy, when they fit,
To have teeth that all hit,
And I'm proud as a peacock, although I'll admit
That I wish my old buckteeth were back on the job
Whenever I try to eat corn on the cob.

THE WAR COMES TO WINDSOR

We were in Windsor on that fateful morning when the story of Dieppe broke on a surprised Canada. We saw a proud city, its teeming thousands busily toiling at war work, and other phases of life, momentarily stunned as the import of the news struck home. Windsor reeled, recovered quickly with a new light in its already determined eyes. We saw young men and women, old men and old ladies, anxiously scan the casualty lists. We saw women weep and strong men swallow hard. This was war. Windsor's gallant sons with those of Toronto and Hamilton, and other parts of Canada, had written the first glorious page of Canada's new army. There was sadness and grief in the border city. But there was also a fierce gleam of pride in the eyes of its citizens. Gallant Mrs. Elizabeth Murphy, tearless, proud, her four sons reported "missing, believed killed." "Her's not to reason why." She had given all that a mother can give. Her name will be written alongside those of her hero sons.

The heroes of Dieppe substantiated the oft-made statement that Canada's soldiers of today are every bit as good as their fathers the old "sweat" who fought at Vimy, Ypres and Passchaendale. There is not, nor ever was, any doubt of that fact.

Black-faced Canadian commandos returned to England, "anxious to get another crack at Jerry." That is the spirit of the Canadian forces. They are now considered the best trained troops in the Empire and the best fighters in the world. It will be a sad day for the Jerries when other crack Canadian units finally go into action. But there will be sacrifices. And other Canadian centres, like Windsor, Hamilton and Toronto, will be fired anew with pride and further determination to rid the worfld once and for all of the evil menace that now threatens it.

PORTRAIT OF A FRIEND by W. Winchell. "He troubles himself to get you out of scrapes, and then scrapes to get you out of trouble. He sticks with you when you get stuck. He's never in your way—except when you're on the way down. He gets up early to help you get to the top, and stays up late to help you stay there. There are no strings attached to his friendship—except those he pulls for you. He never asks you a favor as though it were coming to him, and never makes you feel he is doing one for you—when he is. He gets his biggest kick helpisg you kick over your obstocles. And his biggest disappointments are those that come to you. All he wants in return for his friendship is yours."

The End of the Third Year

New York, Sept. 2 — This week sees the end of the third year of the war. An overall view of the history of these three years and the present situation ought to convince an objective observer that our enemies cannot win this war, and we can only lose it by a moral collapse or by a division inside our own alliances.

In our memories the sensational victories of Hitler assume exaggerated proportions because we fail to see them in their global proportions, or realize that they were victories in limited wars only.

For years, previous to and since the war, it has been an axiom of the German High Command — known to all familiar with German military science and military writings—that Germany could only win a blitzkrieg. That is why Hitler, from the beginning, concentrated on specific objects, throwing in everything he had at the moment in men and material, while conducting the most meticulously prepared diplomatic and psychological warfare to keep only one enemy at a time. The strategy was to eat up the world, bite by bite, like an apple, and not try to swallow it all at once.

Lightning Was Delayed.

The lesson that the German High Command learned from the last world war was that a war of attrition would invariably fail, and that Germany could only win a war of movement.

Technically a war of movement is possible only in that kind of warfare which we now call "blitzrieg" But a blitz that lasts three years is an anomaly. It's a lightning flash that takes years to reach the earth from the clouds.

A review of three years of war in the West reveals that the war of movement was successful only against militarily weak countries. The only great military power to be overcome — France — was, in fact, and ever since the last war, not nearly as strong as her reputation.

Great Britain, the first really great power to be engaged in war against Hitler, could not be knocked out by a blitz, it was immediately demonstrated. Let us not forget that Britain fought alone against Germany and Italy for a full year.

All the strategical advantages were on the German side during that year, and Hitler failed in attempting the blitz pattern in his great assaults in the fall of 1940 and spring of 1941.

So he tried the same pattern against another great power—Russia—trying to exchange one enemy for another. Here he encountered a real military power, whose reputation for weakness is one of the scandals of the Allied military intelligence services. One American knew the truth — the American military attache in Moscow, Brigadier-General Philip R. Faymonville. But Allied authorities preferred to listen to amateurs like Lindbergh.

Failed Against Russia.

Dangerous as the Russian situation is at present, the blitzkrieg against Russia has conspicuously failed. If it has failed against the two great powers, Britain and Russia, when they fought separately, how can it succeed against the three greatest powers of the world: Britain, Russia, and the United States, if they stand united?

It is only in this third year of the war that Hitler and Hirohito have a world war on their hands, in which the kind of victories that so sensationally began this war are no longer possible. The war is now a test of endurance, production, reserves, and morale, and can only be lost by preposterous mismanagement, and indefinitely prolonged by stupidities, prejudices, and jealousies preventing us from winning it quickly by waging it as it should be waged—as a united and integrated effort.

Up to now, the world war, on our side, is not balanced. We have allowed the war to be confined to one main theatre, a fact that has given Hitler his only chance. The task in the fourth year of the war—begun by the attack on the Solomon Islands, which has forced the Japanese to change their plans—is to exhaust the last reserves of the enemy, attack him from all sides, and so finish with his main force.

But we also must realize that this is no blitzkrieg from our side, either, and that we cannot defeat two great powers like Germany and Japan by one or two decisive blows. Hitler himself has demonstrated that that is impossible, and we may as well learn from him.

The Year of Victory?

The air offensive under way in the West is one of the means of attrition. It would be an illusion to believe that Hitler Germany can be defeated only by air—unless we could psychologically defeat her, a strategy for which, as I have pointed out, we have no policy. Here again, the Russians have done a much better job than we have, and here again, we need to open a second front.

The fourth year, beginning this week, will be the year that must transform the de jure global war into a de facto global war—on all fronts, military and psychological.

If we do our job well, it can become the year of victory. If this is true, it should also be the year for the preparation of the peace to come, and a year of great intellectual and spiritual activity and audacity. Otherwise we will be as little prepared for our victory as we were for the war itself. And that can be as great a disaster for mankind as the war.

Apart from this, the preparation of the peace is our major psychological weapon, and can radically contribute to a 1943 decision.

RESTLESS MEN

Beyond the strife for food and drink
The Lord has given us power to think;
To sit alone by rippling streams
And fret ourselves with hopes and dreams;
At times to wonder how and why
We live at all and always die
And what beyond this term of years
Awaits the soul when it appears.

Complacent they who go about
Forever undisturbed by doubt,
Content with cards and dice, as though
No more was man designed to know;
Who see the stars and moon and sun
And think by chance their courses run,
But those by thought and dreams possessed
Not easily for long can rest.

Beyond the limit eyes can see
They feel that something more must be.
Past thirst and hunger they must find
Refreshment for the questing mind,
Some distant, undiscovered goal
Forever beckoning to the soul,
Which lures them ever on and on
And upward till all strength is gone.

FLAME-THROWERS

The flame-thrower now being used by the Nazis with such devastating effect is merely a modern adaptation of an ancient weapon of war.

Like so many of the deadly weapons employed today by the Japs and Nazis, the modern flame-thrower was an American invention.

This weapon originated in the U. S. Army during the first World War and was quickly adopted by the German army during the last year of that conflict.

The incendiary bomb is merely the modern version of the ancient burning arrows, torches and firebrands tossed into fortresses by assailants.

The Chinese had invented and used gunpowder a long time before they discovered how to use it in guns. They first used it in warfare by putting it in a long trough, pointing the trough in the direction of the enemy and then igniting the powder. The explosion of the loose powder frightened the enemy more than it actually hurt him.

Later the Chinese artillerists devised flame projectors of various kinds. Early in the 13th century, after the conquest of China, the Mongols under Genghis Khan made good use of Chinese artillerists and their flame projectors.

At the siege of Khojend, says Harold Lamb, the Mongols used catapults to hurl at the Persian boats "fire pots"—"jars or kegs filled with flaming sulphur, or another concoction of the Cathayan artillerists."

The highly inflammable liquid known as Greek fire, used with deadly effect during the middle ages by the Byzantine Greeks, is said to have been invented late in the seventh century by a Greek architect named Callinicus and was first used to repel a Saracent attack upon Cyzicus by a powerful force of Saracens from whom it was delivered by the destruction of their fleet and 30,000 men by means of Greek fire. For several centuries after the siege of Cyzicus the secret of this deadly combustible was jealously guarded at Constantinople.

Greek fire is supposed to have been thrown over walls with ladles, projected with tow tied on arrows and javelins, and discharged from tubes resembling cannon.

Naptha was the chief ingredient of Greek fire and by the time of Tamerlane it was dispersed from a squirt or fire engine and ignited by means of a flame in front of the orifice.

Such flame projectors were widely used by Tamerlane who conquered a large part of Asia late in the 14th century and they did not differ in principle from the flame-throwers used by the Germans in the first World War.

Some of the flame-throwers used by the Nazis have a range of 300 feet and develop heat of 2,000 degrees.

Silent Scot, D.F.M. Winner, Thrilled By Cable From His Home Town Mayor

"He Wouldn't Fight and That Made Me Mad," He Says, Relating Story of Victory Over Nazi.

LONDON — Flight Sgt. Thomas Oswald McIlquham, the silent Scot from Carleton Place, Ont., whose coolness and marksmanship from his seat in the rear turret of a giant Halifax bomber brought down one of Germany's deadliest fighters, a Focke-Wulf 190 during the 1,000 bomber raid on Cologne last May, and who a month later damaged a Me 109 so severely that it was probably destroyed, does not often smile. But when he does, his face lights up with revealing sincerity.

It was in this manner that he told of receiving the news that he had been awarded the Distinguished Flying Medal.

"It shook me," was his brief comment. Then he pulled a cablegram from his pocket and the slow smile spread happily over his face. It was obvious that the receipt of that cable marked the proudest moment of his life.

He's Third Generation

It was from the mayor and municipality of Carleton Place, congratulating him on the honor he had brought to his native town. The McIlquham's have lived there for three generations.

"Mac" as this Canadian-Scottish rear-gunner is inevitably known to every one on his station, is tough as well as dour. Two days before he went on the "op" which brought him the "probable"—that was on the Bremen show—he was struck on the head by a piece of flak. He didn't know at the time that his head had been hit. "It felt as if someone had thumped me on the back," he said afterwards.

His helmet was ripped clear across by the razor-edge of the shell fragment and the padding was pulled out. First indication he had of this was when the headgear came apart. Mac has the three-inch piece of flak and is keeping it carefully.

The Halifax in which McIlquham was flying to Cologne was attacked twice while passing over Holland enroute to the target. Mac saw it when it was 1,000 yards to port, and warned his skipper, who immediately took evasive action. Mac waited until the fighter, an F.W. 190, reached 350 yards. Then he opened fire.

The fighter broke off to starboard and then came in again to the attack, this time from dead astern. When he reached 350 yards again—he was firing as he came in—Mac gave him another burst. He appeared to stall and spin as bullets struck him from the four Brownings.

"We Fooled Him."

Shortly after this encounter, which gave McIlquham claim to an aircraft damaged, a second attack occurred, again by a F.W. 190, which was observed to be following at about 800 yards. At 600 he opened fire with cannon and machine guns. "He wouldn't come in and fight, and that made me mad," Mac related afterwards, "but we fooled him by flying on a straight course for a while after making a number of evasive turns. He took a chance and came in. When I got him in my sights at 350 yards, I gave him a burst. His nose went up and he stalled at 150 yards, caught fire and crashed, exploding as he hit the ground."

About the fight with the ME. 109, Mac says:

"The enemy aircraft was an Me. 109 carrying no lights and accompanied by other fighters. It was spotted 800 yards off the beam and immediately turned in to attack. Losing height on the turn, it started to climb and attack at the same time. As he closed in, I gave him a burst at 325 yards. I gave him a second burst as we turned sharply to port. He broke off with a red glow in his engine and black smoke pouring out behind. Out of control, he fell 10,000 feet disappearing into the clouds. The pilot had not baled out when I saw the kite last."

Forced to Rest

It was not until some days later that Mac began to get headaches resulting from the blow on the head by the flak two nights earlier. Now he is undergoing enforced rest until the effects of his delayed concussion have disappeared. He's not enjoying the rest. "I hate hanging around when the rest of the chaps are going on ops," he says, morosely.

Mac is a great chap to have in the rear turret of a Halifax or anywhere else, according to the rest of his crew. The English wireless operator in his aircraft says:

Pals Expected It

"With Mac there we are well covered. Nobody could be quicker in calling the turns to the pilot when they are being followed by a fighter. You couldn't want to have anybody quicker on the trigger than he is when he gets them in his sights. We were all expecting him to get a "gong" after the Cologne show and we were all damned glad of it."

The C.O. of the squadron was the pilot of Mac's kite on the last encounter. His comment on the conduct of his Canadian "tail-end Charlie" was brief and to the point: "A bloody good gunner. Damned keen and knows his stuff. Can't say more than that, can I?"

CANADIAN PRESS ROUNDS 25 YEARS AS NEWS SERVICE

Co-operative Organization of Nation's Newspapers Completes Quarter Century of Progress

By J. A. McNEIL
General Manager, The Canadian Press

Toronto, Sept. 2.—(CP)—At the 25th anniversary today of its founding, The Canadian Press stands as a monument to the courage and vision of a group of daily newspaper publishers who were first to realize the need for a system of news collection, exchange and distribution in Canada, controlled by its co-operating newspapers.

It is a testimonial also to the resourcefulness and distinterestedness of the whole body of those publishers who, inspired by the example of the pioneers, established and built to its present commanding stature a co-operative organization with international ramifications which provides the people of Canada with the incalculable boon of a domestic and world-covering news service unequalled for accuracy, comprehensiveness and speed by any available to the press and public of any other nation.

Through the past quarter of a century the story of The Canadian Press has been one of continued progress and expansion. From its loyal ally, The Associated Press, it receives a news service covering the United States, the British Empire and the rest of the world, and distributes it from seven Canadian bureaux. Through these bureaux also it collects, condenses and dispatches the local and district news of its regional members for use by their fellows throughout Canada.

The New York bureau selects the essential news from the huge volume of AP, and Reuters material and the output of the CP's London bureau and correlates it for Canadian consumption. A resident CP correspondent covers Washington from the Canadian viewpoint. And at the London bureau a staff of eight Canadian-born and Canadian-trained writers supplement the flow of AP, Reuters and other agency news with dispatches on conditions in Britain of special Canadian interest.

To the London bureau falls the vital task of keeping Canada's citizens informed of the welfare and the exploits of the Dominion's forces overseas. Typical of its service is the magnificent chronicle of the Dieppe raid written by Ross Munro, CP War Correspondent attached to the Canadian Army, and the complementary stories provided by his London colleagues.

Early Conditions

Though it was on September 1, 1917, that The Canadian Press first functioned as a national entity, its origins go back for a decade previously, and its history would be incomplete without a resume of the happenings of those ten years. Prior to 1907, the daily newspapers of Canada were dependent upon commercially-operated news services of indifferent quality and limited quantity.

The Canadian Pacific Railway held the Canadian rights to the Associated Press service, which it distributed through its telegraph facilities. The Great North-Western Telegraph Company, now assorbed in the Canadian National Railways, operated the Easson service, named after its manager and consisting of Canadian news collected mostly by G.N.W. agents. Larger dailies supplemented these news supplies by special services from the leading papers of New York and Chicago and by an expensive system of correspondence from other Canadian cities, while smaller papers relied on "boilerplate" shipped from central points.

A gradual realization by Canadian publishers that they should organize their own news service became general because of a series of events beginning in 1907, when the C.P.R. arbitarily doubled its fees for AP to the three then-existing Winnipeg dailies. Their publishers organized the Western Associated Press, secured other Prairie newspapers as members and subscribed for other available news services. When the C.P.R. imposed discriminatory rates against this material, the W.A.P., supported by Eastern publishers, appealed to the Board of Railway Commissioners at Ottawa. Meanwhile the publishers of the Maritime provinces, encouraged by the Westerners' action, organized the Eastern Press Association on similar lines in 1910.

Merged Into One

Late in 1910 the Railway Board gave judgment for the W.A.P. and ordered equality of press rates, whereupon the C.P.R. voluntarily surrendered its AP franchise. This made necessary an organization to acquire the service on behalf of the daily newspapers, and Canadian Press Limited was incorporated, with separate sections — morning and evening—composed of the publishers of Ontario and Quebec. The W.A.P. and E.P.A. continued as entities but their members were also members of Canadian Press Limited, with a loose working arrangement for exchange of Canadian news between the four bodies.

By 1917 it was recognized that this wasteful and cumbrous method should be replaced by an integrated and truly national news system to match and further foster the new national spirit engendered by Canada's participation in the First Great War, then at its peak, and the four sectional organizations merged their identity in The Canadian Press, a co-operative, non-profit corporation.

Absorbed Deficit

Establishment of a leased wire system from coast to coast was handicapped by three non-productive geographical gaps. The Dominion Government made a grant of $50,000 per annum toward the cost but as time passed the publishers realized that this subsidy raised the danger of political interference with their news, and when in 1924 the grant was withdrawn they cheerfully absorbed the deficit and went on record that never again would The Canadian Press accept funds from any outside source, public or private.

Formal celebration of the 25th anniversary, is being deferred until the time of the annual meeting next spring, when CP members, now 90 in number, and their editorial aides from the Atlantic to the Pacific will gather to recall the successes of the past and plan for still further progress.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

War Steadies or Strengthens The Control of the Emotions

The young assistant of a busy physician asked about the non-appearance of one of the patients who had formerly made frequent visits to the office.

"Oh", said the physician, "her sister who is quite ill lives next door to her and she is helping to nurse her. She hasn't the time to come in and see me".

"But what about her 'heart pains' of which she complains?"

"As you know, those are not true heart pains it is a painful condition but is due to an arthritis of the ends of the ligaments holding ribs to the breast bone. She is so worried about her sister that her own pains are not so important at present".

It would seem that the war is making all of us think less of our pains or worries as we think of the world as a whole, of the men in our fighting forces, and the misery of the conquered peoples. And this thinking of others and what they are up against is making us not only forget our small troubles but willing to do more for others as is reported by physicians everywhere and particularly by psychiatrists or nerve specialists.

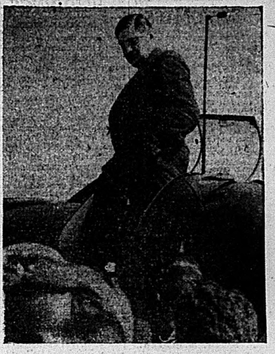
Recently Dr. Walter Freeman, Washington, D.C., in Hygeia, the Health Magazine, stated that the human race must be changing, for neuroses (thinking you have an ailment), among the civilian population show a definite drop during war.

"The few bits of news from the captive countries mention the privations and anxieties for the future but not anything about neuroses. If conditions in those countries are the same as in England, then many neurotic persons are enjoying better health than they were for many years past."

Dr. Freeman states that the harmful factors of the war—fatigue, privation, malnourishment and disturbed rest—actually improve health for various reasons, the first and foremost being the difference between big things and little things". It is the little things of life with their constant provocations that bring us to distraction, whereas we can always find the needed strength within ourselves to face the big or dangerous circumstances.

When there is no choice, we do, or face, the big things automatically, that is naturally or without having to think about it.

Two other reasons why we are more steady in wartime are spiritual organization which gives one a sense that God is watching over him, and self-sacrifice which leads one to enter into useful work to assist the common cause".



When he visited a Royal Canadian Air Force fighter squadron "Somewhere-in-Britain" recently, Hon. C. G. Power, M.C., Canada's Air Minister climbed aboard a fighter aircraft the better to see and talk to the members of the squadron who crowded around him. Mr. Power accompanied by Air Marshal L. S. Breadner, Chief of the Air Staff is visiting most of the Royal Canadian Air Force squadrons in Britain. — R. C. A. F. Photo.

Canada Enters War's Fourth Year

Coast Bristles as War Extends to Fourth Year

By JOHN LEBLANC

Halifax, Sept. 2 —(CP)—Battlements compounded of air, land and sea power confront the invader who would gain a foothold on Canada's eastern frontier in the fourth year of the war.

The Dominion's three forces on the Atlantic coast have been welded into a powerful defence organism under a unified command. Navy, army and air force stand ready to act as one at the first appearance of an intruder along the indented coastline from the United States to Labrador.

And the men of the United States fighting services join the Canadian defenders in Newfoundland, the craggy bastion that stands athwart the sea-threshold to the St. Lawrence River—classical invasion route to the heart of the continent. All along the hundreds of miles of island and mainland coast, men and ships and planes and guns stand at the alert. The vigil extends around the clock.

At sea the navy, burdened with the tasks of getting the convoys through, has the help of the far-ranging coastal patrol of the air force. From a chain of airports, the big bombers drone ceaselessly far out upon the Atlantic, bomb bays loaded and observers on the watch.

The navy's own patrol ships scurry up and down the shore from Halifax and from other bases that have mushrooned up in the months of war. The minesweepers plod daily through their dull task. At the mouths of the vital harbors, steel nets open their meshes only to friendly craft.

On land, the powerful guns of the army's coastal batteries point their snouts seaward in unspoken challenge, their numbers multiplied many times since the start of war. Now and then, their threaty rumble is heard as the gunners keep them in fettle.

Along the coastal roads, the army maintains endless watch. Travellers are halted and must explain their business. These infantrymen, too, keep a watch seaward as auxiliary to the vigilance of the other forces.

A little further inland, the army has its concentrations of men and equipment that can be rushed swiftly to endangered areas. There are constant manoeuvres, with theoretical defenders fighting off hypothetical attacks on important objectives.

Around the important centres and the installations vital to war stand the anti-aircraft guns and the searchlights, with men at the ready 24 hours a day. Hostile aircraft would be sighted well before reaching their targets, through the R.C.A.F.'s network of Aircraft Detection Observers—a corps of hundreds of civilians spotted throughout the sprawling Atlantic Command.

All these diversified defence formations are under the hand of Maj.-Gen. W.H.P. Elkins, Officer Commanding-in-Chief, Atlantic Command. In time of attack, army, navy and air force would function as an integrated force under his order in a triple-strength dose of trouble for the intruder.

ARMORED TROOPS

In a brief, personal message of welcome, Gen. Worthington said: "Fellow soldiers, here we are. I told you we would be here when I first joined you six months ago and here we are."

The "here" was represented today by a huge camp where training will continue and where, two weeks ago, support formations of artillery, army service corps and ordnance units for the division arrived.

Promised Hard Work

The men had the promise of hard work. Gen. Worthington told them he had passed them on the way "so you wouldn't remain idle long after you arrived."

Dieppe was a live topic around the barracks for, although none of this division's forces took part in that action, all its members were anxious for news of the Canadians' gallant stand there.

Mr. Massey had spoken to the troops about Dieppe on their arrival. "Our pride in your service is greater than it has ever been before," he said. "Dieppe shed a new lustre on the army by the gallantry and skill with which that action was carried out."

Nor did he forget the airmen in the convoy. "Our pride in the R.C.A.F. cannot be measured in words," he told them.

The Convoy also carried the Montreal French-Canadian General Hospital, the first such French-Canadian unit to come overseas. Two-score nursing sisters in charge of matron Suzanne Giroux of Montreal were in the unit.

Col. C. P. Gaboury of Montreal was the officer commanding the hospital.

The British Columbia, the South Alberta, the Lake Superior and the Manitoba armored car regiments were among the arrivals. Maj. G. L. Letson of Victoria was acting officer commanding the British Columbia regiment with Maj. D. Verchere of Vancouver second in command. Maj. M. H. Wright of Edmonton and Maj. J. E. V. Murrell of Port Arthur, Ont, were second-in-command of the South Alberta and the Lake Superior regiments, respectively.

The convoy also included officers and men from division headquarters, among them Maj. A. M. Dougle of Kingston, Ont., and Capt. Archie Campbell, Divisional Advocate, and Maj. Carl Wintermute, field cashier, both of Winnipeg.

Headquarter Officers Aboard

There were also a number of headquarter officers aboard, including Maj. R. G. Rudolf of York Mills, Ont., deputy acting adjutant general, and Maj. Ken Tremaine of Montreal, general staff officer 2. Both officers had served on corps headquarters staff in Britain before in this war.

The convoy, protected by Allied warships, had such a smooth crossing in weather so warm many of the troops thought they were headed for the Middle East. None of the ships was bothered by submarines.

For some of the new arrivals, reaching camp here today was the culmination of many months' hard training. Cpl. M. Hellsten of Vermillion Bay, Ont., member of the Lake Superior regiment, had been in the army 26 months. But for others it was speedy realization of their ambition to get to battle stations, especially such men as Tpr. A. R. Downey and Tpr. P. Henke of Gull Lake, Sask., who joined the South Alberta regiment only six months ago.

In other parts of England the R.C.A.F. men and women were getting their bearings in new quarters.

The men were at a reception station where most graduates of The Commonwealth Air Training Plan go to await posting. They were just as anxious for action as the armored-division troops and most of them expressed a preference for posting with the big bombers.

The women, some of whom were so excited they didn't bother going to meals as their ship neared a berth, took in the sights of London today.

Fifteen-Year-Old Sentimental Choice To Win the Title

New York, Sept. 2 (AP)—There always is something immensely appealing —about a youngster competing against grownups, and little Shirley Fry, 15, of Akron, Ohio, already is the sentimental choice to win the Women's National Tennis Championship at Forest Hills. She already has won her way to the quarter-finals.

It is doubtful Shirley will get any further, because her next opponent will be Pauline Betz of Los Angeles, the tournament's second seeded woman player. Yesterday Shirley defeated Mrs. Madge Vosters of Lansdowne, Pa., 6-1 3-6 6-3.

It required Shirley to inject some steam into the women's play. Otherwise the girls continued to win as scheduled into the quarter-finals.

Only two men's singles matches were scheduled today, Frankie Parker meeting William Vogt of Drexel Hill, Pa., in one, and George Richards of Montebelloe, Calif., tackling Ladislav Hecht, the former Czech, in the other.

ANOTHER MINISTER RESIGNS

Tokyo, (From Japanese Broadcasts), Sept. 2. (AP)—The resignation of Deputy Foreign Minister Harohito Nishi was announced today a day after his chief, Foreign Minister Shigenori Togo, went out of office and Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo assumed the portfolio. Nishi's successor is Teruichi Yamamoto, chief of the Foreign Office's East Asia Bureau.

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF MY 25 YEARS TRAINING TO GET MOST MILES FROM YOUR TIRES!

To Buy New Tires . . .

Go first to your nearby Firestone Dealer. He has the official information and the necessary forms. He can tell you if you are eligible and in what classification you are. He will help you fill out the Application for a Tire Ration Permit, furnish the Dealer's Inspection Report and do everything he can to help you.

How to Get the Most Mileage from Your Present Tires

1. Have the Firestone Dealer estimate the number of miles left in the tires — then ration your mileage to so many miles per week.
2. Limit your driving to essential transportation. If you drive to work, take others — and rotate trips with them.
3. Have air pressure checked every week. Underinflation is the greatest enemy of tire life.
4. Drive slowly—avoid quick starts and stops that grind off the tread. Go easy on curves and use gears instead of brakes on steep hills.
5. Park with care — do not scrape sidewalls or bump the curb.

Firestone has always pledged you "Most Miles per Dollar." This has been made possible by a superior product built for race track speeds to give thousands of extra miles plus a superb dealer organization trained and equipped to help you get out of your tires all the mileage that was built into them.

As a result of twenty-five years of training, Firestone Dealers have the most modern equipment, the trained personnel, the background of knowledge and experience necessary for proper tire inspection, repairs and advice on how to keep your tires running to their last mile . . . no matter what make they may be.

This conservation service plus common-sense wartime driving on your part will result in your getting unbelievably big mileage from your tires. Start using it today.

WEDDINGS

SWEETMAN—STEER

Marmora, (Special.— Two graduates of the University of Toronto and the College of Education, were married on Saturday in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Peterborough. The bride, Miss Helen Pauline Steer, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver M. Steer, Peterborough, and the bridegroom, Mr. Paul William Sweetman, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Sweetman, Toronto. Rev. Dr. J. D. Smart officiated and Mr. M. B. Chenhall was at the organ.

Given in marriage by her father, th bride wore a gown of white slipper satin with long train. Her long veil was held with a halo of forget-me-nots and she carried a shower bouquet of blue and white flowers. She wore a wide heirloom bracelet of gold. Her matron of honor, Mrs. John B. Gray, was gowned in pink mousseline de soie; Mrs. Carleton Patch wore pink, and Miss Eleanor Sweetman, blue; and Miss Annabelle Mary Bellanick wore turquoise. The frocks were bouffant in style, and they carried harmonizing flowers. The groomsman was Mr. Richard Crookall of Toronto and the ushers were Mr. Lester Bissell, Dr. Claude Bissell, Mr. Horace Steer, R.C.A.F., and Mr. Frederick Hooper.

The bride was a member of Marmora High School staff for the past year.

Sidney Bridal Couple Feted By Community

In the spirit of good fellowship, friends and neighbours of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Shortt, 2nd Concession of Sidney, gathered Friday evening to honor their son, Mr. Wilmot Shortt and his bride, formerly Miss Ethel McDonell of Stirling.

After the accustomed charivari, Mr. Dave Thrasher as chairman, brought the gathering to order, and after expressing his congratulations called on Miss June Hall, who on behalf of the young people read an appropriate address, while Miss Verna Keene presented the young couple with a coffee percolator, and on behalf of the community at large, Miss Elinor Roblin read an address, and Mr. Percy Sutherland and Mr. Greydon Rodgers presented them with an occasional chair and smoking set.

W.C.A. NOTES

Trenton and District

Trenton, Sept. 2 (Special)—The entire west block of Dundas street in the business district was cleared of traffic on Monday evening and given over to the Carnival Committee of the Rotary Club as a Monte Carlo. Bazaar booths and numerous games of skill and chance with shouting operators and crowds of patrons and curious onlookers filled one end of the block, while at the other end an enclosure was made where hundreds of street-dancers swung and swayed to music provided by an R.C.A.F. orchestra. Both patrons and observers were numerous, and even at one o'clock on Tuesday morning the area was thronged with pleasure seekers.

A feature of the evening was a program carried out by Ken Soble, radio program director from Toronto. Numerous recordings were made on the spot for his "Did I Say That" program which is to be heard from a Toronto radio station on September 22nd.

The Carnival will continue during Tuesday and Wednesday evenings also Any funds accruing from the event will be deposited in the Rotary account for benevolent and patriotic purposes sponsored by the club. The committee in charge of the event this year is headed by Rotarian Albert Farrar.

Athletic Meet Cancelled

An athletic meet scheduled to be held Labor Day on the old Firemen's Park grounds has been postponed until May next year by the Youth Service Committee of Trenton Rotary Club. Cancellation was due in part to the refusal of the town council to put the grounds in condition for the meet, and in part also to an R.C.A.F. field day scheduled for the same date. The Rotary athletic meet was to have been for the benefit of boys and girls. Trophy cups and medals had been purchased and were on display to the public. For several days a banner across Dundas street proclaimed the event until a gust of wind brought disaster to it and to a plate glass window of a gents' furnishings store nearby.

Miss Mary Kerr is visiting in Toronto this week.

Ted Fraser, formerly manager of the Century theatre, now with the medical division of the Royal Canadian Navy, has passed his first examinations at Halifax naval station.

A squadron of R.C.A.F. troops, headed by the R.C.A.F. band paraded in the streets here on Tuesday evening Rifle drill was practised on the march. Such parades always arouse the keenest interest and much admiration among the citizens here.

Harry Bardwell, who returned to Trenton from service with the merchant marine to relieve at his father's restaurant during the vacation season is off to sea again.

It appears from recent reports of calls to the army medical service received by practitioners, that a very considerable responsibility for the good health of the citizen population of town and district will be laid upon the shoulders of the remaining practitioners. The doctors now reported to be on call have cared for quite heavy patient lists.

A softball team from Deseronto will play an exhibition game here, with the Bata team as contenders, on Wednesday evening. Gate receipts will be donated to the local branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

Bruise on Forehead

Mrs. Bessie Brooks, 187 Marmora Street, reported to police that while driving near Wooler that a car driven by Evan Jones, Orland, came off a side road and struck her car. Damage amounted to a smashed radiator and bent fender and steering rod. Mrs. Fred Potts, Trenton, received a bruise on the forehead. Only slight damage was done to the Jones' auto.

Cpl. Gordon Bartlett, R.C.A.F., Trenton, reported to police that he parked his car on Dundas Street and later returning to the car, pulled away from the curb without noticing that a bicycle had been placed on its side in front of the car. Damage was done to the rear wheel of the bicycle.

R. J. Clark, Queen Street, Trenton, reported to police that while driving onto Dundas Street from Queen Street a lady pushing a baby carriage walked into the side of the car. She was knocked to the pavement but assured the driver that she was not injured and without giving her name proceeded on her way.

Service Police, Main Gate, R.C.A.F., called the Trenton police early last evening and requested that a watch be kept for a hit-and-run driver. Arthur Bush, Belleville, had reported that an auto had side-swiped his truck but did not stop. A watch was kept for the car but it was not located. The licence number was obtained and turned over to the authorities for investigation.

Transient Trade Falls Off

The "transient trade" has fallen off during the past two years. Last year, only 163 booked in for a night's lodging at the Trenton police station. Until today for the year 1942 only 123 have turned up for a night's shelter. The majority of these are soldiers on leave and when the thumbing for a ride becomes difficult in the wee hours of the morning they look for a place to lay their heads. There are very few on the "road" now except the odd old-timer.

The regular Tuesday Police Court session was presided over by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd. Lt.-Col. B. C. Donnan was present for the Crown.

Gordon Cooper, Springbrook, appeared on a charge of obtaining board by false pretenses. At first he pleaded not guilty to the charge but later asked the Magistrate to accept his plea of guilty. He was ordered to make restitution of $27 and also assessed costs of $17.50 and on the condition that these be paid was given suspended sentence for three months.

Elwood Cooper, 17, Springbrook, appeared on two charges, one of the theft of a cheque from the Stockley VanCamp Canning factory, the property of Arthur Cooper, the other was a charge of forgery. He was found guilty on his plea on the theft charge and ordered to pay costs amounting to $3.00 and given suspended sentence for one year. On the forgery charge he was found guilty on his plea and sentence was suspended for one year and ordered to report to the Chief Constable twice a month, also ordered to make restitution, pay the costs of the court and sign a bond of $100.

Ernest Archibell on a charge of assaulting his wife was given a suspended sentence for one year and bound over to keep the peace on a $100 bond.

Albert Brooks charged with the theft of a bicycle valued at $25 pleaded guilty to the charge and asked the magistrate for an opportunity to go to work on a farm, stating that he had a job to go to. His case was adjourned for sentence for one month to see if he will go to work.

Evan Jones, Hilton, for causing a disturbance in a cafe was fined $7.50.

For having liquor in his possession not acquired by him under permit cost Joseph Macaulay $100 fine and $8 costs, when he pleaded guilty.

When he imbibed too freely Gilbert Smith was arrested for being intoxicated and paid into court the usual $13 fine and costs.

Fashion Flashes

It doesn't look dark for the autumn, not with all those cheery, bright suits around. Instead of the usual black or brown how about a waist-length basque jacket in dull blueberry velveteen with semi-dirndl skirt in dull purple, worn with white satin sweater blouse.

There's luxury in the new fur-trimmed cloth coats and yet designs show much restraint. A smart model in beige woollen has big sleeves of sable dyed squirrel caught at the wrist and a large bib collar of the fur. Slit pockets stand away from the hipline in modified peg-top line.

Just right for now are those little frocks of satin made with deep squared neckline, easy skirt with self-tie sash and elbow-length sleeves. Nice with simple or dressy accessories.

Pretty Teeth Beauty 'Must'

Ann Neagle has beautiful white teeth

By HELEN FOLLETT

THERE ISN'T one pretty girl in the movies today who would have made the screen grade if she hadn't been blessed with perfect teeth. The smile that disclosed discolored, uncared for teeth has no charm.

Dentists report that attention to the pearly biters is not what it should be. Brushing is not done thoroughly. Professional attention is sought only when pain is present or a tooth is broken.

One of these gentlemen tells me that many women think more of their hats and their shoes than they do of their teeth, spending money for dry goods in a reckless manner, shying away from dentist's bills.

Well, we don't know about that. Maybe he is right.

The rule is to brush after each meal, but that's not always possible or convenient. Neither the morning or nightly grooming should ever be omitted. Sweep the bristles of the brush away from the gums with a rolling motion Don't be too energetic when placing the bristles at the line of the gums. There is such a thing as over treatment which will cause the gums to recede.

Massage Gums

If the gums are pale, dip the finger-tip in a dentifrice and massage them, sending the finger in circles. Rinsing with a salt solution will tone the gums. Keep two brushes on hand so you can always use a dry one. Place them in the sunlight to dry.

Despite the most fastidious care, tartar may form at the bases of the teeth and under the gums. These hard deposits can only be removed by the dentist's little weapons, and that is one reason why you should go to his office every six months. If cavities are present he will find them, do the necessary repair work. In the long run you will be saving money— for more war stamps.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Soldier's Send-Off

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

We've just heard that a friend of ours has enlisted in the Army and that he will be leaving very soon. He's really my mother's second cousin, he lives in our city, and we are all very devoted to him, even though we do not see him very often.

Do you think that we should go to see him, or should we wait for him to telephone us or come to see us? Of course we realize he'll be very busy, and we don't want to intrude What do you advise?

Joan

I'd advise you not to let this important occasion pass without making some gesture that will show your interest and devotion. Things move so fast, after a man has enlisted (or is drafted), and he has so many things to do and people to see, that he very conceivably may not have time to come to see you and your family. But your mother might telephone to his mother, telling her how proud you all are of him, giving the best wishes of all of you, (via his mother), and saying, of course, that you would love to see him before he leaves. What she says in reply will give you the cue as to the possibility of this.

If seeing him isn't possible, I suggest you each write him a warm-hearted note of good wishes, and perhaps send him a gift "from the family".

And later, when you have his address in camp, keep on writing him all the news from home. He'll appreciate your devotion, never fear, even if he doesn't get around to answering often, or at all, or only with brief messages.

Can Brother-in-Law Give in Marriage?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—My fiance and I are planning to get my engagement ring one month before the date of our wedding. Is that too late?

2.—My father lives several hundred miles away, and in case he is unable to attend our church wedding, my only relatives present will be my sister and brother-in-law. Would it be proper to have my brother-in-law give me in marriage?

3.—When should the wedding be announced?

B. E.

1.—No, one month before the wedding is certainly not too late for you to receive your engagement ring. You may either wait until you receive your ring before you announce your engagement, or you may, if you especially wish, announce your engagement before you receive your ring. The fact of your engagement is more important, naturally, than the fact that you have the symbol of your engagement.

2.—Yes, if your father is unable to be present at your wedding, it would be proper for you to ask your brother-in-law to give you in marriage. If you prefer, your brother-in-law might escort you down the aisle, and then, at the proper time in the ceremony, your sister might, somewhat in the sense of being proxy for your father, reply 'I do' to the minister's question as to who gives the bride in marriage.

3.—The wedding should be announced as soon as possible after the ceremony has taken place. The announcement to the newspapers (in the city where you now live, in your home city and in your fiance's home city) should be sent in your father's name. Also, if you send formal marriage announcements, they should be sent in your father's name (in your mothers too, of course, if she is living).

22-Year-Old Confesses Love to Older Man, He Proves Honorable and Understanding

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"It seems to me if I don't tell someone I'll never be able to think straight about anything else. Perhaps I've been a fool again, I may only have been true to something deeper than all the teachings, conventions and taboos by which I had been brought up as a small-town girl in a strict family.

"I'm 23 years old and have been in love before. When I took a war job I was in daily contact with a man fifteen years older than I. I hadn't known him two weeks before I realized how much I loved him.

"When I heard this man was going away overseas there seemed to be some uncontrollable impulse urging me to do the thing I did. Here was I, a girl taught to hide my feelings, bent on doing something my mother would have thought disgraceful. I decided to tell this man how I felt about him. I wrote him a note and asked if he'd come to see me. I picked out an evening when I knew both the girl friends with whom I shared an apartment would be out.

"The man called me up early that evening and asked if it was important for him to see me. I said it was important to me. He asked, 'Something about your job?' I said 'Yes'.

"When he arrived I told him I'd never cared for anyone before in my life. I was so confused about everything that I don't know whether to go back home after he left, stay here or just what to do. Please don't think he did what people might expect. He didn't kiss me or even hold my hand.

"He said: 'Better stay here; you've got to grow up some time. I believe I know how you feel but it's not for me that you care. You're in love with life, with love; I just happened to be the peg you've hung all these wonderful experiences on. I'm almost old enough to be your father. I've been married once; it was a failure, and I don't intend to try it again. Sometime, somewhere you'll meet the right man, and maybe I'll just seem funny to you then'.

"Within two weeks he left. I understood he went overseas. All of a sudden I feel about a million years old. I love him more than ever for being so kind and understanding. But I don't believe I can ever care for anyone else as long as I live.

"Small-Town Girl".

You'll probably not care for anyone else in just the same way. I'm glad the man was so fine. It would have been so easy for him to have made love to you; it would not have meant anything to him and everything to you.

Public Warned Against Use of Contaminated Bottle Droppers

Many persons use certain self-medication as a matter of habit. For example, one group of persons may develop the habit of taking cathartics for constipation. Another may use some sort of tablet to treat colds. One of these habits is to use nose drops for colds and other nasal conditions. However, the use of these self-prescribed nose drops may be dangerous. For example, when oily nose drops are used, some of the oil may get into the lungs and produce a condition known as lipoid pneumonia, which is quite serious.

Drs. John L. Gompertz and Paul Michael, of Oakland, California, have carried out some studies to determine whether or not the nose drops in ordinary dropper bottles may not become contaminated with germs and thus serve as a source for spreading infections. A "dropper bottle" is the ordinary bottle with a dropper hanging submerged in the solution.

What usually happens is that the patient buys a dropper bottle of the solution, uses it to treat his cold, and then puts it in the medicine cabinet. Whenever any other member of the family develops a stuffy nose, the bottle is taken out and the same solution and the same dropper are used. Usually in treating his cold, the patient puts the end of the dropper well up into his nostrils.

In making their studies. Drs. Gompertz and Michael obtained eight unused, regularly prescribed dropper bottles of solution for use in the nose. Cultures were made from these unused bottles and it was found that no germs were present.

Germs were then added to the solutions and it was discovered that the germs would grow therein. Further tests were made by collecting 19 samples of solutions, used by various persons, from many medicine chests. Needless to say many of these bottles had been in use by entire families. All were found to contain various types of terms.

While it is true that many of these nose drops do contain antiseptics, not sufficient antiseptic is present to keep germs from growing, particularly when the bottles are repeatedly contaminated. This may occur because mucus from the nose gets into the bottle. The use of these contaminated dropper bottle solutions is not without some risk of spreading disease.

Nose drops should be employed only as the physician directs. Only sufficient should be purchased to treat one patient, and use by a number of members of the family should be avoided since this may lead to the spread of the disease.

Etiquette When Dining in Public

Manners Show Background

What is correct on this occasion? Should a girl who is dining with a friend invite a passing acquaintance to sit down for a chat?

Etiquette says NO, but her escort may do so if he cares to.

In our picture he is rising to shake hands, as is correct when gentlemen are introduced. It's up to the other man to make his visit brief.

When a woman stops at a table, even briefly, it is correct for men to rise and remain standing until she leaves or is seated.

What if you drop a piece of silver? Correct to leave it for the waiter to pick up. Or if he isn't near, say when he returns: "Will you please give me another fork?"

Does a woman ever order when dining with a man? Should she choose the cheapest dish?

These and many other points of table etiquette are explained in our 32-page booklet. Tells what's correct for formal, informal dining; how to eat tricky foods. Etiquette for dining at restaurants, clubs; buffet party etiquette, also.

A noted foreign correspondent's Far East solution!

LET'S BURN UP THE JAPS!

The fanatical little murderers dread fire in their little paper factories and houses—so high-flying American planes with phosphorous sticks and Molotov cocktails can scare into fits such hordes as are not knocked out at first hand!

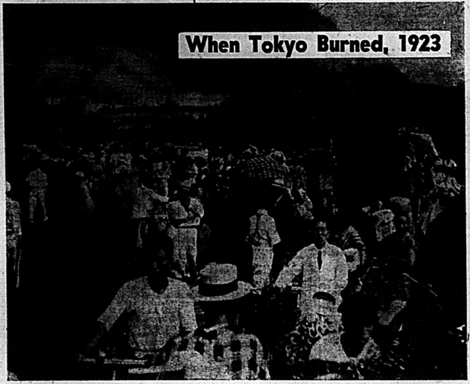
By JAMES R. YOUNG

(Noted foreign correspondent, for 8 years chief of I. N. S. Bureau in Tokyo, until late '40, when he was imprisoned by the Japs, later released.)

THE JAPS can't take it!

The grinning yellow gnomes and Axis back stabbers have learned we can dish out demolitions and incendiaries, with our own Brigadier General Jimmy Doolittle as teacher of the first lesson in his now historic air raid.

For years I have heard people, long resident in Japan, assert the Japanese could stand air raids and bombings in the same way they have withstood earthquakes, tidal waves, typhoons and landslides.



Terror-crazed Japs in Tokyo are shown in this picture fleeing the flames that scourged the country in the disastrous earthquake of 1923. American fire bombs will revive this memory of horror and death. At least 100,000 were killed.

True, the Japs have gone through Oriental hell in many spectacular and harrowing catastrophes.

Mid-April the Japanese radio—Station JOAK—was broadcasting that a reported raid on Tokyo "was again the center of a joke among Japanese nationals." The Nips had the wrong call letters for their Nazi dominated radio!

"The people are pleasantly enjoying quiet, peaceful and delightful Spring days, observing beautiful cherry blossoms and celebrating glorious victories under very bright lights."

Their parroting of Goering's assurances that no foreign plane would ever reach Axis soil backfired, for within a few minutes fires were started in four big Japanese cities and raged for 48 hours before they came under control of Japan's midget fire engine department. Rescue corps reported 4,000 casualties in the first American raid on Japan.

Power houses, warehouses, dock yards, and the great Mitsubishi aircraft plant were demolished in the American raid. Fires were started, greater than any the Japs had experienced in their worst earthquake. Anti-aircraft gun operators were listening to kind words from their government radio. They didn't get into action until the Americans were returning to "Shangri-La."

The Japs just figured it couldn't be done. Their fat, conceited, overstuffed and bemedaled air force chief, Gen. Kenji Doihara (who can't fly a plane) had promised the folks they'd never be visited by foreign flyers. They flew in low. Some people waved to them. Kids threw stones. Angry citizens in other sectors shook their fists.

Japan's mental manipulations, especially among her arrogant, ruthless and vicious militarists, always leap from a premise to a conclusion without allowance for interception or change. Hence the terrific surprise in Japanese calculations when Americans bombed Japan. The Japs were panic-stricken.

The Japanese were dizzy, crazy and frantic. They hadn't seen such speed and daring since the last American aviation feature film was shown in Japan.

I recall one such movie of American aviators operating with Marine landing parties attacking an unidentified foreign country. One scene showed the planes coming back to the carrier. A black strip covered part of the film by order of the censor, to prevent foreign agents from seeing how the landing gear operated. The over-curious Japs in the audience rose from their seats like automatons, trying to figure what secret contraption was being kept from their vision.

What robs a Jap of his ability to impress me is first hand knowledge, acquired through my years of working with, and sometimes against, him. Individually they lack initiative. They are unable to function without very positive leadership. They have exceptions, but, because the run of them have never been permitted, let alone taught, to think, they cannot possess the ability in emergencies to pull out of an unaccustomed depth or situation. The average Jap is a slow thinker. He goes according to a book of rules, and those rules have been memorized.

They are a nation told what to do and how to do it, operate in mass, but scatter like seeds in a monsoon when confronted by a circumstance not in the rules.

In the great quake of 1923 some sections of Japan became areas of smoking, bloody anarchy. The authorities lost control. No one seemed to give orders and all waited, apparently for hours, to receive orders. Pandemonium and slaughter were wreaked on thousands of Koreans and Chinese. The Japs turned savages, inflamed by rumors that the Koreans had started the earthquake. Torture and murder were inflicted on thousands.

The Japs appear lost and confused when they meet aviators or, as at Coral and Midway, gunners, who can outthink them. The inordinate conceit of the Japanese, especially the ruling group and military clans, give way under Doolittle expeditions. They are taught, and propaganda is hammered into them, that they are a superior race, that Japanese inventive genius has produced airplanes, autos, telephones and electrical apparatus.

Japan's millions have been taught air raid defense according to rules. But a rival whizzes in, with tough, accurately trained American flyers, and introduces something new—then the Japanese encounter difficulty in adjusting themselves or rallying from the confusion into which they have been tossed.

They're told by their leaders that if they surrender they'll be killed; if they die in action their spirits automatically move into the Palace with Hirohito's ancestors. Probably the reason for so few Jap prisoners is their fanatic teaching and belief that to be captured means death, which they often inflict on captives of other nations, and the supreme curse of loss of face.

The RAF used eight million pounds of bombs on Rostock, Stuttgart; six million on Cologne and Essen. Similar pounds of incendiaries on Japan would make an island of flame and a shouting, terrified people. Demolition bombs in great quantities are needed for Europe's stone and brick buildings. Japan's giant dockyards and heavy industries would require demolition bombs. Bulk destruction to her mushroomed smokestack factories could be accomplished by three-pound incendiaries and the Molotov cocktail type of bottled gasoline, or effective, cheap explosive bomb.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Military authorities see Japan's mortal fear of American bombers as one of the reasons why Nipponese strategists were determined to try to maintain their foothold on the Aleutian Islands of Attu, Kiska and Aggatu even though the operation cost them many precious ships, sunk or damaged. In addition to being a base for possible Japanese action against Russia the Aleutians are viewed as a possible Jap trump card in the air duel with America. The Japanese might seek to prevent the bombing of their cities by holding over our heads the threat of retaliation from Jap bases in the Aleutians. Upton Close, famed Far East commentator, points out that "there is a distinct possibility that Jap bombers now in the Aleutians will bomb the West Coast, then work inland as far as St. Paul, Detroit and Chicago."

Another possible reason for the enemy occupation of the Aleutian outpost was the Japanese fear that American planes might use them as take-off points for bombing expeditions against Tokyo and other Nipponese centers. The United States Army Air Force was known to have huge flying battleships capable of making such a trip with devastating loads of explosives.

The Japs have not been unaware of the part American bombers have played in Britain's plans for blasting German cities from the map. Recently, British Air Marshal Arthur T. Harris warned the German people that "one American factory alone is already turning out every two hours one four-engined bomber able to carry four tons of bombs to any part of the Reich, and there are scores of such factories in the United States." The Japanese militarists know that not all of the bombers turned out by those factories will be reserved for use over German cities. Some of them will certainly rain death over Nippon.

Japan has the definite promise of no less an authority than Brig. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, former chief of the deadly Flying Tigers, that his newly formed U. S. Army Air Force in China will expand until "Japanese cities are bombed regularly." Chennault has predicted that historians will say the tide of the war turned when the American air force went into action in China. That the Japanese have taken this hard-bitten fighting man at his word is clearly indicated by the frenzied effort they are making to gain control of every air base on China's east coast which might serve as a take-off point for American flying fortresses laden with fire bombs for Tokyo. End Editor's Note.)

The young seven million people in Tokyo and the five million at industrial Osaka will be frenzied when they see flowering cocktail bombs decorating the skies. And wherever they land fire will result.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Nearly half of Japan's heavy industries are clustered in the Osaka Bay section. More than 7,000,000 people are jammed into three cities alone—Osaka, Kobe and Kyoto—and some 5,000,000 of these live and work in buildings of paper and plyboard.

As inflammable as tinder, these crowded industrial cities are made-to-order targets for incendiary bombing, which is the easiest type of air attack. A comparatively small number of long range bombers can fly high above anti-aircraft fire and scatter a shower of flaming incendiaries over a great area.

In a city like Osaka, such an attack would be devastating almost beyond comprehension. Most of Osaka's wood and paper buildings virtually touch each other. A fire in one block would spread with express speed to every block around it. Many of the city's main streets are only fifteen feet wide. Side streets are mere rabbit runs where a man can reach out and touch the buildings on either side of him.

Within the space of a few minutes, a cascade of flaming incendiaries could start a blaze in Osaka, Kobe or Kyoto which all the fire departments in Japan could not bring under control before it had done untold damage.

In Tokyo, the Emperor has a deluxe 50-feet-deep bomb-raid hideout. An armored car stands constantly in front of the palace for a quick getaway, when comes the Yanks. End Editor's Note.)

I have a top notch scheme to devastate Japan. What's wrong with planes carrying loads of phosphorous and sulphur capsules to be dropped at noon time in crowded factory districts during September and early Fall when Japan's heat is intense? On the pavements and hot tile roofs the sun rays would cause the super inflammable granules to ignite!

If we can plant our TNT on Japanese targets with a 20 cent bomb sight, as Doolittle's men did (to avoid any risk of losing the Norden sight), we ought to try sulphur and phosphorous. No other cities in the world would be so susceptible to conflagration from capsules. These would start fires which, feeding on the highly inflammable buildings, would spread so rapidly that the fire-fighters would find themselves helpless.

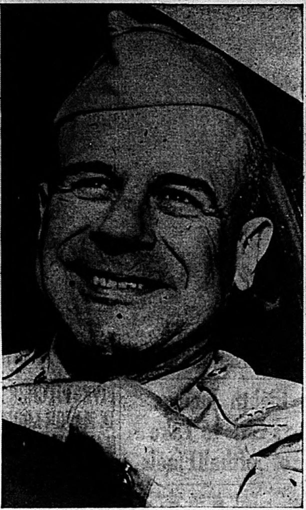
I am convinced, knowing Japan's many internal weaknesses and the hazardous concentration of her war plants, that American planes, now they have set the pattern, will further dislocate and destroy the main source of Emperor Hirohito's strength.

Industries are concentrated on the coast line, most of them less than fifteen miles inland. When an invading plane reaches the coast, the crew has arrived at its objective, with the advantage that unless Japan has scout planes in the air 24 hours a day, attacking planes can be over factories and cities before Japanese planes can take off from their fields. Japanese airfields, about 35 in all, may be bombed out of commission and because of the difficult terrain the Japanese cannot easily move to, or create new fields.

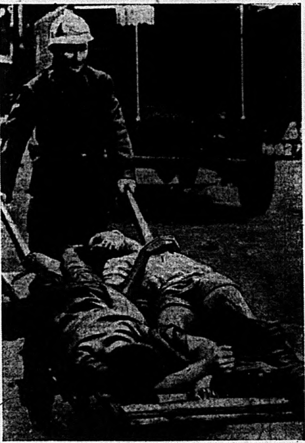
The Japanese have been drilled to work in groups. I've been through several years of Japanese air drills. They are taught to coordinate and operate in teams. But when their formations or rules are broken, they're dead ducks.

For some considerable time, with distance and geography in their favor, they may have numerical superiority. But for a long term pull, Japan is doomed.

My theme song for 1942 is "Deep in the Heart of Tokyo"—And hit back at the Emperor's Palace on the next trip with flowering Molatovs and Sulphur capsules! The Japanese can't take it!



He showed us the way—and gave the Nips something to think about. Brigadier-General Jimmy Doolittle, above, veteran flier, who led his intrepid squadron in the recent American raid on Tokyo. The Yanks took off from "Shangri-La." He'd like again to show how our bombers can blast h—ll out of "Nip" cities.



The Japs can't take it! They screamed and heaped vituperation on the United States for the raid on Tokyo, conveniently forgetting the horror wrought by their bombers in Shanghai in 1938. Above two victims from a street where 1800 died.

He'd Destroy the United States

Wholesale assassinations paved the way for the militarists to grab the reins in Japan. Premier Lt.-Gen. Tojo, above, is head of the military clique. When he took office Japan's attitude toward America changed. Recently he said: "Japan is determined to destroy the U. S. and Great Britain."

Murderous Premier Tojo accepts a "message" from Emperor Hirohito (center) during a review "before Pearl Harbor." The Emperor has a 50-feet deep bomb shelter under his Palace. He has had occasion to use it already.

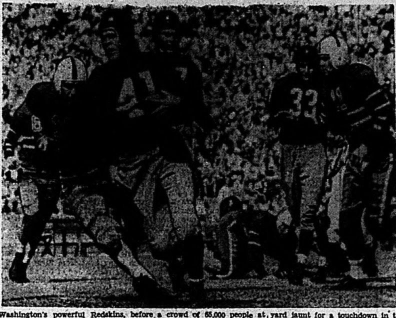
Helping Washington Smother Army Gridders 26 To 7



Washington's powerful Redskins, seasoned professional gridders, had too much sheer weight and passing ability for the western army's all-star footballers when they clashed before a crowd of 65,000 people at Los Angeles, and the Redskins came out on top of a 26-7 score. Here is Dick Todd, speedy Washington backfielder, rambling on an 18-yard jaunt for a touchdown in the second quarter. Homers in Eighth Innings Enable Zellers Girls to Take Third Game of Softball Finals

Only Need Another Win to Cinch Third Title in Succession

SCORE IS 14-12

Trailing by one run going into the last half of the eighth, Chuck Barnett's Zellers' girls won their second straight game from Deacon's AC in the city girls' softball playdowns last evening when home runs by Pete Haslip and Helen Garrow turned the tide in their favor to enable them to eke out a win by a 14-12 margin.

Zellers now lead in their best three in five series by two games to one and can win the city championship for the third year in succession by defeating Deacons on Thursday night. And Barnett's crew of heavy sluggers say they can do it.

For the first two innings last night's contest at the fairgrounds was as good a ball game as the girls have played this season. In the last of the third, however, Zellers went to work on "Stewie" Stewart, who was doing the hurling chores for Deacons, and before the dust had cleared were leading by a 8-0 margin to apparently have the game all sewed up.

In this they reckoned without Deacons as starting the fourth the satin-clad closed the gap by half, when they counted four runs with the aid of Flo Sharpe's homer with the bases loaded. They came back with two runs in the fifth and four more in the sixth to take the lead, while Zellers were held to single counters in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings.

Deacons in Front in 8th

Starting the eighth Deacons were out in front by one lone counter and appeared due for a win but with one mammoth clout Pete Haslip evened the count with a homer. "Pudge" Donovan followed with a single and Helen Garrow added insult to injury with the second homer of the inning.

With Helens' homer the game was terminated abruptly as darkness was creeping over the field and Umpire Bawden halted the pastime with Zellers ahead by a two-run margin.

The score just about indicates the play with hits being very evenly divided as Zellers collected sixteen safeties compared to Deacons' fifteen. In extra bas clouting, however, Zellers had a slight edge with three homers, triples by Norma Boyle and Helen Garrow and a double by Gwen Bennett. Flo Sharpe hit a homer for Deacons with "Stewie" conking out a triple and two singles to aid her pitching effort. Pete Haslip led all hitters of the night getting four for five, including a homer, a double and two singles.

Numerous Errors

Numerous errors entered into the pastime to mount the score with Zellers at times failing to give their hurler, Bessie Doolittle, the best of support. Fielding gems there were however, with Jean Corneal making a nice bare-handed catch of Wilma Clarke's drive in the fifth, while Sword at third for Deacons also played her usual fine game.

Score by innings:

Deacons...... 000 424 20—12 15 2

Zellers .. .. ..008 111 03—14 16 4

Umpires — Bawden, plate and Pointer, bases.

New Football Loop Forming in Ottawa

Ottawa, Sept. 2 (CP)—Cecil Duncan, eastern section junior convener for the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union, said last night an Intermediate Football League is being organized in Ottawa.

He said it will probably comprise an air force team and Ottawa Gladstones or Strathconas, prominent district junior circles, along with possibly two other entries.

Present plans call for special "football night" to inaugurate the new league, with proceeds to the three armed services.

FIVE PITCHERS IN MAJOR LOOPS MAY WIN 20 GAMES

Cooper and Passeau Win 18 With Three Others Close Behind

DODGERS HOLD LEAD

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer

There has been no Bobby Feller around this season, threatening the sacrosanct ranks of baseball's 30-game winners, but apparently the major leagues will have their full quota of 20-game pitchers.

Right now Mort Cooper and Rookie Johnny Beazley of St. Louis Cardinals, Claude Passeau of Chicago Cubs, Ted Hughson of Boston Red Sox and Ernie Bonham of New York Yankees seem almost certain to cross the line that is considered the hall mark of a successful pitcher.

Cooper and Passeau accomplished their 18th victories yesterday. Hughson nailed his the day before, and Beazley and Bonham have 17.

Cooper came through last night against Boston Braves with a 4-3 triumph that kept the Cardinals within the 3 1-2 game margin established by the Dodgers the day before.

He needed a little lift to beat the Braves and this may have inspired him to crack out a pair of singles one of which drove in two of the St. Louis runs. In addition he spaced nine hits, fanned seven and walked none.

Issue Up to Redbirds

Brooklyn had placed the issue squarely up to the Redbirds by winning an afternoon tussle from Pittsburgh Pirates 4-2 on the five-hit hurling of Kirby Highe. It was the 14th triumph for the Dodger righthander, who never before had beaten the Pirates as a starting pitcher. In six seasons in the National League he had lost to Pittsburgh nine times and won just once in a relief assignment.

The Dodgers made 10 hits off two Pittsburgh hurlers,' but had to score their runs one to an inning and three of them involved plays to the plate. The defeat mathematically eliminated the Pirates from the pennant race.

Snap Winning Streak

Passeau's 18th victory was by a 10-5 score that snapped a six-game winning streak of the New York Giants. The veteran Chicago pitcher was rapped for 13 hits and his teammates contributed to the confusion with five errors, but Passeau never let the Giants get out of control.

Cincinnati completed a sweep of its four-game series with the tail-end Phils with a 4-3 achieved in the 11th inning when Frank McCormick singled with the bases loaded. McCormick also had two other hits and drove across the tying run in the ninth.

Washington Senators won the day's only game in the American League in the same fashion as James (Mickey) Vernon singled with the sacks filled in the 10th to nose out Cleveland Indians 4-3. Alex Carrasquel scattered nine hits, but was harassed by three errors and trailed till the seventh when catcher Jake Early homered with one aboard.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By The Associated Press)

Mort Cooper, Cardinals — Kept nine hits spaced and made two singles himself, one of them driving in two runs, to beat Braves for his 18th triumph.

Kirby Higbe, Dodgers —Pitched five-hit ball to beat Pirates.

Frank McCormick, Reds—Singled with bases loaded in 11th for winning run against Phils after knocking home tying run in ninth.

Bill Nicholson, Cubs—Hit his 19th homer with one on to spark six-run rally that whipped Giants.

Mickey Vernon, Senators—Made three hits, one of them single with bases loaded in 10th to score winning run against Indians.

Toronto, Sept. 2. (CP)—One of the more notable effects of the Eastern Rugby Football Union's decision to fold may be a boom in University Football. . . .University of Manitoba is entered in the Winnipeg City League and Ottawa University is a prospect for an Ottawa City League, if formed. . . . McGill may come back in another way. . . Since there has been no word of a Montreal District Football League, McGill sportsmen are considering an extended inter-faculty competition with Saturday afternoon games a possibility.

Universities put the clamps on sport early in the war because it was considered undue emphasis on athletics would hamper progress in training important to wartime. . . . The anti sport factions maintained travelling necessary in inter-collegiate sport took the athletes away from classes too often. . . City Leagues defeat that argument with no travelling necessary and probably less training emphasis than if the University were in competition with outside institutions. . . Most universities have trained wartime football teams during the last two years despite the shortage of intercollegiate competition, so they won't have any trouble getting back to active duty again.

Incidentally:

Pte. Katzumi Inamato is one of the few Japanese in the Canadian army . . . He's stationed at Toronto and fights on occasional boxing cards at nearby Ontario centres. . . .Tommy (Hamilton Spectator) Moore says he couldn't break a bubble with his punching but is a fast, clever infighter.

Oddity:

Leo (Vancouver News-Herald) Nicholson tells this one about a Western International League game between Salem and Spokane: with the score 3-3, Ray Elliott, Salem catcher, tried to score from second on a short single. The throw-in hit him a terrific blow on the head while he was still about 15 feet from home. He took three more steps, collapsed on the plate unconscious with the winning run!

ROYALS LOSE GROUND

(By The Associated Press)

Johnny Babich, ailing right hander has returned to his early-season form and Newark Bears, already favorites to win the International League playoffs, added to their chances of participating in the Little World Series.

Babich, who hasn't tossed a league game since he had an arm operation early this year, allowed only six hits as the Bruins pounded Syracuse Chiefs, 10-1, in the opening game of a double header. It was Babich's seventh triumph as against no defeats.

Behind the brilliant two-hit pitching of Clayton Lambert the Chiefs came back to take the nightcap, 2-0. Lambert struck out six and walked three.

Montreal Royals dropped four percentage points behind the second-place Jersey Giants as they lost to Buffalo Bisons, 5-3 while the Giants split a two-bill with Baltimore Orioles.

The Royals trailed 2-1 until the eighth when pinch-hitter Ed Kobesky smashed his 19th home run of the season with one on. Montreal scored two runs in the ninth but relief pitcher Andy Sierra struck out Gene Moore to end the uprising.

A seventh-inning circuit smash by Bob Lemon gave Baltimore a 4-3 victory in the first game of a bargain bill over Jersey City. The Giants came back to win the second game, 6-3.

It took Toronto Maple Leafs 11 innings to defeat the last-place Rochester Red Wings, 3-2. The Wings were behind, 2-1, with one out in the last of the ninth when Chuck Aleno doubled and Roy Pfleger singled to tie it up. Toronto won in the 11th as Lee Handley walked and scored on Stu Hofferth's two-bagger.

Little Benny's Note Book

Glasses Magee's family came home from the mountains last night, including Glasses, and this morning us fellows were standing around the letter box and Shorty Judge said, Here comes Glasses out of his house now, good night I bet he thinks he's the greatest guy in the world just because he's been up in a few mountains.

Let's leave on we didn't even know he was away, that'll show him how great he is, Sid Hunt said.

Sounding like a swell idea, and Glasses came up trying to look natural, like somebody that was so used to coming —home from the mountains they didn't even give it a 2nd thought, saying, High, fellows. how you been?

Us fellows just keeping on talking and arguing, and after a while Glasses said, I bet you didn't hardly know me with all this sunburn, did you?

Why, have you been out in the sun somewheres? I said, and Glasses said, Why good night there' so much sun up there in the mountains you're libel to get sunstruck if you've got a weak skin.

What mountains? Puds Simkins said, and Skinny Martin said, It's the first we heard about any mountains.

Oh yeah? Glasses said. I guess I just dreamed about them, and I guess I must of just dreamed about bringing you back this mountain dew candy for a souveneer, too, he said.

And he pulled little packages of candy out of his pockets and shoved them right back again after he showed us our different names on them in ink, the result being we all quick told him how swell he looked, and how we thought at first he must be a Indian with all that sunburn, and how lucky he was, and different compliments till he pulled the souveneers out again and handed them around still looking partly insulted.

JAPS INSTITUTE

the fighting at Milne Bay, where a landing at the southeastern tip of New Guinea was broken up last week, were believed to have been heavy.

The communique dismissed developments there in a sentence, saying "scattered jungle fighting of a Guerilla type continues."

Hard Blow to Air Strength

R.B. Leonad, War Correspondent to the Melbourne Herald, wrote today it had become increasingly evident that Allied airmen had delivered a hard blow to Japanese zero strength in New Guinea.

At least 30 enemy fighters were destroyed either in combat or by ground strafing last week, he said, and others probably were destroyed or damaged.

Another feature of communiques and operational reports of the past few days, he said in his analysis, has been the absence of references to "zero" opposition during Allied bombing and strafing expeditions.

He cautioned, however, that no Allied pilot would suggest that the Japanese lacked fighter strength.

There probably has been a temporary shortage of zeros in New Guinea, he went on, but he considered it would be folly to imagine that an Air Force of Japan's strength could not replace them.

It is possible for the Japanese to ferry fighters to New Guinea through a chain of islands.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By FOSTER BARCLAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

With the R.C.A.F. somewhere in England, Sept. 2—(CP)—No one knows better better than P.O. George (Red) Finch of Birtle, Mann., that ignorance is bliss. He learned that the day the Canadians attacked Dieppe.

Returning to his base in a Tiger Moth aircraft early in the morning the genial red-thatched Manitoban lost his way in the mist. Next thing he knew he was over the English Channel heading for France.

He soon got his bearings and reversed his course, but if he hadn't turned when he did he would have landed right in the middle of the opening phases of the great air fighting over the French coast.

"I sure would like to have been there," Red grinned—"But not in my Tiger Moth, no thanks."

Canadian army-co-operation pilots didn't have much time to admire the scenery in their dawn to dusk flights over the Dieppe area, but most of them caught a glimpse of the big show going on beneath them.

Flt. Lt. Jack Amos of Prince Albert, Sask., who has over twice during the day saw little more than French peasonts plowing their fields when he made his first flight soon after dawn, but when he returned in the afternoon smoke was rising over the town of Dieppe and the sound of gunfire was audible above the roar of his motors.

A split head and a black eye were painful souvenirs Flt. Lt. Freddy Clarke of Calgary brought back from Dieppe. The tall westerner who comes originally from the Barbadoes was shot down over the channel and knocked unconscious when he hit the sea.

What happened after that he doesn't know, but he woke up aboard a destroyer and reported into his army co-operation squadron early next morning, several hours after he had been given up for lost.

They sent Clarke off to hospital right away but he was back at the squadron a few hours later.

Another pilot who went to hospital was P.O. R.C. MacQuoid of St. Andrews, N.B.

His plane was badly shot up by flak and when he prepared to land he startled the ground staff by announcing: "Here I come. Get ready. No landing gear. No flaps. No nuthin."

He came in one wheel and skidded along until his Mustang nosed into the ground, the propellor churning up chunks of earth. Then he calmly switched on his radio again and called out: "Ok. Here I am. Come and get me."

AT THE CAPITOL

"Rise and Shine"

Jack Oakie, the All-American chowderhead; George Murphy, the guy who rescues romance from the rumpus; Walter Brenan, a grandpa who romances the field; Linda Darnell the loveliest love interest that ever gave a heart a lift, she sings, too and Milton Berle, a whinnying Seabiscuit, are the fun mad people of Mark Hellinger's "Rise and Shine," the new musical comedy which dances into the Capitol theatre next.

Set on a college campus at the height of the football season "Rise and Shine," has several new Robin and Rainger songs, dances, girls, laughs and fun. And the story is taken from James Thurber's mad, mad autobiograph "My Life and Hard Times."

AT THE BELLE

"Reap The Wild Wind"

Three rousing cheers for Cecil B. DeMille; the only man in Hollywood who could have made "Reap The Wild Wind" the rousing rowdy, resplendent riot of color, adventure and sheer "bigness" that it is. The film, starring Ray Milland, Paulette Goddard and John Wayne is now closing its engagement at the Belle theatre.

"A Great Man's Lady"

Romantic drama played against the vast sweep of our own vast country with the thrills and power that went into its development is headed this way in Paramount's triple-starring film, "The Great Man's Lady," with Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea and Brian Donlevy.

Due to arrive next at the Belle theatre, "The Great Man's Lady" is said to combine the excitement of the highly successful "Union Pacific" in which the three stars appeared together for the first time, and the romantic fireworks of "Ball of Fire." The story covers a span of many years, showing Miss Stanwyck first as a girl of sixteen when she elopes from her staid Philadelphia home with McCrea, a Lochinvar in buckskins, and carrying her through a whirlwind life to the point where the world waits on her doorstep to learn the secret behind "The Great Man's Lady."

Advance reports have it that the picture has more than its share of thrilling moments, and that the three stars top everything they have ever done before—individually and collectively. That ought to make "The Great Man's Lady" one of the outstanding films of the year.

"Pacific Blackout" Timely

As up-to-date as today's headlines, "Pacific Blackout" Paramount's gripping thrill film of murder, sabotage and romance during an air raid is announced as the companion feature attraction. Robert Preston, and Martha O'Driscoll have the leading roles.

A smart musical revue will be exhibited on the same program.

AT THE McCARTHY

Paul Kelly and Fay Wray, principals in the comedy drama "Not A Ladies' Man" now at the McCarthy Theatre in addition to "Sky Devils" featuring Spencer Tracy.

Spencer Tracy featured with Ann Dvorak in the thrilling air drama "Sky Devils" now at the McCarthy Theatre in addition to "Not a Ladies' Man" featuring Paul Kelly.

AT THE McCARTHY

Laughs and thrills in plenty are provided in "Sky Devils" now on the McCarthy Theatre screen. For sheer entertainment value, this mile-a-minute movie of fighting and flying fools is unquestionably tops.

Action, romance, comedy and spectacle, all combined in one story of three American flyers during the World War, played by Spencer Tracy, William Boyd and George Cooper, with abundant heart-interest supplied by Ann Dvorak.

The air-men get into the flying service accidentally, and of course humorously, and their experience in training camps and in air battles over the Western Front, including a run-in with Von Richthofen's flying circus, are as exciting as they are funny.

There is never a dull moment in this thrilling comedy of the air. When you are not laughing uproariously, you are tense with excitement as the film unwinds on the screen at a breathless tempo.

Spencer Tracy in the role of the rough, but romantic, air-man and William Boyd, as the hard-flying two-fisted top-sergeant give excellent performances. They are immense—and so is George Cooper, third of the flying threesome who makes history in the air and on the ground in some of the most amazing exploits ever filmed. "Sky Devils" is one picture that will be enjoyed by every patron attending the McCarthy. Equally as enjoyable is the second feature, Columbia's new comedy-drama "Not A Ladies Man" featuring Paul Kelly, Fay Wray and Douglas Croft. Here, Belleville is entertainment in a two-feature program which you will thoroughly enjoy. Do not miss it.

AT THE BELLE

"Ball of Fire" Barbara Stanwyck has another fiery role in Paramount's "A Great Man's Lady", coming to the Belle Theatre. The film co-stars Miss Stanwyck with Joel McCrea and features Brian Donlevy. "Pacific Blackout" with Robert Preston and Martha O'Driscoll is the added feature attraction.

AT THE CAPITOL

Three's a crowd, but neither Jack Oakie (right) nor George Murphy give and sign of letting the other have the inside track to lovely Linda Darnell's heart. They're all starred in Mark Hellinger's "Rise and Shine," the new 20th Century-Fox hit, which also stars Walter Brennan and Milton Berle, coming to the Capitol Theatre. The added western "Westward Ho!" features the Three Mesquiteers.

Back hops the bunny into the fashion scene but of course he is known as "lapin". A nice coat is a boxy model of beige caramel lapin made with deep patch pockets and double-breasted fastening.

Plenty of work apparent in those new manipulated felt hats. A wonderful model has a high tongue-shaped crown with intricately tucked back section and a brim that turns up softly in back. Pale beige felt with a black veil.

There never has been.. there may never again be.. a picture like..

UNCERTAIN DESTINY

CHAPTER 16
Success!

Linda, meeting Steven's father, saw a splendid replica of Steve. Older—yes, with hair prematurely white, but their features were alike. The same bronzed skin, the same piercing, blue eyes and rugged, handsome faces. Father and son—splendid examples of manhood.

"So you are Steven's wife", Marshall Baridon said gently, taking her hand and looking deep into her eyes. "Son, I'm not disappointed in your taste after all".

So he had not approved of Brenda! It filled Linda with sudden strange happiness, an emotion so perplexing that she could not understand it.

"I've been half afraid to meet you", she confessed shyly, "because I wondered what you might think of our hasty marriage".

"I have the utmost respect for my son's decisions", the father answered soberly. "Linda, my dear, it makes me very happy to have you as a daughter-in-law".

In due time Mary and her sweetheart, Phillip Ross, appeared, there were caresses and compliments, and warm greetings that made tears rise in Linda's eyes. Never had she seen such a happy family as this.

The weeks seemed to fly by during Marshall Baridon's stay. Mary came to the farm to stay in order to perfect her riding for the eastern horseshows and the house was filled with happiness and laughter once again. Phillip was a constant visitor, and there were picnics, hours spent in riding, long lazy evenings on the veranda. It was the most peaceful time in Linda's life.

She had never known people like the Baridon's before luxury-loving, calm, almost stoic in their views toward life, and with an abundance of live and faith in one another. Yet all too soon the calm was to pass, and Linda would be plunged once more in a whirlpool of events—events that were even then fast approaching.

A rough draft of Steven's book had been turned over to a literary agent in New York City, and Linda received a sheath of reader's comments on the story which proved beyond doubt that the book would be a best seller.

Early in June, two major events took place. Steve flew east with the final draft of his book and sold it for a surprisingly large sum of money to a well-known publisher, and Mary Baridon was married at Hillsacres.

Watching the girl's radiant face as she took her marriage vows, Linda could not help remembering her own wedding. Mary was wed in the flower-filled living-room, surrounded by friends and her adoring father and brother. Linda's wedding had been marked by tears and sadness. Mary faced a happy future, secure in her husband's love. Linda had buried herself at Hillsacres —to forget.

Guests at the wedding and the brief reception were friends of Mary and her proud, new husband. No one mentioned Steve's hasty marriage.

"I invited Diane", Mary said just before they left for their honeymoon, "and she sent us a lovely wedding present, but refused to come. I wonder why?"

Mention of Diane's name reopened the old hurt in Linda's heart. That part of her life had been a closed book at Hillsacres, and not once had Steve mentioned the artist's name since their marriage. Still, Linda knew he called on Diane on his infrequent trips into Chicago.

"We—we had a little quarrel", Linda said hesitantly because Mary obviously expected an explanation. "Oh, it wasn't anything, really, but she probably felt she might not be welcome here.

"You've been wonderful to us," Mary said, with tears in her eyes. "Phillip and I owe you both a debt of gratitude".

"We're very happy you chose to be married here", Linda assured her. "I hope you will be as happy as—" Linda broke off suddenly. She had started, unconsciously, to say "—as we". But had this been happiness? And what about Steve? To be sure, he never complained, and yet—Linda fancied she had noticed a strange, brooding expression on his face of late, an expression he quickly lost when she glanced at him, and she wondered. . . . . .

"I hope we'll be as happy as you two", Phillip said, and then they were gone with shouted goodbyes and the noisy clatter of tin cans and old shoes, and a sprinkle of gaily flung rice.

When the last wedding guest had gone and twilight was settling over the farm, Linda sank wearily into a chair in the peaceful library. After the confusion of the past few weeks—Mary had driven out almost daily to go over lists of guests and make all the arrangements for her wedding—it was good to relax in the seclusion of the house, to think back over the kaleidoscope of events that had marked her debut in Chicago. Greg and Diane and all her bitterness seemed very petty now, in view of the wealth of contentment she had come to know at Hillsacres.

Linda started as Steve entered the room, wearing his beloved jodhpurs and boots. "You don't mind if I join?" he asked.

Linda shook her head. "It's so peaceful here after that crowd and the excitement this afternoon. I had to get away to collect my thoughts".

Steve chuckled. Strange, Linda thought vaguely, how pleasant his laugh sounded, so warm and friendly as though they shared a very pleasant secret.

"My little sister tires you?"

Linda shook her head. "Im very fond of Mary, and of you, too, Steve".

Her face was turned to the window so Linda did not see the sudden expression on his face, the way his eyes lighted, his fingers clenched the pipe stem. If she had seen the eagerness written on his features, Linda might not have gone on:

"You've been almost like a brother Steve. I never had a brother, you know".

"Very".

"We'll be quite wealthy now. You can have anything you want Furs, jewels, a car—just name it and it's yours".

Name it and it's yours! . . . Linda smiled sardonically. In the next few weeks, as Steve's book reached unbelievable heights of popularity, Linda mulled over those words. Every material thing it was possible to possess was Linda's. Steve surrounded her with luxuries, the things Linda Phillips of Prairievale had yearned to possess. Now they failed to impress her. She accepted these gifts graciously. That was all.

And then, one morning, Linda awoke to the realization that, she must make up her difference with Diane. For a long time she lay motionless in her bed, longing to reach for the ivory telephone, yet half-afraid to hear her old friend's voice on the instrument.

The last few weeks had been endless to Linda. At first it had been fun to watch the money fairly pour in, to hear from Steve's publisher how famous his book was proving to be. It had been thrilling to shop with Mary for smart, expensive clothes, to lunch in fashionable restaurants without giving a thought to the price. But the newness had worn off and Mary had been forced temporarily to desert her husband to take part in a society horseshow in the East.

It had been hard, too, for Linda to keep up the pretense of disliking Diane Frazier. So much had occurred since Linda left Diane's apartment that November night, it was hard to connect that sobbing, hysterical girl with the now bored and unhappy wife of Steve Baridon.

At last she seized the telephone and called Diane's studio, her breath quickening with expectation. Then, after a long, uncertain moment, Diane's voice came over the wire.

"This is Miss Frazier speaking".

"Diane—this is Linda. Linda—Baridon".

"Oh". Did she imagine uncertainty in Diane's tone? "Is something wrong, Linda?"

Linda laughed nervously. "No, not exactly. That is—" She was suddenly confused by the artist's direct question. "I—I must see you. It's very important".

There! She had said the very thing she never expected to say, and Diane's voice grew warmer. "We could have luncheon together at one o'clock tomorrow if it's convenient for you".

"N—Not until tomorrow?" Wistfully.

Diane hesitated momentarily. "I had made tentative plans, but I think I can break them. They really weren't important".

"Oh, I'm so glad," Linda cried impulsively. "I can drive to Chicago in two hours. Where shall I meet you?"

Canadians Asked To Eat up Growing Stock of Turkeys

Ottawa, Sept. 2 (CP)—Agriculture Department officials suggested today that Canadians should think of turkeys in association with more than their Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners and help eat up a rising stock of turkey meat in cold storage.

Turkeys in store Aug. 1 totalled 3,456,000 pounds, against 1,670,000 on the same date last year, with the fall crop of birds due to move in a few weeks.

Officials said an increase in all kinds of poultry meat was a result of the enlarged production of eggs for United Kingdom consumption. It was hoped to export 45,000,000 dozen eggs before the close of the year and this has meant a major increase in Canadian flocks.

In enlarging the flocks, millions of male birds have to be culled and sold for the table while the hens are kept for egg production. The lord of the barnyard and the turkey are therefore companions in misery in that they are not required for the war effort apart from gracing the dinner table.

Consumer demand has been strong, with enlarged payrolls enabling more Canadians to enjoy chicken and turkey dinners, officials said. Surplus supplies of fowl have been moving into storage, while augmented purchasing by the United States had been in evidence.

"Further increases in Canadian purchases of turkeys would help to solve what has been one of the greatest problems in poultry marketing in the present year," an official said.

STOP PRODUCTIION OF ARTICLES SOON

Range is from Silos and Score Boards to Crochet Hooks—Will Save Metals

Ottawa, Sept. 2 (CP).—Under an order issued today by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, more than 400 articles ranging from silos and score boards to paper clips and crochet hooks were added to the list of products for which no steel, copper or any metal other than gold or silver may be used after the end of this month.

The order, announced by D. P. Cruikshank, co-ordinator of the metals administration of the board, is designed to conserve supplies of metals vital to war work.

It was supplemented by a further schedule naming approximately 50 manufactured items in which no copper may be used after the end of September. Included in the latter category are weather stripping and insulation, lamp shades, cooking and table utensils, and lighting fixtures except for the parts necessary to conduct electricity.

Two Previous Lists.

Two previous lists banning the use of all metals or alloys except gold and silver have been issued by Mr. Cruikshank, with the manufacture of approximately 200 articles affected.

Similar orders have been issued in the United States where prime consideration has been given to the conversion of large existing plants to war production, the board announced. In Canada emphasis has been placed on the conservation of metals, with skilled labor and conversion factors receiving next consideration.

The board's statement added: "Prohibition of the use of any metal except gold or silver will virtually end production of some of the listed articles. How many will continue to be made of alternative products such as wood, paper, plastics, cement, glass or other materials remains to be seen, but extensive experimentation with substitutes has already gone forward both in Canada and the United States. Some alternative products are already on the market."

The order provides that fittings, joining hardware, reinforcing strips and struts of metal may still be used in the manufacture of any of the banned articles.

Australians Soon To Go Without Beef Two Days Weekly

Canberra, Sept. 2 (AAP)—Commerce Minister William J. Scully announced today that Australians would soon be compelled to go without beef two days weekly because beef is urgently needed for the armed forces. Increased consumption of mutton and lamb was suggested.

COUNCIL DECIDES TO ASK FOR RESIGNATION

Port Hope, Ont., Sept. 2—CP)—Port Hope town council, at a special meeting here last night, resolved to ask Chief of Police Thomas Murphy to tender his resignation, effective Sept. 15.

The decision followed investigations into police administration by the police committee which reported Chief Murphy had not filled his position to the best interests of the community.

Skill, Gallantry and Devotion To Duty of Canadian Officers Inspires Army Says Munro

Toronto, Sept. 2 (CP)—The skill, gallantry and devotion to duty of Canadian officers in the Battle of Dieppe "has inspired the whole army", Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent last night told relatives and friends of Toronto men who fought in the raid.

"The confidence these officers gave the men by their leadership at Dieppe is a priceless asset", said Munro in a radio address arranged by the three Toronto daily newspapers and carried by three Toronto stations.

The first of the men in the raid to return to this continent, Munro devoted the main part of his address to the description of the Toronto Royals in action at Puits, a mile from Dieppe.

In summing up the value of the action he said "the Canadian attack brought the German air force in Western Europe off the ground and the R.C.A.F. and the R.A.F. got their claws into it and tore it apart".

He said "this will have tremendous effect in future operations in the west . . . ."

Difficult Operations

Although the raid was "one of the most difficult operations of the war. . . The large force was assembled, dispatched and reached its destination, proving that planning and staff work were of the highest order".

"Anyone in the raid will give full marks to the Royal Air Force, the Royal Canadian Air Force and the Americans who were flying there, but they never forget the navy either", said Munro. "It was the Navy—and remember there were a number of Canadian Naval officers and ratings on the raid—it was the navy that got the Canadians to the right beaches at the right time and re-embarked the force that came off".

The Canadian casualties were high "but don't think the Germans had an easy time", he continued explaining that the best military opinion in the Canadian camps estimated 3,000 Germans killed and wounded.

THE WORLD TODAY

By DE WITT MacKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Nazi Field Marshal Rommel's attack against the British army in the Egyptian desert bears the earmarks of being the big show for which we've been waiting—an all-out German effort to make quick conquest of Egypt and the Suez Canal.

This action is part of Hitler's grand strategy for over-running the Caucasus and the Middle East. He is placing wholesale dependence on this vast operation to win him the war.

Rommel's drive is inaugurated at the peak of the crisis in his master's battle in southwestern Russia. It comes at the critical moment when Stalingrad is in grave danger, and the Nazi chief is threatening to break through into the lower Caucasus. Thus we have a classic example of Nazi coordination on a big scale.

If Rommel can over-run Egypt, capturing the great naval base of Alexandria, Port Said and the canal, he will pretty well have nullified the effectiveness of the British fleet in the eastern Mediterranean. This will render the whole Middle East vulnerable to attack.

Hopes to Crack Red Line

Meantime Hitler hopes to capture Stalingrad and crack the Red line which now bars him from a drive southward through the Caucasus to the northern border of the Middle East. Should he succeed, he and his henchmen would be in position to make an assault from both east and west on the zone compromising Palestine, Syria, Iran and Iraq—a nutcracker movement.

And it's important to note that this latter phase of the plan could be carried out after winter had largely stopped fighting on the Russian front north of the Caucasus. The winter isn't severe in the southern Caucasus, and military operations both there and in the Middle East would be quite feasible.

With this background it's obvious the Allies must stop both Rommel in Egypt and his boss in the northern Caucasus. It would be a catastrophe difficult to estimate if this Hitlerian scheme should succeed.

It's a dangerous moment for the Allies, but taking the position as a whole there's no reason to despair over our chances of dealing with it adequately.

We have no details of the strength of the forces opposing each other on the drifting sands of the Sahara. We do know that both sides have received considerable reinforcements since the fighting died down the first of July and it looks like a fight to the finish.

Reason is Clear

Rommel's reason for attacking the British forces on their left flank just above the great Qattara Depression (a huge sink in the desert) is clear. The crafty general's first purpose is to escape from the confinement in which the two armies are held on the narrow front between the Mediterranean Sea on the north and the Depression on the south. He wants the wide open spaces where he can bring his tank forces into full play.

The British forces are holding the sea coast in strength; the centre of the British line was too strong for a direct frontal attack, especially since it would be unwise to risk tanks against fixed artillery. So Rommel hit on the south, hoping to turn the British flank and open a road for himself to the east.

Storm Season End Presages Renewal Of Border Fight

By PRESTON GROVER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Bombay, Sept. 2 —(AP)— The Monsoon has passed—so the Hindus have signalled with their traditional ceremony of casting coconuts upon the ocean—and that means that the long-awaited battle for India may be close at hand.

Along the border, the heavy rains continue, but they are abating in fierceness and soon the only question will be whether the Japanese or the Anglo-American forces drive home the first blow.

The combination of this passing of the Monsoon and the growing impact of Mohandas Gandhi's campaign of passive resistance proves a strange pincer movement that cannot be ignored. Unless Gandhi and the All-India Congress are persuaded to call off their bid for immediate independence, the British and American forces are confronted with the job of campaigning against the Japanese in Burma with a part of the population at their backs non-co-operative, if not definitely unfriendly.

Gandhi asserted before his arrest that unless Britain gained Indian confidence by an immediate grant of independence, a large part of India would be passive, if not actually hostile to the defending forces.

Supplies Pouring In

Despite necessary strengthening of the forces in Egypt, supplies continue to roll into India from Britain and America, including tanks and planes. The numerical strength of India's defences cannot be disclosed but one thing is certain:

While the reorganization of British commands in Egypt and the Middle East left to Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell the sole job of conducting the Burma frontier operations, these steps did not abate his problem of dealing with a local population which is keeping a considerable number of his soldiers busy.

The whole story cannot now be told but India's position has more flaws than it had a year ago. Nevertheless the police are taking comfort from the quiet conditions in the cities. Bombay has lifted its all-night curfew. From villages not connected with the outside world, there still come reports, however, of riotings and demonstrations such as disappeared from the cities when the government drove the Congress campaign "underground."

Britain Considers Nazi Statement

London, Sept. 2 (CP)—British officials took under immediate consideration today a German announcement that British prisoners taken at Dieppe would be handcuffed unless the government withdrew an order which the Nazi High Command claimed directed the manacling of German prisoners.

Official comment was lacking, but it was reiterated unofficially that Britain always has scrupulously obeyed the Geneva convention concerning treatment of war prisoners

No Alteration In Foreign Policy Says Premier Tojo

Tokyo, (From Japanese Broadcasts), Sept. 2. (AP)—A Domei broadcast quoted Premier Hideki Tojo today as declaring his assumption of the Foreign Ministry, vacated by the resignation yesterday of Shigenori Togo, "will not result in any way in an alteration of Japan's foreign policy".

(The resignation of Togo, who was regarded as adverse to Japanese hostilities against Russia, and Gen. Tojo's decision to take the foreign portfolio, has been wide interpreted outside Japan as presaging possibly a Japanese attack on Siberia.)

The resignation of Harohito Nishi, Togo's deputy, also was announced today. His successor is Teruichi Yamamoto, chief of the Foreign Office's East Asia Bureau.

Important Order Dealing With Newsprint Trade To Be Drafted Shortly

Ottawa, Sept. 2 —(CP)— An important order dealing with the newsprint industry has been drafted by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board and will be issued shortly, it was learned.

The order will deal with requirements of the industry in respect to man-power, Hydro-electric power and materials, it was understood, but board officials would say only that some statement on newsprint might be expected "shortly."

The order will probably be signed by R. L. Weldon of Montreal, newsprint administrator of the board, who has just succeeded Charles Vining of Montreal. Mr. Vining last week was appointed to head government information service activities. The needs of the industry had been studied by Mr. Vining and it was anticipated by informed sources that the order to be issued by the board would be the result of consultation between the old and the new administrators, and would have the approval of the Prices Board as a whole.

The industry has been affected by the increased demands of war industry and the fighting services for men, power and materials, and it was revealed recently that production of Thorold, Ont., newsprint plants would probably be affected by orders reducing the power supplies available to them.

The prospect was seen that some of the Thorold newsprint orders might be taken over by Lakehead Mills where the demand on power supplies for war industries had not been so severe.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 2 (CP)—Industrials and base metals were weak and golds moderately strong on Toronto exchange today.

Weak spots in industrials included Imperial Oil, Distillers-Seagrams and Ford A. In golds prices were up moderately for Hollinger, Upper Canada and Reno and a bit weak for Lake Shore.

Base metals record few changes. Ontario Nickel was stronger by 1-4 at 13 1-2 and Pend Oreille was down 5 cents to 87. Davies Pete and British-Dominion were slightly weaker western oils.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 2. (AP)— The stock market continued its narrow and meaningless price drift today as all Street concentrated attention on the critical phases of the war and tax legislation proposals.

Speculative inertia held volume around the low levels of recent sessions. Steels, Motors and Aircrafts, usually looked to for leadership, provided no stimulation, but a few industrial specialties recorded moderate gains. Minor advances and losses were about evenly distributed near the fourth hour.

Among stocks favored at intervals were Johns-Manville, U.S. Gypsum, Sears Roebuck, Du Pont and General Electric. Eastman Kodak rose better than a point on small transfers.

In the laggard division a good part of the time were Bethlehem Steel, General Motors, Douglas, United Aircraft and American Can.

In the Canadian group Dome Mines picked up 1-4. Canadian Pacific and Canada 4s were unchanged. Hiram Walker dropped a fraction.

Bonds were improved in spots and commodities generally lower.

LOST AND CHARGE FOLLOWS

Geneva, Ill., Sept. 2 — (AP) — Harry (Slim) Holze, charged with operating a gambling device, testified that Fritz Burkwist, a Kane County supervisor, visited his tavern, played a slot machine and lost, then got out a warrant. Holze paid a $100 fine and costs and then socked Burkwist on the chin. Burkwist got another warrant, charging Holze with disorderly conduct. Holze grinned as he paid that fine, $1.

GUARD AGAINST

ed police they gave what spectators described as a Nazi salute. Police broke up the procession, but the women reassembled and continued the march.

While the I.R.A. sympathizers gathered on one side of the street, another crowd gathered on the opposite side and sang the British anthem and "There'll Always Be an England."

The Duke of Abercorn, governor of northern Ireland, refused a final plea to reprieve Williams last night and said "the law must take its course."

Five other Belfast men, convicted with Williams for the slaying of the policeman last Easter, had been granted leniency. Williams took full responsibility for the shooting.

The order making Belfast out of bounds for United States troops was issued after a police statement than an I.R.A. manifesto made it plain "this illegal organization has been preparing for attacks on the armed forces of the crown and the United forces stationed in northern Ireland."

The munitions dump found Sunday was said to contain enough explosives to blow up half of Belfast. A young man, reported to be a prominent member of the I.R.A., was killed in defending the dump. He was identified today as Gerald O'Gallaghan, 19, of Belfast. A second cache was found at a neighboring farm.

Some quarters suggested that Germans who have freedom of movement across the border in neutral Erie had helped accumulate the explosives and weapons. Officials said, however, none of the arms was of German origin.

Dublin, Sept. 2 (CP)—All shops and business offices were closed from 11 a.m. to noon today and services were held in a number of churches for Thomas Williams, member of the outlawed Irish Republican Army executed in Belfast for the murder of a policeman. Flags on public buildings were at half mast.

R. A. F AND U. S.

Backing up his assault on the British lines near El Himeimat at the southern end of the Alamein line with an estimated 500 to 600 tanks, Rommel probed the Allied positions initially for a soft spot which might open a road to the Nile.

One of his spearheads was reported to have advanced eight miles through the dangerous Allied mine fields and one of the worst dust storms of the war.

The main column of Nazi tanks turned north after striking eastward near El Himeimat and a smaller column branched off to the south reports from the front said.

Lt.-Gen. B. L. Montgomery, new commander of the 8th army, apparently was holding back his main tank force, which some observers said probably outnumbered that of Rommel. But Allied guns blasted away at the Axis tanks and from the air, British, South African and American fliers hounded them despite the dust and bad weather.

Bombers attacked the Axis airfields and communications in the rear and one bomber force on Monday struck at a concentration of 2,000 motor vehicles and tank carriers.

Some military observers said Rommel was forced to strike now because Allied reinforcements were piling up faster than his own, which were cut down by ceaseless aerial and naval attacks.

But there was little official information on the course of the struggle, notable because it marked the first appearance of United States land forces beside their Allies in Egypt.

Medium bombers of the United States 12th bombardment group and heavy bombers of the 98th bomber group participated in the attacks on the Axis rear positions and supply depots and fighter planes of the 57th fight group were in the thick of the fight over the battlefield, breaking up German dive-bomber formations.

It was announced here that in spite of the scope of air operations Monday not one Allied pilot yas lost.

Direction of Battle Unclear

Marshal Erwin Rommel had concentrated the German armor in the south and penetrated the low desert land between the El Ruweisat ridge in the north centre and the 600-foot height of El Heimeimat to the south near teh Qattara depression.

The direction of battle still was unclear but it appeared that the German tactician hoped to outflank the British forces along the El Ruweisat Ridge which roughly parallels the Mediterranean at right angles to the El Alamein line.

The main battle now is engaged in this "Valley" which is studded with British mines.

The opposing forces tend to face each other north and south rather than east and west, through Rommel's spearhead had made some progress directly to the east.

This eastward thrust has not yet reached alarming proportions.

Desert Churned Up

Dust storms, made denser by the tanks and vehicles churning on the loose desert sands, blew spasmodically over the battlefield and hampered Allied air support, which nevertheless was strong from dawn to dusk.

British, South African and United States Air squadrons were active.

By mid-day yesterday, seven separate bomber formations with large fighter escorts had scored important successes against the attacking enemy.

VON BOCK'S

The Moscow radio said the Russians had regained a Cossack village on the right bank of the Don and were "grinding down" the foe.

The Soviet information bureau said no material changes took place on other fronts yesterday, but disclosed a further Russian withdrawal in the western Caucasus south of Krasnodar under the pressure of numerically-superior German detachments.

3 Axis Patrol Launches Sunk

Perhaps referring to Black Sea fighting correlated with this action the information bureau said Soviet airmen had sunk three Axis patrol launches Monday.

"In the Mozdok area our units fighting for a river crossing destroyed 12 pontoon bridges and annihilated more than 200 German officers and men," it was announced.

The river—not officially identified—apparently was the Terek, which flows eastward from the central Caucasus past the rich Grozny oil fields to the Caspian Sea.

A German infantry regiment which counter attacked behind a screen of 40 tanks was reported repulsed on the central front, where Russian shock troops of Gen. Gregory Zhukov have rooted out many invasion fortifications in the Rzhev-Vyazma salient.

"Four hundred dead remained on the field," the communique said. "Five German tanks were destroyed and six damaged."

A Leningrad front guerilla detachment was declared to have raided Finnish communications and slain about 750 soldiers of frontier guard units and punitive expeditions on a march of nearly 450 miles through marshes and forests.

Hitler Knows Crisis at Hand In Russia.

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Military and political developments from Egypt to Tokyo indicate that Hitler knows a crisis is at hand for him in Russia.

Another Russian winter is only weeks away. And so far as weather portents can be assessed in a world so topsy-turvy with war that even the weather is a military secret, an even worse Russian winter than the last is in prospect. Hitler, in calling upon the Germans for new sacrifices, he warned them of another racking war winter ahead but has sought to brighten the prospects with assurances that victory lies just beyond it.

As this is written there seems small doubt that the Axis master has launched his final effort to smash Russia or render her impotent before that Russian winter is upon him. More than his flair for showmanship dictated the orders that sent Nazi-Fascist forces in Egypt lunging forward again as the fourth year of the war opened. It must be more than mere coincidence that a Tokyo War Cabinet shake-up on that date ousted the negotiator of the flimsy Russo-Japanese non-Aggression Pact. Hitler appears beckoning his Nipponese accomplice to the victory feast in Russia that he has foretold.

The Togo resignation as Japanese Foreign Minister, looks like the most ominus indication to date that, at Berlin's bidding, Japan is about to strike at Russia. As Japanese Ambassador to Moscow, Togo negotiated the non-Aggression Pact which paved the way for Pearl Harbor. He was rewarded with the Cabinet portfolio he has now relinquished, probably as a personal face-saving preparation for Japanese violation of the pact.

That Cabinet upset follows a startling Nipponese retreat in China. All in all, Japan seems preparing for an attack on Russia, timed to abet Hitler in his effort to erase Russia as a threat before winter comes or Anglo-American forces in the west are sufficiently rallied and equipped for a full-scale second-front effort.

In view of all this, Stalingrad, the Russian arsenal city on the lower Volga, becomes more than a local Nazi objective. It well may be that Japanese commitments to Hitler to attack Siberia turn upon German success in capturing Stalingrad promptly, cutting Russia off from the oil of the Baku field and the Caspian-Iran-Iraq Persian Gulf supply route.

The new Nazi-Fascist attack on British lines in Egypt links up with that conception of Axis strategy. London military observers picture it as a desperate effort to break through to Alexandria or to Cairo before British and American reinforcements in Egypt attain the strength to stage a smashing counter-offensive.

In striking at the south flank of the British defense line, where it rests on the Qattara depression, the Nazi master of desert warfare, Rommel, is obviously endeavoring to regain freedom of movement. His genius has shown itself in far-ranging and perfectly co-ordinated flanking sweeps by tank fleets. The chance for that is denied him on the narrow front on which he was brought to a stand two months ago seventy miles from Alexandria.

Hope runs high in London that the reorganized British 8th Army not only can hold its ground, but, once Rommel has been halted, turn upon him savagely. It seems obvious, however, that if it does not hold that vital gateways to Alexandria securely, British 9th Army dispositions in Syria, Iran and Iraq must be revised to bolster the Egyptian front. Only from that area could troops and equipment be shifted quickly to meet the threat. That, too, at the expense of whatever perparations are in the making in the Middle East to help Russia hold the Baku oil fields.

Brothers From Saskatchewan Meet In London

Some one once said that if you stand in London's Trafalgar Square long enough you are bound to meet someone you know. Well, the Myers brothers from Saskatchewan, Canada, believe that. It was in Trafalgar Square that Harold encountered brother Alfred by the merest chance. While they were talking they saw another Canadian soldier go by on a bus. They hailed him. It was brother Phil. Arm-in-arm, the three brothers went into a bar to celebrate the reunion. Who do you think joined them at the bar? Yes, the fourth brother, Ed. Above are the brothers after the unusual reunion. LEFT to RIGHT, Harold, Phil, Alf and Ed.

HERE I WAS ON "OLD FAITHFUL"

by WALLACE REYBURN

Wallace Reyburn, war correspondent for the Montreal Standard, spent six and a half hours ashore with Canadian troops at Dieppe. The Regiment he went in with was the first to land and last to leave. Today's war correspondents aren't satisfied to write their despatches from behind lines. They get right in there with the fighting men and share their hazards. Reyburn, who was injured by shrapnel, had to swim out with men to the landing-craft under a barrage of fire which the Germans were concentrating on the shore line. The first barge he clambered onto sank. He swam to another only to find when he got into it that it was overloaded. A ship eventually took them off and out to a destroyer lying a mile or so off shore.

London, Eng. (By Cable)—It was one o'clock in the morning and I'd just come back from Dieppe!

You've heard people describe to you "the most wonderful drive I ever had in my life". Maybe it was across Rockies or through Grand Canyon or just along Lakeshore Boulevard with a gale pounding huge waves up on to the roadway. But now I know definitely what is the most wonderful drive I ever had. There wasn't any beautiful scenery on this trip. It was through grimy docks of a South of England port!

My swim out from the beach with the Canadians had left me clad only in a pair of underpants, army boots and blanket which the ship's steward had wrapped round me. The press liason officer met me at the gangplank as I came off and said "I've got a room for you at the hotel, the car's ready". We climbed into the press car and joined a huge convoy of army trucks taking Canadian troops out to their billets. I remember stretching back in my seat, lighting up a cigarette and feeling a surge of relief at being back on solid ground again.

I'd ridden in this Chev. many times before on interminable jaunts among troops in England, collecting material for articles on their training that led up to their grand showing at Dieppe

Out there on the beaches and in the streets of Dieppe there had been moments when you wondered whether you would ever come through it alive and be back among old familiar things again.

But here I was on "Old Faithful" as we call her, once more, and was I glad to be there!

● This personal despatch from Wallace Reyburn inspires General Motors to pay its humble tribute to the fighting men of the Dominion who gave their utmost at Dieppe! Such service as theirs cannot be emulated except in the very battle-smoke. But they were, and must be, supported, and General Motors of Canada—proud that the war equipment from its factories is to be found on every fighting front—pledges itself to produce that equipment to the last resource of its men and machines.

Crews Report Large Fires and Thick Pall Of Smoke Up To 8,000 Feet

8 BOMBERS MISSING

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 3 —(CP Cable— Canadian crews in a strong bomber force which struck at Karlsruhe during the night reported on their return from the important German transport centre that extensive fires were burning in the city, raided in clear weather and bright moonlight.

"The whole town was ripping," said Sergt.-Pilot Bill Duncan of Midland, Ont., captain of a Halifax. "It was really blazing. We went in over the target, circled around, bombed and came out. A lot of fires were going and as we left the fires were joining in one big glow. We could see them from 100 miles on the way home."

Duncan has four fellow Canadians in his crew, Sergt. Peter Kucheryk, Toronto, mid-upper gunner; Sergt. Jim Peocock, London, Ont., flight engineer; Sergt. Francis Leo Cunningham, North Battleford, Sask., rear-gunner, and Sergt. Alec Land of Portage la Prairie, Man., bomb-aimer. The raid was their second operation as a crew and it was also Duncan's second as a captain.

Heavy Flak Reported

Heavy flak was reported by some crews and one Halifax was hit in several places. Two pieces of shrapnel punctured the tire of the starboard landing wheel but Flt. Sergt. Charles W. Palmer of Dundalk, Ont., the skipper, brought down the aircraft safely. He kept it under perfect control as it pivoted on the crippled wheel after touching down.

Eight bombers were lost in the raid, which was the seventh of the war on Karlsruhe and its big railway shops. The city was last bombed Sept. 17, 1941.

5 Million Chinese Are Under Arms, 15 Millions Train

Ottawa, Sept. 3 (CP) — If the Japanese attack either Siberia or India, China will do her part because she has 5,000,000 soldiers under arms and fifteen million more in training, Dr. Lee Bing Shuey, representing the Chinese minister to Canada, said at the first public meeting of the People's War Committee of Ottawa last night.

Dr. Lee said the Japanese have captured more square miles of territory in China than the Germans have in their drive in Europe and that the ratio of casualties has decreased from four Chinese to one Japanese at the beginning of the Sino-Japanese war to one Chinese to one Japanese.

The recapture of the air bases of Lihsui and Chuhsien by the Chinese instilled new fight into the army, Dr. Lee said, as Tokyo was only 600 miles away from these bases and therefore within bombing distance of the Chinese air force.

ADVENT OF U. S. ARMY AIR FORCES IN WAR PRAISED

Acclaimed As One of Outstanding Events in Third Year of War

POWER GROWING

London, Sept. 3 —(CP)— Advent of United States Army Air forces in the European theatre was acclaimed by the R.A.F. today as one of the outstanding events of the third year of the war—a year which the army said had brought an Allied invasion of Europe within the range of practical possibility.

Three years ago today Britain and France declared war on Germany, two days after her invasion of Poland.

Commenting on American contribution to the air war, an Air Ministry statement summarizing developments of the last 12 months said:—

ORDER CANCELLED BERLIN DECLARES

Action Taken After BBC Broadcast Denial Nazi Prisoners' Hands Tied

Berlin, (From German Broadcasts), Sept. 3 —(AP)— The German High Command cancelled today an order for the manacling of British prisoners taken at Dieppe after the BBC broadcast a denial that the hands of Germans captured during the attack on the French port had been tied.

The German order had been issued as a result of what was said to be a British order seized at Dieppe, directing that German prisoners be tied to prevent destruction of their papers.

The German High Command announcement:—

"A statement made on Sept. 2 and announced by Reuters reads as follows:—

"'The German official war communique stated that during the action against Dieppe the British had issued orders to the effect that German prisoners' hands should be tied to prevent the Germans from destroying their papers.

"'Investigations are being made whether such an order was issued. It is emphatically denied that the hands of German prisoners were tied and if a similar order exists it will at once be cancelled.'

"By the force of this declaration the German High Command cancelled measures to be adopted against British prisoners of war on Sept. 2, 1942. The wording of this British declaration will be made known to British prisoners of war."

Allies' Cause is That of Youth, Enemy Offers Death, Says F.D.R.

Washington, Sept. 3 —(AP)— President Roosevelt told young people of all the world today that German Nazis, Italian Fascists, and Japanese militarists have nothing to offer but death while "the cause of the United Nations is the cause of youth itself."

His words were broadcast internationally and were directed to young men and women in the United Nations and in Axis nations and Axis-dominated lands as well. But Mr. Roosevelt remarked he fully expected the Axis to jam the airwaves to drown out his speech.

The cause of the United Nations, Mr. Roosevelt declared, is "the hope of the new generation—and the generations that are to come—hope for a new life that can be lived in freedom, and justice, and decency." He added:

"This fact is becoming clearer every day to the young people of Europe, where the Nazis are trying to create youth organizations built on the Nazi pattern . . . It is a pattern devised by Hitler and imposed upon youth by a form of mental forcible feeding—a diet of false facts, distortions, and pro-

AT SAARBRUECKEN AND IN OTTAWA WITHIN 29 HOURS

Five Young Veterans Of Air in Canada For Well-Earned Rest From Duty

CREW AT COLOGNE

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 3 —(CP)— Five young veterans of the air war are in Canada today, direct from the skies over Germany.

They flew over the fire-lighted German city of Saarbruecken and the electric-lighted cities of eastern Canada within the space of 24 hours. They left the grim rattle of German anti-aircraft guns behind them and flew to a welcome from the Prime Minister of Canada and a rousing cheer from a crowd of air force officers, newspaper reporters and photographers.

The five modern musketeers of Canada constitute the crew of one of the Wellington bombers which blitzed Saarbruecken as Cologne and Rostock were blitzed before. They are one of the crack crews in the famous Canadian Moose Squadron, rated one of the most effective of the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. squadrons now scourging Hitler's Reich.

The men are Pilot Officer John B. Higham of Assiniboia, Sask., and sergeants Arthur Loach of Islington, Ont., Donald (four-gun) Morrison of Sherbrooke, Que., Sigurd (Siggy) Lee of Kildonan, Man., and Karl Sveinson of Elfros, Sask.

Britons Pray For Victory

London, Sept. 3—(CP)— Britain's war industries were silenced for 15 minutes today as workers and soldiers, clerks and statesmen joined in prayer for victory on the third anniversary of Britain's declaration of war.

Services were held in churches and in chapels of the armed services. The BBC broadcast a prayer and sacred music.

Arthur Cardinal Himsley, Archbishop of Westminster, requested during services at Westminster Cathedral, a special prayer for Pope Pius XII who, he said, was "maligned and misrepresented by malice or ignorance on this side and that."

Clement Atilee, Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs, said the opening of the fourth year of the war "finds free people united, resolute, eager and better prepared to meet enemy at sea, on land and in the air."

"We must expect further difficulties," Mr. Atllee said, "but we can be certain that, however long the way, the issue is sure."

The Daily Telegraph, in an editorial typical of British Press Comment, said: "the long fight for survival is ending; the fight for victory must soon begin."

Will Make Most Effective Use Of War Resources

Outline Obligations To Furnish Supplies Most Needed By Nations Concerned

OTHER SIGNATORIES

Washington, Sept. 3 (AP).—The United States, Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand and fighting France concluded today a series of reciprocal aid agreements designed to clarify the principles of mutual assistance in their common struggle against the axis.

Signed on the third anniversary of the British and French declarations of war against Germany, the agreements specify and make formal the principles and procedures covering aid to the armed forces of the United States by the other parties to the agreements on the same terms as those under which the United States supplies lend-lease aid to them.

Aid Increasing.

Such reciprocal aid already has been furnished to the United States also by the other signatories without conclusion of formal agreements and, a state department commentary says, "this aid is rapidly increasing in importance as the intensity of the American war effort increases in the various theatres of operations."

The British, Australian and New Zealand agreements were concluded in Washington by exchanges of notes between State Secretary Cordell Hull; Viscount Halifax, British Ambassador; Australian Minister Sir Owen Dixon and New Zealand's minister, Walter Nash. The agreement with fighting France was concluded in London by Brig.-Gen. John E. Dahlquist, acting military representative of the United States, and Maurice de Jean, representating the French National Committee headed by Charles de Gaulle.

All of the agreements emphasize the general principle governing mutual aid is that the war production and war resources of each of the signatories should be used in ways most effectively utilizing the available materials, manpower, production facilities and shipping space.

They further specify the elimination, as far as possible, of monetary transactions. That is, a maximum of the articles and services provided by each party to the other shall be in the form of reciprocal aid in services or materials, thus reducing to a minimum "the need of each for the currency of the other."

The agreements make formal the obligations of the other parties to furnish the armed forces of the United States with military equipment, munitions, military and naval stores, and other supplies, facilities and services whenever these can be most effectively obtained in their respective countries.

Supply Foodstuffs.

Thus Australia will be expected to supply meat and other foodstuffs to American troops in that country as reciprocal aid. On the other hand Britain might be better able to furnish certain types of tanks, guns and other equipment, leaving cargo space in ships from the United States free for the transportation of lend-lease food.

Aid furnished to the armed forces of the United States by fighting France is defined as such supplies, materials and services which "can most effectively be procured in territory under the control of fighting France." Such territories include French Equatorial Africa and New Caledonia in the Pacific.

The agreements emphasize that while each of the signatories retains the right of final decisions, in the light of its own circumstances "decisions as to the most effective use of resources shall, so far as possible, be made in common, pursuant to common plans for winning the war." most effective use of resources shall, so far as possible, be made in common, pursuant to common plans for winning the war."

Provisional Red Naval Base at Novorossisk Attacked From North

Defenders of Central Caucasus Sink Three Speedboats and Eight Pontoons With Loads of Invasion Troops at River Crossings in Mozdok Sector

DEFENSIVE FEATS INFLICT LOSSES

By EDDY GILMORE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Sept. 3 —(AP)— The German assault against Stalingrad from the northwest stood checked at the approaches to the Volga city today, but to the southwest the Red army again recoiled before the massed tanks which drove a menacing wedge into the most stubbornly-defended positions.

Both the noon communique and field dispatches announced a further retreat in this vital sector, while 400 miles to the southwest a similar retreat was made by the Soviet forces defending the Black Sea naval base of Novorossisk.

A dramatic battle was reported northwest of Stalingrad where a Russian anti-aircraft battery levelled its guns against 50 German tanks charging into the approaches to the city and stopped them until reinforcements arrived.

Defensive feats were emphasized by the communique.

Soviet troops who recently fought their way back to the Kletskaya area to harass the Axis flank within the Don Bend repulsed an attack by a German infantry regiment which was supported by 28 tanks, it said, adding:

"Six enemy tanks were disabled and more than 200 Germans were killed and prisoners were taken".

In all, the communique said, 40 Nazi tanks were knocked out of action and it indicated more than 1,200 Germans were killed in the newly-reported actions on the Southern battle fields.

Russian Withdrawal Forced

The German Command expended 14 German tanks and a battalion of infantry in four vain attacks upon a Soviet-held village south of Stalingrad, but a new Russian withdrawal was forced in another sector, it was announced.

Four Red Army men among the thousands northwest of the Arsenal city were officially credited with fought defensive engagements with the enemy," a communique said. "In fighting for one populated place Red army men destroyed a German tank, two armored cars and 13 trucks and annihilated more than 200 German officers and men."

Nazis Reported Surrounded

A German group was reported surrounded and facing death or capture in a mountain pass south of Krasnodar.

(The German high command claims both coastal Anapa, 30 miles northwest of Novorossisk, and Krymskaya, 20 miles northeast of the naval base.)

Defenders of the central Caucasus sunk three speedboats and eight pontoons with loads of invasion troops at river crossings in the Mozdok area.

Two battalions of tank-supported infantry attacked Russian positions on the west bank of the Upper Don south of Voronezh, but they were repulsed with losses in both personnel and material, "the communique said.

BOMBERS ALL DAY RAIN EXPLOSIVES ON ROMMEL LINES

'In No Place Have Enemy Penetrated Our Organized Defence Area'

OPENING PHASE

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 3 (AP) — Cautious probing by Marshal Erwin Rommel's African corps has encountered a fury of air attack, artillery fire and harassment by mobile forces, and today, four days after the British authorities expected an Axis offensive, the showdown battle for the Nile had failed to develop.

British ground troops in strongpoints and slit trenches along the 40-mile El Alamein line had not yet come into action with the enemy. Only screening mobile forces were reported thrusting and attacking the German armored columns which had filtered eight miles into the minefields of the Ruweisat-Himeimat sector on the south.

Whether Rommel was puzzled by the British tactics, was playing a game of his own, or was made hesitant by the storm of artillery fire and the thunderous aerial bombing of his armored and supply columns which greeted his first move, observers could not say.

Today's communique said Rommel's Axis army was subjected yesterday to a record-breaking bombing.

Never before since the start of the North African campaign, a communique said, have so many bombing sorties been carried out in the course of a day.

From dawn until after dark Allied bombers shuttled over the battle area, unloading high explosives on Rommel's communications and troop concentrations in an effort to break up his preparations for an all out assault on the El Alamein defence line.

Axis Armored Forces Attacked

At the same time enemy armored forces which had sifted through minefields in the Ruweisat-Himeimat sector on the extreme southern flank of the line were attacked from the east and southeast by mobile British forces.

Many Axis vehicles were destroyed, headquarters declared.

Assurance that the Axis forces had not achieved any important gains since they made their first offensive gesture Sunday was given by Lt.-Gen. B. L. Montgomery, commander of the British 8th. Army, who said last night in his field headquarters:

In no place and in no part of the 8th. Army area have the enemy penetrated our organized defence area."

'Moose' Fulton's Boys Come Home With Trail of Glory Behind Them

Ottawa, Sept. 3—(CP)— Five of "Moose" Fulton's boys came home to Canada early today with a trail of glory behind them and the memory of a great leader.

The bomber crew headed by PO. J. G. Higham which flew to Ottawa directly after a bombing raid on Saarbruecken lived in the tradition of Wing Cmdr. John (Moose) Fulton, D.F.C., A.F.C., who was reported missing six weeks ago after a last radio message saying his plane was damaged, he had wounded aboard and was being attacked by enemy fighters.

Flt. Lt. E.B. (Tim) Reid of Toronto, who accompanied the bomber crew from the United Kingdom, said the five were veterans of the Moose Squadron, named in honor of Fulton and counted one of the most effective squadrons in either the Royal Air Force or the Royal Canadian Air Force.

"Moose's boys" have been on every "big show" from the 1,000-plane raid on Cologne to other heavy attacks on Germany, said Reid.

Higham, an Assiniboia, Sask., boy, made his second trip as commander of a bomber on the raid when he guided his Wellington to Cologne and unloaded a cargo of bombs. The crew participated in five big raids in seven days.

"Fulton's memory is an honored thing," said Reid. "He was popular and an inspired leader. He never asked his men to go anywhere he was not prepared to go himself. He built up a tremendous espirit de corps in his squadron and it lasts to this day."

The veteran of the bomber crew which returned last night was Sgt. Donald R. Morrison of Sherbrooke, Que., rear gunner who has made 36 operational flights and shot down one enemy craft.

Morrison has born in 1921, Higham in 1920, Sgt. A. Loach of Islington, Ont., Wireless Operator-air Gunner, in 1922, Sgt. S.C. Lee of Kildonan Man., Navigator in 1913 and Sgt. M.G.K. Svienson of Elfros, Sask., Wireless Operator-air Gunner in 1918.

The men were intrigued by the thought that their families would be informed of their arrival in Canada by the newspapers. Their proposed flight had been kept secret and the news "broke" only when they had landed at the Ottawa field.

Alexander States Large Number Also Put Out of Action

New Methods, Devices Make it Dangerous for Subs to Attack Vessels Under Convoy

NAVY LOSSES MADE GOOD

London, Sept. 3.— (CP)— July and August of this year were the most successful months of the entire war in the numbers of Axis submarines destroyed, A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, told a war anniversary luncheon today.

"This is encouraging, but we wish to do better still", Mr. Alexander said, adding that in addition to those destroyed a large number have been put out of action.

"If the U-boats found their attack upon our forces dangerous last year, I think they will find it doubly dangerous now", he said. "New methods have been developed and new devices are in action".

Back in Former Haunts

"German U-boats now have turned their offensive back to their usual haunts, where the Royal Navy and, I may add, the Royal Canadian Navy, have fought them with vigor and gallantry", he added.

Replying to what he said was criticism that "we are slow in adjusting our anti-U-boat methods to meet changes in their tactics", Mr. Alexander declared:

"It is the other way round. When changes in German tactics occur it is because our new methods and devices forced them on the U-boats."

Tirpitz in Norway

The Admiraty Chief said that the German Battleship Tirpitz had remained in Norwegian waters since last January, accompanied at times by the Batteships Admiral Scheer and Luetzow and the Cruiser Admiral Hipper.

The Nazi Battleship Scharnhorst, damaged at Brest and in the dash of the German fleet through the Channel, has been repaired and is expected to return to service shortly after being 16 months out of action, Mr. Alexander said.

'ISSUE IS SURE HOWEVER LONG IS THE WAY' - ATTLEE

Britain Views Future With Calm Confidence Entering 4th Year of War

PAPERS COMMENT

(By DOUGLAS AMARON)
(Canadian. Press. Staff. Writer)

London, Sept. 3. — (CP Cable) —Britain viewed with calm confidence today the opening of the fourth year of war and looked optimistically to a new period of offensive after three years in which reverses outnumbered victories.

Dominions Secretary Clement Attlee in an anniversary statement spoke for the nation when he said "we must exepct further difficulties but we can be certain that, however long the way, the issue is sure".

"Day by day and week by week the United Nations add to their strength in armed forces and in munitions of war", he declared. "Their efforts have not yet reached their peak. Our enemis long ago passed theirs and have suffered losses".

Confidence that, while the way still is difficult, this fourth year will see the beginning of a victory offensive was the keynote of many London and Provincial morning newspaper editorials.

Moving Toward Balance

Typical of the newspaper comment was that of the Times, which said:

"Everywhere the forces in action are moving at last towards a balance. Of the forces in reserve, an overwhelming preponderance is with the United Nations. . . The long fight for survival is ending. The fight for victory must soon begin".

Commented The Daily Telegraph: "Whatever the dangers of the time and whatever doubtful days lie ahead the Union (of United Nations) must be decisive in the end."

Said The Mirror, "We shall do well to look into the future with full confidence, backed by renewed determination...We wish that the next phase of the war may mark the long-expected transition from defensive to offensive preparations."

The News Chronicle said, "Two years ago we were within an ace of disaster. Now we stand on the threshold of events which we hope and believe will bring final victory within our grasp."

Clear Thinking Needed

The Glasgow Herald commented: "What is needed now is surely, a growth of clear thinking and planning of the kind that can clear the decks both of meaningless rivalries between British services and of lack of understanding between the Allied powers...We must hope to see the setting up early this fourth year of war of machinery for continual military consultation between the United Nations and for the co-ordination of Britain's own strategic planning under a joint general staff."

A comparison between the atmosphere of world politics in 1917 and 1942 was drawn by the Manchester Guardian which said "after the war the task of rebuilding Europe will be more formidable...Fortunately the leading powers are all experienced in political creation and behind them is a passionate desire for a more just world."

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

AUGUST THIS YEAR COOLER THAN LAST

While August of this year was slightly cooler than the same month in 1941, the rainfall last August exceeded that of the current year's month by nearly four inches, according to Belleville Purification Plant officials.

In August, 1941, rain to the amount of 5.21 inches fell over the city as compared with 1.35 inches in the month just ended.

The maximum temperature in August last year was 86.1 and the minimum 43 while the highest during August of this year was 85 and the lowest 40.9.

GENERAL COUNCIL COMMITTEES TO MEET

The Rev. Dr. James Semple, minister of Bridge Street United Church, returns tonight from Sauble Beach, Lake Huron, where he has been spending a vacation. Dr. Semple is general chairman of the Bridge Street Church committees in charge of arrangements for the forthcoming General Council. The committees will meet tomorrow night.

COUNTING NOSES

Sweden will register her manpower in 1943.

NEW POST?

The war services minister in the federal cabinet, Hon. Joseph Thorson, is being mentioned as almost certain choice for the presidency of the Exchequer Court of Canada, facated by the death of Mr. Justice A. K. MacLean. The war services department has been greatly reduced by the transfer of the bureau of public information board, and by transfer of the conpulsory military service call-up, to the labor department.

Eight College Presidents To Attend Council

Eight college presidents or principals; several members of the provincal and federal legislatures and three judges are included among the commissioners of the United Church of Canada, the General Council of which meets here in Bridge Street United Church on September 8 and continues through to the 18th. Other distinguished commissioners include Sir John Puddester, Newfoundland; the Chinese Consul General for Canada; the Hon. Harry Stevens, British Columbia, and Mayor Conboy of Toronto.

The General Council of the United Church is the Supreme Court of the church and is composed of representatives of the eleven conferences extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean.

The commissioners, numbering 268 laymen and ministers, are elected by the conferences on the basis of one minister and one layman for every 27 charges.

The regular Council meetings will begin on Wednesday, Sept. 9th, and will continue until Sept. 18. The Lay Association and the Missionary Education Council will meet Sept. 8th. with the latter holding their meetings at Albert College.

Meetings of the Lay Association will be held at Tabernacle Church here. This association is arranging for a special service on Sunday afternoon, Sept. 13th. under the direction of its president, The Rev. Ralph E. Spencer, Tabernacle minister, and his congregation is sparing no efforts to make it's church and its facilities as comfortable as possible for the Laymen's Association.

Nation's Health Is Quite Sound

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Sept. 3—(CP)— Canadian manhood is coming through its wartime medical tests with satisfactory results, Surgeon-Capt. Archibald McCallum, medical director-general for the Royal Canadian Navy, said today in an interview with the Canadian Press.

The most searching medical examination ever applied to a large group of men in Canada shows the Nation's health to be sound. Rejections of applicants for enlistment on grounds of unfitness are not high and rejections are not evidence of poor health.

R.C.A.F. WOMEN IN BRITAIN

Officers in charge of the first section of R.C.A.F. (Women's Division), now on active service in Great Britain, examine airwomen's dunnage bags prior to departure for overseas. No. 6 A. R. D. Entertains Public On 1st Field Day Held by Depot

No. 6 Air Repair Depot, Royal Canadian Air Force, laid aside its important duties temporarily yesterday and its personnel from officer command Group Captain A. H. Simmonds to the newest recruit turned hosts to a large crowd of civilian guests on the occasion of the first Field Day in the history of the depot.

In the heat of a warm September day, husky young airmen athletes vied in track and field competition before the critical eyes of judges and the admiring ones of friends and comrades.

The depot went "all-out" for the occasion. Nothing was forgotten that would tend toward the success of the day and the comfort of the guests. Senior officers of the depot worked as willingly as the humblest BAC 2 and the result was a pronounced success from start to finish.

Buses brought guests and children from nearby Trenton and Belleville. Courteous airmen "attendants" looked after civilian cars, directed traffic and attended to the wants of children and other guests.

Parade Heralds Start

A colorful parade heralded the start of the afternoon's festivities Sixardee Band, a new musical organization made its debut at the head of the marching athletes, who marched through the depot before dispersing for the various events. Highlighting the parade was the "Sixardee Special" a novel aircraft product of the ingenuity of the depot mechanics, and constructed of scrap parts of demolished planes Smoke streamed in a long black plume from a smokestack placed "amidships" in the craft. Novel slogans adorned its creaking fuselage. Later the depot "commandos" attacked the ship with axes and cross-cut saws and demolished it before the eyes of the amused spectators.

The children were not forgotten. An improvised slide with a miniature automobile was erected in a prominent spot and proved a mecca for the youngsters during the entire afternoon. A tended canteen looked after the wants of the hungry and thirsty, while a first aid tent was in readiness for any emergency.

Well Contested

All the athletic events were exceptionally well contested. Versatile young men displayed keen enthusiasm and ability despite the heat of the afternoon, and the guests were treated to some fine running, jumping and other forms of competition.

There was plenty of humor sprinkled throughout the program. The "tilt-the-bucket" contest proved a source of merriment as contestants were ducked unceremoniously. Egg-and-spoon races and potato contests were highlights There were races for the officers the ladies and the children. All in all it was a pleasurable departure from the strenuous routine of the depot and one that was equally enjoyed by the personnel.

Prizes Awarded

At the conclusion of the events handsome prizes to the various winners were presented by Mrs. F. R. Anderson, wife of Flight Lieutenant Anderson, station padre. Flight Sergeant Mills, an outstanding musician and former member of Jack Hilton's famous band, was the announcer. Judges included Wing Commander R. G. Ford, Wing Commander Laird and Flying Officer Bright. Squadron Leader Noel Walsh, senior administration officer and other senior officers as well as junior members of the depot staff took their parts in the day's program.

A dance at night with music supplied by the Sixardee Skylarks terminated a very successful First Field Day of the depot. The winners:

Freighter Founders Off Manitou Island

Cleveland, Sept. 3 —(AP)— The American Steel and Wire Co. freighter Steelvendor foundered about 15 miles east of Manitou Island in Lake Superior today but at least 24 of the 25 crew members were saved by nearby vessels, Cleveland district coast guard headquarters said.

The all-steel vessel, used to carry steel, was 250 feet long and was constructed in 1923.

An SOS was flashed about 12:30 a.m., E.D.T., today, and the steelvendor foundered about 30 minutes later. The cause, the coast guard said, has not been determined.

After the crew took to lifeboats, 22 members were rescued by the Charles M. Schwab, owned by Pickands, Mather and Co. of Cleveland, while two others were saved by the William G. Clyde, owned by the Pittsburgh Steamship Co.

American steel and wire said the only man missing was John Seecon, an oiler from Chicago, and that he might be accounted for later.

The Steelvendor was a 1,695-gross ton vessel with a capacity of 3,000 tons. Her beam was 42 feet, nine inches.

Comfort Bags for Sailors To Be Equipped As Added Red Cross Service To Aid Splendid Work of the Navy League

Co-operating with the Navy League and in response to a request for this new type of service the Ontario Red Cross has promised to equip 12,000 comfort bags for sailors. Belleville branch will share in this work and any individual or group desirious of helping will receive full information from the local headquarters on Campbell St.

Comforts For Sailors

These well-made bags will contain many articles very welcome and necessary in a sailor's life. The list includes for every bag a comb, soap, hard candy, razor and blades, pipe, tobacco, chewing gum, envelopes and paper, pencil, book, games or playing cards, socks, handkerchiefs, towel, wash cloth, housewife, tooth brush, tooth powder, shaving stick. At a very reasonable price these articles are purchased through Red Cross headquarters, and are packed into the bags here. A card is enclosed bearing the name of the donor. Owing to the increase in the personnel of the men in the navy and merchant marine services the Red Cross has been asked to help in this work for the Navy League and gladly accepts this new opportunity for service.

Nutrition Service

Meanwhile other varied aspects of Red Cross work are being maintained at highest efficiency. With rationing and less variety of foods the Nutrition branch becomes of increasing importance. The aim of the Red Cross is to aid in the improvement of health, the prevention of disease, the mitigation of suffering and the relief of the sick. Mrs. J. Kerr has been named chairman of the Nutrition Service in Belleville, assisted by Miss Kemp, and a committee. The practice of distributing cod liver oil in the Belleville area will be continued under Mrs. Kerr's supervision. In Ontario last year 6,000 pounds were distributed.

The Nutrition Branch will, moreover, organise nutrition work here and supervise the instruction of nutrition. The part nutrition plays in the health and well being of a nation is recognized by medical authorities and all that can be done to promote this project will be a vital contribution to the present and the future of Canadian citizens.

The local headquarters of the Red Cross received the latest survey of the result of the Blood Donor Service throughout the country. To August, 1942, 83,834 contributions have been made. In planning for the coming season, Belleville's quota of 100 donations weekly is unchanged, the community being asked to maintain this number.

500 Sheets Forwarded

Wednesday at the Red Cross headquarters is a busy day in that busy centre. In the morning, the Busy Bees, a very active group of R.C.A.F. officers' wives take their turn at the sewing machines. They were busy tearing sheets for the Russian Red Cross. On Tuesday 500 sheets were packed and shipped making the total of the four thousand quota, 2,620. It is hoped the four thousand will be completed by the end of September. One thousand and ten pillow slips were also finished and sent up to Toronto. Yesterday's shipment also included nine beautifully made quilts and three afghans. Fifteen leather jerkins for men on the minesweepers were also sent. Three hundred have already been furnished by this branch from old pieces of leather and suede.

Day and Night Service

Wednesday evening Avondale Neighbours' Aid members come in to the Red Cross rooms to sew. This completes the week's arrangements with local groups and now sewing machines are going every afternoon and night excepting Saturday.

A tip in sending in jam and honey for shipment is to be sure that it is thoroughly "set".

Visit Surprises Air Minister

Ottawa, Sept. 3—(CP)—The sudden trip of a Royal Canadian Air Force bomber crew from Saarbruecken to Ottawa was surprising enough to a lot of people who gathered to meet the airmen on their arrival early today. But the most thoroughly astounded person turned out to be the executive head of the R.C.A.F.

Few minutes after the plane landed, Air Minister Power who with Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Defence Minister Ralston, was chatting with the five-man crew, broke into a cry of amazement.

"I inspected these men only last week—in Britain," said the minister who has just returned himself from a visit.

LAWYER LEAVES $243,591

Ottawa, Sept. 3 (CP)—Estate of Frederick ArAthur MaGee, Ottawa lawyer who died June 20, was valued at $243,591, it was shown when the will was fyled for probate here Wednesday.

Mr. MaGee was registrar of the Superior Court of Ontario for Carleton County at the time of his death.

Beneficiaries under the will include two nieces, Mrs. John Sanders of Niagara, an annuity of $1,600 for 15 years, and Mrs. F. B. Taylor of Montreal, an annuity of $1,200 for 14 years.

STRAIGHT RAILS

A track 78.86 miles in length, between Wilmington and Hamlet, N.C., is the longest stretch of track without a curve in the United States.

Obituary

CLEMENT RUSSEL (Campbellford)

Allan Mills (Special) — Mr Clement Russel passed away suddenly at his home in Campbellford on Friday morning where he suffered a heart attack.

Mr. Russel was born at Bonarlaw 48 years ago, being the only son of Mrs. Russel and the late Thomas Russel, and was raised on the farm now occupied by Mr. Thos. Reid, later he and his parents moved to the English Line, later moving to Campbellford. He is survived by his mother and one sister (Irene) Mrs. Chester Meiklejohn. The funeral service was held on Monday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Meiklejohn of Rylestone.

Rev. A. B. Caldwell rector of St. Mark's Anglican Church preached the service; interment was made in the family plot at Rylestone.

The pall bearers were: Mr. Fred Rutherford, Fred McKeown, R. Meiklejohn, L. Meiklejohn, L. Little, Wm. Stuart.

MRS. MYRTLE McCOMB (Toronto)

Allan Mills (Special)—Following a serious operation in Toronto Hospital, Mrs. McComb passed away on Friday evening in her 33rd. year. The late Mrs. McComb was a daughter of Mr. Marshal Sweet and the late Mrs. Sweet and was born in the township of Rawdon. After her marriage to Clarence McComb they resided at Bonarlaw, later moving to Toronto where she resided until her death. Left to mourn her passing are her sorrowing husband and two sons, Elmer 12 and Lyle 11. The late Mrs. McComb was brought to Bonarlaw by train on Monday. The funeral service was held in Rylestone United Church. Rev. Holden of Springbrook took charge of the service and at the grave. Interment was made in Rylestone cemetery.

The pall bearers were: Mr. Jas Wood, Isaac McInroy, George Eastwood, Ernest Stiles, R. Andrews and Jack Wellman.

The bereaved family have the sympathy of this community.

EDWARD C. PASCOE (Formerly of Belleville)

The Indiana South Bend Tribune of August 17th contained a reference to the passing of a native of Belleville, Edward C. Pascoe on that date at Buchanan, Michigan.

Edward C. Pascoe, aged 59, superintendent of the axle department of Clark Equipment Company, died suddenly in his home, 114 Lake Street, Buchanan. He was born in Belleville, Ont., Canada, August 24, 1882, the son of Lewis Pascoe and Isbell McRae. He was married to Harriet Stears of Constantine, Mich. Mr. Pascoe was a member of Buchanan Lodge No. 68 A.F. & A.M.; The Consistory and Saladin Shrine in Grand Rapids; the I.O.O.F. in Stratford, Ontario, the Presbyterian Church and Orchard Hills Country Club here. Surviving are his widow; three children, Lewis, Edward and Josephine, at home, and a sister, Miss Nellie Pascoe, of Belleville. Funeral services were held in the Presbyterian Church, Rev. Wanzer H. Brunelle of Mount Pleasant, officiating. Burial was in Constantine cemetery.

Mr. Pascoe had been connected with the Clark Company 36 years.

His death represented the passing of the second of the pioneer builders and developers of the company within the month, the president, Eugene B. Clark, having died July 19th.

LLEWELLYN JAMES WILLIAMS

The death occurred at his home, 31 Murney Street, this Thursday morning of Llewellyn James Williams. Born in this city he was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Williams.

The late Mr. Williams was a druggist by profession. He entered his study of pharmacy as an apprentice with his uncle, the late Rev. A. L. Geen. Later he attended the Ontario College of Pharmacy and upon graduation followed his profession in Owen Sound, Buffalo and also resided in Calgary. For the past fifteen years he lived retired, in Belleville. He was a member of Christ Church. Many friends in the city will regret to learn of his passing.

He is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Margaret Simonds; and a niece Miss Josephine Tickell.

Sikorski Confident

The raid in which Canadians shed so much glory on Canada and the Empire as they participated at Dieppe along with British, Free French and United States Marines showed that invasion of the continent is feasible. So says Premier Sikorski of Poland who sees victory certain.

There are many other signs that the head of the courageous Polish nation sees on the world horizon as boding ill to the Hun and his fellow-conspirators and benediction to the Allied cause. Here they are:—

The air superiority of the United Nations.

The entry of the United States which he said automatically decided the final result.

A period of exhaustion which has started and will weaken Germany in a moral and physical aspect and prepare the way for final triumph.

The losses of Germans which he placed at one and a half million dead and three millions wounded.

The loss of 10,000 Nazi planes on the western and southern fronts and a greater loss on the east front in Russia.

Loss of 50,000 trained Nazi airmen which forced Goering to lower the training period and so lower the value of his force.

Loss of German warships and merchant shipping.

The decision of Brazil "which best demonstrates Germany's position," given in the "period of the greatest military effort of the Rich" and constituting an act of faith, "in the certainty of United Nations victory."

Queen Wilhelmina

Queen Wilhelmina of The Netherlands the other day marked her sixty-second birthday. For the third birthday anniversary she has been in exile from her native land over which she reigns. For three times the people of Holland at home have celebrated "the Mother of Her Country," in spite of the Huns, Hitler and Himmler.

The Queen, in a message to the United States Congress, used the words "No surrender" and that is the slogan which will ring to the end of Hitler's regime and all persons associated with this iniquity, including the Italian and the Japanese followers of the same perverted ideal as the German Nazis.

Queen Wilhelmina has for forty-three years ruled with the kindly sway of democracy, but a sway that will not yield to brute injustice and force. She is one of those outstanding figures of the United Nations whose influence for the prosecution of the war and for the days of reconstruction to come not only assures a maximum of effort but also victory and in the end a safer and more potent democratic world where liberty may dwell without threats by upstart would-be conquerors and by international gangsters like Hitler, Mussolini and Tojo.

How warmly beat the hearts of the United Nations today is marked everywhere. This great comradeship and fraternity, born of the troubles through which the free and the Nazi-oppressed nations have had to pass will mean a securer world towards which Queen Wilhelmina will play her noble part as she is playing it in the world of arms and in the concert of the democratic nations.

Though The Netherlanders have long been known for their devotion to liberty, progress and justice, the world of men and women at large could not quite appraise these people at their full greatness. This is true of all these nations for only such service as the United Nations can bring and do bring for the good of all can make every state cognizant of the greatness of their allies in all its fulness. But now they understand and now their cause is one. They belong to a great brotherhood which is going to rid the world of gangster nations and to make the way of other nations toward democracy less difficult than it has been in a world where the Hun and the Fascist and the followers of Tojo have defied everything that is right.

Her Majesty Queen Wilhelmina is one of those persons whose influence will tend to develop this great comity of democracies. Long may she live to reign over The Netherlanders and the people of the Dutch Indies and exercise her benovelent rule, so fine an example to the world.

LAMENT OF A FILM FAN'S SPOUSE

I am tired of projectors and film superpan,
For I am the spouse of a cinema fan;
In the midst of a meal, just prior to the finish,
We stop to make movies of Junior and spinach;
My husband has close-upped our only bambino
Till sometimes I swear I am going to Reno!

At night, when I'm bathing the boy in the tub,
And all in a hurry to finish the scrub,
My husband appears with his camera so what?
Both baby and soapsuds just have to be shot;
I try to be calm and I always count ten,
Just hoping he'll tire of his hobby—but WHEN?

We've movies of Sonny at play in the snow—
The cold which he caught ras been cured long ago;
We've fine shots of Junior at play in the sand—
Why it got in his mouth Daddy can't understand;
We've pictures of Little Rogue running away,
But none of the spanking Mom gave him that day!

The flickers at our house just superabound—
O Heavens! He says NEXT he's taking up SOUND!

GOLDEN INTRODUCTION

Rudolph Guenther, veteran New York financial advertising man, often played pinochle with the elder J. P. Morgan in his early Wall Street doys. He tells this story to illustrate how well Morgan knew bankers:

"A certain young industrialist went to Mr. Morgan with a plan for merger of several small companies. The financier gove him an interview. He checked all the figures and complimented the young man on his thoroughness.

"'Come in tomorrow morning,' he said, 'and I'll see that you get your half million.'

"Next morning the industrialist arrived, thoroughly elated. Mr. Morgan put on his hat and invited the visitor to take a walk. He led him in turn to the offices of four big Wall Street bankers. Curtly he made introductions and remarked: 'This young man's proposition is sound.'

"As they left the last office, Morgan shook hands and said goodbye.

"'But I thought you were going to get me the half million dollars to start,' said the young man. 'Shall I see you again '

"'That won't be necessary,' Morgan replied. 'I said I'd get you the money. Go back to those bankers and your issue will be oversubscribed!'"

HE KNEW

In a strange village I asked a Vermonter for aid in finding a man.

"Do you know Underwood?"

"Yep."

"Do you know where he lives?"

"Yep."

"Do you think he's at home now?"

"Nope."

"Well, where can I find him?"

"Here. I'm Underwood."

THE WHOLE TRUTH

A universary president was accused of drunkenness. At the hearing before the board of trustees, one of the witnesses was the Irish houseman employed by the president.

"Did you ever see the president intoxicated?" he was asked.

"No, sir," he answered.

"Come, come," said the examiner, "don't you know that he was drunk on last Commencement Day?"

"No, sir," said the houseman. "On the contrary, I kniw he was not drunk."

"How do you know that?" asked the examiner in an incredulous tone.

"You know them three flights of stairs in the president's house, two of them curving?" said the houseman. "No man is drunk that can slide down all them banisters without losing his cap or gown or hood." — Nelson Antrim Crawford in Household Magazine.

Time Running In Britain's And Russia's Favor

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Reports from the two most crucial battles of the moment—in Egypt and Russia—do not yet furnish a clear enough pattern to warrant extremes of optimism or pessimism. In both cases, however, time is running in favor of Russian and Britain defenders.

The siege of Stalingrad is now seven days old. In that time there is every evidence that the Nazi High Command has hurled the full weight of German and Allied reserves into the attack expecting a quick kill: but the attackers have been held or thrown back northwest of the city and reduced to an inching forward progress on the more critical southwest sector.

A Berlin claim that the Volga had been reached by an armored spearhead north of the city appears to be premature. It is only to the south that any immediate danger of a break through the far-flung outer defenses seems great. And the terrain in that sector, where Berlin claims to have dented Russian defenses to within a dozen miles of the outskirts of the city itself, becomes even more susceptible of defense with every additional foot of advance.

Thrust Contained.

The time loss in the synchronized Nazi attack on British forces in Egypt, now stiffened with American air and tank units, is even more obvious. General Rommel lashed out three days ago in his attempt to free is armored divisions from the handicap of a narrow and restricted front. If he had gained any further ground since the first lunge carried his tanks a reported eight miles into British minefield defenses laid to impede rather than to halt him, there has been no word of it from any source.

By every indication the thrust to turn the British left flank where it rests on the Qattara Depression has been contained. Informed London comment suggests that the Nazi desert warfare specialist may have been forced already to alter his plan of action and attempt the risky business of crossing the sub-sea-level narrows of the depression southward to gain freedom of movement for his tanks.

That is within the range of possibility. It is less than twenty miles from the northern to the southern rim of the great salt marsh sink at the indicated point of the main Nazi attack. That narrow strip would be harder and slower going for Rommel's mechanized forces, however, than any ground they have yet crossed in Libya or Egypt.

Ready for Move.

According to reports from London. British defense dispositions have been made in expectation of such an attempt. German tank and truck columns seeking to slog across its soft going would be prime slowmotion targets both for air bombers and long-range guns.

And somewhere the main strength of British tank power is still withheld from action. Cairo adivces indicate it is not only more powerful numerically than Rommel's available panzer units, but now heavily rearmed with American-made land battleships.

It seems obvious that the new British commander in Egypt, General Alexander, is hoping for a chance to turn the tables on his foe. He has been noted as an ardent disciple of te strategy of attack, of attack even when the engagement is essentially a defensive one, as in this case, with the Alexandria prize within hearing of enemy gun rumbles.

The chance for a shift from that defensive mission to one of offense must come if Rommel is held pinned within the narrow corridor of desert between the sea and the Qattara Depression. It has always had trap possibilities since his eastward drive was stemmed two months ago on the El Alamein-depression line.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

The Time Table of Digestion Is Forty-Eight Hours

If everybody remembered that it takes about forty-eight hours for wastes from food eaten to leave the body, there would not be such large amounts of laxatives and purgatives used. This does not seem that laxatives and purgatives are never needed, because there is nothing gives a better pick-up, mental and physical, than a laxative when needed.

However, the laxative is not needed so much because wastes lying in the intestine are poisoning the blood, but because the extra weight of waste matter lying in the lower bowel or colon, drags on the nerves in this region and causes a feeling of heaviness, depression and fatigue.

As a matter of fact, it is not natural or normal for the large bowel to be empty. If it is completely emptied by a laxative or a purgative (strong laxative), then it will remain empty for nearly two days. And because there is no bowel movement the next day, the individual may think that he needs another laxative because he has always believed that he should have a bowel movement every day.

In an article on the spastic colon (spasms occurring in the large bowel), Dr. William Harley Glafke, in Medical Clinics of North America speaks about the "time table" of digestion: that is the length of time of the passage of food from the stomach to lower end of bowel from which it is thrown out as waste matter—feces.

"Food eaten yesterday as three meals, breakfast, lunch and dinner, was passed through the stomach and small intestine during yesterday and last night, and what is left (waste matter) this morning. During today and to-night the large intestine (also called colon) will move this waste slowly up the right side of the abdomen, then across the front of the abdomen to the left side and down to last few inches from opening. Here it will be gathered as a mass and be passed out as tomorrow's movement".

Briefly, what you ate yesterday is digested in stomach and small intestine in 24 hours. What is left is waste matter and takes another 24 hours to pass through the large intestine and be ready to be thrown out.

Remember, a healthy bowel is not an empty bowel it should be continually pushing wastes toward lower opening.

GOOD OLD CALLIOPE!

London, (CP)—Launched 35 years ago, H.M.S. Calliope still serves the Navy, as a base ship now. The old vessel gained fame the year she was launched by outriding a hurricane that wrecked almost every ship within reach at Samoa and during the last war as a recruiting depot through which 18,000 men passed.

ONE KIND OF WAR BONUS

Birmingham, England, (CP)—Sir Charles Hyde, proprietor of the Birmingham Post, the Birmingham Mail and the Birmingham Weekly Post, gave all his employees one month's wages free of income tax as a war bonus to meet the increased cost of living.

Whitehall Notebook

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 3 (CP)—London representatives of Estonia, Latvia and Luthuania enjoy a position unprecedented in the history of British diplomacy. In fact, even the foreign office is unable to explain the exact status of these delegates from states now part of the Soviet Union.

Names of the three ministers — August Torma of Estonia, Charles Zarine of Latvia and Bonius Balutis of Lithuania—appeared last February in the official foreign office list of accredited foreign representatives.

But the Russian Embassy objected and publication of the list was suspended—paper economy was the reason given at the time. The most recent official publication omits the Baltic ministers in the main list.

Their names appear, however, on the back page as representatives no longer included in the main category of accredited representatives to this country but still "personally" accorded diplomatic privileges and accepted as diplomats.

They are not entitled to send out a diplomatic pouch and have no other national privileges, but are allowed individual concessions enjoyed by the diplomatic representatives of other countries. They are not subject to taxation, are immune from arrest and continue to receive gasoline allowances for their diplomatic cars.

"Service men who give their liberty for the defence of their country should be paid at least five shillings (about $1.13) a day," said Edwards in an interview after his election by acclamation as labor member for Whitechapel.

"Admirals and commanders in the Commons have never been on the lower deck. They don't know what it's like. I do."

Descriptive gem from Irene Ward in the Commons: "The treasury bench are like closed oysters when they get together to try to whitewash themselves."....Thelma Cazalet, East Islington member, is to be known in future as Mrs. Cazalet Kier, explaining: "I think it's easier to have one name; having had two for three years I know how complicated it can be." First member to be married in the Commons' crypt, she is wife of Lt.-Cmdr. David Kie, a political journalist in peacetime...

Noel Baker, parliamentary secretary for the Minister of War Transport, says he can't state the number of towels stolen from trains during the last year. But present losses average about 28,000 a year.

Rupert De La Bere, M.P. for Evesham, is noted for the originality and assiduity with which he pursues any campaign he tackles. Right now he's gunning for the battalions of public relations officers in the government. His figure shows they number 3,614 at a cost of £1,165,080 a year.

G. M. Garro-Jones, labor member for parliament for North Aberdeen, has joined the government as parliamentary secretary to the Ministry of Production, a new office created to relieve Oliver Lyttleton of some of his onerous work as minister.

Claims that Garro-Jones is the first Welshman ever to sit at Westminster for a Scottish seat, have been refuted. Lanark's representative in 1894, the late Lord St. Davids, came from Wales.

The Conservative party has resumed the practice of publishing speakers notes for use throughout the country. This was abandoned some time ago in deference to the view that party politics were out of place in wartime...

The summer parliamentary recess was anything but a holiday for cabinet members. Sir Stafford Cripps was on the job from early morning until dusk, Anthony Eden was just as busy and Herbert Morrison and Sir John Anderson had little more than a weekend to themselves.

Soldier Wants To Retain Beard

London, Ont., Sept. 3 —(CP)— Kelso Chapman of Galt, who walked into No. 1 District Depot at Wolseley Barracks today and signed up as an active service volunteer, served notice he would stage a one-man fight to retain a brisk black beard he was sporting.

He had fostered and cherished the beard for many yeass, he told military officials. "I know the army regulations allow soldiers to wear only a moustache, but surely there must be some place in the army for a man with a full beard," he said. He declared he would go "all out" to the highest officials in the army if necessary to retain the beard.

LUCK

Of good luck and bad there is this to be said:
They follow wherever we mortals may tread,
Holding some of us back, shoving others ahead.

The whiners and whimperers sadly relate
If it weren't for bad luck they would all have been great,
That the victors were lucky they publicly state.

Now admitting some luck under victory lies
I should say from the things I have seen with my eyes,
Luck usually goes to the fellow who tries.

Luck rides with a winner! Yes, always it will,
With courage and patience, ambition and skill,
With effort and purpose no setback can kill.

Good luck is of doing, not merely of wish.
It's the hunter who brings home the deer for the dish
And the fellow out fishing who catches the fish.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED!

SWORDS SALVAGED FOR STEEL

The sword, since ancient times the emblem of war, is virtually obsolete as a fighting weapon.

Officers in the United States Navy are no longer required to own swords because the metals are needed for more essential purposes.

For many years the sword has been little more than a symbol of rank and an ornament of ceremonial attire. When a naval officer was married the bride used the bridegroom's sword to cut the wedding cake. It is a tradition, based on the ancient law of sanctuary, that a sword should never be unsheathed in church, even at a naval wedding.

Recently 10,000 swords formerly used by the British cavalry were melted down and the fine steel used for making tanks, armored cars and other engines of war.

"They shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more," prophesied Isaiah. But the prophet Joel reversed the figure and said to the gentiles and heathen: "Beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruninghooks into spears: let the weak say, I am strong."

Although army officers and members of cavalry units are still provided with swords in peacetime, these weapons are discarded as useless in war-time.

There are hundreds of different types of sword blades, handles, girts and sheaths.

A bayonet was at first merely a sword inserted in the muzzle of a musket.

Swords may be small or large, narrow or broad, curved or straight, single or double-edged, long or short.

Some of the best known types are the broadsword, the rapier, the claymore, the scimitar, and the smallsword.

The regulation sword carried by U. S. marine officers is known as the Mameluke sword and was modeled after one presented by Ahmet Pasha to Lieutenant O'Bannon after he captured Derna, on the Libyan coast in 1805.

Both Toledo, Spain, and Damascus, Syria, became famous for the fine swords they produced. In both cases the quality of the blades was owing not only to workmanship but also to natural combinations of metals found in those regions.

A short, heavy curved sword formerly used by seamen is known as a cutlas. In recent years the cutlas has been carried in the U. S. Navy only by a few petty officers as a badge of authority.

BRITISH CHIEF WARRIOR GENIE OF MAGIC LAMP

Work of Sir Alan Brooke With Army After Dunkerque Recalled by Britons Discussing Allied Commander for Europe

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

London, Sept. 3. (CP)—Top soldier in the British army, Gen. Sir Alan Brooke will have a powerful voice in the great decisions taken on the United Nations' offensive into Europe.

As Chief of the Imperial General Staff, Gen. Brooke directs British military strategy whenever British troops are serving and a second front in Europe may give him the opportunity for close-to-home execution of the offensive moves foremost in his mind.

There is a possibility a British general may be selected as commander-in-chief of the Allied armies in Europe, even though speculation has focussed on MacArthur, Marshall and McNaughton. Gen. Brooke is the outstanding military figure on the British list.

Even if he remains at the War Office as C.I.G.S., his opinion will carry tremendous weight on second-front issues. "Don't dismiss Brooke when you're speculating on the second front", a military authority said the other day. "He might be the surprise packet".

Ever since the British expeditionary Force came out of France, Britain has been planning to get back on the continent. As Commander-in-Chief of the Home Forces from July, 1940, to November, 1941, and since then as C.I.G.S., Sir Alan, now 59, has been one of the leaders handling attack preparations. His work as chief of Home Forces, which includes the Canadian and American armies in Britain, is described by a high-ranking Canadian officer, who knows the whole story, as a "magnificent job".

Order From Chaos

After Dunkerque, the situation regarding the forces in Britain was chaotic. Gen. Brooke was put in charge. The 1st Canadian Division was the only fully-equipped division in the United Kingdom. It shuttled about central and southern England, prepared to make a bold attempt to block German invasion thrusts from East Anglia to Dover and the Isle of Wight.

The British Expeditionary Force, broken up, exhausted and without weapons to speak of, was scattered all over southern England. Never in British history has a chief of home forces been faced with such a seemingly impossible situation. Brooke took off his tunic, sat down in his gloomy Whitehall office and sorted out the mess. By the fall, the situation was a little brighter and during the winter of 1940-41 whole new armies were organized, trained and equipped.

The general went to work on his own headquarters, cleaned out the fumblers, ousted slackers and gathered around him a staff of decisive-thinking officers. By plane, train and in his big, black sedan, Sir Alan travelled all over the United Kingdom, personally checking on the new army he was creating. He was the war office genie of the magic lamp, turning out division after division.

Gen. Brooke always had a particular liking for the Canadians and several times during busy months of day and night toil, he went to the Canadian camps and encouraged them. Those were the days when invasion was expected with every dawn.

No man for compromise, Gen. Brooke is tough about everything. He's a spartan and a terror for work. He's no Wellington but he slugs away steadily. Ability to make decisions and stick by them is one of his strong points. This was demonstrated in June, 1940, in connection with the Canadians.

Canadians in France

At that time Gen. Brooke was commanding two British divisions to France as the Germans thrust towards the channel ports. Every effort was being made to persuade the French generals to continue the fight. The 1st Canadian Brigade had landed at Brest and some of the units like the Army Service Corps, the 48th Highlanders from Toronto and the 1st Field Regiment, Royal Canadian Artillery were pushing towards Paris. The rest of the division was at port in southern England waiting to cross the channel.

Gen. Brooke was in a conference with the French. He broke it up when it became hopeless to argue further, and motored direct to tell the Canadian to withdraw. He turned back heads of columns, and gave a withdrawal order personally to Lt.-Col. J. H. Roberts, Kingston, then Commanding 1st Field Regiment and now the major-general who commanded the British forces in the assault on Dieppe.

"Gen. Brooke saved the 1st Canadian Division by his promptness of decision," a Canadian general said speaking of the withdrawal from France in 1940.

Sir Alan's career started in 1902 when he joined the Royal Artillery. He was a senior artillery officer with the Canadian Corps in the First Great War, held the usual appointments in commands and at staff colleges in England during peacetime and humped to the fore when he went to France with the "Second B.E.F." to try and prevent the collapse. His task as C.I.G.S. has been as unenviable as any military assignment in the Empire. Last fall he took over from Gen. Sir John Dill, who was retired at sixty.

Far Flung Strategy

An indecisive and disappointing campaign in the western desert, Japanese sweeps through Malaya, the fall of Singapore and Burma and the continual fighting withdrawals features the record of trouble. Gen. Brooke's strategy in his Whitehall direction of these far-flung campaigns against impossible odds necessarily had to be defensive, until equipment and men were ready.

These campaigns were staggering blows to the Allied peoples, but Gen. Brooke and his generals at the fronts — Wavell, Auchinleck, Alexander—salvaged much from the ruin of lost battles in the middle and far east. They slowed down a powerful foe.

Gen. Brooke handled bad situations but drained a measure of success from even the worst. There are many in Britain now who feel that if Sir Alan hadn't been C.I.G.S. during the past ten critical months, the Allies would be in a much tougher stop then they are.

20th Active Army Casualty List

Ottawa, Sept. 3 —(CP)— In the 20th Canadian (Active) Army casualty list issued since the battle of Dieppe Aug. 19, the National Defence Department yesterday reported one soldier was killed in action, seven wounded and three dangerously ill.

The man reported killed was Pte. E. A. Goode of Port Credit, Ont. Maj. Robert Thompson of Winnipeg was among the wounded.

The three men listed as dangerously ill were not Dieppe casualties. But it was stated the other eight casualties all resulted from the big-scale combined operations attack on that port in German-occupied France.

Yesterday's list brings the total number of casualties so far reported and attributed to the Canadian attack on Dieppe two weeks ago to 872 of whom 169 are dead 56T wounded, 13 not diagnosed, one in hospital, six suffering from exposure, one with a superficial injury and 121 missing.

The count is subject to a margin of error because of the possibility of repitition of names from previous lists.

The total number of men reported dead and missing by the Canadian army since the start of the war now stands at 1,060.

Labor Minister, Workers Meet

Ottawa, Sept. 3 —(CP)— Labor Minister Mitchell said early yesterday afternoon that he expected to hold a second conference with representatives of the United Steel Workers of America later to discuss wage disputes of steel workers at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sydney, N.S., and Hamilton, Ont. The first meeting was held Tuesday.

Mr. Mitchell was scheduled to attend a cabinet council in the afternoon so it was expected the conference would not begin until late Wednesday, or early Wednesday night. Union officials said they were waiting word from the Minister regarding the conference.

JUST GETTING NECKTIE

Albany, N.Y., Sept. 2— (AP) — "The finest necktie you ever saw" is to be the reward of a gasoline station operator near here who discovered a pocketbook containing $2,000 in cash and returned it. The operator identified the owner, a woman who left it in a rest room through personal papers and returned the pocketbook and contents by registered mail. Delighted, she promised him the necktie.

Riddel, and an open air movie the Great Victor Herbert. A most enjoyable evening came to a close with everyone gathered about a huge bon-fire taking part in the sing-song and roasting corn. Lady friends of the airmen and girls from the Hospitality Clubs were the invited guests.

WEDDINGS

HARRIS—BECKEL

Elgin United Church was the scene of a pretty wedding on Tuesday afternoon, September 1, when Winona Helene, third daughter of Rev. and Mrs. James E. Beckel was united in marriage to Donald Findlay, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Findlay Harris, Bannockburn. The bride's father officiated and the wedding music was played by Miss Eleanor Earl of Elgin. The wedding ring used for the ceremony has been in the Harris family for three generations.

The bride was charmingly gowned in a street length navy blue crepe dress with matching accessories and wore a corsage of American Beauty roses. Miss Muriel Welbourn of Stirling, was bridesmaid, and wore a dress of rust crepe with brown accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses. Mr. Boyd Beckel of Westport, brother of the bride, assisted the groom.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents for the immediate relatives. After a short wedding trip the bride and groom will take up residence at Auburn, where the groom is the teacher of the Continuation School.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Engagement Announcement for College Girl

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My problem concerns the intricacies of announcing an engagement. I have just finished my third year at college, and am returning shortly for my Senior year. My home town is in a state quite far away from where I am attending college, and since I have been away from there for several years at boarding school, and then at college, I have very few friends left in my home town. Most of my school and college friends live two or three hundred miles from my home town.

My chief problem is whether to just send some kind of announcement of the engagement, or to attempt to give some kind of announcement party. As a matter of fact, Mrs. Beeckman, I don't want anything elaborate, and if you tell me it's proper to send engraved announcements and dispense with the party, I would be just as satisfied.

1. First, about formal engraved engagement announcements. Are they proper? If so, to whom should they be sent? Are my fiance's relatives and friends to be included, and should his family or mine take care of this?

Now about the alternative of sending these announcements that is, the plan of giving a party here at college. A woman's club-house, suite spacious, and furnished well but simply, is available. Do you think that a small dinner party given here would be a good idea? Or should the party be dispensed with, considering the difficulties of including both groups of friends?

If you advise a party, who should announce the engagement? My mother and father would be able to be present.

What part should my fiance and his friends play in this arrangement? Would his parents be present at the party if we had one?

2. I am going to make the engagement announcement in the newspaper. Should it be sent to the newspaper in my fiance's home town as well as mine?

E.H.

I'm completely against your sending engraved announcements of your engagement. They are definitely not in good taste. You and your family will be wrong, and also you may run the risk of embarrassing your fiance's family.

The thing you should do is so much simpler: when you decide to make the announcement, tell your relatives and as many of your close friends as you can tell verbally, and then write friendly notes to your far-away friends. At the same time your fiance should be telling and writing his relatives and friends.

This is all that is necessary, and under your circumstances the party isn't really an alternative, but an "also", since the majority of your friends can't be present. The dinner party at the place you mention could be a charming occasion, given by your mother and father (with your father proposing a toast to you and your fiance, thus announcing the engagement), and with your fiance and his mother and father as the honored guests. Or your parents might give a tea-party at this club, accommodating more of you and your fiance's friends.

A dignified and charming alternative to this would be to have the announcement dinner in your own home (before you return to college), with the two families and a few close friends present. I always like home parties best.

2. Yes, your parents should send the announcement to the newspaper in your fiance's home town also.

Theory Advanced That Kidneys Cause High Blood Pressure

High blood pressure, if not properly cared for, may turn out to be a dangerous disease. Scientists are giving much study to the cause of this condition. However, so far very little is known about the causes of high blood pressure. A theory that seems to be sustained by considerable experimental fact is that it is due to some substance produced in the kidneys.

It is probable that there are many disorders which contribute to the development of high blood pressure. One theory suggests that it is due to nervous strain or nervous tension. This, in turn, causes the nerves which control the muscles in the blood vessels to become irritable so that any slight upset causes the muscles to contract. When the muscles in the blood vessels contract the opening through the blood vessel is narrowed, causing the blood pressure to rise.

Certainly operations on the nervous system have given good results in reducing high blood pressure. Unfortunately, these results have not been permanent.

Dr. Ferdinand C. Helwig of Kansas City, believes that the nervous system disturbances are not the main thing causing high blood pressure but that there is some chemical disturbance which tends to bring about the nervous system irritation.

It also has been suggested that high blood pressure may come from increased activity of certain glands of internal secretion, such as the thyroid gland, the adrenal, or the pituitary glands. It is noted that when the thyroid gland is overactive, a rise in blood pressure occurs. However, it would appear that the high blood pressure in these cases are few and far between.

It also is believed that in some cases the high blood pressure is brought about by infection or some poisonous substance circulating in the blood, but apparently there is no evidence that would definitely support this idea. High blood pressure does follow poisoning with lead and mercury but this is due to the damage that occurs to the kidneys.

The most recent experimental studies on high blood pressure appear to show fairly definitely that some substance formed by the kidney when kidney disturbances occur tends to raise the blood pressure. A substance called angiotonin has been formed which, when injected into a person, will raise the blood pressure. This substance has been found in the blood of patients suffering from high blood pressure. The kidneys apparently form a substance also which tends to lower the blood pressure and work is going on in an attempt to obtain enough of this substance and to try it out in the treatment of this disorder.

As time passes, a cure for high blood pressure in the form of an injection may be found. In the meantime, rest, freedom from worry insofar so possible and such drugs as the physician may prescribe may bring some relief.

Has Lots of Fun Designing Meals For Farmerettes

By HAZEL DEAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Oakville, Ont., Sept. 3—(CP) — Unable to enlist in the Canadian Women's Army Corps, Mrs. Georgina Hayes of Aurora, Ont. did the next best thing—she joined the Ontario Farm Service Force.

Today nearly 100 farmerettes at the Oakville farm services camp have decided the army's loss was their gain. They are agreed "the meals couldn't be better."

Born in Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, Mrs. Hayes comes from "a cooking family." Her parents kept a restaurant in Newcastle and she often recalls "the proudest moment in my life-when father taught me to roll out a little pastry in the kitchen behind our shop."

Mrs. Hayes has come a long way since the days of her first "pastry." Queen of the kitchen at Oakville camp—formerly a tourist inn—she is proud of her well-stocked ice boxes, mechanical bread slicer and large supply cupboards.

Big Supplies

More than 20 pounds of butter, 48 quarts of milk, nine dozen eggs are used in a day. Twelve dozen cookies disappear before sundown. Twenty pies are consumed in a meal.

Mrs. Hayes and her assistant, Miss Edith Jubb of Toronto, formerly of Pontefract, England, rise at 5 a.m. to prepare 7 o'clock breakfast for their hungry charges. In the opinion of the farmerettes: "Breakfast is the best meal of all."

Few girls eat lunch at camp. A farmerette prepares her own noon meal and takes it with her to work. Mrs. Hayes supplies sliced bread, jams, sandwich spread, cookies and fruit for the lunches and "the girls do the rest for themselves."

Big meal of the day is served at night when workers tumble in from the fields "to see what's cooking."

Healthy Camp

Dinner is served in a long, panelled dining room, built on the English inn plan. But the girls are more interested in food than interior decorating. Many have gained weight since their arrival and blame this on Mrs. Hayes.

She admitted "this surely is a healthy camp. The district nurse seldom visits our girls. I don't know whether my cooking has anything to do with it or not."

Mrs. Hayes has recovered from the disappointment of her rejection from the army.

"It's a lot more fun cooking for 100 farmerettes. If there were 500 I wouldn't mind a bit."

Fine Program Features Meeting Of St. Paul's W. M. S., Stirling

Stirling—The ladies of St. Paul's W. M. S. gathered at the home of Mrs. C. Pitman and Mrs. H. Wells for their September meeting on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. R. B. Duffin, president, presided over the opening exercises and business portion of the meeting. Mrs. Nora Wescott gave the secretary's report and the communications received. She reported that eight cards and three letters had been sent forth during the month. Reporting for the visiting committee Mrs. J. O'Neil and Mrs. G. Bradshaw stated fifteen visiting calls had been made. Mrs. C. F. Linn and Mrs. F. Jackman were appointed as visiting committee for September. A splendid financial report prepared by the treasurer, Mrs. M. Hick, was also read by the secretary.

Mrs. C. F. Linn, convener of the parsonage committee, gave the parsonage report and also presented the accounts in connection with the recent renovations. A special vote of thanks was tendered a working committee under the leadership of Mrs. C. Pitman who had given material assistance in the redecoration of the parsonage kitchen. Those on the committee were Mrs. Pitman, Mrs. Bradburn, Miss Grace Pitman, Mrs. Carleton Wright and Mrs. Arthur Gordonier. Rev. David Gray addressed the meeting briefly at this time expressing his appreciation of the kindly reception given him by the ladies of the congregation and the citizens throughout the community. With co-operation and endeavor the work would progress.

Fine Program

Miss Della Caldwell, convener of the program committee, directed the program of the day and following the use of a hymn and prayer by the leader, three excellent readings were given, "Now I Am for the Churches," by Mrs. R. A. Patterson, "The Importance of Sympathy," by Mrs. F. Jackman, "Cancelled Prayer," by Mrs. J. B. Thompson. All were worthy numbers and well given.

Musical contributions to the program included a group of piano numbers by Mrs. H. L. Fair, "Cradle Song," and "Lullaby," and Miss Grace Pitman, A.L.C.M., offered Gimbel's piano arrangement of "Sounds from the Sea with Variations." This splendid program was climaxed with the Benediction and the National Anthem.

An expression of gratitude on behalf of those present to Mrs. Pitman, Mrs. Wells and the committee in charge of arrangements was ably set forth by Mrs. W. L. Fox. A dainty luncheon was served and a social period thoroughly enjoyed. The committee in charge were Miss Della Caldwell, Mrs. F. Jackman, Mrs. H. Wells, and Mrs. Fred Elgie.

Furrows Dug by War Frowns

Jane Randolph advocates applying a heavy cream to help prevent wrinkles.

By HELEN FOLLETT

TO AVOID wrinkles a woman should formulate a policy of preparedness. Knowing that the underlying tissues of the human portrait are subject to partial dissolution, she must take time by the cfolick, as it were, and keep these delicate fibres firm. Attention is particularly necessary in this period of tension.

Wrinkles of serene old age are not ugly. The ugly crinkles are those that come through harboring unpleasant emotions. Envy, jealousy, selfishness, avarice, self-pity, leave their marks. The woman who flies off the handle because of the slightest irritation will take on accordion pleats before her time.

Scowl and you'll have furrows between your eyes, furrows that cannot be erased except by plastic surgery. Worry interferes with nutrition, the facial tissues starve for necessary groceries. The skin, lacking firm under-padding, falls into creases. Worry is largely a habit, one that can be overcome. Talk turkey to yourself, if you are a victim of needless anxiety.

Nightly Routine

Make every effort to keep to a high standard of mental health. Every night, after washing the face with soap and warm water, dry gently, apply a heavy cream, one that offers resistance to manipulations.

With the first finger sweep around the eye, starting at the inner corner of the upper lid, coming back underneath. That movement is to ward off turkey tracks or to weaken them if they are present.

Place the thumb at lower end of frown lines, first finger above them. Hold the finger stationary, iron upward with the thumb.

Go over the entire surface, including the neck, with a light hammering movement. Remember how you used to do five finger exercises? That's the way. Finish with a slapping to bring a glow.

Receive Many Gifts On 25 Wedding Anniversary

A very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Treverton on Saturday, August 29th., when the three sisters and two brothers of Mrs. Treverton with their families paid them a surprise visit, it being the occasion of Mr. and Mrs. Treverton's 25th. wedding anniversary. Over thirty were present. An address was read and a beautiful gift of silverware was presented on behalf of the brothers and sisters. The bride and groom of twenty-five years both made suitable replies thanking them for the gift. After lunch and ice cream the guests departed for their homes wishing Mr. and Mrs. Treverton many more happy anniversaries.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Dafoe, West Huntingdon, spent one day last week at Mr. Percy Lancaster's.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorne McKenzie and family visited recently at Mr. Stanley Bradshaw's, Wyman's Bridge.

Jack Emerson is spending a week at his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Treverton spent Sunday evening with Mrs. C. Goodman and boys.

Miss Olive Bradshaw, Belleville, was a weekend guest of her sister, Mrs. Lorne McKenzie.

Mr. H. Clement has painted the school house making a decided improvement.

A light frost visited here last week but did no damage.

HOMELESS WANDERER

An ocean-going freighter, the "Lugano", has recently been added to the Swiss mercantile marine.

Hints On Lawn Mowers Aid Amateur Gardeners

The amateur gardener still has many hours of lawn cutting to be covered before the first frost comes. Whether he has a 25 foot square lot or a two acre estate, he should most certainly take good care of that lawn mower which must last for the duration and be kept in A-1 condition.

There are a number of things to be remembered in order to keep the lawns trimmed properly and the mower in working order. A lawn mower should be kept well-oiled at all times. It should never be left outside leaning against the wall or in a corner of the yard as it will rust. It should be kept under cover in the tool shed or in the garage.

Be careful not to let it drop on the pavement as parts are cast and will break readily. Another point to be remembered is that blades are blunted by contact with hard objects such as stones or gravel. Also, the blades should be adjusted to cut low or high.

Unless the man of the house is pretty much of a repair expert, the lawn mower should be taken to a reliable repair man to have any adjustments made or the blades sharpened during the summer.

The amount of steel found in two ordinary lawn mowers has been estimated as sufficient to make three 25-pound shells.

BRITISH SWEETS BETTER

London, (CP) —The story that "pep" pills are given panzer division Germans to give them more punch has been exploded by British Army medical authorities who said tablets found on captured Germans in the Middle East contained an inferior form of sugar and didn't equal the boiled sweets provided British troops.

Canada Enters War's Fourth Year

Armored Riders of the Prairie Learn the Mechanics of War

By GEORGE FINLAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, Sept. 3. (CP)—Across historic Prairie trails, the rumble of the modern machines of war—the striking power of a streamlined army—roll today.

This fourth years of war has brought the Armored Riders of the Plains, men from the cities, towns and hamlets. From the farms, the woodlands and the far northern trapline they have come to learn the mechanics of war—the handling of tanks, armored cars, the motorized infantry, with troop carrier trucks and motor drawn field guns.

Old Fort Garry in Winnipeg—only the massive gates stand today—has heard again the tramp of many feet. Too, there is the modern note, the throbbing motors of war. The site of the old fort has been used for a drill ground. Nearby is an ordnance depot, with its huge army trucks, its repair shops and all that it takes to "keep the wheels rolling".

To the camps on the Prairies, many surrounded by fields of grain promising a rich harvest, dairy farms and meadowlands, the men have gone from peacetime jobs. Three years ago many of these men were tractor drivers, handling the big machines on Prairie farms. Others came from stores and offices and mechanics from city and town garages, men trained in the care of pleasure ,car motors, of trucks and highway transports.

Here and Overseas

Thousands of the men from the West are overseas today. Many are tankmen, driving the powerful land cruisers of war. They speed army transports across the English countryside, troop carriers and guns to the coasts.

Other thousands are in training in the Prairie camps. They roar over historic highways, the pioneer trails where, less than 80 years ago, lumbering Red River carts, with wheels of wood five feet high and ox-drawn, carried supplies from Fort Garry to the warriors in the Riel rebellion in '85.

Ove the trails where cavalrymen once galloped, speed the new warriors in battle-dress of khaki. Over these same trails journeyed the western farm pioneers, to take up their homesteads and to make Canada famous in the world of wheat.

Camp Shilo, in Manitoba, selected as the training centre for Canada's first parachute battalion; Dundurn, the Saskatchewan training centre, and Sarcee Camp in the rolling foothills of Alberta, all have played a part in preparing men for the Armored Riders of the Plains.

To Distant Coasts

These were the "summer time" camps of peacetime. Today they have spread across countless acres, with modern accommodation to house thousands of trainees. From these camps the men of Canada go to war. To the eastern seaboard, moving onward to the shores of Britain, or guarding the Dominion's coastline. Or to the Pacific coast to stand guard against the foe from the setting sun.

To isolated hamlets, the Armored Riders have brought the throb of mighty engines, the machines of war, where townsmen and farm dweller have been shown the forces of mechanical warfare.

The camps were planned in peacetime. They have left untouched the acres of grainlands, but from the wheat fields they have brought the men to roll the wheels of mechanised divisions.

Use the New OXYDOL and wash

White WITHOUT BLEACHING

Clean WITHOUT HARD RUBBING

Save So Much Wear And Tear—And Get Glorious Washes Just With Rich, Safe Washing Action

Yes, get whiter washes... and do it so safely your clothes last much longer.

Good news? You bet! With today's New OXYDOL... you can avoid the harsh bleaching that so easily weakens fabrics and fades colours. You can avoid the hard rubbing that causes so much wash-day wear and tear! And your clothes come glistening white just in the usual washer-running time!

The New Oxydol with livelier "Hustle-Bubble" suds is now much richer in washing power. Every ounce gets out more dirt for you. You'll find it goes after that stubborn cloudiness... that gradual yellowing so many women notice with other soaps. Clothes actually come as much as 9 to 11 shades whiter by Electric Eye tests than with many other widely used soaps.

So change to the New Oxydol. And except for stains, of course, or unusual pieces, get a wash that's really white without bleaching. New OXYDOL is the last word in modern laundry soap. Safe for your coloured washables and your lovely washable rayons. Even milder now on hands.

Messages "From Birth To Taxes" New Service to Forces in U.K.

A service for Canadian Expeditionary Forces in Great Britain has been inaugurated by the telegraph companies, similar to the "canned messages" that have been in vogue for some time. There will be no "singing telegrams", but for the sum of sixty cents plus a five-cent tax, up to three of the 142 texts suggested may be sent.

It has been figured out that there are 142 most frequent and basic messages from birth to taxes. These are listed under correspondence, greeting, health, promotions, money, congratulations, war damage, bereavement, and miscellaneous, and may be sent to and from members of His Majesty's Active Forces including Army, Royal Navy, Merchant Navy, Air Force and Nurses.

It is surprising how much vital news one of these cablegrams can carry. Take text No. 85, "Son Born;" add 12), "I wish we were together on this special occasion, and 46, "All well at home", and a pretty complete story is told,—enough to put the Service man's mind at east. A ten-page letter can be shortened to one word, (29) "Love", and / or (42) "Kisses". Most frequently used, according to the telegrah companies is No. 15, "No news of you for sometime", to which is often added (19), "Please write". Since peace of mind is so important to the morale of the men overseas, the Government is anxious that they get frequent messages from home.

To send an EFM it is necessary to have all the information of full rank, serial number,—all the data used in addressing ordinary mail, and the sender's name in full.

Canada Three Years at War

Canada's Husky Wings Of Peace Flying for War

By LORNE BRUCE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Edmonton, Sept. 3—(CP)— War has taken over the romance of commercial aviation and this husky infant of Canada's industrial life now is being used almost entirely directly or indirectly in the war effort.

Civil aviation probably has converted itself into a military medium more than any other industry operating before hostilities broke out in 1939. Ninety per cent of the industry is devoted to war work and it is difficult to get freight or passenger space without a priority.

Most of the existing commercial services have been merged into one large organization. This has resulted in airlines being able to do more than twice the work they did in 1939 with slightly less personnel and approximately the same amount of equipment.

Search for new mining fields and the development of discovery areas expanded the industry in Canada until this country led the world in air freight—30,000,000 pounds in 1939. Mining traffic has declined somewhat since 1939 but this has been more than offset by the increase in military freight traffic.

Planes for War

The chief obstacles to expansion now are the difficulty of procuring suitable commercial aircraft, especially freighter, that can carry big loads, together with scarcity of experienced personnel. The industry would like to buy bigger and better planes but none are avialable. Every plane that could be put into service has been reconditioned. A new plane is allotted to civil aviation only on the rare occasions when the priority board decides the move is vital to the war effort.

In conversion to a wartime basis, the commercial aviation industry provided the framework without which the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan might not have risen to the success anticipated for it. The industry's fields, its personnel and the flying clubs were merged into the training scheme.

Twenty elementary flying training schools and nine air observer schools are being operated by civilians. A large part of the aircraft and engine overhaul work required by the Royal Canadian Air Force is done in government plants managed by private industry and the Trans-Canada Airlines instrument repair and testing bureau at Winnipeg is doing a large amount of work for the R.C.A.F.

Pilots for War

In addition commerical aviation has sent hundreds of pilots, aeronautical engineers and mechanics into the R.C.A.F., the Royal Air Force and the ferry command, where their resourcefulness and experience under extreme weather conditions prove invaluable.

The commercial aviation industry made rapid progress between the inauguration of the first regular airmail, passenger and freight service in the Dominion June 1, 1924, between Halleybury, Ont., and Rouyn, Que. Now it has taken the war in its stride, having developed from a scattering of independent lines into a "big business," going "all out" for the war effort.

FRENCH-CANADIAN ADAPTS HIMSELF TO WARRIOR LIFE

By MAURICE DESJARDINS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Valcartier, Que., Sept. 3. —(CP) — The young French-Canadian habitant of Quebec has traded his pitchfork for a bayonet and swoops over hills and dales in a valentine tank instead of a tractor.

In military training camps from coast to coast and commando schools overseas, Jean Baptiste awaits the signal for a fight that will surely come when he can "fix dat fellow Hitler and fix him good".

"No better fighter anywhere", was the tribute paid recently by Defence Minister Ralston to the French Canadian soldier. Descendants of a long line of fighting settlers, the habitant farmers and woodsmen have adapted themselves to army life in a remarkable way.

Hundreds have joined the Royal Canadian Air Force, and you'll find many a bearded tar on corvettes of the Royal Canadian Navy, who was born and raised in picturesque fishing villages of the Gaspe coast.

Hundreds Crowd Employment Offices

Toronto, Sept. 2 (CP)—Hundreds of persons crowded the Government Unemployment Insurance offices here today to get job permits under the new Selective Service Regulations, which require that all persons must work.

B. G. Sullivan, Regional Superintendent, said it appeared that a lot of the people calling at the offices quit their jobs yesterday before midnight deadline. "We will be receiving any time now lists from employers regarding workers leaving their employ. Action will be taken against those who attempted to evade the seven-day limit regulation."

The regulation he mentioned requires seven days' notice before employees leave their jobs, or seek new positions.

Livestock Sent To Market In Tremendous Rush

Toronto, Sept. 2 (CP)—Steady prices ruled on cattle sales up to mid-session at the livestock market here today. No steers were offered. Sheep, and lambs were steady. Hogs unsettled. Calves were steady to 25 cents higher.

Receipts reported by the Dominion marketing service were: Cattle 220, calves 250, hogs 400, sheep and lambs 290.

Fed calves sold at $11-$12.50, cows $5-$8.75 and stockers at $8.50-$10.25.

Veal calves sold at $15.50-$16 for choice with other grades selling downward to $8.

Sheep sold at $5-$8.

No price was established for hogs which closed previously at $15.90-$16.

Canada's Little Man to Get a Break As Cheaper Lines to Stay on Market

It is the "little man' and his wife who are worried these days—the little man multiplied by millions, and that means a lot of worry.

Men and women living on low incomes, or incomes greatly reduced by war taxation have been wondering just where they are going to get off, in the face of diminishing supplies of household commodities and clothing.

If there were not going to be enough things to go around, would it mean that only the people with most money would be able to buy what they needed? Recognizing this problem, the Wartime Prices and Trade Board recently took steps to make sure that this would not happen.

Because of the lack of supplies the Board has had to tell manufacturers to cut out certain lines of goods. Now the Board is going to see that while the variety of goods is cut down, cheaper lines will remain on store shelves and that the quality of those goods is maintained as far as possible.

This is being done to make sure that the woman wanting something costing 69 cents, will not be told: "I'm sorry but that line is cut out, all we can give you now is this article at $1.10".

From now on when industry is told to reduce the variety of its products—to cut its lines of goods from say, 26 to six, it will also be instructed to maintain lines at various price levels, in fact the tendency will be to cut down higher priced articles. It is hoped that this will insure that the six lines left to the manufacturer will not all be at high price levels.

Government officials warn, of course, that in some instances goods are off the shelves for the duration of the war, simply because suppliers are not available for their manufacture. Many mass production factories where goods were turned out in great quantity and sold at cheap prices, were easily converted to war purposes. Now these factories are probably making gun parts instead of kitchen utensils, or filling some other civilian need.

MADE GOOD MUSTARD

Toronto, Sept. 2. (CP)—Lew Wak of Toronto was convicted on a charge of illegal possession of liquor after a policeman testified in court he had found a bowl in Wak's house containing a mixture of whisky, mustard and vinegar. Wak said "it made very good mustard", the officers said.

ARRESTED FOR HORSE THEFT

Lindsay, Ont., Sept. 2. —(CP)— A 14-year old boy was arrested here on a charge of horse theft. Police said the youth was working for a district farmer, from whom he stole the horse to ride into the town.

ALEXANDER

Situation Here Improves

He called the United States east coast and the Caribbean a "happy hunting ground" for submarines "until our American comrades were able to mount convoy escorts in these regions.

"Since then," Mr. Alexander went on, "the situation over there has substantially improved and we are glad to have been able to render some assistance in this direction."

The battleship Gneisenau now lies dismantled at the Baltic port of Gdynia and the cruiser Prinz Eugen is completing repairs at a German port. These two vessels were with the Scharnhorst in the Nazi channel dash from Brest.

Of the task of convoying supplies to Russia through the Arctic, Mr. Alexander said:

"It probably &was at its worst at midsummer before the ice had receded northward and the convoys were forced to proceed in continuous daylight.

Norhtern Route Dangerous

"With recession of the ice and some periods of darkness, the difficulties will tend to decrease a little but the problem remains fundamentally the same and the dangers are great...

"Merchant shipbuilding tonnage production in this country has far outstripped production in the first three years of the last war," he told his audience, "while at the same time the very heavy naval losses in all categories of ships was practcally made good in each category and in one or two cases exceeded."

Discussing the Mediterranean situation, Mr. Alexander said that "never once has the Italian battlefleet dared to proceed west of Sardinia, or since the battle of Matapan in March, 1941, to the east of that cape in Greece although on paper the strength of the Italian fleet should give them sea superiority through the Mediterranean."

Fewer Italian Cruisers

He said that of the seven eight-inch gun cruisers with which Musolini started the war, two or possibly three remained and that only seven were left from Italy's original dozen six-inch cruisers.

The Italians also have suffered heavy submarine losses and probably now have in service little more than half the number they had at the war's start.

Mr. Alexander said that in spite of naval losses in the Far East "we now have been able to build up a powerful fleet in the Indian Ocean.

"It was aircraft from carriers of this fleet," he said, "which co-operated successfully in the capture of Diego Suarez (Madagascar) last May and units of the fleet covered the landing."

In 35 operations, he said, 815 planes have been flown from aircraft carriers to the island fortress of Malta in the Mediterranean in slightly more than a year.

Switzerland's road building program includes the construction of a great main North-South-East-West crossroads system and of several bypasses.

Victory Recipes Planned For Canadians' Health

By LAURA C. PEPPER
Chief Consumer Section
Department of Agriculture

Baskets of blush-cheeked peaches in market mean desserts to many shoppers but to many more an opportunity to can for winter use. Canning seems uppermost in the minds of most housewives judging from numerous requests received by Consumer Section, Department of Agriculture for information on the best methods while keeping within the sugar ration. Fortunately peaches are a sweet fruit and can be canned successfully in a light syrup (one cup sugar to two cups water). If directions are followed accurately no one should lose a single jar.

Home economic experts of this department have been busy in their experimental kitchen ever since the first fruits appeared on the market, testing and re-testing recipes for Canadian housewives.

This year an excellent crop of peaches is expected in both Ontario and British Columbia. In addition to being delicious to eat they contain considerable amounts of precious vitamin A. A bumper crop of apricots, far excellent last year's output is anticipated in B.C. This should be good news to housewives in Western Canada because they receive the bulk of the crop. This fruit, like peaches, fresh or canned is flavorful and also valuable in the diet.

But to get back to peaches, there have been several new varieties of this fruit developed within the last few years at the Vineland Horticulture Experimental Station, Ontario Department of Agriculture. They are known as the "V" varieties.

In former years the Elberta peach was the chief variety grown in Niagara Peninsula and British Columbia and, until recently, constituted together with the Hales, Rochesters and a few other varieties the bulk of the total crop. However, this variety of peach presented a serious economic problem since the season was short and it had to be marketed in a matter of about ten days. The new varieties of "V" peaches have been a partial answer to this problem. By a plant-breeding project started in 1915 peaches have been produced which like the Elbertas, possess excellent canning qualities and have advanced the peach season by days, and sometimes weeks. As a result of this breeding project four "V" peaches, Vedette, Valiant, Viceroy and Veteran are now extensively grown in the Niagara Peninsula and in British Columbia and, constitute about 30 per cent of the present peach acreage.

The Vanguard, Vedette, Valiant, Viceroy and Veteran mature in the order noted and so, with the addition of a few other varieties which come in between the Vanguard and Vedette, there is practically a continuous supply from about the middle of August until well on in September, the season finishing with the Elberta.

All of the "V" peaches are yellow-fleshed and semi-free to freestone. The fruit is large, attractively streaked with red and of good quality. In some districts, particularly in B.C., the Vedette seems to be preferred for canning, while the Valiant is perhaps superior in Ontario.

The Crawford variety is now of the past. It was really a type including several varieties which have now been largely replaced by the "V's".

Following are the two methods we found most satisfactory —the hot water bath and the hot-pack oven method. In experimenting we found in using the oven method it was best to pre-cook the fruit before packing in jars. More fruit may be placed in the jars this way and it helps to prevent darkening of the fruit often found in the oven method. Follow directions exactly.

Canned Peaches
(Water Bath Method)

Select firm, ripe peaches. Immerse in boiling water for three minutes. Cold dip, peel and remove pits. Pack halved or sliced peaches into clean jars. Fill with boiling syrup (1 cup sugar to 2 cups water, boiled 3 minutes). Partially seal. With a wire clamp jars adjust the top clamp but do not spring down lower one. With screw top jars screw tight—then unscrew half turn. On vacuum jars adjust metal clamps. Process in water bath for 20 minutes, counting time from when water begins to boil. Remove from water bath and tighten tops.

Canned Peaches
(Oven Method)

Select firm, ripe peaches. Immerse in boiling water for three minutes. Cold dip, peel and remove pits. Simmer in syrup (1 cup sugar to 2 cups water) in open kettle for five minutes. Pack hot fruit in clean, hot jars, and fill with syrup. Partially seal. With wire clamp jars adjust top clamp but don't spring down lower one. With screw top jars screw tight—then unscrew half turn. On vacuum jars adjust metal clamps. Process in 275F oven 20 minutes. Remove from oven and tighten tops.

hibitions—all backed up by the guns of the Gestapo."

Throughout the world, men in the United States fighting forces were listening to their commander in chief. Much of the address was directed specifically to them and he gave assurence that "we here at home are supremely conscious of our obligations to you," now and in the future, and "we will not let you down."

The United Nations, Mr. Roosevelt asserted, have the technical means, physical resources, courage, vision and will required to build and sustain the kind of world order which alone, he said, can justify youth's sacrifices now.

"But we must keep at it—we must never relax, never falter, never fear—and we must keep at it together," he said.

"We must maintain the offensive against evil in all its forms. We must work and we must fight to insure that our children shall have and shall enjoy in peace their inalienable rights to freedom of speech, freedom of religion, freedom from want, freedom from fear.

"Only on those bold terms can this total war result in total victory."
tory."

He said the United States forces were conducting themselves in a manner worthy of the country's highest, proudest traditions and that none of the early pioneers showed greater fortitude or determination. The men who fought in 1918, 1863 and 1776, he said, showed no greater gallantry or selfless devotion to duty and country. Furthermore, he said, American men realize why they are fighting.

"You know," he said, "that the road which has led you to the Solomon Islands, or to the Red Sea, or to the coast of France, is in fact an extension of main street, and that when you fight, anywhere along that road, you are fighting in the defence of your own homes, your own free schools, your own churches, your own ideals."

BOMBERS ALL DAY

Gen. Montgomery's report on the situation, however, made it clear that thus far the battle—on which the fate of Egypt may hinge—is still in its opening phase and that the main bodies of the opposing armies had not yet met.

From the disposition of Rommel's armored strength, concentrated mainly between the tip of the Qattara Depression and El Ruweisat Ridge, 12 miles north, it appeared he might attempt to turn the British left flank.

Advance Axis elements already have moved forward several miles in this sector, filtering cautiously through minefields in an easterly and then northerly direction without encountering the main defence forces.

During this movement across desert terrain over which Prime Minister Churchill walked only 3 weeks ago on a visit to the front there was some fighting between tanks.

Latest reports indicated German losses were considerably heavier than the British.

U.S. Heavy Bombers Active

United States air forces headquarters said American heavy bombers had been active over the Mediterranean, intercepting an Axis convoy and scoring a direct hit on one merchant ship and near misses against others.

Other heavy bombers attacked the enemy base at Candia, Crete, where it was believed they scored hits on four service vessels and perhaps a fifth.

Considerable enemy air activity also was reported yesterday over the front and there were innumerable air battles as Allied fighters challenged the Axis planes.

R.A.F. fighters broke up one formation of 40 German dive-bombers escorted by 30 Messerschmitss, shooting down five dive-bombers and two Messerschmitts. The dive-bombers jettisoned their bombs.

Numerous Dogfights

Considerable activity also was reported on the part of the Axis air force, resulting in numerous dogfightas in which, the communique said, six German dive-bombers and nine fighters were shot down.

(In London, a Britis source said Rommel's failure to strike in full force after concentrating a great weight of armored equipment for a general offensive might mean he had been surprised by the violent artillery and air bombardment which met his first thrusts.)

CHILE MINISTER

En route to his post in Canada, Dr. Eduardo Grove, minister from Chile, stopped off in New York. Speaking of his country's attitude in the war, Grove said, "The idea of severance of relations with Axis was born with Pearl Harbor. It has grown and is reaching maturity."

Action On The Alamein Line

Dark clouds of smoke drift skyward as a shell bursts near Mt. Himeimat, one of the best known landmarks in the southern sector of the Alamein line and now scene of the heaviest fighting in the El Alamein front, in the Egypt campaign. The mountain, which is 650 feet high up, has one peak looking rather like the sphinx and the other like one of the pyramids. The soldiers lying on the ground taking cover, are part of a patrol looking for the enemy.

Dumps 150,000 Lbs. of Bombs

Individually and collectively a milder group of young Canadians could be found nowhere but as a crew they have unloaded some 150,000 pounds of high explosive and incendiary bombs on Germany. They were in the Cologne raid and in every big operation since then.

Now they have earned a spell of leave and a tour of duty in Canada instructing other airmen who will follow the paths they have marked out to the battle areas of the second great war.

The opportunity of flying back to Canada from a raid on Germany was given to them, as Flt. Lt. E. B. (Tim) Reid of Toronto put it, in order to bring the war a little closer to the minds of the Canadian people. Reid, a public relations officer, accompanied the men on their flight back to Canada.

Log of Plane

Here is a log of 29 hours of flying out of the 30 hours which ended at 12:10 a.m. today when they landed at nearby Rockcliffe Airport:

11:15 p.m. (British Time) Tuesday — Took off from a British air station;

2:21 a.m. (British Time) Wednesday—Dropped bombs on Saarbruecken;

5:45 a.m. (British Time) Wednesday—Back at their station;

12:10 a.m. (EDT) Thursday — Landed at the Capital of Canada.

On their return from Germany the fliers flew 150 miles to an R.A.F. ferry command station and boarded a plane for Canada. They made one stop in Newfoundland.

Today, the men go to Toronto Friday they will go to Montreal, then to Winnipeg and other western cities in a round of public appearances in Canada After that they will get their leave.

The crew had no trouble over Saarbruecken, they said. They encountered the usual amount of "flak" but were not hit.

Not Attacked on Raid

There were some fighters up but we were not attacked," said Higham the pilot and skipper of the crew.

The flames from the fires started during the raid could be seen for 40 or 50 miles and the smoke rose to a height of 3,000 or 4,000 feet.

They declined to say what their targets were or at what height they flew. Those are official secrets. Their casual remarks about the raid probably sprung from the fact it was old stuff to them. As a crew they have been in 23 raids and individually on many more. Morrison has 36 operations to his credit and Higham has 31.

Ministers Welcome Crew

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Defence Minister Ralston and Minister Power, who also made a Transatlantic trip from Britain by air this week, waited for two hours at the air station to welcome the crew. So did several score headquarters officers, newspaper reporters and photographers.

A rousing cheer went up as the big ferry plane came to a stop and the men stepped out.

Formalities were brief. Maj. Power stepped up and said:—

"Mr. King, I have the honor to present to you five men who bombed Saarbruecken last night. They are representative of the youth of Canada and a credit and a glory to our nation".

The Prime Minister then made a short speech of welcome, telling the men of the pride with which the Canadian people viewed the ccurage and devotion to duty of The Canadian fliers overseas.

The fliers all were clad in the blue battle dress worn by airmen overseas. Higham had the ribbon of the Distinguished Flying Cross, awarded for bringing a crippled bomber home on one motor and making a perfect belly landing. He said Lee should have had the decoration because Navigator Lee made it possible for them to get home.

Navigator Praised

"We passed by two or three spots where we would have been cold turkey if it had not been for Siggy's navigating" he said.

Higham is a slim, fair-haired youth of 22, who joined the R.C.A.F. from technical school. Although brought up on the farm he looks forward to some loafing during his leave rather than helping with the harvest.

Lee, 29, the oldest of the group, is dark and chunky. He managed a chain grocery store in Winnipeg before he joined up and wears a Koala bear on his chest as a good luck charm.

Sveinson, 24, is a husky blonde fellow with bushy curly hair. He worked at grain elevators and garages at Efros.

One Native of Guelph

Loach, the front-gunner and bomb aimer, is a native of Guelph. He is dark and handsome and looks even younger than his 19 years.

He was the only one who met a friend in the welcoming delegation at the airport. The friend was Gordon Sinclair, reporter for the Toronto Star. Loach was a caddy on the Islington Golf course and carried Gordon's clubs in pre-war days.

Morrison has a round face and a cheery smile for all his "Four-Guns" nickname. He shoots the four guns from the tail of the bomber and has a Nazi fighter plane to his credit.

He said coming back from a raid the German got on their tail over the North Sea.

Just Keep Firing

"He fired first and I fired a second after but he missed," he added. "I just pressed the trigger and kept them pressed until he caught fire and dropped into the sea."

Loach has one enemy plane damaged to his credit and Morrison has a probable.

The lads were distinctly on their guard against letting out information which might be of value to the enemy, as Maj. Power found out.

"What squadron are you from?" he asked one of them.

"I am not allowed to tell you, Sir," was the reply.

"Oh, it's all right. I am the Minister for Air," said Mr. Power.

"Oh yes, you inspected us last week," the airman recalled.

Casualties are not overly heavy on bombing raids, said Flt. Lt. Reid. Unless there is a combination of unfortunate conditions they are usually light.

He said the Moose Squadron went through five big raids without a loss. It is named after Wing Cmdr. John (Moose) Fulton of Kamloops B.C., who commanded it and who has since been reported missing.

KISS YOUR TIRED FEELING GOODBYE!

Pepless Many Suffer Low Blood Count—And Don't Know It.

The baffling thing about low blood count is that you can weigh about as much as you ever did—even look healthy and strong, yet—you can feel as if you had lead in your legs, dopey, tired and pepless.

Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. It is their vital job to carry life-giving oxygen from your lungs throughout your body. And just as it takes oxygen to explode gasoline in your car and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of oxygen to explode the energy in your body and give you going power.

Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. They are world-noted for the help they give in increasing the number and strength of red corpuscles. Then, with your blood count up, you'll feel like bounding up the stairs as if you were floating on air. Ask your druggist for Dr. Williams Pink Pills today.

RAILS HOPS CITY

This morning two German planes one of which was shot down, dropped explosives in southwest England and a third enemy aircraft bombed a point in the west of England where there were some casualties and damage.

A short time earlier several formations of Spitfires swept homeward from the direction of Calais and Dunkirk.

Karlsruhe, a city of 155,000 population, stands on an elevated plain five miles east of the river and 65 miles southeast of Saarbrueckon, coal and iron production point which was blasted Tuesday night by more than 200 R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. bombers in a raid officially termed "an outstanding success."

Explosions Heard in England

Observers on the English southeast coast said explosions and vivid flashes developed across Dover Strait around midnight and German searchlights could be seen probing the skies.

Another R.A.F. raid on the same area started before 4 a.m., and continued 20 minutes.

Two German bombers were shot down in raids shortly before midnight last night upon areas in east and northeastern England. Authorities said the raiders caused only slight damage and there were no reports of casualties.

A Berlin broadcast said military objectives in the industrial Midlands were the targets.

It claimed German bombers hit a military base on the Isle of Wight, in the English channel before Portsmouth, by daylight yesterday and carried out reconnaissance flights over Britain and "protestion duties over the channel."

PROVISIONAL RED

killing about fifty Germans with bayonets and hand grenades.

Minor operations by scouts, snipers and gunners were reported from the Leningrad front, where Autumn is already in the air.

The midnight communique announced another in a series of withdrawals by Red Army forces posted southwest of Stalingrad, threatened for a week under the weight of a German attack paced by 150 tanks.

"Our troops defending this line disabled and destroyed by artillery fire about thirty enemy tanks", the communique said. "However, a group of German tanks succeeded in penetrating our lines. After stubborn fighting, our troops in this sector retreated to a new defensive line".

(Berlin broadcasts asserted Stalingrad now was within range of German big guns from the south, implying that shelling soon would contribute to the havoc already wrought within the Volga River industrial centre by Hitler's bombers.)

Repeated counter attacks helped preserve Soviet positions northwest of Stalingrad, the communique said. One Russian force destroyed eight Nazi tanks, 12 ammunition trucks and seven anti- tank guns and wiped out about a company of Germans.

The battle of Novorossisk developed after prolonged skirmishing at sea and in the rugged Krasnodar area of the western Caucasus.

"West of Krasnodar our troops would protect their livestock.

ADVENT OF U. S.

"Appearance of these forerunners of the American air fleets of the fourth year of the war will perhaps be regarded by future historians as the most significant event of the period under review." The Air Ministry mentioned specifically precision-bombing attacks on Germany by Flying Fortresses and the work done by Bostons, Liberators and Catalinas with the Coastal Command.

Help in Convoy Work

The latter was credited with sharing in the "notable achievement" of convoying "every one of the American soldiers who reached this island without loss."

The ministry also said that Mustang fighters with the Army Co-operation Command had "performed admirably" during the Aug. 19 Canadian-led raid on Dieppe.

A hint of the growing striking power of the R.A.F. was given by the Air Ministry when it said that while the Bomber Command was capable of 1,000-plane raids on Germany "little more than 10 per cent of our operational aircraft have been engaged in bombing Germany."

1,000 Nazis Shot Down

During the year, the statement said, home-based British fighters have shot down "close to 1,000" German planes over Europe while 200 Nazi night raiders have been destroyed over Britain.

R.A.F. losses in the European theatre in the same period were put at 700 planes.

Authoritative sources said the Air Ministry's figures brought to 8,065 the number of Axis aircraft destroyed during the first three years of the war compared with 6,231 British planes lost.

An "anniversary" statement issued simultaneously by the British Army said Britain has been able to concentrate in the United Kingdom a greater striking power than ever before—thus bringing operations on a continental scale within the range of possibility.

The statement said the year had been marked by "a steady transition from defensive to offensive preparations" for the forces based in Britain.

SWEDEN PREPARES

Based largely upon Great Britain's war experiences, the Swedish Evacuation Commission has issued a set of regulations for welfare work among persons "bombed out" in the event of war.

PRICE CONTROL and the CONSUMER

By BYRNE HOPE SANDERS

Wartime Prices and Trade Board)

Remember the old quilting bees and barn-raisings?

You may be too young for that but you will have heard how the people of pioneer days used to come together and pool their efforts to make a patch quilt to help keep some family of the neighborhood warm, or to raise a building that would protect their livestock.

There is still plenty of pooling of effort in the country where neighbors gather to thresh the grain or cut the corn or even to saw wood.

The earliest settlers of this continent, facing scarcities of food and clothing pooled their precious supplies and apportioned them to everyone on an equal basis.

That was the spirit of the pioneer—a spirit that exists still in many communities. It is the spirit we need today on a national scale—that willingness to help our neighbor, to share and share alike, to sacrifice, if necessary, but sacrifice together for the general welfare.

The good neighbor will not buy food or clothing or electric stoves or household gadgets in such a way that the man next door or down the street or on the next concession will have to go without. The house wife who buys more canned goods than she needs, or the electric toaster that she can get along without, or the new wool dress when she already has plenty of clothes in her wardrobe, is not doing her "bit".

For, if we are going to win this titantic battle, we must take our supplies of civilian goods stretch as far as possible so that materials and machines and manpower can produce tanks and guns and aircraft instead of pretty frocks and nifty gadgets for the house. We must do without LUXURIES. We must do with ESSENTIALS.

As a good neighbor, we will NOT buy more than we need. We will NOT expect the Joneses down the street to get along without any electric iron while we store two or three we do not use away, just in case the one we are using now should wear out before the war is over. We will NOT expect our neighbor to get along without warm blankets when we have lots in our closet to keep us warm.

Every housewife knows what she has on hand, what she needs to keep her family healthy. Let her decide what peacetime purchases she can do without. She will not want to enjoy luxuries while her neighbor starves. She will not want to wear a different dress every day while the woman next door goes about ill-clad.

Let us make our consumer goods go as far as possible. Let us share and share alike . . . be frugal and get long together, like the pioneers of old, that we may have a future that will be worth sharing.

Oshawa Aces Eliminate Esquire Jrs. From Softball Playdowns By 13-0 Victory in Second Game

Locke, Hurling for Winners, Allows but One Hit to the Locals

LUSTY HITTING

Playing inspired ball behind the masterful one hit pitching of Locke, their No. 1 hurler, Billy Trout's Oshawa Aces disposed of Red Townsend's local Esquire Juniors in their O.A.S.A. playdowns in straight games as they trimmed the locals by a decisive 13-0 margin in the Motor City Wednesday evening.

Oshawa defeated the Esquires in the first game of their series here last week and repeated the dose on their own home lot Wednesday when they blasted out a fifteen-hit assault on three Belleville hurlers to oust the Esquires from the junior provincial softball playdowns.

Actually the locals had only one real chance to go ahead in the ball game after the Oshawa nine had conked out a brace of doubles and a homer in the first inning to score two runs. That was at the start of the second frame when they loaded the bases with only one away but could not score.

Symans had beaten out a hit for a single to start the inning. Adams and Rogers then drew walks to load the bases and Gannon promptly drove a liner into the first baseman's mitt with Symons being doubled off third base to end the inning. Again in the third Oshawa popped up a double play to spoil the locals' chances and nip short a possible Belleville rally.

The big thorn in the Esquire lads' sides, however, was Bathe, the Oshawa second sacker, who conked out two homers, one in the first and another in the third. He also hit for a triple and a double to get four out of five for the night.

The performance of the locals afield was considerably better than their effort here last week but the Oshawa lads' hitting strength was not to be denied and they nicked Freddie Waite for eleven safeties up to the seventh, when he was relieved by Adams, who lasted just one third of an inning. Bunton then went in in the eighth to finish the game as Oshawa scored seven times in the last two innings.

There were no particular stars on the Belleville team with the answer for their defeat being their inability to hit. Locke continually had them popping into the infielders' hands or saw his teammates come up with sparkling plays to retire local batters.

DODGERS HAVE A 4½ GAME LEAD OVER THE CARDS

Durocher Uses Five Hurlers to Down Cincinnati Reds in 12 Frames, 3-2

YANKS WIN TWICE

(By JUDSON BAILEY)
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Brooklyn Dodgers now have a 4 1-2 game lead in their National League pennant prancing so who's nervous?

Well, Mr. Leo Ernest Durocher, the Dodgers' peerless pilot, appears to be—for one.

What he has been doing with his pitchers in recent days scarcely can be described without a map and a seeing-eye dog but it may be worth a try.

Yesterday Durocher called five of his best pitchers to curb the futile Cincinnati Reds 3-2 in twelve innings. From start to finish his field included Curt Davis, Hugh Casey, Kirby Higbe, Les Webber and Whitlow Wyatt.

Davis started the game and working on one day's rest, was knocked out in the fifth. Casey took competent charge till removed for a pinchhitter in the ninth. Then Higbe, who had pitched the full nine innings to beat the Pirates Tuesday, was sent to the mound. He walked the first batter and immediately was flagged out in favor of Webber. The rookie gave one hit in the 10th and then Durocher, taking no chances, called in Wyatt for his first relief chore of the year.

The Dodger Ace finished strongly and rained his 17th victory when a walk, a sacrifice and a single by Arky Vaughan scored a run for Brooklyn in the 12th.

Defeat Charged to Walters

The defeat was charged to plucky Bucky Walters, who himself made three hits, batted in one Red run and scored the other.

The triumph added another game to Brooklyn's slender margin because New York Giants slugged out an 8-2 win over St. Louis Cardinals. Babe Young doubled with the bases loaded for three runs in the third and the Giants tallied two more in the fourth to rout Max Lanier.

Boston Braves beat Chicago Cubs 2-1 in ten innings after Lon Warneke had held them scoreless for seven frames and the Pirates stopped the Phils 5-2 by scoring four runs without a hit in the eighth inning of their night game.

At New York the Yankees swept a doubleheader from St. Louis Browns 3-2 on Charley Keller's 25th homer in the ten inning and 6-0 on Hank Borowy's masterful one-hit hurling. The huge mid-week crowd of 27,000 thought it was seeing a no-hitter, not knowing that Harlond Clift's bounder off Joe Gordon's glove in the first inning had been scored as a single instead on an error. When the totals were posted on the scoreboard the fans, already milling jubilantly on the field, booed.

Indians Earn Tie

Cleveland Indians rose into a virtual tie with the Browns for third place in the American League by overwhelming Philadelphia Athletics 12-3. The tribe scored eight runs in the first inning and Connie Mack left his pitcher in—but swapped catchers!

Boston Red Sox kept pace with the Yanks by taking a double bill from Detroit Tigers 3-2 and 4-2. Charley Wagner pitcher five-hit ball in the first game, which was decided by Ted Williams' 28th homer in the eighth inning. Williams also doubled three runs across in the second game to win that—boosting his runs batted in total to 121 and giving the Sox the 22nd victory in their last 26 games.

Chicago White Sox whipped Washington Senators 8-2 and 7-6, making 17 hits in the first game and 12 in the second. Washington contributed six errors to Chicago's cause in the opener and Lou Bevil, a Rookie fresh from Chattanooga, gave the Sox four runs before he was removed in the first inning of the nightcap.

Durocher Will Be Satisfied if Newsom Wins Three Games

Pittsburgh, Sept. 3. (AP) — Big Bobo Newsom, the one-time American League pop-off, glad to be one of the Brooklyn "bums" after a stay with Washington, hopes to pitch a half-dozen games for his new teammates in the stretch drive between the Dodgers and Cardinals for the National League pennant.

The powerful right-hand pitcher was as quiet and docile as the best-trained movie producer's yes-man when he reported to Manager Leo Durocher at Forbes Field yesterday.

"I'm not making any predictions," said Bobo, speaking in a different one from that of two years ago when he twirled twenty-one victories against five defeats for Detroit and helped Tigers win American League pennant. "But I'm sure glad to be here after a term in Washington.

"I hope to pitch five or six games for the Bums this year. I'm not saying I'll win them all. But I'm not saying I'm going to lose 'em all either".

Durocher, smiling a broad welcome, promptly announced he would use Newsome today against Cincinnati.

"From here in", said Lippy, "our starting four will be Wyatt, Higbe, Davis and Newsom. Bobo has a rubber arm. He's a workhorse. He's been around a long time and knows what it's all about. So he'll take his regular turn. And if he can win three ball games for us, he'll be a good investment".

Abolisn Freshman Rule At Naval Academy

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 3.—(BUP) Athletic authorities of the United States Naval Academy yesterday abolished the freshman rule, thereby making "plebes" —freshmen— eligible for Varsity Intercollegiate competition in football and all other sports, for the duration.

Commander Lyman S. Perry, director of athletics, announced the change after a conference of the executive committee of the Navy Athletic Association.

The action was not unexpected for the naval school has been particularly hard hit by the stepped up war program. Two classes of midshipmen have been graduated since the close of the last football season, stripping all teams of the most seasoned material. The gridders perhaps suffered the most severe blow with only ten members of last year's squad available. Navy adopted the freshmen rule in 1923.

EARL JONES SETS A LOOP RECORD

Hurls No-Hit, No-Run Game and Strikes Out 22 Batters

Gloversville, N.Y., Sept. 3.—(AP) — Southpaw pitcher Earl Jones was so elated with his selection yesterday on the Canadian-American League all star team that he went out and:—

Pitched a no-hit, no-run game against Rome, winning 7-0.

Set a league record by striking out 22 batters in nine innings.

Raised his season's strikeout total to 222.

Increased his wins to 17.

Jones, 20, of Fresno, Calif., retired the side on strikes in six innings. He walked two and another opponent reached first on an error, but none went any farther. The Gloversville outfield behind the St. Louis Browns' protege made only one putout.

Earlier in the season Jones pitched and won a doubleheader from the Three Rivers, Que., a club.

Trying to Relate Sport to Wartime

Almost every province has an organization trying to relate sport to wartime, in Vancouver a fight drew 12,000 for Merchant Navy Relief. Manitoba's Athletic Patriotic Association has done an excellent job since the first weeks of war. The Sports Service League of Toronto is an outstanding example of what can be done with good staff work.

But who has there been to put the finger on the National Hockey League for a few benefit games—league games, not exhibitions? No one. Who was there to iron out the argument when the Sports Service League wanted to bring Winnipeg east in 1940 for a war charity football exhibition? No one. Back to the N.H.L. for a moment: Compare its part in the war effort to that played by Major League baseball. But keep your comparisons to yourself. There may be ladies present.

Racing's cash contribution to the war effort has been large, even exclusive of its huge taxes. Racing and professional baseball probably couldn't do better under government control than they have voluntarily. Football and professional hockey are the main offenders.

So perhaps we should have someone with federal authority to correlate sport's war effort, pep it up, make the dribble into a river. If something isn't done, and fast, sport will lose ground steadily in its battle for a place in the lives of Canadians at war.

– still no clothing value to equal this

WE ARE often asked: "How do your wartime values compare with those of pre-war days?" It is our conscientious claim, based on 32 years' experience in the made-to-measure clothing business, that Tip Top values today are greater than ever before. We don't believe you can match Tip Top values dollar-for-dollar anywhere and we invite comparisons.

In making this statement, we are considering every factor which contributes to clothing values—quality of the woolens, the skilled craftsmanship which goes into the tailoring, the character of the styling and the intrinsic dollar value in today's moderate price.

From the first day of war, Tip Top Tailors swung into the production of vast numbers of military uniforms without dislocating the quality of its civilian clothes. The result is this: The men of our armed forces are being supplied with uniforms of high quality and the men on the home front are still able to buy thriftily fine tailored-to-measure clothes at a price they can afford to pay.

The Government, naturally, always has and will have first call on our facilities. It may be, therefore, that deliveries to our customers will not always be as prompt as formerly. You will realize that the demands of the war effort must come first and we suggest you allow a little more time for delivery.

May we suggest that you do not buy more clothes than are actually necessary. Buy what you need only when you need it. There is ample clothing for everyone's needs today.

ALEX KAMPOURIS DISPLAYS SOME OLD-TIME FORM

Former Big Leaguer Leads Attack for the Royals Against Bisons

LEAFS ARE IDLE

By the Associated Press

Alex Kampouris, Montreal Royals second baseman who led the International League in home runs in 1940 while playing with Newark Bears, displayed some of his old form last night as the Royals defeated Buffalo Bisons, 11-6, to go into a second-place tie with the Jersey City Giants.

Kampouris led a 14-hit attack against six Bison tossers with two homers and a double, driving in four tallies Montreal jumped off to a 6-0 lead in the first two innings but Buffalo scored three times in the fourth and appeared to make a game of it.

"Kampy" then provided the Royals with a lead they never relinquished when he unloaded his first four-bagger of the evening in the fifth with two on. His second came in the seventh with the sacks empty.

Cliff Dapper and Tom Tatum also hit home runs for Montreal. Les McCrabb, who relieved Chuck Kehn in the fourth, gained credit for the triumph.

Tommy Byrne of the pennant-winning Bears allowed only five hits as he outpitched Tom Delacruz and Charles (Red) Barrett to hang up a 1-0 victory over Syracuse. It was Byrne's 17th conquest of the season against four losses.

Jersey City Giants and Baltimore Orioles split a doubleheader at Oriole Park with the Birds copping the first 7-6 and the Giants the nightcap 13-4.

Toronto Maple Leafs and Rochester Red Wings had an off day.

Detroit Ball Club Sends Large Cheque

Detroit, Sept. 3—(AP)—A cheque for $60,591 is on its way today to Washington Headquarters of United States army emergency relief from the Detroit Baseball Company.

The money was from the double-header played by the Tigers and the St. Louis Browns at Briggs Stadium Aug. 23 from which total receipts, less federal taxes, were to go to the relief organization.

Owner Walter O. Briggs of the Tigers said receipts totalled $61,474 with $5,590 going to Federal Amusement Taxes. The final contribution was increased by donations.

Tennis Championship Matches May Cease Until End of War

New York, Sept. 3—(AP)— The end of the National Tennis Championships was faintly in sight today as the five-barrelled event moved into its second week and a hesitant start was made toward playing quarter-final matches both in men's and women's singles.

Although the attendance had not been disappointing, everything considered—there were an estimated 6,000 in the stadium last Sunday—there were unmistakeable indications that this might be the last championship until after the war.

The U.S.L.T.A. officials, themselves, say otherwise: That they will put on a championship every Autumn as long as they can buy tennis balls, but their voices do not carry great conviction.

Today's feature match—the first to bring together two men considered championship possibilities—saw Pancho Segura, the highly-publicized Ecuadorean, facing a real baptism of fire from Billy Talbert of Cincinnati, who beat him the last time they clashed at Southampton. Neither player had lost a set in reaching the quarter-finals, and they promised to put on a battle for the books.

Frankie Parker of Hollywood met Seymour Greenberg of Chicago, the National Clay Court Champion, in the other men's engagement, with Frankie is firm favorite on the basis of his brilliant play in preliminary rounds.

Tenth Donation Of Blood During War

London, Ont., Sept. 3.—(CP)—London Red Cross today nominates Robert Stewart, 34, single, London salesman, as one of Canada's top blood donors. Yesterday Mr. Stewart donated blood for the 10th time since the outbreak of the war.

Mr. Stewart, a member of the London Red Cross, said today he had given blood five times at a Toronto Clinic and five times at the London Blood Bank. "I find it doesn't hurt me", he said when queried. "The donations are spaced at the regular intervals specified by the Blood Banks".

"Rise and Shine"

Centers of social life for American youth, hub of its pleasures and good times are the colleges of the country. Here, in addition to education, young men and women gather to enjoy life.

With this in mind, the 20th Century-Fox studio set out to create its newest musical funfest, Mark Hellinger's "Rise and Shine" the current film at the Capitol theatre with a background of college life. Surely, if the young people of the nation find so much to enjoy there in real life, a rousing, true-to-life comedy could be made.

Clayton College, a mythical institution of learning in the middle west was selected as the locale. Clayton, of course, has features which all alumni remember—the class rooms are not prominent, though the fun and good times are. This program was put into effect in order to let Jack Oakie, Linda Darnell and George Murphy have more time for fun, football and dancing.

"Westward Ho!"

The added western "Westward Ho!" featuring the 3 Mesquiteers Bob Steele, Tom Tyler and Rufe Davis packs plenty of action and thrills in grand old western style A funny cartoon "O Gentle Spring" and the 4th chapter of "Spy Smasher" concludes a grand entertaining program for the whole family.

AT THE BELLE

"A Great Man's Lady"

Exciting drama played against the sweeping panorama of a young and growing America is headed this way, arriving today at the Belle Theatre when Paramount will present "The Great Man's Lady" co-starring Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea, with Brian Donlevy.

The story concerns the secret love of a man who became one of America's great. Not until a statue has been erected to his memory and a sympathetic girl reporter had succeeded in breaking a silence maintained for 35 years by the woman involved in the affair, is the true story told. It is said to make highly effective telling.

Reports have it that Barbara Stanwyck as "The Great Man's Lady" even tops her excellent performance in "Ball of Fire." McCrea is the "great man" himself and Brian Donlevy, whose popularity has been steadily increasing, has the role of the "other man." The three stars were last seen together in Cecil B. DeMille's "Union Pacific."

"Pacific Blackout" Thrilling

Paramount pictures has stepped out far ahead of the field with its current companion thrill film. It's an opus called "Pacific Blackout" with Robert Preston and Martha O'Driscoll in the leading roles.

With curious foresight, Paramount completed "Pacific Blackout" just as the Japanese loosed their blitz on Pearl Harbor and before the other Axis powers decided to gamble everything by tackling Uncle Sam. The picture was rushed through the cutting rooms and to theatre screens throughout the country.

Eva Gabor plays the beautiful blonde menace and the British actor, Philip Merivale, portrays the spy leader. Others in the cast are Louis Jean Heydt, Thurston Hall Mary Treen, J. Edward Bromberg and Spencer Charters.

Incidentally, "Pacific Blackout" affords a complete view of Civilian Defence methods, all the way from the anti-aircraft defences to the work of Air Raid Wardens, Fire Watchers, Demolition Squads and Auxiliay Firemen and Police.

Copacabana Revue introducing The Merry Knights of Melody and popular entertainers completes the program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"MEN OF TEXAS"

Bidding for special attention among the more action-conscious moviegoers the top western of the year "Men of Texas" is the netx attraction coming to the McCarthy Theatre. The cast includes Robert Stack (star of "Eagle Squadron), Brod Crawford (of "Broadway" opposite George Raft), Jackie Cooper in his biggest fighting role since "Return of Frank James". Ralph Bellamy (co-star of "Wolf Man", Jane Darvell, unforgettable 'Ma Joad' of "The Grapes of Wrath" and Leo Carrillo as you like him—his swellest role since "Wyoming". "Men of Texas" was directed by Ray Enright who made "The Spoilers". The second feature which will be presented in addition to "Men of Texas" is the new comedy-drama "Hello Annapolis" featuring Tom Brown and Jean Parker". Cinderella Goes to a Party", new comedy-cartoon in technicolor adds also to the swell entertainment of the program. Foto-Nite.

This is Foto-Nite at the McCarthy, with two offers, first $175.00 and second $35.00, plus an excellent screen program. The features are Spencer Tracy in "Sky Devils" and also "Not a Ladies' Man" featuring Paul Kelly, Fay Wray and Hollywood's new juvenile star Douglas Croft.

Point Traverse

20,000 Trout Fingerlings Placed In Lake Ontario

Point Traverse, Sept. 3 — Some twenty thousand trout fingerlings, reared at the Glenora Fish Hatchery, were deposited in waters off here this week. A large number of trout was also deposited in lake waters off Salmon Point.

Salvage Operation

Divers from the lake tug "Capt. M. Donnely," Kingston, expect to complete the task of removing the boilers, engine and condenser from the sunken tug "Florence" off Timber Island, this week.

Dynamite was used to shatter the hull of the vessel to allow the machinery to be brought to the surface of the water.

The "Florence" was moved from its original position, some 3,000 feet towards the shore of the island, and now rests in twenty-four feet of water.

Mower Destroyed

Mild excitement was created in the village of Milford on Monday afternoon when a team of horses attached to a mower, owned by Herb Minaker, ran away through the main street of the village, causing complete destruction to the haying machine, before coming to a halt.

Reeve is Host

Reeve Gerard Kavanagh, South Marysburgh Township, was host to a large gathering of County Council members and guests at Point Traverse on Wednesday afternoon.

To add interest to the day's outing, the members of the party visited the fishing colony at the harbor here, and the R.A.F. Marine Craft section. Later the hardy appetited gentlemen sat down to a delicious fish supper served at the "White House."

Canadian Nurses Tend Sick And Wounded in Britain

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

In a 1,200-bed Canadian general hospital, one of the largest in Britain, 85 Canadian nursing sisters tend the sick and wounded from a large section of the 1st Canadian corps.

The whole hospital, with all surgical and medical equipment, has moved three times since going overseas more than a year ago and the nurses and doctors have settled down in a pleasant country district near the troops camps.

The hospital is a group of neat one-storey brick buildings, which cost $1,250,000 to erect and equip. Trim lawns and gardens, cared for by the staff and convalescing patients, surround the buildings.

It is called one of the finest medical installations in Britain and the work of its staff of nurses and medical officers compares favorably with that of the best hospitals in Canada.

In bright, airy wards, the sisters care for their soldier-patients, whom they invariably call "our boys." They treat them with the patience and care they would give their own brothers. There's not a grouchy patient in a hundred.

Laugh and Joke with Patients

The atmosphere isn't severe or formal. The sisters laugh and joke with their patients and share in the communal life of the wards where there are few secrets.

The cheerful, buoyant attitude of the nurses and the whole appearance and character of the hospital is congenial to recovery.

"You couldn't find a finer bunch of boys anywhere to look after," said one blond sister as she looked down the length of her ward with its 20 patients. "When they're over the worst part of their illness, they are so much fun. They always have some joke or other and a girl has to be on her toes to keep up with them."

Principal matron of this hospital is Blanche Herman of Lunenburg, N.B., and the assistant matron is Helen Hewton of Montreal. Both are graduates of Montreal General Hospital.

The nursing unit was mobilized in Montreal but the sisters are from all parts of Canada. Thirteen of them took post-graduate work in nursing at Canadian Universities.

Little Benny's Note Book

It was time for me to go to bed, and ma said, And dont forget, young man, you're suppose to take a bath first.

Well aw G, ma, I'm too sleepy, cant I wait till the mrning? I said, and ma said, No.

Well why, ma? I said, and she said, Because you may not be wide enough awake. Just listen to that boy trying to squirm out of a bath, William? she said to pop, and pop said, I believe it's all a question of approach. Take a tip from the English, they're past masters of the art of giving orders. When an Englishman wants to tell a servant to put more coal on the fire, he'll say to him, "I say, if you dont mind, I wish you could see your way to putting some coal on the fire, when you're able to conveniently get around to it any time at all within the next couple of minutes." You see, it's a matter of clever suggestion, with a minimum of actual commanding, pop said.

Whatever it is, it wouldn't work with Benny, in England or at the North Pole or anywhere else, ma said, and pop said, Oh, I think it would, dont you, Benny?

Sure, G I said and pop said, Well then dont you think it might be rather a good idea if the notion occurred to you to hop into the bathtub before retiring?

Sure, pop, it would be swell, I said, and he said, I was sure of it, and I said, Only G pop, what if the notion dont happen to occur to me?

That'll be quite all right, pop said. Dont give it another thought, I'll just take you firmly by the ear and even more firmly by the seat of the pants and march you to where the notion will occur to you.

The result being the notion oc- or else, he said. curred to me all by itself.

Proving pop was partly right.

RECORD DRIED FRUIT CROP

Birthday Greetings

Tribute is being paid throughout Canada to Lord Robert Cecil (Viscount Cecil of Chelwood), whose birthday is celebrated on Sept. 14. He was born 78 years ago. Lord Cecil's father was Lord Salisbury, Conservative prime minister of Great Britain. From 1916 when Lord Cecil presented to his colleagues in the British cabinet, a memorandum on "proposals for diminishing the occasion of future wars" until today, he has devoted himself to this cause. Programs are being arranged by the League of Nations society throughout Canada, to mark the birthday.

AT THE CAPITOL

Jack Oakie is starred as Boley, the All-American chowderhead, in Mark Hellinger's "Rise and Shine," but that cuts no ice with Linda Darnell. She lets him know that she's the boss and he has to toe the line. George Murphy, Walter Brennan and Milton Berle are also starred in this hilarious comedy from 20th. Century-Fox, now at the Capitol, with the Three Mesquiteers in "Westward Ho!"

UNCERTAIN DESTINY

by Betty Webb

CHAPTER 17
An Apology

Diane named a popular lounge and Linda assented, scarcely able to keep a ring of pure happiness from her voice. Dressing for lunch she was conscious that a weight seemingly had dropped from her shoulders. She took greater pains with her appearance so that Diane might see in her a person far different from the innocent girl whose hopes and dreams were smashed months before.

At the last minute she paused uncertainly. What could she say she wondered, in order to keep from Diane the real story of her hasty marriage and departure for Hillsacres, and, further, not to betray her interest in Greg's whereabouts, his plans for the future? Then she shrugged lightly, indifference. Every situation is which she had been involved of late had worked out satisfactorily. Perhaps this, too, would not prove an ordeal once she and Diane were together again.

Linda hesitated before the three cars in the garage, smiling ruefully at Steve's extravagance. The expensive cream-colored roadster she dismissed, as being his personal property. That car had been his first purchase, and Steve was boyishly proud of it. The station wagon was impractical for one person's use, so she took the small town car, which had been Steve's gift to his "partner-in-crime", as Linda had called herself following his success.

But driving to Chicago, Linda's newly-acquired calm gave way to rising excitement once more, would Diane accept her apology, she wondered, or had sufficient time elapsed for the other girl to forget the bitter words and accusations that had created a wall of misunderstanding between them?

Linda was soon to know.

Seated in the hotel loblby, Diane saw a slim, lovely girl approaching. She was wearing a smart, black suit, her curls peeping from beneath a chic hat, and silver fox furs cascading over one arm. For a moment Diane hesitated, wondering whether this smartly—dressed, assured young woman could be the timid, shabby girl she had once befriended. She had heard from many sources that Linda had changed, and yet—

Linda, walking across the room, caught sight of Diane, and forced a smile. That smile, half-doubtful, half-wistful made the artist certain this was Linda, and instantly she was on her feet, hands extended in a gracious welcome.

"Linda, I'm so glad to see you!"

"I came to apologize for everything I've done," Linda said. These were the words she had thought she never would be able to say, and now that she had, Linda felt relieved. At last the barrier was down!

Seated in the dimly-lighted dining-room, the girls eyed each room.

"How good it is to be with you again," Linda said. "I--I wanted to apologize long ago, but--" she reddened. "I--just didn't."

"That's all right," Diane shrugged. "Let's forget it."

"But I don't want to forget it," Linda's face was serious. "We've evaded things too long now, and I don't want to leave here until all our differences are ironed out and we're the good friends we used to be."

"I want you to know how sorry I am for the nasty things I said. I was so hurt, so bewildered that I didn't know what I was saying that miserable night, but when I had time to reason things out, I knew you were not to blame. It --it made me miserably, unhappy, but my pride kept me from admitting I was wrong."

"I hoped you would understand that I really was your friend," Diane answered.

"It was an unfortunate business all the way around."

"Then--you'll forgive me?"

"Of course, Linda."

They were silent for a while, before Diane said calmly:

"And what about Steve?"

Linda nodded. "I've a hunch you married him only because life seemed like a mess and you wouldn't swallow your pride and go home," she said bluntly.

Linda hesitated, feeling a surge of anger at Diane's statement. Despite their renewed friendship, she felt the artist had overstepped her grounds in accusing her, however just that accusation might be. Her first duty was toward Steve, and she could not bare their secret.

"You're mistaken," she said shortly. "Steve and I are very happy."

Diane's eyes dropped to her plate. She had felt the slight rebuff, and yet for a split second there had been pain and doubt in Linda's honest eyes. By way of conversation to cover the sudden, awkward silence, she murmured casually:

"I must congratulate Steve on his book. I understand it's an overwhelming success."

"Oh yes," Linda was pleased to have their conversation on safer ground. "Steve flew to New York last night to meet his publisher. They're already going over plans for another printing."

"Why you poor kid! Aren't you lonesome alone in the country?"

"I've quite a lot to do," Linda replied evasively. "You see, as Steve's secretary, I take care of his correspondence.

"Sort of an office wife, I presume?" Diane's words held no malice, but they were so near the truth that Linda started, her face coloring. The artist had missed no part of the effect her words had on her companion, but she went on hastily:

"Are you planning to stay on the farm another Winter?"

Linda's eyes glowed with happiness. "We've rented an apartment here in Chicago for a few months. It's hard to get back and forth to the country in bad weather, and now that the book is such a success Steve will have to spend much time here. But we'll keep the farm open and spend week-ends there."

"Sounds idyllic," Diane commented, and Linda knew such plans would sound dull to a person like Diane who craved continuous excitement. Linda had to laugh at herself, remembering how she had once dreamed of living on a perpetual merry-go-round of thrills.

"By the way," Diane said coolly, "Since you're so full of news, I've some for you. I heard from Greg this morning. He's coming home next week."

The color which stained Linda's face and neck betrayed her emotions. In stunned silence she seat, watching Diane.

Diane pretended not to notice. She busied herself lighting a cigarette. "He's been doing marvelous work in South America, according to his letter, and I understand he is coming only for a short vacation. We must all get together and welcome him home."

There was a roaring in Linda's ears. She felt sick and dizzy, and her only thought was to escape from Diane's shrewd eyes to escape to the peace and blessed forgetfulness the farm offered. Linda forced a smile to her lips, forced her voice to be as casual as Diane's had been.

"I think," she said lightly, "that's a grand idea."

Driving back to the farm, Linda's joy at being once more on a friendly basis with Diane was overshadowed by a new and nameless fear.

What would it mean to face Greg Hollister again as Steve Baridon's wife? How would it affect the lives of Steve of Diane, and most importantly of Greg, himself?

Steve returned home the following evening, tired and harassed after repeated sessions with his publisher. Laughing a little at himself, he said, "I probably would not have written the book if I'd known what I was getting into."

"Nonsence." Linda retored spiritedly. You're loving every minute of this, Steve Baridon, and well you should. Imagine being a successful novelist. I--I'm terribly proud of you."

They were seated in the library enjoying coffee and after dinner cigarettes, Linda looked small and earnest in a gown of soft white crepe, her hair brushed high on the forehead. Suddenly Steve, with a little grimace, handed her a box, and Linda opened it to reveal a beautiful sapphire bracelet nestled in a bed of satin. Tears filled her eyes as she stared down at it, and she was unable to speak naturally.

Says Syntona Wonderful Wouldn't Be Without It

This Lady Finds It Reliable Medicine for Stomach Gas, Acidity, Heartburn and Other Digestive Troubles.

If you suffer from stomach troubles, sluggish kidneys, torpid liver, constipation and any of their long train of painful symptoms, such as nervousness, fatigue, headaches, dizzy spells, backache and rheumatic pains, benefit by the experience of others who have used Syntona Herbal Compound and got grand relief. You'll know then what a really fine medicine this is and why so many grateful men and women have publicly recommended it out of simple gratitude for the good results it gave them. For example, here is the report of Mrs. J. Donaldson, Listowel, Ontario, as received only a few days ago:

"After years of stomach suffering I have found Syntona just wonderful for me. Indigestion, gas, bloating pains, and sour, acid risings have been a constant annoyance to me for longer than I can remember, and I always had to be so careful of what I ate.

"Naturally, during those years I tried many remedies, but nothing gave me the relief that Syntona did. Now I can eat the fods I like without all that stomach suffering afterwards and I feel better in every way. I wouldn't be without this pure herbal medicine again. I am 81 years of age and I think it is just great to get a medicine that does so much for me and yet contains no harmful drugs."

If you live in Belleville or vicinity, come to DOLAN THE DRUGGIST and find out how Syntona can help you, too.

Willkie Glad To See Soldiers

Cairo, Sept. 3 (AP)—"I just want to say I'm damned glad to see you. God bless you and give 'em hell," Wendell Willkie told United States troops today after looking over their big army workshops and repair facilities near here.

Speaking informally to the soldiers, Willkie told them the primary purpose of his stop-over in Egypt en route to Chungking and Moscow was to try to focus more attention at home on the Mediterranean front.

He said Americans generally were not sufficiently aware of the importance of this war theatre where he observed, an Axis break-through on the western desert would greatly prolong the war.

Police Detain Scores of Persons

Belfast, Sept. 3. (CP)—Police detained scores of persons last night in a roundup of political suspects growing out of disorders which accompanied the execution yesterday of Thomas Williams, member of the outlawed Irish Republican Army for the slaying of a constable.

Northern Ireland otherwise remained quiet, however, and no additional demonstrations were reported in Dublin.

By early afternoon 56 suspects had been arrested in the Northern Ireland roundup.

Prices Again Firmer On Produce Market

New York, Sept. 3 (AP)—Douglas Miller, former United States Commercial Attache in the Berlin Embassy, predicted Wednesday the Germans would soon admit an expected defeat. Miller, now assistant to Elmer Davis, head of the Office of War Information, told the Overseas Press Club: "Three years ago the Germans said, 'We have fon.' Two years ago they said, 'We will win.' This year they say, 'We must win.' Next year they will say, We cannot win.' And thereafter they'll say, 'We've lost, just as we always expected to'."

'If You Fall In the Drink You Blow It'

Ottawa, Sept. 3 (CP)—PO. J. B. Higham, D.F.C, of Assiniboia, Sask., who flew with his bomber crew from a Saarbruecken bombing raid to Canada and landed at Rockliffe air field early today was just a bit weary of questions about his whistle when the reporters freed him.

The whistle attached to the collar of his uniform blouse, shone brightly against the Royal Canadian Air Force blue.

Higham explained it first when he answered questions as he stood beside Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Defence Minister Ralston and Air Minister Power.

"If we are forced down in the channel when it is dark or there is fog, then we blow the whistle to guide rescuers to us," he said.

As he moved from the field to a temporary dining room and then to another room where the reporters met him as a group, Higham continued to meet inquiries about teh whistle.

By the time the interragation was over, he had it down to:

"If you fall in the drink you blow it."

France Wondering Whether She Will Lose Peace as Well

Vichy, Sept. 3. (AP)—The third anniversary of her entrance into a war which she lost in less than ten months finds France wondering whether she will lose the peace as well.

In September, 1939, France bet on victory with the aid of Britain.

Today Pierre Laval, as Chief of the Vichy government, is openly betting on a German victory and the help which this conquered nation might obtain from a victorious Reich.

Bit by bit since the Armistice signed in Compiegne Forest in June, 1940, Vichy has severed her ties with the enemies of Hitler until the American nations and China are the only ones with which she even maintains dipomatic relations — except for conquered Greece.

Even relations with the Americas are under a severe strain at the moment because of Axis allegations that the United States has designs on Dakar and that Brazil has her eyes on French Guiana.

France, meanwhile, is paying Germany 300,000,000 francs (about $6,900,000) a day for the maintenance of German forces now occupying three-fifth of her homeland. Most of her troops who were captured during the war still are prisoners in Germany.

POLICE BLOTTER

Mrs. J. Clarke, 169 Burnham St., yesterday reported to police of her house being ransacked by unknown persons during the absence of herself and her husband while away on a vacation trip. Upon arriving home Mrs. Clarke reported finding that groceries had been used and the kitchen stove lighted, although a search of the premises revealed nothing of any material value had been taken. Roomers who had been staying at the Clarke home had left when Mrs. Clarke returned, still owing $7.50.

One case of intoxication was reported over the night, the man being taken from a local rooming house and lodged in the cell room at the police station.

A juvenile was apprehended by police following a complaint by the Hume Arena management that the keys of the building were missing. The keys were later found in a coat hanging in the washroom, but the juvenile is an old offender and has been caught stealing upon several occasions, it was reported by police.

FORMER CHAMP WOUNDED

McIntyre, a member of a field ambulance unit, was hit while on board a destroyer working in toward the shore during the Dieppe raid.

COUNSEL CLAIMS PROPERTY A FARM IN RENTAL CASE

Largest County Court Session in Many Weeks Held in City

FINES COLLECTED

Arraigned on four charges of defrauding the Canadian National Railways by forging short distance railroad tickets to appear as though issued for the Trenton-Montreal run, Corporal Vincent Harrison of the R.C.A.F., better known as the "Great Gardini," was found guilty and sentenced to three months in jail. He appeared in county police court today before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd.

Full restitution had been made to the railway, it was revealed by Crown Attorney Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan, who stated the accused had committed a serious offence and could not expect to escape punishment.

Counsel pleading on behalf of the accused, stated he had been in the airforce since the beginning of the war. A mistake was admitted but he was young and leniency was asked. Magistrate Lloyd sentenced Harrison to three months on each of the four charges, the terms to run concurrently, and further bound him over to keep the peace for one year after his release from custody.

Twenty Cases Heard

Twenty cases were disposed of during the morning's court proceedings it being one of the largest dockets presented at the weekly court in some time. The agenda included four charges of not having a driving permit or, for failing to produce same, two for having no chauffeur's licence and two traffic cases.

Judgment was deferred by Magistrate Lloyd in the case against Harold Garrison charged by the local Wartime Prices and Trade Board under the Wartime Leasehold Regulations. Evidence was presented which showed Mr. Garrison had rented a property in "Irish Town" west of the city for $10 as from 1937 until some time in 1941 when the rent was raised to $12 monthly and in 1942 was increased to $16 monthly, when a new tenant took possession.

Charles Payne, counsel for Mr. Garrison, claimed the property in question should be considered as farm land and therefore did not come under the rental control restrictions.

Acting Crown Attorney Gordon Robertson brought out that the two and one half acres which comprise the property were now idle, but Mr. Payne countermanded with the statement the present tenant did not obtain possession of the property in time to plant a crop this year.

"The question of whether this property should be defined as farm lands or otherwise is a fine point to decide" stated the magistrate, "and I am not going to decide today. Decision deferred until next week."

One week's enlargement was asked by Charles G. Patrick in a case presented by Provincial Constable Wm. Milton of failing to allow one half of the highway free when passing. A like charge arising out of the same accident preferred against Milton MacCammon was also enlarged for the same period. A case of having no driving permit preferred against William Ruttan was laid over until next week as was a careless driving charge against Rennie MacLaren and a charge of having no chauffeur's licence against Ralph G. Leeman.

Fines Settled Out of Court

A fine of $7.50 for careless driving was paid by Donald McDonald, while Evelyn T. Dawson paid $12.50 for driving without a permit, and the Sterling Construction Company paid a like sum for hiring a truck driver without a chauffeur's permit. Harry F. Grier paid $15.00 for having liquor contrary to a section of the L.C.A. All fines were settled out of court.

Martin Hicks of the R.C.A.F. was remanded for one week on a charge of car theft, with the case against Russel K. West for consuming liquor contrary to the L.C.A. was enlarged for a like period. Frank Johnson, charged with keeping liquor for sale, was also adjourned for another week, pending the gathering of further evidence.

In a case of non-support brought against Harry Douglas by his wife, the magistrate saw no liability on the part of the husband in that since 1935 he had not known the address of his wife. Mr. Douglas was given one month in which to start making provision for his children now being kept by Mrs. Douglas.

In a second case of non-support against George Cole, the accused was remanded in custody until Friday for sentence.

Arnold Brant, charged with assaulting Jim Maracle was also remanded until Friday for sentence after pleading guilty.

Boy Captures Four-Man Crew of Nazi Bomber

London, Sept. 3 (CP) — The few German raiders who came over Britain to usher in the fourth year of the war found a hot reception—entirely too hot for the four-man crew of one downed bomber who surrendered meekly to a 'teen-aged lad.

This bomber was winged as it reached the coast. A second bomber in the same six-plane formation was knocked down even before it got over land.

The crew of the downed bomber set fire to the craft and placed themselves in custody of the boy who gave his prisoners tea, then handed them over to home guards

PRIME MINISTER WELCOMES FLIERS

Tells Boys They Are Always Close to Hearts of Canadians

Ottawa, Sept. 3 —(CP)— Prime Minister Mackenzie King said early today that while Canadian airmen overseas may feel far from home when they are on bombing raids over Germany they should remember that they are close to the hearts of the Canadian people.

He spoke in an impromptu address of welcome to a Canadian bombing crew of five men which came to Canada following a bombing raid over Saarbruecken on Tuesday night and Wednesday morning.

The Prime Minister was one of the enthusiastic group which welcomed the bomber crew at nearby Rockcliffe Airfield. He waved his hat as the aircraft carrying the airmen circled to land, and waved it again as high air officers, newspapermen and photographers joined with him in three cheers for the returning airmen.

Mr. King said the arrival of the men had been kept secret and it was well it had as space could not have been found for the crowd which would have wished to welcome them.

With Defence Minister Ralston and Air Minister Power, Mr. King stood talking with the young airmen for several minutes as photographs were taken. Then he led them to a dining room, and hastened to present them cups of coffee.

Papers Acclaim Feat

London, Sept. 3 —(CP Cable)— London newspapers acclaimed with headlines today the flight of the young R.C.A.F. crew who hopped the Atlantic to Canada upon their return to Britain from a bomber raid on Germany.

The Evening News ran the story of the unprecedented flight under a six-column, back-page heading: "Bomber Crew Fly From Germany to Ottawa." It added in a smaller heading that they were "To Tell All Canada of the Saarbruecken Raid."

Both the Evening Standard and the Star published stories on the front page under the headings, "Fly Ocean After Raid on Germany," and "They Bombed Saar and Then Flew the Atlantic."

Churchill Flown Within 60 Miles Of Russian Front

London, Ont., Sept. 3 —(CP)— The aircraft carrying Prime Minister Winston Churchill on his recent trip to Russia at times flew within 60 miles of the Russo-German front lines, John Affleck, 27, London, a senior flight engineer on the trip, said today.

Affleck said the big four-motor Liberator bomber carrying Mr. Churchill and other statesmen literally flew under the nose of the German Luftwaffe. "Our ship would have made a real prize for the Germans if they had known about us," he said. "Fortunately, we didn't sight a single enemy craft during the entire trip."

He described the Prime Minister as an "amiable, interesting man" who chatted pleasantly with the crew.

"There was a grand reception for Churchill when he reached Moscow," he related. "A band played the anthems of Great Britain, the United States and Russia and there were high Russian officials on hand."

200 SOLDIERS HELP PICK PEACHES

Lockport, N.Y., Sept. 3 —(AP)— Two hundred soldiers from Fort Niagara climbed through fruit-filled trees of Niagara County orchards yesterday to aid growers in picking peaches.

Fort Niagara staff officers released the men, to be paid prevailing harvest wages, in answer to a request of Niagara County Farm Bureau Agent Daniel M. Dalrymple who said the number will be increased to 300 tomorrow.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 3 (CP)—Mining and industrial groups weakened further in the stock exchange today, golds setting a new index low for the year. Western oil recorded no change. Trading was fairly active in the first hour and then turned sluggish to show volume of only 56,000 shares for the first three hours.

In the golds prices were down moderately for Aunor, Kerr Addison, Little Long Lac, Preston and McKenzie while Dome was stronger by 3-8 at 13 7-8. International Nickel and Steep Rock firmed slightly and Noranda and Ontario Nickel slipped back. Other base metals held unchanged.

Union Gas was offered down 1-8 to 5 and Brazilian Traction, Imperial Tobacco and some of the banks worked lower. Western Oils were unchanged and dull.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 3 (AP)—Advancing tendencies were displayed by selected stocks in today's market although many leaders refused to budge.

A group of utility preferreds remained in favor, along with communications company issues. Generally, however, price changes were narrow either way from the start and, near the fourth hour, the direction was cloudy. Dealings were negligible throughout.

The Canadian list was mixed. Canadian Pacific and Distillers Seagram were unchanged. McIntyre gained 5-8 point. In the bond section Canadian Government 4s eased 3-8.

Among stocks Market St. Railway Prior Pfd. and Postal Telegraph Pfd made new tops for the year or longer.

Intercessory Prayers For Armed Forces

Toronto, Sept. 3. (CP)—Hundreds of Toronto citizens today joined in intercessory prayers for armed forces of the United Nations, following a request by His Majesty the King that Sept. 3, anniversary of Britain's declaration of war on Germany, be observed by churches.

The church of England and, the Presbyterian and United churches in Canada have set Sunday, Sept 6 aside as a National Day of Prayer.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1942

GERMANS HURL 25 DIVISIONS AT STALINGRAD

Canadian Bomber Group For Britain Says Power

BRITISH FORCE ROMMEL TO RETIRE AFTER ATTACK

Subject Enemy Forces To Terrific Air Bombardment

Situation Relieved Temporarily But Warning Given Against Optimism

BATTLE STILL YOUNG

Cairo, Sept. 4 (AP)—British forces maintained strong pressure on Axis mechanized units in the Himeimat-Ruweisat sector yesterday and the enemy withdrew slightly westward during the day, British headquarters announced today.

British and United States warplanes subjected the withdrawing Axis forces to a terrific bombardment, exceeding the record they had established the previous day, a communique said.

No Allied bombers were lost despite the scope of these operations, the bulletin added. Allied aircraft, however, were credited with shooting down six enemy planes.

There was comparatively little enemy air activity over the battlefront, not a German dive-bomber appearing over the lines. Observers recalled that dispatches from the front have told of heavy German dive-bomber losses in the past few days.

Warned Against Optimism

While the Axis withdrawal in the Ruweisit-Himeimat sector appeared to have relieved the situation temporarily, military observers warned against too much optimism, pointing out that the battle still is in its preliminary phases and that both sides are merely jockeying for position.

Rommel, they said, has not yet suffered crippling losses to his armored strength and there is no indication that he is trying to avoid a showdown.

On the other hand, these sources said, the Axis chieftain has brought up to the battle line vast supplies for an offensive—including sufficient gasoline to feed his mechanized forces for 10 days of hard fighting.

The R.A.F., aided by the United States army air forces, kept these supply dumps under an almost continual hail of bombs.

No Chance to Get Set

Dispatches from the front last night told of no large-scale action by the opposing land forces, but British armored units harassed advanced Axis elements, giving the enemy no chance to get set for the punch he evidentally is trying to deliver.

In Cairo the R.A.F. issued a statement declaring the Axis had lost 2,582 planes in combat over the desert since start of the war. Losses of the United Nations were 1,503 planes.

Thus far this year, the statement said, Axis losses total 1,417 planes and British losses 1,114.

Lease-Lend Supplies To Australia Show Decided Increase

Canberra, Sept. 4 — (CP) — The flow of Australia's essential war requirements from the United States is gradually increasing, Prime Minister John Curtin said in a statement today.

Planes, tanks, guns and equipment for the fighting forces make up more than half the lease-lend supplies received here to date, the Prime Minister added.

Among the remaining 50 per cent he listed machine tools for increasing Australia's own war production, tinplate, raw cotton, rolling stock, trucks, lubricating oils and petroleum products.

Even more important than this lend-lease aid, however, Mr. Curtin asserted, is the direct help which Australia has received from the United States through the presence of America's armed forces in Australia.

Successes achieved by United States forces in the Coral Sea, at Midway and in the Solomons have been of vital importance to this Commonwealth, he declared.

In reciprocation for the lend-lease aid she is receiving, Mr. Curtin said, Australia is providing American forces here with various supplies and services.

In addition, Mr. Curtin said, Australian manufacturers diverted their plants to United States requirements for production of ammunition, spare parts for planes and other necessities.

Curtail Sports News on Radio

Sydney, Sept. 4 (AP) — Australian newspapers and radio stations will be asked to restrict their treatment of sports news to the barest essentials in an outline of the government's "austerity campaign."

Sports meets, themselves, will come in for further restrictions, he said, adding that the government believes relaxation necessary because of the strain of war but does not believe the importance attached to sports events is in keeping with a country at war.

Press and radio also will be asked to eliminate from "social news" reference to, or photographs of, any person or organization not engaged in wartime activity, Mr. Curtin said.

ALLIES STEADILY STRENGTHEN GRIP ON THE SOLOMONS

Five Japanese Ships, Eight Planes and Invasion Supplies Destroyed in Raid

LOW AIR RESISTANCE

By JOHN H. WIGGINS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, Sept. 4—(AP)—United States forces steadily strengthened their grip on the Solomon Islands today as the battle of the southwest Pacific brought destruction of five Japanese ships, eight airplanes and quantities of invasion supplies.

Indications that constant Allied battering was sapping enemy strength came in communiques from Allied headquarters in Australia and from the United States Navy Department at Washington which told of lack of Japanese aircraft resistance in New Guinea and of only "periodic attacks" of small detachments of invaders in the Solomons.

United States submarines sank five enemy ships including a light cruiser, and damaged three more. The newest sinkings reported by the navy yesterday boosted the total of Japanese ships sunk or damaged by undersea craft to 99 since Dec. 7, 1941.

Absence of Nipponese attempts at interception were noted by Allied medium and attack bombers in a foray against enemy installations at Salamaua, Japanese New Guinea base, where numerous fires were started.

United States Forces In Belgian Congo

London, Sept. 4 (CP) — United States forces which have arrived at Leopoldville, Belgian Congo, are "the first detachments from America," Hubert Pierlot, Premier of the Belgian government said today.

Pierlot told a press conference that several American missions were in the capital of the African colony preparing for the coming of troops.

The Congo's rubber production for the Allies," he said. "will notably exceed first estimates for this year and the next."

The premier declined details regarding the number of American troops at Leopoldvill or their objectives.

Ousting of Pro-Axis Serano Suner Viewed With Satisfaction by Allies

The following article on the dropping of Foreign Minister Ramon Serrano Suner in Spain is written by an Associated Press correspondent who served in Spain from 1937 to 1940, covering the civil war and the early days of reconstruction.

By DWIGHT L. PITKIN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

British and United States diplomacy apparently won an important victory in Spain Thursday that might well shorten the war.

Gen. Francisco Franco in dismissing his ambitious power loving brother-in-law, Ramon Serrano Suner, from government and state party leadership thereby shoved aside a man who has been Hitler's and Mussolini's best friend in Spain.

Have the Nazis been balked in Spain? If so, will Hitler, as Napoleon did, eventually make a new battleground out of Spain? That would mean a second front. And it was a second front in Spain, while Napoleon was bogged down in Russia, that helped bring about

SPANISH SHAKE-UP

London, Sept. 4 (CP) — A foreign office commentator said today that British and American hints of aid in Spanish reconstruction if Spain's foreign policy drifted away from the Axis may have had a "cumulative effect," but that the dismissal of Ramomn Serrano Suner as foreign minister was primarily a result of internal disputes.

The commentator said he believed it was wrong to describe Serrano Suner's dismissal as a complete defeat for the Germans in the diplomatic battle now being waged in Spain, but that it undoubtedly weakened the Axis cause.

Informed quarters here said differences between the Falange party and the army came to a head recently after some Falangists were accused of throwing a bomb into a church at Bilbao where army leaders were mourning civil war dead.

The army leaders wished to try those responsible in a military court, while the Falange held out for a civil court, it was said.

Momentarily, informed diplomatic sources said, it appeared that General Franco, despairing of unity in the present cabinet, was dismissing

INSPECTS R.C.A.F. IN CEYLON

A Catalina flying boat squadron of the Royal Canadian Air Force stationed in Ceylon is inspected by H.R.H. the Duke of Gloucester who has just returned to Britain from a Far Eastern tour. Accompanying the Duke is Wing Commander John L. Plant of Ottawa, commanding officer of the squadron.

PO. G. Pepper Given D.F.C. For Bravery in Action

One-time champion rider of the motor cycle tracks, George Pepper, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Pepper, 90 Chatham Street, now a pilot officer in the Royal Air Force, is proving he is of top-flight calibre in the flaming skylanes over Britain and the continent.

For today his parents received a cablegram that George has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for bravery in action against the enemy.

A letter dated August 3 received by Mr. and Mrs. Pepper told of two Hun planes that went down to the sea in flames from George's guns. The young fighter-pilot is also believed to have brought down two more during his favorite pastime of Hun-hunting.

George has three brothers in the service.

Pride of the city of Belleville in one of her gallant air sons was evidenced in a cable sent this afternoon by Mayor Glen E. Thompson. It read: "Belleville congratulates you on the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross. We are proud of you."

AUSTRALIANS CALLED UPON FOR SACRIFICES

Cut Consumption of Goods by at Least One-Third and All Luxuries

HIGHER TAXES

Sydney, Sept. 4 (CP) — The Australian people were called on today, with the record £550,000,000 ($1,952,000,000) budget appropriations still fresh before them, for further sacrifices in their way of living to "make this our finest hour."

They were asked by Prime Minister John Curtin yesterday in an outline of the government's "austerity campaign" to make of themselves two complete fighting armies—"the fighting forces to smash .. on to Japan and the working forces that will stand behind them and back them to the limit in mine, factory and workshop."

They were told plainly, if the budget proposal of Treasurer Joseph Chiefly introduced in the House of Representatives Wednesday had not already made it clear, that sacrifices would be entailed. They must cut consumption of goods by at least one-third; work as never before and "cut from our lives every luxury, every relaxation, every temptation to slack."

Higher Taxes

Higher entertainment taxes and excise duties on tobacco, cigarettes, spirits and beer already had been forecast in the budget speech. These and any additional sacrifices Australia must bear for, Mr. Curtain said, "if we do not strip ourselves to save our country, the enemy will do it with ruthless efficiency and a maximum of misery."

The Prime Minister warned that the threat to Australia is not past despite recent Allied successes in

HEAVY DAMAGE SCORED ON ENEMY BASES IN CHINA

U. S. Airmen Hit Jap Headquarters and Probably Sink 7 Steamships

5 PLANES DESTROYED

Chungking, China, Sept. 4 (AP) — United States airmen scored direct hits, on Japanese headquarters at Nanchang, probably sank seven steamships and damaged others in the Singtze-Hankow Channel and left a number of other craft in flames on Lake Poyang Wednesday in a series of raids upon the enemy in Kiangsi and Hupeh Provinces, United States headquarters announced today.

In other action yesterday over Kweilin, in coastal Chekiang Province, Chinese informants said American fighters shot down five Japanese planes yesterday in an air battle.

The raids were made in support of Chinese forces beating at the defences of Nanchang, the main Japanese base in Kiangsi, and at Kinhwa, Cheking capital and big air base from which bombers could raid Japan.

The Americans pounced on a fleet of 25 sailboats and heavy junks loaded with Japanese troops on Lake Poyang and left casualties among the wreckage of the burning and smashed craft.

Hankow, port on the Yangtze and the biggest island Chinese city held by the enemy, has been the target of previous heavy raids.

Halifax, Sept. 4 —(CP)— Lacking a pied piper, the Halifax Works Committee met yesterday to plan a blitzkrieg campaign against thousands of rats infesting the city dump and endangering health of citizens nearby.

TEN TO TWENTY SQUADRONS WILL BE IN THE GROUP

Canadian Fighter Group Formation Will Come Latter Power Reports

CO-OPERATE WITH RAF

Ottawa, Sept. 4 — (CP) — Air Minister Power, announced at a press conference today that a Canadian bomber group of from 10 to 20 squadrons would be formed in the United Kingdom by the end of the present year.

Maj. Power said formation of a Canadian fighter group would come later with the prospect a total of about 40 Canadian squadrons would eventually be operating in the United Kingdom in co-operation with the Royal Air Force.

Approved by Britain

Development of the Canadian squadrons was being undertaken with the full support and approval of the British authorities, said the Air Minister, who returned from the United Kingdom this week "more convinced than ever that air power is vital in winning this war."

Maj. Power said that Air Vice Marshal G. E. Brookes, R.C.A.F., had gone to the United Kingdom and now was "sitting in" with bomber command leaders and gathering full information on operations which would be of use when the Canadian bomber group was organized.

When the bomber group is in operation it will receive its "target for tonight" from the bomber command, and it may fly as an individual group or as part of a combined air force, depending on the particular requirements of the raid.

Maj. Power revealed that a full R.C.A.F. fighter squadron has been in the Middle East for some weeks, along with many other Canadians serving with Royal Air Force units. Formation of a liaison office in the Middle East to maintain contact with Canadian personnel was proposed and would probably be in operation shortly.

Set Objective at 40 Squadrons

Discussing the development of Canadian squadrons overseas Maj. Power said that if Canada had not undertaken the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan for the instruction of airmen from other Empire countries as well as Canada there would have been from 25 to 30 Canadian squadrons in the United Kingdom fully manned by this Dominion.

Senior Canadian officers had to be kept at home to maintain the training plan although tens of thousands of air crew had been trained in Canada and sent overseas.

The actual Canadian contribution has therefore been far heavier than if between 25 and 30 actual Canadian squadrons had been sent to the United Kingdom.

Canada's contribution to the air training plan would not mean that it had less Canadian squadrons in the United Kingdom than would have been possible had it not undertaken the training plan. Such squadrons now were being built up in the United Kingdom and Maj. Power said that "40 Canadian squadrons composed of both bombers and fighters was something to

Nazis Suffer Enormous Loss For Ground Gained

Counter-Attack Regains Some Territory North West Of City

MOZDOK SECTOR ACTIVE

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Moscow, Sept. 4 (AP) — Field Marshal Von Bock beat against Stalingrad with 25 divisions today in an effort to capitalize on wedges driven systematically into its defences, but Red army men were reported to have counter-attacked with a violence that regained some ground northwest of the city.

Germans striking from the southwest again succeeded in making a slight advance at enormous cost, the mid-day war bulletin reported.

The battles "have no precedent in their violence," the military newspaper Red Star said. It reported pilots from Egypt had joined the enemy's air squadrons while ground troops from France were among the 25 Axis divisions assigned from a 1,000,000-man army for assault upon Stalingrad, commercial heart of the Volga Basin and a gateway to the Caspian.

Red army men fighting within the Don Bend around Kletskaya harassing the Axis detachments moving eastward across the Cossack steppes, occupied another village and repulsed several counter-attacks, the communique announced.

Nazis Gain Strategic Height

The Germans gained a strategic height in the battle for Novorossisk, Soviet naval base on the Black Sea more than 400 miles southwest of Stalingrad, by weight of superior numbers, it was announced.

Elsewhere in that sector, however, the Russians were reported to have withstood several attacks and destroyed six tanks and wiped out more than 150 Germans.

"In the Mozdok area (of the central Caucasus) our troops fought and wiped out an enemy group which had crossed a water line," the communique said. (Theterek River flows past Mozdok and the Grozny oil fields on its way to the Caspian Sea).

19 Czechs Executed 2 of Them Women

London, Sept. 4 —(CP)— Execution at Prague of 19 Czechs, two of them women, was reported today by Czech government circles in London.

High treason was the charge against eight, including Mrs. Irene Bernaskova, 38, a journalist. All were said to have been described in a German announcement as high in a secret organization working against the Reich.

Three others were accused of anti-German espionage and eight of burglarly in a blackout.

Four-Foot Rattlesnake Surprises Fishermen on Trip North of Marmora

Marmora, (Special.) — Forrest Dennis of Crowe Lake, and Dr. Graeme Mackechnie of Timmins, had a novel experience this week while on a fishing trip on Beaver Creek, about twenty miles north of here. They had landed from their canoe at what is commonly known as "The Bear Camp" to spend the night. The doctor was unlocking the door, while his companion came behind him carrying the equipment when they heard the ominous rattle of a rattlesnake. The doctor threw himself through the opened door just in time as not more than two and one-half feet from him was a four-foot rattler, coiled and ready to strike, while Mr. Dennis was not more than five feet distant. Before they were able to kill the reptile, it disappeard underneath the cabin. As the men had been wading the creek, their trousers were rolled to the knees, thus making a good target for the snake. The fishermen claim they had a good sleep after first making sure the door

Conny Smythe Blows Off Steam

Toronto, Sept. 4 (CP) — Major Conn Smythe, former managing director of the Maple Leaf Gardens here, said last night he's "hoping the National Hockey League has reason to be proud" of its contribution to the armed services.

"A fellow dared me to prove that professional hockey had contributed its share of manpower in this war," Major Smythe said in an interview. "I told him there must be 60 or 70 boys in uniform right now.

"That didn't suit him at all. He wanted to know how many there were really in there fighting. I named Joe Lamb, Stew Adams and Teddy Graham, all overseas. He only grunted and pointed out all three had been out of the hockey picture for years. I was stumped. He had me.

"Best I could do was point out that there were plenty pointing in the right direction now. And I'm still hoping the National Hockey League has reason to be proud of its contributions, even at this late date."

Several Axis Subs Sunk by Brazil A. F. Says Air Minister

Rio de Janeiro, Sept. 4 —(CP)— The Brazilian press gave prominence today to a statement in a speech of Air Minister Joaquin Salgado Filho yesterday that several Axis submarines have been sunk by the Brazilian air force.

Only one sinking of a submarine by a Brazilian plane has been officially announced. That occurred before Brazil entered the war.

23 RESCUED AT SEA

Buenos Aires, Sept. 4 —(AP)— An Argentine tanker bound for Tampico from Buenos Aires has rescued 23 men found drifting in a lifeboat, the Maritime Perfecture said it had been informed today. What vessel they were from and other details were not given. The tanker, the Trece de Diciembre, left here Aug. 25.

F. A. R. MacFADDEN CONDUCTS CITY AUDIT

F. A. R. MacFadden, C. A., Toronto, municipal auditor for the City of Belleville and the Belleville Public Utilities Commission is in the city conducting the official 1942 audit. Mr. MacFadden has three assistants with him and expects to complete the work within the next few days.

NINETY-FOUR BIRTHS AT THE HOSPITAL DURING AUGUST

While no new records were established, births registered at the Belleville General Hospital during the month of August continued in the "high nineties" it was reported this morning by hospital officials. During the month 94 births were registered, two less than the all-time monthly record. Girls outnumbered the boys by two, there being 46 male births as against 48 female births.

POSTPONED GAME TO BE PLAYED TONIGHT

A belated decision of team managers and league officials reveals that the fourth game of the Ladies' City Softball League finals, between Zellers and Deacons postponed last night on account of greasy condition of the diamond, will be played at the Exhibition Park tonight (Friday) instead of Tuesday as is reported on the sports page of this edition.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS OPEN ON TUESDAY

It won't be long now. School bells will ring for the city public school students on Tuesday, September 8 and for students of the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School on Tuesday, Sept. 22nd.

Collegiate students who have been engaged in farm work during the vacation period will be allowed to remain at their occupation until October 9, according to Acting Principal Turner of B.C.I.

Mr. Turner stated, however, that these students must be engaged in order to receive the extension of time.

Obituary

MRS. MARY ANNE VISCOFF

Bancroft, Sept. 4 — Mrs. Mary Anne Viscoff passed away at her residence on Hastings Street Wednesday afternoon in her fifty-eighth year following a lengthy illness. The late Mrs. Viscoff was predeceased by her husband some twenty years ago. She is survived by her two sons, Cecil of Peterboro and Ross of Madoc. Also three sisters, Mrs. L. Mountney of Bancroft; Mrs. Woodbridge of Edgerton, Alberta; Mrs. Varty of Matiska, Alberta; three brothers, James Waddell of Pleasant Valley, Alberta; John Waddell of Brampton; and Alec Waddell of Cannington.

The late Mrs. Viscoff was born in Monteagle Township. Following her marriage she settled in Toronto for a few years later moving to Bancroft, where she resided until the time of her death. Mrs. Viscoff was an active member of St. John's Anglican Church and will be greatly missed in this community.

The funeral service was held Friday afternoon from her residence to St. John's Church, the Rev. W. Simmons of Bancroft conducting the service. Interment took place in the family plot in St. John's cemetery.

The many and beautiful floral tributes testified to the esteem in which the late Mrs. Viscoff was held in this community.

LATE HARRY GERALD BULPIT

The funeral of Harry Gerald Bulpit, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Bulpit, took place from the home of the parents, 161 Station Street, on Thursday afternoon. The service in the home and at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery was conducted by Adjutant Smith of the Salvation Army.

LESTER SARGENT
(Trenton)

Trenton, Sept. 4 (Special) — The funeral of Lester Sargent took place from his home, 668 Front St. Trenton, on Thursday afternoon. September 3rd. The service in the home and at the graveside in Stockdale Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Martin, pastor of King Street United Church.

The bearers were Messrs Nelson Sargent, Jack Sargent, Frank Sargent, Edward Denike, Robert Montgomery and Everett Sargent.

The late Mr. Sargent, who died on September 1st, was born in Huntingdon Township and was in his 81st. year. He was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Oran Sargent. His mother's maiden name was Anne Hinds. For the past thirty years he lived in Trenton and was well esteemed. In religion he was a member of North Trenton United Church. Fifty-eight years ago he married Rose Ellen Winfield, daughter of the late Rev. John Winfield, who was a pioneer minister in the north. She died some time ago.

Surviving him are two daughters, Mrs. Robert Montgomery, Pickering, and Mrs. Edward Denike, Trenton; four sons, Nelson of Toronto; Jack of Detroit; Frank of Toronto, and Dick, now on active service overseas; sixteen grandchildren and fourteen great grandchildren.

Picton, Sept. 4—Due to war time conditions, the directors of Ameliasburg fair have decided to cancel the event this year.

The first run of corn was made at the Homestead plant here on Wednesday. Next week will see several factories canning corn. The crop is only a fair one. All tomato canning plants are now in operation. The rain Wednesday will be of great benefit to the crop. So far there is plenty of help in the factories and farmers do not need extra help until the ripening process is farther advanced.

Another Muskie Landed

Another big muskie has been taken from Muscote Bay off Big Island. Tipping the scales at 32 pounds, it was landed by Fred Sprague of Toronto and Dr. William Findley of Pittsburgh, Pa., who was holidaying on Big Island. It measured 49 inches in length and 21 inches around the girth. It was landed on Wednesday after a 45-minute battle.

Joan Leavitt was admitted to Prince Edward County Hospital suffering from a broken leg. The injury was suffered while she was sliding down a bannister at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Leavitt.

Picton R.A.F. soccer club goes to Toronto on Saturday, when it will meet one of Canada's best teams in Ulster United. The locals have lost but two games out of nineteen games played. They boast many stars in this game. Pilot Officer Lockwood is the team captain.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Montgomery and Mrs. Mott, Belleville, were guests of Miss Evelyn Gould.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Knapman will spend the Labor Day weekend at their cottage at Stoney Lake.

Sub Lieut. Morley Donaldson, R.C.N.V.R., who is at his home in Lindsay before going on to attend King's College in Halifax, is visiting his aunts, Mrs. T. Owens and Mrs. S. Snetsinger here, for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Walmsley have returned from a holiday spent with Mr. and Mrs. Dan Goodwin, Papineau Lake.

Plans Completed

Plans are now complete for the Sports day being held by the Royal Air Force, Wednesday, Sept. 16th. This will be held on the station grounds and the public will be admitted. Relay teams from stations in the district will take part and there are events for airmen, their wives and families. Elimination races are now under way so that at the sports day, only the finals will be held in various events, the best two from each wing taking part.

Picton Wins at Cricket

Picton defeated Trenton R.C.A.F. in a cricket match here Wednesday night by 16 runs. The locals scored 92 declared runs for five wickets while the visitors scored 86.

Vimy Barracks, Kingston, brought their softball team here Tuesday night and returned home with an 18-6 win.

On Saturday the R.A.F. cricket team goes to Peterborough, for a match.

These sports are doing much to keep the men in condition as well as fostering good sportsmanship and friendly feeling amongst the various stations.

Ask Investigation Of Proposed Guarantee

Toronto, Sept. 4 — (CP)—Members of the Toronto District Trades and Labor Council last night asked the Dominion executive to investigate the Ontario Government's proposed act to guarantee labor's right to collective bargaining.

"In my opinion this act is just a lot of window dressing," W. J. Brown, vice president of the council, said. He added the act should be investigated thoroughly if it were patterned on a similar Nova Scotia law.

The Nova Scotia Act wouldn't be uncertain," said William Dunn, treasurer.

Sgt. J. J. Price, Wireless Air Gunner, Missing After Action Overseas

Among the airmen listed as missing after air operations overseas in the casualty list issued last evening at Ottawa by the Royal Canadian Air Force is Sergeant John James Price, wireless air gunner. Sergeant Price is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Price, 47 Gordon Street, Belleville and is twenty-two years old. The young airman was missing after one of the raids over Hamburg.

John James Price enlisted about two years ago, entered at Manning Pool, Toronto, trained also at Camp Borden, took his wireless training at Montreal and his gunnery practice at Fingal.

He has been in many of the raids over Germany and had been flying for many months on the western front. He was one of the Canadians participating in the great raid over Cologne when one thousand planes were sent over that centre and he also was in air attacks on Bremen and Wilhelmshaven.

Before enlistment he was a cutter with the Deacon Shirt Company, Belleville.

Jim Scott, Veteran Caretaker of Fair Grounds, Reviews 17 Years of Service

Up at the Exhibition Grounds last night, Jim Scott, sixty-five-year-old caretaker rubbed a ruminative chin.

"Y'know" he smiled, casting a quizzical eye around the grounds where two ladies' softball teams were going through warming-up practice, "there's been many a fair here in my time. I've seen 'em come and go, and there's been some good ones and some poor ones."

Jim has been caretaker of the new Fair Grounds since it made its debut in 1925. The fair that year, he thinks, was one of the best in the seventeen years he has been caretaker of the grounds.

"That fair was a dandy," reminisced Jim. "I well remember the day when the new grounds were officially opened. The late T. P. Power was a member of the Parks Board and he brought a jim-dandy band from either New York or Chicago to play for the occasion. George F. Ostrom was president of the fair that year, and he certainly put on a good one."

Questioned as to the best fair ever held here. Jim withheld his opinion. "They've all been good" he grinned. "The Midway last year was one of the best and I see they are bringing it back again. From what I know and see and hear, this year's fair will rank with the best of them."

"Scotty" as he is sometimes called knows his fair grounds. "The young civils of boys bother me quite a bit during fair time, but what can you expect. We were all boys at one time or another and as you know, boys will be boys. "But," he added, "there are some who wilfully destroy property. The Lord help 'em if I catch 'em."

At present he is busy getting the grounds into shape for the forthcoming Belleville Fair. Formerly he was an employee of the Rolling Mills here.

Miss Ruth Latchford Wins "Miss War Worker" Contest Staged by Kiwanis Club

KARNIVAL SUCCESS

With the competition for "Miss War Worker" in this city and the drawing for the special prize of a $100 bond and the Hope Chest, the Belleville Kiwanis Club Karnival drew to a close on Thursday evening and the citizens, who have so generously helped in the past again rose to the occasion and club officials hinted that all expenses in connection with the renovations at Kiwanis Centre, where the Blood Donor Clinic is located will have been met.

Of interest to many factories in the city was the beauty competition for the title of Miss War Worker in this city and after a long and careful selection by a select set of judges, Miss Ruth Latchford of Belleville Sargent Lock Company was given that honor and presented with a cheque for $25. Miss Ray Newman of the Stewart-Warner Company was second, and given $15 and Miss Ila Masterson also of the Stewart-Warner was third and given $10. So close was Miss Helen Salisbury that a suitable prize was also awarded this war worker. The presentation of the winning sash and money was made by Air Commodore F. S. McGill of Trenton Air Station, who also acted as one of the judges, the board of judges being composed of Miss Alexandrine Gibb of the Toronto Star, Mr. Ken Soble of Toronto, who conducts several radio programs, Wing Commander M. L. Barr of I.T.S., Group Captain A. R. Dunlap of Mountain View Station and Air Commodore McGill.

Presented With Flowers

After the presentations had all been made Miss Latchford on behalf of the Kiwanis Club was presented with a beautiful bouquet of roses. In all the competition was quite keen and the large crowd, which lined in front and behind the stage voiced their approval of their favorites but the judges were not swayed in their opinion. The competitors, which list was included in another issue paraded before the judges on the specially prepared stage, while Mrs. Grant provided the supplemental music. At the conclusion of this part of the program, the other drawings took place and Percy Kerr, 307 Bleecker Ave., and Mrs. Eureta Sedore, Point Anne, were the winners of the $25 certificates, while Miss B. Asselstine, 148 Station Street, was the recipient of the $100 bond. J. T. Grosvenor, R.R. No. 5 Belleville, was the winner of the Hope Chest, a draw conducted entirely by the Kiwanis Queens. When the drawings had been completed Jack Trudeau, Chairman of the Kiwanis Club, thanked the citizens of Belleville and the surrounding district for their patronage at the Karnival and the members and other workers for the splendid support given the General Chairman of the Karnival, Jack McVeigh. Mr. Trudeau explained to the large gathering that the Kiwanis Club was composed of 70 members of a cross-section of the professional and business life of city and were only willing to give constructive service and leadership in carrying out the motto of the club "We Build".

Activities Explained

President Trudeau explained that the club was interested in underprivileged children, the V.O.N. Boys' and Girls' work but at the present, due to the conflict raging in the world, the club was centring its activities on the Blood Donor Clinic, which is operating efficiently and from 100 to 140 donations per week are being taken to send overseas. Mr. Trudeau thanked members of the Fire Department, who worked so hard putting up equipment, the Police Department for their fine co-operation and the press for the excellent publicity. The Kiwanis ladies and members of the club were not forgotten and a special vote of thanks was tendered Jack McVeigh, who as general chairman, has worked long and hard to make the Karnival a success. Mr. McVeigh, called upon for a few words stated he owed all the success to the fullest co-operation given by everyone connected with the club. "We are building a "blood bank" for England" and the money derived from the Karnival will in no small measure accomplish that end", said Mr. McVeigh.

Lieut. Brooks, recruiting officer from Kingston, was given permission to address the audience and he made an appeal for women to join the army to allow an able-bodied man to take his place in the ranks and also appealed to the veterans of the last war to jump in again and give the boys a hand. It is understood some recruits were secured from the splendid talk. The games at the Karnival did a roaring business and it was well after midnight when officials called a halt to the festivities.

BANCROFT

Bancroft, Sept. 4—Mr. D. Puff of Pickering spent over the weekend at his home in Birds' Creek.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Warren of Frankford, are visiting at the home of the latter's parents Mr. and Mrs. John Kelusky of Bancoft.

Mrs. James Linn and daughter Muriel of Dwight, are visiting this week with relatives in Bancroft and Paudash Lake.

Mrs. Clifford Broad arrived in town Monday spending a few days with her mother-in-law Mrs. William Broad, who is convalescing from a recent operation.

Mr. Cecil Wiggins left for Belleville Wednesday having relieved the local agent Mr. William Broad of the Imperial Oil for the passed three days.

Rotary Carnival Closes With Street Dance

Trenton — (Special)— Wednesday evening brought a climax to the three-night Rotary Carnival and Street Dance. The largest crowd of the carnival was entertained due possibly to the main attraction, the draw for the fine display of prizes. At midnight a slight shower dispelled the gathering and the draw was held under adverse weather conditions. Rev. J. L. Hutchinson, St. George's Church, president of the Rotary Club, was in charge of the draw and called different people from the audience to draw the tickets from the huge drum. Prize winners were as follows:

$100 War Bond or $145 chesterfield suite — J. E. Lynn, 18 Bicadalbane Street, Toronto.

$50 War Certificate or $70 breakfast set — M. Edwards, Canada Varnish Co., Leaside.

$25 War Certificate or $30 suit, ladies' or men's — B. Ganarse 1220 Lajoie Ave., Outemont, Que.

Many of the crowd patronized the booths of bingo and games of chance.

An orchestra supplied excellent music for the many who wished to dance. Earl Brinklow, Trenton, called off for the square dances.

The committee, under Mr. A. A. Farrar, report that the proceeds from the carnival are very heartening. They will be used for Rotary charity work.

Flying Officer James Kerr left for Camp Borden this week where he will be stationed for two weeks.

Messrs. James Kerr, Sr., Gilbert Hotel, and Harold Weller, Victoria Ave., are enjoying a vacation fishing at Bass Lake.

Miss Sadie Lewis, Gilbert Hotel, is enjoying a two weeks' vacation visiting friends and relatives at Oshawa and in Eastern Ontario.

Work Progressing Well

Work on the new Bethel Temple being erected on Dundas Street East is rapidly advancing. The outer walls and roof have already been erected and work on the inside is started. Members of the congregation have been assisting the carpenters in their spare time. The new temple is situated at the corner of Campbell and Dundas Street East, on the site where the Trent Manufacturing Company building was razed by fire. Rev. James W. Beam is the pastor and the new place of worship will be one that he and the congregation may well be proud of.

Renovate Trent Theatre Bldg.

Workmen have been busy starting the renovation of the inside of the Trent Theatre Building Dundas Street. Extensive alterations and redecoration have been planned for the interior. A door has been cut through the west wall of the building and will be an entrance directly to the Red Cross Society rooms upstairs. Previously entrance could only be gained to these rooms through the theatre proper and it was inconvenient.

Trenton Keeps War Step

Central Bridge Company has been added to the list of Trenton firms participating in the production of materials and articles necessary to the nation's successful war effort. This company's contribution is to be ships. For some time past the organization of a competent staff and crew for ship construction has been proceeding, and fabrication has already begun. The company is understood to have a contract for the construction of a considerable number of small craft.

Another company which heretofore manufactured a high-grade type of utility silerware has converted its entire plant for the manufacture of war articles.

Trenton Cold Storage and a food products plant for some time have been keeping several employees busy in the business of egg breaking and drying to powder form for shipment overseas.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Joyce have returned to Trenton from vacation.

Members of Trent Masonic lodge, and any visiting Masons in the district who may desire to join with the Trenton Masons, will attend divine service at St. George's church here on Sunday, September 13th. The Masons will parade with regalia from the Temple on Dundas Street west to the church on Byron Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Mallory have concluded a vacation in the northlands and returned to town.

Keen Competition

The sale of associate memberships in the Rotary Clubs Benevolence committee in connection with the carnival held here this week has been featured by keen contest among members of the club. Chairman Albert Farrar of the Carnival committee offered as prize to the winner of the competition a ten-dollar hat. Sales tabulations went rocketing. At least a dozen of the competitors are said to have postponed the purchase of new chapeau in certain anticipation of becoming possessors of the Farrar prize hat. Some competitors have so far maintained their successes as a guarded secret, but observers have been watching for either Gib Aziz, George Cobley, Frank Boyce or Fred Collins to appear with a new jaunty brim or a shiny topper. Secrets will 'out' on Monday evening.

Reports Hitting Cycle

Frederic G. Brown, 18 North Scott Street, Trenton, reported to the Trenton police that while driving about three miles west of Belleville, shortly after midnight last night, that he had struck a bicycle also proceeding in a westerly direction. The cyclist gave his name as Leo Moylo, Morrisburgh, and stated that he was not injured. The rear wheel of the bicycle was damaged. Brown stated to police that due to the lights of an approaching auto he was unable to discern the cyclist until he was too close to avoid the accident.

Gypsies Ordered to Leave

Early Wednesday evening several auto- loaded with gypsies pulled into the Hanna Park Tourists Camp and prepared to settle down. About a month ago a band of gypsies camped in the park for a week and considerable trouble was given before police removed them. At that time numerous complaints were received from residents in the neighborhood when the gypsies canvassed homes asking for food etc., in exchange for their fortune telling abilities. As soon as they started to unload last night residents phoned the police station. Police immediately visited the camp and gave them one hour to pack up and leave. They grudgingly left.

Russia Remains Darkest Spot On War Horizon

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Some Axis tank columns in Egypt have given ground, for the time being at least, to Allied defenders, and an unexplained Japanese regrouping of forces has brought a lull on the China and Pacific fronts, Russia thus remaining the darkest spot on the United Nations war horizon.

The situation in the critical Stalingrad area was somewhat obscure as these words were written. A Nazi report via Vichy that the German wedge from the southwest had been driven another five miles to within seven miles of the city would represent a critical penetration of Russian lines if true. The Vichy propaganda unit of the Goebbels machine has never been a trustworthy news source, however.

Last Natural Barrier.

About seven miles west and southwest of Stalingrad stands a series of small hills which mark the highest points in a barren and rocky eminence that forms the dividing line between the Volga and Don watersheds at that point. They furnish Russian defenders with strong outposts covering the approaches to the city from both directions.

If they have been taken or bypassed by Nazi columns, Stalingrad's situation is very critical. No other strong natural barriers between the enemy and the inner defence lines are discernable on the maps.

As for the Pacific, General MacArthur's Headquarters notes a mysterious failure of Japanese interceptor planes to challenge American-Australian bomber attacks. Coupled with the continuing Japanese withdrawal in Southern China, this indicates the Japanese enemy is preparing for a blow at Russia. If his objective were Australia's outposts and supply lines, constant air raids and observation flights would be an essential preliminary.

Pending the crisis of Stalingrad and disclosure of Japanese purposes, however, London advices as to war progress in the Atlantic was highly encouraging. A. V. Alexander First Lord of the Admiralty, revealed that July and August were not only periods of lessening Axis submarine inroads on Atlantic shipping, but set new high marks for U-boat sinkings for the war. He implied, also, that submarines put out of action, presumably by British bombing of bases or U-boat building plants, so increased the Nazi ship casualty list that the undersea blockade was shifting from the Western Atlantic to "more usual haunts."

That would mean against British sea bottlenecks like the entrances to the Irish Sea. It is through those passages that American troop convoys have thus far passed unscathed to build up and supply the expeditionary force in Northern Ireland. Alexander expressed complete confidence, however, that British and American dispositions in those vital ones could cope effectively with any U-boat reconcentration that might develop.

If it is true that the Germans submarine attack is shifting eastward again for closer range operations, the explanation must be lack of enough U-boats to maintain the long distance assault effectively. It would be a German admission of failure to keep this country on the defensive. It would also reflect increasing Nazi apprehension about a major Anglo-American second-attack.

BARN, OTHER BUILDINGS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Cornwall, Ont., Sept. 4—(CP)—A large barn and four out-buildings were destroyed Thursday evening when fire raged through farm buildings on the Leslie Alguere farm Avonmore. Only the house and garage were saved. The blaze started from a threshing mill spark, igniting straw in the barn loft. Avonmore fire brigade and a thresher crew bucket bridage were unable to control the fire. Loss is estimated at $6,000.

INDICTED

NAZIS SQUEEZE

"At a cost of enormous losses the Hitlerites succeeded in making a slight advance," the communique said. "In other sectors the enemy attacks were repulsed with heavy losses."

Soviet riflemen supported by tanks were declared to have broken into enemy positions above the city.

"In a fierce engagement the Red army men wiped out two companies of Hitlerites, destroyed four tanks and nine-anti-tank guns and captured five mortars and eight machine guns," the communique reported.

Once repulsed yesterday, Nazi shock troops struck hard two hours later across a battlefield strewn with tank wreckage and the bodies of about 400 German dead to force the Russians from strongly-held positions northwest of Stalingrad.

The Soviet information bureau announced the withdrawal at midnight and said Russians guarding southwestern approaches of the Volga River industrial centre were engaged also with enemy tanks and infantry "which had broken through into our defence zone." This was within an area of a half-a-dozen recent retreats.

Attacks Beaten Off

Nazi combat teams also gained ground northwest of the Soviet naval station at Novorossisk, on the Black Sea south of Kerch Strait, in attacks preceded by aerial and artillery bombardments, the government said. It reported Red army men yielded a village before the invasion wedge after heavy fighting.

"In other sectors," the midnight communique announced "all enemy attacks were beaten off with heavy losses for him. Eleven German tanks, nine guns and 25 trucks were destroyed and about one enemy infantry battalion was annihilated."

Russian troops who threaten the Axis flank within the Don Bend were reported to have beaten off several counter-attacks.

The Russians said violent fighting continued for river crossings in the Mozdok area of the central Caucasus, a gateway to Caucasian mountain passes to the south and the Grozny oil fields to the east.

Soviet fighter planes were declared to have shot 10 Messerschmitts from a formation of 12 in aerial combat.

Axis broadcasts recorded in London said the Russians were repeatedly attacking both German positions on the Leningrad front and Finnish lines across the Karelian Isthmus northwest of Leningrad.

Attack in Waves

A Stalingrad dispatch said German planes, flying from various points of the compass, were attacking the city regularly in waves of 150 or more.

Reinforcements were declared to have given the German Command a superiority of two or three to one over the Russians on some sectors.

("Dive-bombers Thursday destroyed 25 Soviet tanks in this sector and silenced a large number of guns," the Berlin radio asserted. "German chasers shot down 18 Soviet airplanes.")

In the central Caucasus the Germans were reported pressing a strong offensive for crossings in the Terek River basin both around Mozdok and at Prokhladnenski. Soviet observers expressed belief the defence divisions were outnumbered in men as well as in machines and planes.

The Nazi purpose is two-fold:

1. To seize the Grozny oil fields to the east:

2. To advance upon Ordzhonikidee, fifty miles southwest of Grozny the terminus of a military highway leading over the mountains to Tiflis.

ALLIES STEADILY

Two Seaplanes Damaged

In the Upper Solomons, the enemy seaplanes were damaged by the Allied bombers at Faisi, fuel dumps were destroyed at Buka and at Kieta Japanese installations were blasted with "unknown results."

In the New Guinea area, an Allied headquarters communique told of further bombing and strafing of Japanese communication lines in the Kokoda section, 60 miles east of the Allied base at Port Moresby, and of Guerilla Port Moresby, and of guerilla Allied ground troops were mopping up the survivors of a trapped band of invaders.

In the southeastern Solomons, the marines bolstered positions won from the Japanese a month ago, the navy said, but small enemy detachments which succeeded in landing there were "being sought out and engaged."

Land-based aircraft, operating from the Guadalcanal base, inflicted several hits on ships engaged in landing operations, the navy added, but extent of damage was unknown.

Japanese aircraft operations, which the navy termed "periodic," included a raid by 18 bombers accompanied by fighters on the American Guadalcanal installations. Three enemy bombers and five fighters were shot down. Damage to the American positions was termed "minor."

In addition, an enemy tanker or seaplane tender was bombed by a flying fortress off Santa Isabel Island and left in flames.

AUSTRALIANS

the Commonwealth's northern bastions. The initiative "never was and isn't today" with the United Nations, he declared.

He said Australia must become increasingly self-sufficient for war purposes because of the threat that the lend-lease lifeline to America would be snapped.

Describing Port Moresby and Darwin as "Singapores to Australia," he said if they fell "inevitably we will be faced with a bloody struggle on our soil and will be forced to fight grimly city by city and village by village."

SPANISHSHAKE-UP

Napoleon's ultimate defeat.

"The greatest governmental shake-up since the Spanish War"—as it was described in a news dispatch through the Madrid censorship—put into Franco's key cabinet posts men considered by expert observers as friendly to the Allied Nations.

If this removal of fanatical, pro-Axis leaders from the Spanish government means nothing more than that the Spanish dictator, who won control of Spain with Nazi and Fascist help, had decided to steer a middle-of-the-road course and to maintain strict neutrality, it is still a great victory for the United Nations.

Axis Thwarted

For with a genuinely neutral Spain, the Axis cannot take complete control over the Mediterranean. To control the Mediterranean, the Axis must throw Britain out of Gibraltar. And apparently Franco has decided that he prefers to have the British there than to permit Hitler to bring his legions massed on the Pyrenees through Spain to storm Gibraltar.

That the Mediterranean is the keystone of Hitler's plan of world conquest is evident. Marshal Rommel is desperately, at great expense, attempting to drive through British forces defending Egypt and the Suez Canal.

German —and Italian—infiltration into Spain, judging from reports of recent travellers in Spain, has resulted in deep resentment among the Spanish people regardless of which side they were on during the Civil War. And any move on Franco's part to curb Axis influence, it is believed, would have the support of the people, who are described generally as pro-ally.

If Hitler decides to force an issue with Franco, would not Franco, thinking of Spain's interests first, call upon the Allies for help? He could offer modern air bases built—with German help—strategically throughout Spain. And from these bases Allied bombers could operate against the Nazis' flank. The British already have a bridgehead in Gibraltar.

SERANO SUNER

Nazi Press Surprised

A Berlin dispatch to the Swiss newspaper Basler National Zeitung said the Nazi press found the Madrid governmental shake up surprising "because Serrano Suner only recently returned from an important trip to Rome, where he had long conversations with Mussolini and the king as well as a long visit with Pope Pius XII, which at that time was supposed to be a prelude to a discussion of the (Spanish) Monarchist movement."

Scandinavian newspaper laid the dismissal of Serrano Suner, who leaned toward totalitarian philosophy, to determination of General Francisco Franco to maintain Spain's neutrality.

The Svenska Dagbladet of Stockholm, said it was known for some time that "tension was increasing between Franco and the Planagists (the Fascist political movement headed by Serrano Suner) and it is believed Franco insisted on maintaining the status quo."

The Stockholm Tidningen expressed the opinion Serrano Suner would not "entirely disappear from the political arena, although it is known that the Falangists are very unpopular with the Spanish army and its officers."

GOV'T MOVES TO MEET 'ACUTE' BEEF SHORTAGE

Wartime Food Corporation Named as Sole Exporter of Cattle in Dominion

CEILING IS SET

Ottawa, Sept. 4 (CP)—The government was embarked today on a radical new policy designed to conquer the most unruly factor the Price Ceiling has faced since overall controls were imposed last December—the problem of controlling beef cattle supplies and prices.

In a surprise move, the Wartime Prices and Trade Board last night named the subsidiary Wartime Food Corporation as sole exporter of beef cattle in Canada with authority to buy cattle in the domestic market where necessary to bolster Dominion prices.

Only recently, food administration officials predicted that the beef shortage was being solved. But how serious the problem now is regarded could be seen in the Board statement that "an acute beef shortage now exists across the whole country."

"...For some time packers have been required to give priority to military requirements, yet notwithstanding this action military requirements have not been met," it added.

Thus the situation had been carefully reviewed and a "complete change of policy" decided upon. The new system makes provision for seasonal price adjustments and this, coupled with guaranteed action by the Food Corporation to support the domestic market, promoted the optimistic view in official quarters that cattle feeders could carry on their feeder stock until spring in the normal way, recovering feeding and operating costs.

Approaching Seasonal Low

Beef cattle prices now are approaching their seasonal low. A decrease of one-half cent a pound in the wholesale price will go into effect Sept. 14 and this ceiling will continue until Nov. 30, when regulated seasonal increases will be permitted.

The new policy is considered likely to remove any incentive to hold back cattle at one period and press sales at another, the Board said. But it does not necessarily mean that beef supplies, scarce in almost every Canadian centre, will be restored immediately.

The beef shortage loomed early this year and has been a source of concern to Federal authorities ever since. Several attempts have been made to meet the problem, which arises partly from the ceiling price and partly from a substantial export movement to the United States where cattle prices are higher

The Food Corporation was formed last June and attempted to check the export movement by paying the equivalent of export prices for cattle diverted to the domestic market. Its powers have been considerably enlarged by the new government policy.

Export Market Closed

A spokesman for the Foods Administration of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board said today that the effect of the new policy is that the export market in cattle is closed to the private individual. Cattle marketed within Canada will be sold to the Canadian trade.

Wartime Food Corporation will allow the cattle to carry on in Canada without intervention for the present. When cattle prices come down to the prescribed seasonal ceiling levels—at present they are above ceiling levels—the corporation will step in and start buying for the export market. The spokesman said it was assumed tha when the domestic demand for beef was satisfied prices would automatically drop to the ceiling levels. The corporation, by buying up cattle for export then, would be able to maintain prices at the ceiling.

Tramps Thru Jungle For Twenty Days

An Allied Base in Australasia, Sept. 4 (CP)—Lieut. Duncan Seffern of Manawa, Wis., pilot of a Marauder bomber which ran out of gasoline on a flight from Townsville, Australia, to Port Moresby, New Guinea, has reached this base after tramping through New Guinea jungles for twenty days.

His arrival left only two men missing of the five who were with him, one his navigator and the other Vern Haugland, Associated Press war correspondent, who went to Australia from Los Angeles.

Seffern said today that Haugland was last seen August 7 as he listened to instructions on the use of his parachute and then jumped into space 13,000 feet above New Guinea.

The first crewman to reach Port Moresby struggled in August 17th. and relief parties sent out then found two others.

Seffern said today he had hopes both Haugland and the plane's navigator would get out of the jungle successfully, pointing out they might have caught fever or been injured on landing and thus were delayed.

THE WAR TODAY

By De Witt MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

If one were asked to pick the most important international development of the past 24 hours I think it would have to be Gen. Franco's removal of his brother-in-law, strongly pro-Nazi Ramon Serrano Suner, not only from the office of Foreign Minister but from the Presidency of the Falange, which is Spain's sole political party.

There is much that needs clarification in this greatly complicated situation, but we can at least say that Franco's action must cause heart-burnings in Berlin and is a matter of satisfaction to the United Nations.

I think we may put it this way: By eliminating a powerful pro-Nazi influence from his cabinet and leadership of his party, Gen. Franco has — whatever his underlying purpose — strengthened the neutrality of his country. From the Allied standpoint that is a gratifying sign if independence in the face of powerful Hitlerian efforts to make Spain a hewer of wood and a drawer of water for the Axis.

As the Allied powers look this situation over speculatively, it strikes me that there must pass through their minds the hope — perhaps vague, but still there — that if this autumn's fighting should swing strongly in favor of the United Nations, Franco might lean in their direction. Should Hitler be held in Russia, and his henchman Rommel be defeated in Africa, the Allied camp would have a most attractive appearance.

What a Godsend it would be for the Allies if Franco should join them and thereby make Spain the continental gateway for that second front! However, that's merely a fanciful exclamation on my part —a bit of wishful thinking. Still, queer things have happened in this war and probably will again.

Meanwhile the Battle of the Caucasus on which so much depends continues to provide Herr Hitler with considerable satisfaction. The Red position at Stalingrad has further deteriorated and the defence is in a precarious position.

The Nazis also have made progress in their drive against the Russian naval port of Novorossisk. That is an engagement of great importance to the Russians, for Hitler's hope is that he can take this base and then sweep on down the Black Sea coast, thereby depriving the Red navy of all ports and making him master of this vast and strategic water.

shoot at in the way of objective."

At present about 25 R.C.A.F. squadrons are in the United Kingdom, either organized or in operation, in addition to the thousands of Canadians operating with the R.A.F. the Canadian squadrons are not as yet completely Canadian as United Kingdom ground crew personnel are usually required, but the intention is to build up the Canadian personnel in every branch of squadron activity.

The principle of identification of Canadian squadrons was fully accepted more than two years ago, Major Power said. It was agreed that the Dominion had the right to as many Canadian squadrons overseas as she would have had in the event of the training plan being undertaken by some other country.

"Sometimes I am asked, 'why do we need Canadian squadrons?'" said Major Power.

Canada Needs National Sentiment

"In the first place no country needs to develop national sentiment more than Canada. Surely there was nothing but pride in the fact that the five boys who flew home to Canada this week direct from a raid on Saarbruecken came from a Canadian bomber squadron instead of from an Empire or Allied squadron.

"Secondly, there is to be a finish to this war some time when people will sit around and discuss what was done. When that time comes there will be credit given for fighting and not for training. Canada should be able to say that its airmen served in Canadian units as well as with Empire forces. All the nations will have their own problems to deal with after the war and Canada will have her own position to uphold.

"I might put it this way:

"1. First there is a spiritual reason for the establishment of Canadian squadrons, and that is the development of the Canadian nation.

"2. There is also a material reason. After the war we must not be looked on only as a nation that trained men and did not participate in the actual fighting. In the last war Canada won her status because her troops fought as Canadians in Europe."

Standpipe To Be Drained For Cleaning, Repairs

Nearly 300,000 gallons of water will flow into the Moira River tomorrow when the Belleville Public Utilities standpipe will be emptied preparatory to cleaning painting and repairing.

Contract for the job has been let to the Dominion Steeplejack Company of Toronto who submitted the only tender received by the Utilities.

Draining of the tank will not mean any water deprivation to the city unless an unforeseen emergency arises. The 120-foot standpipe is the only source of reserve water supply at present Utilities officials pointed out today.

Work on cleaning and repair will in all likelihood start on or about Tuesday of next week. The pipe will be cleaned and painted both inside and out.

Water is carried by a special release pipe to the Moira River after manhole covers at the pipe-bottom have been removed.

Fatal Explosior Blamed on Gas

New York, Sept. 4 (AP)—An explosion in the fashionable Buchanan Apartments on the east side in midtown New York today killed Mrs. David Oswald, 38, critically injured her maid and hurt several other persons. The blast was heard for ten blocks.

Assistant Fire Chief John J. McCarthy said the exploition apparently was caused by gas but that a further investigation was being made.

Police said the blast occurred in Mrs. Oswald's apartment on the sixth floor.

POLICE COURT

Disposition of two non-support cases laid over from earlier in the week one from Tuesday and the other from Thursday with judgment deferred until today, took up considerable time on the Friday police court agenda held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd.

Meyer Littman, tailor and fur dealer, now operating a store on Front Street, agreed to provide a room for his wife and supply the necessary food and clothing for her maintenance in separate living quarters. The case was heard on Tuesday but laid over until today.

"I find you not guilty under the Criminal Code of non-support," stated Magistrate Lloyd to Mr. Littman, "but, nevertheless, as a husband you have the moral obligation of providing for your wife."

In the other non-support charge against George Cole, the accused was sentenced to one year in the county jail should he fail in an agreement to provide the sum of $30 to be paid to the local Children's Aid Society monthly for the upkeep of his three children. Mr. Cole in addition must report weekly to Captain Ruston.

Given Suspended Sentence

Charged with having carnal knowledge of a girl under sixteen years of age Dalton Ellis of the R.C.A.F. was given one year's suspended sentence after having agreed to pay all medical expenses of the case in question. "This man has a good record," stated Crown Attorney Lieut.-Col. B. O. Donnan, "and I would like to see him go back to his unit."

"I agree with you," returned Magistrate Lloyd. A bond signifying the good faith of the airman was required by the court.

Given Jail Sentence

Clifford Barnhardt, 17, was sentenced to nine days in jail for the theft of a watch at the Meade Johnson plant, the sentence to date from the day of his arrest on August 27th. The lad was accordingly given his freedom.

Case Remanded

Frank McLaren, transient, was again remanded for one week pending the arrival of his registration card from Ottawa. The man was picked up as a trespasser on C.N.R. property several weeks ago and was charged with not having a registration card in his possession.

Pleads Guilty

Arnold Mann pleaded guilty to a charge of common assault and was sentenced to four days in jail, the term to date from the time of his arrest four days ago. He was taxed the minimum fine of $1 and warned that in lieu of payment he would have to serve four days in jail.

Five persons arraigned on charges of intoxication paid the conventional fines out of court, while another in which was involved a traffic case was fined $13.50. In lieu of payment he was sentenced to 14 days in jail.

Little Benny's Note Book

Mr. Riley the hooken ladder driver was sitting outside the firehouse and I stopped going passed to talk to him, saying, Did you hear there's not —going to be any circus this year on account of the war, Mr. Riley? and Mr. Riley said, Yes, I heard, and I guess it's bad news for most people, but somehow I haven't had any taste for circuses ever since the time I had trouble rescuing Sandra the bearded lady from the circus boarding house when it went up in smoke because Flambo the human fire eater insisted on rehearsing his act in his bedroom. Well sir, when I tried to get a grip on Sandra to carry her down the ladder to safety, she pushed me away with a shove that almost stove in 2 of my ribs, he said.

G, why? I said, and Mr. Riley said, She was in love with Junior the midget. From what I hear, all bearded ladies fall in love with midgets. Anyway, Sondra and Junior were in love, and they insisted it was Junior's place to save her life by carrying her down the ladder. You can imagine how far a 50 pound midget would get trying to rescue a 200 pound bearded lady. When I finally convinced Sandra that it might be a strain on Junior's little heart, she agreed ti let me do the carrying, and then Junior burst into tiny tears and screamed that he would stay behind and choke to death in the smoke. In fact that's probably what would of happened to all of us if it hadn't been for Mysto the hypmotist, Mr. Riley said.

What did he do? I said, and Mr. Riley said. He hymotized them both into believing that they were each other. Sandra thought she was Junior and Junior thought he was Sondra, so it ended up by Sondra carrying Junior down the ladder and both thinking it was happening the other way around. Sandra kept murmuring, "My, I didn't know my own strength!" They married soon after and I believe they have several small children with very long hair. I've got a little polishing to do now, Mr. Riley said.

Meaning goodbye till next time.

Four are Killed When Ship Struck

Melbourne, Sept. 4 (CP) — Four members of the crew of an Allied ship were killed and six injured when a torpedo was sent crashing into its hull by a submarine off the south coast of Australia, it was announced today after the ship reached port.

A second torpedo missed. Shells then were fired over the bows and the submarine commander, speaking English, ordered the crew to abandon ship.

The crew was afloat in two lifeboats for an hour before volunteers remanned the ship, sent out an S.O.S. and received aid from tugs.

Britain's Calm Confidence

The United Nations look upon the opening of the fourth year of the war with quiet confidence and in expectation of growing Allied offensive against the Axis. Recently the United Nations have been providing most of the offensive.

No one could have placed the situation in words which more completely represent the spirit of militant Britain than Mr. Attlee, the house leader who said that while further difficulties were to be expected "we can be certain that, however long the war, the issue is sure."

It is the long range view and the view that is not obstructed by too great closeness to individual events that gives the proper perspective. The Allied might is growing steadily and piling up a terrific hammering for the enemy. Even yet the Allied strength is not at its peak while "our enemies long ago passed theirs."

The United Nations' world moves forward with strides.

The London Times sees "the long fight for survival" as ending and adds "the fight for victory must soon begin." The nation is "keener and more adventurous than at the outset," "we stand on the threshold of events which we hope and believe will bring final victory within our grasp." So say other newspapers in their considered opinions.

Hitler must see as the weeks and months roll by that his sands are running out. Weaker than he was, however powerful he may be, he faces the rising tide of Allied effort and righteous anger which mean only one thing—defeat of Hitlerism and enthronement of democracy by victory.

United Nations' Sea Successes

Good news was brought to the world on the third anniversary of the beginning of the war. On the day when the fourth year of the conflict opened as far as Britain is concerned, the First War Lord of the Admiralty, A. V. Alexander, announced a doubly cheerful message, that July and August had been the most successful months of hunting down Axis submarines and that British shipyards practically made good Britain's admittedly heavy warship losses. The Nazi U-boats have shifted their interest to their more usual haunts, he declared.

There is a reason, "new methods have been developed and new devices are in action," so that "if the U-boats found this attack upon our forces dangerous last year, I think they will find it doubly dangerous now."

As to the warships, the First Lord said that in one or two categories new British construction had exceeded losses and what is virtually a new fleet of corvettes, motor torpedo boats, gunboats and landing craft of all description has been built. Merchant ship building has outstripped production in the first three years of the last war.

The sea war has been vigorously prosecuted by Britain for new British devices and methods have forced the Huns to change their tactics. The Carribean Sea which was a happy hunting ground for enemy submarines, has changed its character because the United States has mounted convoy escorts and Britain has been able to give assistance.

The First Lord's message added encouragement as he referred to the Far East where Britain has been able to build a powerful fleet in the Indian Ocean.

Close to Europe

Fresh from the work of demolishing Hun industrial war plants to the quiet life of Canada in a day is the rapid transition which has given a crew of five men of a bomber fame and a record. They bombed Saarbruecken at 2:21 a.m., Wednesday, British time, and at 12:10 a.m. E.D.T., Thursday, they were in Canada.

That is speed, it is proof of the narrow space of time which separates Canada from Europe.

The crew of a war-front bomber staged this trip on leave. After the scrap at Saarbruecken they flew to a base and boarded a plane for Canada.

They have succeeded in bringing the war front very close by plane. They have shown in a dramatic way how compact the world is. The lesson will not fail.

THE ANCIENT ARTILLERY

In these days of modern warfare in which scientific weapons are playing a major part, it might be interesting to revive the quaint technical terms used by the artillery officers during the Thirty Years War or by the armies of King Charles and Cromwell in the Civil War in England which started about 300 years ago.

"At that time," says an encyclopedia article, "the artillery of England was in a very feeble and backward state. The lighter guns, the demi-culverins and the like were three, five and nine-pounders; the heavier ones ranged from 15 pounds to 68 pounds. The carriages were cumbrous affairs and the ammunition was transported in carts, or wheelbarrows, or on men's backs. The gunners walked beside the guns.

"In the artillery drill there were these words of command:

"Put back your piece, order your piece to load, search your piece, sponge your piece, fill your ladle, put in your powder, empty your ladle, put up your powder, thrust home your wad, regard your shot, put home your shot gently, thrust home your lost wad with three strokes, gauge your piece."

Nearly 200 years later there was still much about the guns, on a man-of-war for example, that appeals to the humorous sense—these guns that were generally effective against wooden walls only when brought within a range of half a mile. One of the funniest scenes in all Captain Marryatt's naval tales is that one in "Mr. Midshipman Easy" where a pedantic naval gunner plans the "triangular duel" and appoints himself master of ceremonies.

After some delay caused by the protests of an unwilling participant, Mr. Tallboys gave the word to fire as if he were exercising the great guns aboard ship:

"Cock your locks! Take good aim at the object! Fire! Stop your events."

"The only one of the three engaged in the 'duel,'" continues the story, "to observe this final order was Mr. Easthupp (the protester), who, having received the shot from the boatswain aimed rather low, promptly clapped his hands to his hindquarters, uttered a piercing yell and collapsed."

PLEDGE

We can do it if we will,
We've the courage, we've the skill,
We've the man power for the hammers
And the wrenches and the drills.
We've the money and the means
For the guns and the machines
And we'll waste no working minute
To complain about the bills.

On the land and on the sea
Where they fight for you and me,
In the skies where they are battling
Forces greater far than ours,
This is dreadful truth I speak:
War runs seven days a week
And the boys must stay on duty
With no thought of wage or hours.

We can do it if we will,
Longer stay at lathe and drill,
Faster feed the mighty presses
Making ships and tanks and guns.
And with that self-same devotion
Shown on sky, on land and ocean
We can share the war for freedom
And the victory with our sons.

Just Another Spot of Crabbing

New York, Sept. 4—Walt Disney has made a film for the Government, shortly to be released, entitled "Food Will Win the War."

The film shows the almost unlimited food resources of this nation. It shows that our wheat, if turned into flour, would snow under whole Nazi panzer divisions; that we could make enough spaghetti to knit a sweater for the globe; bake enough bread to make pyramids stretching the whole length of the Suez Canal, and that if our pork were made into a single ham it would take a fleet of aircraft carriers to move it.

Mr. Disney does not exaggerate the food resources of this country, but if the film breaks simultaneously with increased food-rationing measures the public is sure to become confused.

This week we learn that, beginning four months from now, meat is to be rationed to 2 1-2 pounds per person per week.

What is it all about? Is there really a shortage of meat justifying more coupons for householders to keep track of? The figures published in the announcement on Tuesday do not explain.

130 Pounds Per Annum.

They tell us that the average consumption in the decade 1931 to 1940 was 131 pounds per capita per year. In 1941 civilian consumption increased to 142 pounds. The rationing proposed amounts to 130 pounds. That means that we must go back to the average of the last ten years and eat a pound per month under this year's average.

If this is all we have to give up, coupon rationing is ridiculous. Retailers should be given quotas and the public spared a great deal of inconvenience.

At the same time we are told that the meat production this year is the highest in American history. The reason for rationing is vaguely given as supplying our armed forces and allies.

It seems to me that this is another example of bad public relations.

The measure makes more sense than the Government has taken trouble to explain. First of all, very few people understand why the armed forces should create a meat shortage. For they are our boys, and have always been eating. As I did not understand the matter, I called up an expert. From him I learned that meat in one form of another is the basic concentrated food of all armies, and that the German army of eight million men consumes more meat than twenty-eight million German civilians.

Meat for Soldiers.

I am strongly in favor of our soldiers eating more meat than the Germans, or than we at home, and so I am satisfied.

I also found that we are sending vast shipments of food to the Russian civilians and army as well as to the British. Russia has lost her chief food areas—a larger percentage of food than of population. So part of your food and mine must go to feed the Russian army and keep it in the war. Considering what they have done to our Nazi enemy thus far, I am willing and even anxious to give them part of my meat.

We have armies and parts of armies scattered all over the world, and we must feed them. But why not ship the food as it is produced to our armies and allies? The answer is, when one thinks of it, simple. It is necessary now to build up huge stocks, both for our allies and our distant troops. When our war begins in earnest and we open a second front we shall need all our shipping for troops and war material, and must not be bothered about food. So we must now turn meat into bully beef and other army rations, and accumulate it where we shall need it months from now.

Not Drastic Enough.

But, these facts being what they are, I asked my expert: Is the rationing of 2 1-2 pounds of meat per week, to go into effect four months from now, drastic enough?

And he answered: "No, we ought to ration not only meat, but fats and oils, and on a more meagre basis."

So my next question is: What sort of effect has the announcement that there will be rationing four months from now on that very representative American listed as "housewife"? Will the announcement encourage her to save or buy?

Since she has four months of plenty, the announcement will encourage her to buy. If she lives in the country, she will keep her meat at home, salted, or pickled, or artificially refrigerated. So meat consumption or hoarding will reach a peak in the next four months, human nature being what it is.

So I ask myself: Why announce a measure like this four months in advance?

"Breaking" Things Easy.

This is all a detective story, with me in the double role of Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson, but I recognise a familiar pattern. This Administration likes to "sound out" the public. Instead of giving good common-sense reasons for a drastic measure and then applying it immediately, trusting to the toughness and reasonableness of the American people, it likes to break things easy. And if they don't break easy, why then it compromises after a lot of talk.

The Administration apparently does not yet understand that this is our war, not its war. Also that we like to know exactly why we have to make what are called sacrifices.

As for me, I grew up in a Methodist parsonage where we had meat only twice a week anyhow, and my health at more years than I care to mention is perfect.

NEGOTIATIONS CONTINUE

Ottawa, Sept. 4 (CP)—Labor Minister Mitchell said early this afternoon that negotiations with the United Steel Workers of America on wages disputes at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sydney, N.S., and Hamilton were "progressing."

Following a half-hour conference with A. R. Mosher, President of the Canadian Congress of Labor and Pat Conroy, Secretary-Treasurer of the Congress, Mr. Mitchell said he expected a meeting planned for this afternoon would conclude the series of conferences.

HAD SAVINGS OF $10,000

New York, Sept. 4, (AP)—Crowds shoved past the stiffened figure of an old man sitting on the steps of a subway station, until a passerby put a hand on the man's rigid shoulder. The body of Joseph Ysellowitz, 66, toppled over. In his $10-a-month flat, detectives found four bank books showing savings of $10,000.

THE MARTYR SPY

"Every kind of service, necessary to the public good, becomes honorable by being necessary."

So replied Nathan Hale when his friend Capt. William Hull tried to persuade him not to act as a spy.

Nathan Hale was one of the 12 children of a Connecticut farmer and five of his brothers also served in the Revolutionary army.

He graduated from Yale at 18 and was teaching school when he heard of the battle of Lexington. He immediately joined the Connecticut forces and took part in the siege of Boston.

With the rank of captain in "Knowlton's Rangers" he went with Washington's army to Harlam Heights and on the way assisted some sailors to capture a supply sloop from under the guns of a British man-of-war.

When Gen. Washington, through Col. Thomas Knowlton, asked for a volunteer for a secret mission beyond the British lines, 21-year-old Captain Nathan Hale offered his services.

Disguised as a Dutch schoolmaster and with his college diploma as credentials, Captain Hale set out for Long Island to obtain information about the enemy.

On Sept. 1, 1776, while returning from his secret mission and almost within sight of the American picket lines, he was arrested and taken to General Howe's headquarters in the Beekman Mansion at Bloomingdale. It has always been believed that he was betrayed by his Tory cousin, Samuel Hale, who was Howe's deputy commissioner of prisoners. After sketches of British fortifications and other valuable information were found in his shoes, Captain Hale frankly admitted his name, his rank in the Continental army and the nature of his business.

Being a confessed spy, he was not given a trial, but was hanged the next morning before sunrise in the orchard of Col. Henry Rutgers near the corner of what is now Market Street and East Broadway in New York City.

The Martyr Spy, as he was long called, was permitted to make a speech from the gallows. This speech, a witness reported, was "spirited and sensible." In it, according to tradition, he uttered the historic words:

"I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country."

These words were not entirely original with Capt. Hale. Sixty-three years before Joseph Addison had written in his "Cato":

"What pity is it that we can die but once to serve our country!"

The youthful army officer was handsome, athletic, eloquent, engaging in manners and of unquestioned courage, and his daring exploit and his sad fate immediately made him an American hero.

The legend of his bravery and martyrdom was greatly enhanced by stories circulated at the time that Provost-Marshal Cunningham had refused him a Bible, denied him the services of a minister and torn up his farewell letter to his mother.

Lieut. Theodore Boselli, Transatlantic "ferryman."

Cupid's wings can't keep pace with the speedy bombers of the Ferrying Command. Lieut. Boselli has been trying for weeks to stay put long enough to get married to nurse Billye Rutherford, above—no luck. His country needed him; his best girl could wait!

Those amazing sky expresses haul everything from cannon to sick fighters, and this ace navigator added a tops when he couldn't stop hauling, to wed!

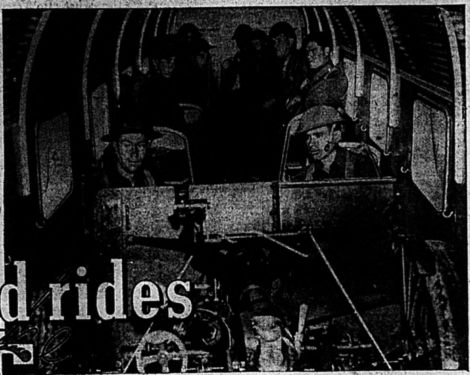
Cupid rides the Air Ferry



Troops with machine guns, and a 37 MM anti-tank gun in foreground, all in the interior of a ferry plane, during maneuvers at Dodd Field, Fort Sam Houston.

IN THE beginning there were three persons in a basement room in a War Department annex in Washington—Col. Robert Olds, Maj. Edward Alexander and a stenographer, Mrs. Jennie Smith. Their chore—this was June, 1941—was to arrange the delivery of U. S. planes being turned over to Britain under the Lend-Lease Act, from the factories or Army fields to Montreal or crated-shipping points. Civilian pilots hired for the job were to do the flying.

None of the three realized that this was the beginning of a global transportation system that was to become a tremendous factor in the United Nations' great war effort. What they'd started mushroomed rapidly—the U. S. developed the greatest air line in the world in 12 months. By July it was apparent the Army would have to fly planes instead of simply handing them over to the British at Montreal or depositing them at New York, if they were to get overseas in time to be useful. "Too little, too late" was a phrase of which Washington was becoming conscious. The British air force, in a death struggle with Goering's fliers, couldn't spare enough men experienced in flying four-engine bombers for transoceanic ferry service. The U. S. Army didn't have enough equipment at the time to train pilots for our own inevitable participation in the conflict. If the Army delivered the Lease-Lend flying equipment overseas, training of inestimable value would be given operating and flying personnel.

The Ferrying Command, as it had come to be known officially by now, spread its wings across the Atlantic, after the planes commanded by Lieut. Col. Caleb V. Haynes and Maj. James H. Rothrock had made a historic trail-blazing flight that won them Distinguished Flying Crosses. Rothrock, a one-time International News Photos cameraman who had taken flying lessons in spare time and then joined the Army, hit bad weather after taking off from Bolling Field, Va., but didn't turn back. He shot his ship into the substratosphere and, steering entirely by instruments, flew "blind" for nine hours. The likelihood of hitting barrage balloons over the British Isles added to the hazards, but he brought his ship down at Prestwick, Scotland, without mishap.

On an average day now 25 or more planes hurtle the North Atlantic, nonstop from Newfoundland or via Greenland, Iceland and the Faroe Islands, nearly all of them destined for immediate delivery to combat service, and all loaded to capacity with precious cargoes. They fly in nearly all kinds of weather.

Al Williams wrote: "There are no other flying men quite as skillful, picturesque and resourceful as these American pilots who make up our Ferry Command...These hard-headed, self-taught pilots nearly always get through and deliver their planes." The tribute is well deserved, but in it he makes two errors, one of commission, one of ommission. He speaks of "self-taught" pilots which they aren't; and he neglects to give proper credit to the men behind the pilots, literally a couple of feet behind them, who are the navigators in the crews.

"Our pilots get too much of the credit," I was told by blunt Colonel Thomas L. Mosley, chief of operations of the foreign wing of the ATC. "Anybody can fly a plane. It's the navigator, and the sergeant-mechanic, who get it there." He kept Lieut. Theodore John Boselli on one spot for a couple of hours so I could talk with him. It's extraordinary for Boselli to be on one spot long. He has flown close to 250,000 miles in a year, nearly all of it over combat areas. When I talked to him he had been trying for weeks to stay put for a couple of days in which to get married to Miss Billye Rutherford, of Greenville, S. C., a nurse. Their romance has blossomed under difficult conditions. He has promised Miss Rutherford to be in Greenville on a Monday, and ended up in Australia instead. He has made another date for the following week and then landed in Brazil. The week I talked to him he got two days leave and "hitch-hiked" by plane from Washington south. He arrived in Greenville to find a wire ordering him back to Washington to fly to the Pacific again.

"Wounded" men are shown neatly arranged in their bunks aboard one of the air transports of the newly formed Air Evacuation Unit of the Army Air Corps.

Boselli, who is of Italian-Irish ancestry, was born in New Rochelle, N. Y., 26 years ago, and attended the Salesian High School there. He wanted to be a mechanical engineer, and went to Clemson College, in South Carolina, to get a B.M.E. degree. He starred as a boxer and shortstop and for a time toyed with the idea of becoming a professional baseball player. However, scouts who looked him over decided he was too small for a major league player. When he left college it was to go to work for a laundry machine manufacturer in Brooklyn. Laundry machines didn't appeal to him; flying machines did. He managed to get into an Army-sponsored flying course at the Parks' School in St. Louis early in 1940.

Boselli flunked the course, and failed to get his wings. He was offered the opportunity to take a course as navigator, and rather than go back to the laundry-machine business, he took it. Thus chance decreed that the Army should lose an average pilot and gain an acknowledged genius in celestial navigation.

Boselli had never particularly shone in mathematics and knew no more of astronomy and geography than the next youth when he entered the navigation school conducted by Pan American Airways for the Army at Miami, Fla. But he passed with flying colors and was commissioned in the Air Corps as a navigator in April, 1941. He navigated one of the ships in the first mass flight of bombers to Hawaii. And he charted the second Ferrying Command experimental flight across the North Atlantic.

On the basis of his record Boselli was chosen navigator for the historic flight of the Harriman Mission planes from Washington to Moscow.

This hop was routine across the Atlantic, except that once when the plane dropped down out of the high clouds it found itself over a convoy, the startled gunners of which drew a bead with their ack-acks automatically, and the pilot shot back into the clouds without delay. Eastward from the British Isles the hop had to be made, of course, over enemy-held territory and at extreme altitude. The pilots were "blind" all the way, steering by Boselli's celestial navigation. The plane ran into a big cold-front with a temperature of 25 deg. below zero. Something went wrong with the heater. The distinguished passengers, who were being accommodated on benches in the bomb bay, had to "bundle" for warmth.

There couldn't be any "bundling" by Boselli and other crew members but they had plenty to keep them hot and bothered. It had been arranged for a Russian squadron to meet them 600 miles from Moscow and escort them in. Boselli guided Lieut. (now Maj.) Louis T. Reichers, senior pilot, directly to the rendezvous and on time, but word of the Americans' coming had not been communicated to the proper quarters and from every airdrome along the route, Russian interceptor planes rushed up at them, trigger fingers all too loose for the Americans' comfort, and their "escorted" trip to Moscow was one long series of frantic signalling.

Another of their worries on that trip had been the ever imminent danger of ice forming on the wings. Fortunately the de-icing apparatus with which nearly all large planes are equipped today succeeded in functioning perfectly.

Boselli navigated Reichers' plane home via the Middle East, around the Mediterranean to Cairo, thence through Africa to the West African Coast, across the South Atlantic to Brazil, then to Puerto Rico and non-stop to Washington. In August the President had decided the government would undertake to deliver supplies directly to the United Nations in the Middle East, and in 61 days the Army, working in cooperation with Pan-American Airways, had opened its chain of airdromes via South America and across Africa. The Reichers' plane was one of the first to come through it.

Boselli continued to make regular trips across the Atlantic, navigating ferried planes, until December. Meanwhile he got on a serious basis with Miss Rutherford, and they talked of marriage. On Dec. 5 he was assigned to navigate the President's special ambassador, William C. Bullitt, on a diplomatic mission to the Near East. He confidently told Miss Rutherford he'd be back for Christmas. On Christmas Day he was at Iran, Persia. On New Year's Eve he was in Darwin, Australia. The plane he was navigating all that time deserves a story by itself. Known affectionately as "The Gravy Train" it was the same Consolidated B-24 in which Boselli had flown to Moscow and around the world.

Ferry Pilot Sergeant J. H. Walsh, of Baltimore, Md., above, has received the Oak Leaf Cluster for his successful flight around the world in a ferry.

Boselli navigated "The Gravy Train" blind to an unlighted, camouflaged landing field south of Manila one night in January, to rescue 25 ground crew technicians who had been able to elude Japanese invaders and keep this secret airdrome open to American fliers. He had to change course four times to avoid Japanese and, naturally, he did not have the help of radio directional signals or weather reports.

Boselli played a return engagement in the Philippines—he and his companions flew a bomber 1,800 miles from Australia in daylight, without cannon with which to combat attacking Japanese, in order to time its arrival in Mindanao at dusk and take out Lieut. John D. Bulkeley and 29 other Navy and Army officers who had escaped Bataan. To carry all of the 30 the crew had to toss overboard parachutes, rubber rafts and all other safety equipment. It was "Australia or bust." "The Gravy Train" didn't bust.

The "Gravy Train," navigated by Boselli, also distinguished itself by flying scores of refugees out of Java between flights to the beleaguered Philippines.

Ferry Command Fliers enabled more than 3,000 persons to escape Jap invaders in Java. Thirty of them came out in a B-24A with a normal capacity of 16. Soon after the rescue plane took off it was attacked at 31,000 feet by five Zeros. It couldn't fight, it had been stripped of its ammunition for its human freight. The chief pilot, Capt. Paul Davis, nose-dived 11,500 feet straight down, to lose himself in clouds. No B-24A is supposed to be able to stand that kind of stress with such a load. No flier is supposed to try to make it do it. Davis, in doing it, lost the Zeros, for no Zero can make such a dive without coming apart.

Pulling out of his dive and the clouds Capt. Davis felt a sergeant-mechanic's hand on his shoulder. To Davis that meant only one thing: more Zeros were on his tail. He gave the bomber the gun again, but even as he did so the shouting sergeant made himself heard above the roar of the engines: "Captain, I believe those b——s were trying to shoot at us!" The remark, a masterpiece of understatement, broke the tension.

That particular ship is no more; it was lost in action. Captain Davis now is a combat pilot; he was one of the airmen commanded by Col. Harry F. Halverson of Boone, Iowa, who blasted the Italian fleet in the Mediterranean and joined the British to battle Rommel's Nazis in Egypt.

Navigator for that mission, incidentally, was Lieut. Francis B. Rang, of Pennsylvania, another pioneer Ferrying Command navigator whose feats now are almost as legendary as those of Boselli.

Experiences of Ferrying Command planes dashing in and out of Java caused the long established red, white and blue insignia on Army planes to be changed quickly. The red ball was dropped from the center of the insignia because Dutch machine-gunners mistook it too often for the red ball of the Japanese insignia. Planes that Boselli happened to be navigating never had a mishap. However, it's part of his job to keep his plane out of range of enemy fire.

Air Transport Command planes are under orders to avoid combat. It was just chance that a squadron of them, involved in a plane delivery to Australia, flew into the Midway Island battle. Their pilots knocked off a batch of Japanese with minor damage to their planes, all of which they delivered to Australia, and congratulated themselves on having had the "battle" opportunity.

Boselli told me he had a lump in his stomach in early stages of his first transatlantic flight, and I asked him if he continued to have the feeling on subsequent flights. The answer was a frank "Yes."

Maj. Curtis A. Keen, operations officer of the ATC at Bolling Field, Washington, who assigns the crews flying out of there to points across the South and North Atlantic, says they all have varying degrees of fear at the start of ocean hops.

"If a man hasn't fear he hasn't any sense," the Major says.

However, no man under his command ever has tried to get himself excused from any assignment.

"They come in here after two weeks of constant flying, and naturally they want a day or two off. Perhaps, like Boselli, to get married. But they never complain when I send them right out again. They know, because they're going out to the combat zones constantly, of the extreme need for planes and equipment. They've got to deliver them."

WEDDINGS

TROTTER—CARSON

Picton, Sept. 4 (Special) —The home of the bride's mother at Cressy was the scene of an interesting but quiet wedding on Wednesday afternoon when Mildred Beatrice, daughter of Mrs. William Carson and the late Mr. Carson, was united in marriage to Harold Beecham Trotter, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Trotter, Kingston. Rev. J. F. Reycraft officiated.

The bride wore a street length Marlborough blue silk jersey ensemble with contrasting blue accessories and carried a corsage muff of Sweetheart roses and blue cornflowers.

Her only attendant was her young cousin, Miss Barbara Carson, as flower girl. She wore a frock of white crepe trimmed with pink and carried a Colonial nosegay of pink and white roses.

A buffet luncheon was served. The bride's mother was in a navy ensemble with corsage of American Beauty roses. For travelling, the bride donned a navy blue tailored suit with matching accessories.

They will reside at 96 Division Street, Kingston.

Out of town guests were Mrs. Gerald Burgess of Ottawa, Mrs. Evelyn Coates, Kingston, Miss Maizie Carson, Picton.

ORR—LOTT

A pretty Summer wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David N. Lott, 66 West Street, Trenton, at 7.30 o'clock, Saturday evening, August 29, when their daughter, Lillian Florence, became the bride of Harold Bertrice Orr, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Van Orr, of Glen Miller. The ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Dr. C. E. Dougan, under a beautiful archway composed of gladioli and other Summer flowers.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride, entering the room to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by her sister, Mrs. Joseph Benham, looked charming in a floor length gown of pale pink mousseline de soie, with a finger tip veil of tulle illusion falling in soft folds over her face, from a coronet of orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of pink roses, bouvardia and baby's breath, tied with white satin streamers. She wore the gift of the groom, an aquamarine pendant Attending her sister as bridesmaid, was Mrs. Raymond Cox of Detroit, Michigan, gowned in a bouffant frock of blue taffeta with inserts of net and wearing white flowers in her hair, she carried a bouquet of roses, similar to the bride.

The groom was attended by his brother, Harry Orr.

Following the ceremony, the bride's mother received the guests, wearing a gown of wine crepe and a corsage of pink roses, assisted by the mother of the groom in navy sheer and a corsage of pink roses.

Later in the evening, the bride and groom left amid showers of confetti and good wishes, for Buckshot Lake, where they will spend their honeymoon. For travelling the bride donned a tailored suit of grey, with matching accessories. She wore a corsage of pink roses.

Upon their return they will reside in Trenton.

PRESENTATION

Rawdon—On Friday evening the friends and neighbours of Mount Pleasant, Rawdon Community and Stirling Cheese Factory community, gathered at Mt. Pleasant hall and presented Pte. Ormel MacMullen, of Brampton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy MacMullen, Rawdon, with an engraved wrist watch and a five-piece toilet kit. An address of appreciation was read by Mr. Harold White and Mr. Earl Ruttan made the presentation on behalf of the friends gathered. The address was signed by Messrs. George Young, Burton Sharp, Angus Johnson, Bert Jeffs, Donald Johnson, Harold White and Earl Ruttan.

Ormel suitably replied thanking his friends for the lovely gifts and their kindness in arranging the presentation and social evening.

Rev. T. P. Townsend B.A., B.D., was master of ceremonies, and spoke briefly. The pastor is a veteran of the First Great War and has first hand knowledge of what Army life means and his address expressed the sentiments of many of those gathered at the hall.

Mrs. Percy Hubble and Mrs. Carleton Potts conducted a patriotic sing-song, which preceded the program.

Mrs. Baldwin Reid delighted with two humorous readings which won hearty applause. Miss Betty McConnell contributed a piano solo and Masters John and Gordon Reid rendered piano duet. Mrs. Townsend sang specially for the occasion "Sons of the Empire".

At the close the ladies served an appetizing lunch topped off with a patriotic fruit drink made without sugar. Several of the cakes were also sugarless and were a credit to the ladies who baked them. More and more people are learning how to conserve sugar in these days when sugar rationing is so necessary.

After a social half-hour with Ormel the gathering dispersed.

Mrs. Sid Demorest, Newmarket, is spending this week under the parental roof, while her mother, Mrs. Percy MacMullen, is attending School for Leaders under the auspices of the Bay of Quinte Conference Branch Woman's Missionary Society at the Ontario Ladies' College, Whitby.

Gifts are Presented To Softball Team At Mt. View Dance

A very successful dance was held last evening at Mountain View Bombing and Gunnery School when young ladies from the district also members of the Hospitality Club and St. Michael's Club, Belleville, with the personnel of the R.C.A.F. (Women's Division) were entertained by the airmen. Music for the gala evening was provided by the Trenton R.C.A.F. Orchestra, and featured vocal solos by George Maiden of the Mountain View Station.

The committee in charge of the dance Flight Lieutenant D. Mulcahy, Urban hughes and Tom Rathwell, K. of C. Supervisors, AW1 Watts (W.D.) Cpl. Horton and Cpl. Iverson, had arranged a very interesting program of novelty dances which was thoroughly enjoyed by the dancers. Miss Bernice Horrigan drew the lucky numbers for the door prizes which were won by AW2 Mary McDonald and LAC Parker of the Royal Australian Air Force. Special "identity" dances were won by LAC McDonald, LAC Akron, AW2 Betty Hetherinton, and Miss Ardelle Smith, Belleville.

During the evening an interesting feature was the presentation of windbreakers to members of the Station Softball team who were present at the dance. This team competed and were runners-up in the district league. Those receiving windbreakers which had the R.C.A.F. crest were Cpl. McIntyre, Cpl. Tartagua, Cpl. Fenlon (Capt.) Cpl. Iverson, LAC Smith, LAC Covryduc, AC2 Ribhany, AC2 Ray, LAC Cook, Cpl. Fox, Pilot Officer Abelson and Tom Rathwell, (coach).

Refreshments were served in the mess hall and the very enjoyable party came to a close about midnight.

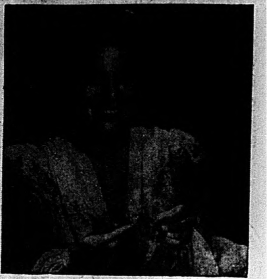
What Do Your Own Eyes Say?



Brenda Joyce uses a brown mascara.

By HELEN FOLLETT

EYES ARE the most interesting feature of the feminine face. What they can say is plenty! There is the "come hither" look and there is the "go on away, you bother me" glare. They speak love; and they can express hatred. It behooves all of us to make our eyes behave prettily. A twinkle is a priceless asset.

The eyes are mirrors of the mind. The cheerful, jolly soul has bright eyes, the dour lemon has clouded ones. Look out for cold, calculating eyes are bad, too. steely eyes; they bode you no good. Then there are those sly, furtive lookers that signify the owner thereof has got something up her sleeve.

Attention must be paid to the setting of the eyes. Keep the tissues creamed so that they will stay firm and turkey tracks won't get a toehold. Don't fall into the habit of squinting, a practice that etches sun rays around the sou orbs. Wear dark glasses to protect the eyes from strong sunlight. The pretty little things are working all the time, t'isn't fair to abuse them.

Apply Mineral Oil

Long, dark lashes form pretty curtains. If you have short stubby ones, massage the lids lightly with mineral oil. Don't be afraid to use it; if it gets in your eyes it will do no harm. The silky fuzzers thrive on oil.

Eyebrows, beautifully outlined, kept glittering and smooth by the use of the tiny brush, contribute greatly to the charm of the eyes. Screwy designs aren't considered smart any more. We're sick and tired of the lifted ones that make a girl look like a scared rabbit. They should travel along the edge of the eye socket; that's where they belong. Plucked away along the lower edge they seem to have less relationship to the eyes.

If mascara is used as a darkening agent, avoid black; it is too strong a contrast to the skin, looks theatrical.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

What Is Expected of Usher?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My fiance's cousin is being married the last part of this month, and he has asked me to be one of his ushers. I am twenty years old, and since this is the first time I have ever been to a wedding, I don't know the first thing about this job of being an usher. I wish you would please answer a few questions for me, so I can practice a bit, and not appear too much like an amateur!

1.—What time should I be at the church? And what is expected of me as an usher?

2.—Should I send the bride a wedding gift, other than the one we are all giving her?

Joe

First, don't worry about your usher-job—take it in stride and everything will be all right. Since this is to be a church wedding, there undoubtedly will be a rehearsal, probably the evening before the wedding, and you and the other members of the wedding party will be coached as to your parts in the processional and recessional.

Then you'll be told (or should be) what time to arrive at the church—its usually an hour before the ceremony-hour. You may be told, too, that there are ribbons to be stretched to indicate the pews for the special guests, members of the immediate families and close relatives. Or you may be given a typewritten list of special guests, who are to be seated in pews to the front of the church.

This is the most important thing to keep in mind—that the left of the aisle is the "bride's side", and the right side is the "groom's side". If you don't know an arriving guest, you ask, "Are you a friend of the bride or the groom?" Then seat them according to their answer.

You offer your right arm to an arriving woman guest and escort her down the aisle to her place. Don't be too solemn as you walk down the aisle with her; it's proper to chat, in a low voice, perhaps about the weather. If the woman is with a man, he follows after you and the woman. If there are two or three women together, you may escort them singly or, if the time is short, you may offer your arm to one and asked the rest to follow. The head usher escorts the groom's mother (her husband following) to the first pew on the right of the aisle, and then returns to escort the bride's mother (who is the last person seated before the processional begins) to the first pew on the left of the aisle.

After the recessional the ushers immediately return to escort the chief women guests (a husband following his wife and the usher). The other guests are expected to keep their seats until the members of the families and the close relatives are escorted down the aisle. Then the ushers go to the place where the reception is to be held—not to be in the receiving-line, but to be on hand to see that the reception guests are taken care of, guided to the reception-line perhaps, and to the room in which the refreshments are being served.

So you see that what is expected of you is, first, complete co-operation with the bridegroom's plans; second, with the technic of the professional and recessional; and third, with the ideal of being a courtly and thoughtful and gracious escort.

2.—Since you and the other ushers are sending the bride a joint wedding present, it is not necessary for you to send her a separate present. But, of course, it's proper for you to do this, if you especially desire it.

Courtesy Tip

One of the most devastatingly rude things you can do is to direct your conversation to one person in a group, completely disregarding the others. If you could read the thoughts of the ones being ignored, you couldn't be proud of the manners-rating they are giving you. And watch out . . . the very ones you are ignoring so high-handedly you may find out later are much more worth-while to know than the one on which you concentrated your attention. So faulty manners and faulty judgment may lose a wonderful possibility for friendship for you.

Gastroscope Aids Studies Of Stomach Disorders

Every new advance in medicine must be tried and tested many times before it can be accepted as a method of treatment or of diagnosis. For example, the gastroscope, which allows the physician to actually see into the stomach, was tried out for a number of years. According to Dr. Gordon McNeer of New York, the gastroscope, if used by a physician trained in the use of the instrument, is apparently of great value in telling when gastritis—inflammation of the stomach—is present.

In a certain type of gastritis, the lining membrane of the stomach, when examined with the gastroscope, is found to be a dirty grey color instead of the normal pinkish color, and the blood vessels are found to be dilated. This condition of the stomach also is found in patients suffering from lack of vitamins, from pernicious anemia, and from certain tumors of the stomach. This kind of gastritis is known as astrophic gastritis because there is some wasting of the lining membrane of the stomach. It produces such symptoms as belching, heartburn, diarrhoea and a feeling of fullness after meals.

Atrophic gastritis evidently can be relieved by using a diet that is bland and not irritating and by seeing to it that the patient gets plenty of rest. Certain drugs can be given which will temporarily relieve the pain. Olive oil taken before meals may also help to bring comfort. Vitamin preparations may be given in the proper dose.

In another type of gastritis known as chronic hypertrophic gastritis there is inflammation and thickening, rather than wasting, of the lining membrane of the stomach. The lining membrane looks dull instead of bright and shiny.

Still another form, acute gastritis, occurs particularly in persons who use alcoholic beverages to excess. In this condition the lining membrane of the stomach is bright and inflamed. Here and there are spots which, through the gastroscope, look like canker sores. The lining membrane bleeds easily. The symptoms are much like those which occur when ulcers of the stomach are present, such as pain in the abdomen one to three hours after meals with sickness to the stomach and vomiting.

Not only may these various forms of gastritis be told one from the other by the use of the gastroscope, but other conditions, such as ulcer of the stomach and tumor growths, can be discovered in the same way. It is not painful to the patient to have the gastroscope used but before it can be successfully employed, the physician must have had a course of training so that he can recognize the various conditions when he looks through the gastroscope. The X-ray of course, is helpful in making a diagnosis of certain stomach disorders and when used with the gastroscope, a great deal can be learned about a number of disorders affecting the human stomach.

Hostess House Asks Loan of Piano

Hostess House at Mountain View Bombing and Gunnery School, the popular centre of recreation for members of R.C.A.F. and the girls of the Women's Division is greatly in need of a piano and would sincerely appreciate the loan of one. Hostess House wishes to provide entertainment for those in service during their leisure hours and the use of a piano would be greatly appreciated. Anyone interested is asked to phone Hostess House at Mountain View Bombing and Gunnery School, Local 51, and reverse the charges.

You'll never be satisfied with anything else once you see RINSO WHITENESS

PEGGY: Sis, I feel awful! Look how much whiter Kate's dress is compared to Bobby's blouse.

SIS: Why, Peg, don't feel badly! Just use Rinso! It gives the whitest wash. And with Rinso you don't have to scrub and boil either.

PEGGY: My, that must make clothes last lots longer.

SIS: It certainly does! Just look at this washable print dress I'm wearing. It was washed dozens of times in Rinso. See how bright and fresh it is!

PEGGY: Believe me, I'm going to get Rinso and use it this coming washday.

SIS: You'll be thrilled with Rinso's rich, lively suds. I suggest you get the GIANT package. It's even more economical.

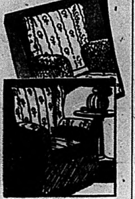
Smart Slip-Cover Style You Easily Make



Old Chair Is a Beauty Again.

An elegant, tailored slip cover is what that frumpy old chair needs! You can make one yourself easily, the pin-on way. Such a smart style as we show—of satin-stripe apricot rayon, with kick-pleat flounce—isn't a bit beyond you.

Start at top back of chair and smooth your fabric down the inside-back and seat, allowing 4 inches for tuck-in between. Pin fabric down every 3 inches, then cut around the pins, leaving 1½ inches for seams.

Next, smooth fabric over arms, back, sides and cushion in the same way, pinning and cutting as you go. For arm fronts and wings you may want to make paper patterns for exact fit.

Now you pin all the pieces together, un-pin them from the chair, baste, try on and sew. Last of all, add the flounce.

Our 32-page booklet gives exact details, step-by-step diagrams for making slip covers the pin-on way for differently shaped chairs, sofas, auto seats. Tells how to make swags and pleated flounces, decorative seams, trimmings. Suggests colors, fabrics.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of "How to Make Slip Covers" to Ontario Intelligencer, Home Service, 166 Front Street, Belleville, Ont. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Fashion Flashes

IT'S A GOOD NOTION to go in for red accessories for autumn, since red goes well with black, brown, green or with the navy now so popular for fall use.

Good looking and useful too is a new fall coat built on trench coat lines. Made in light beige wide-ribbed corduroy, it has metal buttons for the flap pockets, two of which are at the bust line, and two big pockets at the hips.

A good buy is the hat that is right with casual or with more dressy clothes. Such a hat is a red sombrero with brim rolled back to show green felt leaf appliques.

There's more sense in this year's crop of fur coats, with utility outweighing luxury. A good general wear coat is of blonde muskrat the color of ripe wheat. It is made on boxy lines with tiny turn-down collar and turn-back cuffs on the sleeves, which are wide at the wrist.

Easy to wear frocks get top rating this Autumn. A nice afternoon frock is of golden yellow crepe, the high-necked bodice softly gathered into easy lines. Wide bracelet-length sleeves, soft drapery at peg-top pockets. Bodice is embroidered with tiny gold stars.

Back again each year comes the classic sports hat. A new version made with softly rolling brim and high pointed crown is of bright green chenille with a wide band of deep purple suede.

Pacific War Theatre May Give Allies Great Opportunities

Canberra, Sept. 4 (C) — The Pacific war theatre is gradually being assessed at a higher degree of importance than many authorities were at first disposed to admit, H. V. Evatt, Australian minister for External Affairs, told the House of Representatives today in a review of the international situation.

Largely as a result of the battles in the Coral Sea, Midway and the Solomons, Dr. Evatt declared, the realization at last is growing the United Nations may be presented with great opportunities to strike telling blows in this theatre.

He paid special tribute to Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of United States naval operations, with whom he talked in Washington.

"While the immediate credit has gone in the main to others, the planning and determination of Admiral King has been largely responsible for the blows against the enemy in the Coral Sea and Midway," he asserted.

"There has not yet been adequate appreciation of the boldness and ingenuity of the northern thrust of the United States and Australian forces over a great distance toward the Solomon Islands."

The United States fleet has made a remarkable recovery from the setback at Pearl Harbor, which not a few believed had put the United States navy out of the Pacific war for at least 18 months, Dr. Evatt said. Events, he declared, have proved otherwise.

He said the total number of combat planes received in this theatre since March was very substantial and "far beyond our wildest hopes in the black days of February."

He added, however, that it is impossible to rest satisfied with the present position of the United Nations.

MORE ALIENS ARRESTED

Newark, N.J., Sept. 4 —(AP) — Federal bureau of investigation agents visited more than 70 homes in 40 New Jersey municipalties last night and made what E.E. Conroy, assistant F.B.I. director, described as "numerous arrests" of enemy aliens. He said all were Germans. Considerable wartime contraband also was seized.

DEATH-RATE LOW IN ARMED FORCES

Ottawa, Sept. 4 —(CP)— A low death-rate from serious diseases in the armed forces is attributable to the prompt and scientific treatment given by service doctors, Surgeons-Capt. Archibald McCallum, Medical Director General, Royal Canadian Navy, said today in an interview.

Capt. McCallum expressed belief the navy's death-rate of less than five per thousand cases of the most serious diseases medical men are called upon to handle can not be equalled in civilian medical practice.

Since the start of the war, the navy has had 363 cases of scarlet fever but no deaths, 224 cases of diphtheria and no deaths, 416 cases of pneumonia and three deaths, 41 cases of spinal meningitis and two deaths. That is a record of only five deaths in 1,044 cases of the four killing diseases.

In all, only 28 deaths have occurred in the navy from sickness and causes other than accident and enemy action. Of these, only 14 or 15 were from causes which gave a medical man any chance for recovery through treatment.

Discharges from the navy for medical reasons total, 1,227, 3.06 per cent of the navy's present strength of about 40,000. The total includes a large number discharged for nervous or mental conditions which developed or came to light under the stress of service and for which there was no medical treatment.

Heavy Fighting Near Kinhwa

Chungking, Sept. 4 (AP)—Heavy fighting on the outskirts of Kinhwa, where the Japanese hold one of their last air bases in Chekiang Province, was reported today by the high command which said the enemy had brought up reinforcements to defend the city.

The communique also confirmed Chinese reports that Lupao, an important Kwangtung province highway and river centre about 25 miles northwest of Canton, also has been recaptured.

Two Chinese columns, sweeping into coastal Chekiang from Kiangsi, had been reported closing in on Kinhwa from the west and south after having routed Japanese forces previously sent to stiffen the city's defences.

Other reports related that Chinese guerillas had reoccupied several important towns in the Kiangsu-Anhwei border region late in August.

The Japanese suffered heavy losses in men, both their own forces and Chinese puppet troops who deserted to free China's side, and in large quantities of material, the reports said.

At one town alone more than 800 puppet troops were said to have crossed to the Chinese side after revolting and "killing their Japanese overlords."

Glad To Be Back 'Where One Can Eat Without Restraint'

Toronto, Sept. 4.— (CP)—Miss Betty McFarlane of Arthur, Ont., back in Canada after more than a year in New Zealand, today said in an interview that "It's wonderful to be back again where one can eat without restraint".

There is a great shortage of food, she said, and everything "without exception" is rationed. "I had one orange in more than three months and was lucky to get that," she said.

Autoists "down under" now use gas producers, employing charcoal burners in stoves on the back of their cars. "Driving is no fun, since it is necessary to get out every hour and stoke up again", she said.

Miss McFarlane, a graduate nurse, had been assistant to her uncle, Dr. Alexander Gillies, a New Zealand orthopedic surgeon.

S-O-S
(SAUSAGE) (ON) (SALMON)
DINNER PLATE

WOMEN have come to the conclusion after trying many sauces, that thick, fruity H. P. is tops in flavour and economy.

"S.O.S." Dinner Plate or "Sausage on Salmon" is a new, appetizing dish. Break into small pieces and fry ¼ lb. of sausage. Remove from pan and set to cool. To the sausage fat in pan add 2 tablespoons of flour and blend with 1½ cups of milk. Cook until thick, then add ½ teaspoon of salt, ⅛ teaspoon of pepper, 1 tablespoon H. P. Sauce and 1 teaspoon of chopped parsley. Pour over 2 well-beaten eggs. Drain and flake 1 can (1 lb.) of salmon and arrange in buttered casserole; dot with sausage. Pour sauce over fish and sausage and top with bread crumbs. Bake in moderate oven for 45 min.

H. P. Sauce adds appetizing flavour to your favourite dishes.

Kingston 'Vics' Score Second Win Over Belleville "Vets" To Eliminate Team From O.A.S.A.

Locals Secure Only One Hit Off Combined Hurling of Sughrui and Scrutton

BAWDEN OFF COLOR

Well, it's all over for another season.

Playing much the same brand of ball which carried them through to an easy win over the local Army and Navy Veterans here earlier in the week, the Kingston Victorias ousted the locals from the O.A.S.A. playdowns in the Limestone City last evening when they pounded out an easy 10-5 victory.

The Vets have no alibis for their defeat as on the night's play the better team won and Kingston will go on to represent Eastern Ontario in the provincial softball playdowns. And on their fielding ability and hitting strength should go far.

Insofar as last night's game in Kingston is concerned the defeat might be summed up in just three small words—"a wrong guess." Had Kiser elected to start big Jim Hunter on the mound instead of Johnnie Bawden the verdict might have been quite different. But then what's the use.

Kiser couldn't be expected to know that Johnnie's pitching arm wasn't going to have the old zip that formerly has sent batters back to the bench with that dazzled look in their faces. It wasn't just Johnnie's night and the Kingston swatsmiths made merry at his expense and with the help of costly Belleville errors had pushed ten runs across the platter before the fourth inning was completed.

Pitched Brilliant, Relief

"Big Jim" Hunter then came in to stem the tide and in a brilliant relief role handcuffed the Victorias for the balance of the game to set them down with two hits and a row of goose-eggs on the score board.

You can't win ball games without runs, however, and therein lies the sad tale but true. Only one hit did the locals garner off the combined deliveries of Sughrui and Scrutton, who went in as relief hurler in the eighth after the starting hurler's control had gone.

The locals scored the first run of the game in the first inning when a walk to Cy Barriage—one of the ten handed out by Sughrui—and an error by the Kingston shortstop paved the way for a tally. Kingston equalled matters in their half however, as an error by Herbie Henn and Jordan's single pushed across a run for the homesters.

Murney Green's double in the fourth inning after one was away represented the entire offensive strength of the Belleville hitters so completely were they handcuffed by innocent appearing slants of Sughrui, the Kingston soldier-boy hurler. True Kingston committed five costly erorrs and the locals drew an even dozen free passes, but 13 men left stranded on the runways tells the story.

McConnell Stands Out

Although he committed two costly errors afield, McConnell, Kingston shortstop stood out for the homesters, getting three of his team's 15 safeties and literally robbing the locals of what looked like sure hits. "Yip" Radley also played a good game and conked out a homer, while Sughrui knocked a timely triple to score two ahead of him. Sonny Green did not appear in the lineup with Scrutton holding down the keystone sack until he went in to pitch in the eighth.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

By the Associated Press

Buck Newsom, Dodgers—Shut out Reds on four hits, fanning eight.

Howard Pollet, Cardinals — Pitched four-hit shutout against Giants.

Bill Butland, Red Sox—Blanked Tigers on four hits.

Sid Hudson and Rae Scarborough, Senators—Pitched double victory over White Sox, former allowing four hits and latter five in a shutout.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

Toronto, Sept. 4 —(CP)— Terry Reardon is playing sensational lacrosse for Montreal Canadians. . . The rugged Irishman scored four goals and passed for two others when Canucks lost 14-10 to Montreal Shamrocks the other night in the best-of-five Quebec semi-final (now squared, 1-1).

Reardon seems to have taken up permanent residence in Montreal, although he went these quite by accident last Autumn . . . He is property of Boston Bruins in the National Hockey League but was refused a passport last year so went to Montreal under an arrangement whereby he would appear only in games Canadiens played in Canada. . . Later in the season the ruling was relaxed and he played in the United States, too, but played with Montreal.

Deathless Prose:

Stu (Vancouver Province Keate, on coast boxla playoffs: "Certainly is nice to work at these lacrosse finals—two bands, fresh air, drains to keep the blood off your shoes . . ."

Incidentally:

Jim (Toronto Globe and Mail) Coleman is one of the country's lustiest drum-beaters for a national sports controller. . . Baz (Montreal Star) O'Meara is against, writes that sport "couldn't survive the burden of direct governmental control.". . . Edmonton is one of several Canadian cities this year with plenty of hockey talent, mostly in the service, but no suitable rink. . . The Edmonton arena has been used by the military since last year. . . Jack (Edmonton Bulletin) Kelly reports that Frank Coulson of Red Deer is working on formation of an Alberta Junior Hockey League in the belief that Senior Hockey will be defunct next winter. . .

The prize for perseverance this week goes to Three Rivers Black Foxes of the Canadian-American League, who won a 19-inning game after leaving 21 men on bases. . . Charlie (Toronto Globe and Mail) Oliver reports that Harry Giddings' Ten to Ace is in serious training at Hamilton and will run in the Major Eastern Stakes this Autumn . . . At Toronto Thorncliffe he's expected to race against Maginot Line, the Vancouver stretch-runner who beat the Ace in the Canadian derby at Winnipeg.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, Sept. 4 (CP)—A jockey changed his whip to the other hand and the King lost a promising race-horse.

It happened at Newmarket in the Wickhambrook Stakes when the smart two-year-old filly Garter Stitch swerved and impaled herself on the railings after Jockey T. Lowrey lifted the whip to change hands. Lowrey was flung high in the air and suffered a fractured collarbone.

The irony of the incident was that the whip that frightened Garter Stitch never would have struck her because the King's jockeys may carry whips but not use them. That's a Royal order—but Garter Stitch just didn't understand.

The accident occurred at a point on the course where there was a short cut to the filly's stable and it was believed she was attempting to jump the fence. It was one of the worst mishaps on a British race course in years and Garter Stitch probably was dead before a veterinary ran to where she lay and put a bullet through her head. At the time, the filly was moving up strongly and her supporters who had their usual bob or two on the King were "shouting her home."

It looks as if hockey will return as a major wartime sport this winter. It's already the talk of Canadian army and air force camps. It became most popular in Scotland last winter and now the Hockey Association is making plans for plenty of games between English teams.

A certain amount of the sport has been played since war began but nothing like pre-war games when Canadian stars were a dime-a-dozen on British ice lanes.

A government order dealing with old rags strikes at sport. A section of the order forbids the use of new string for repairing garden fences and the order is stretched to apply also to repairing goal nets, cricket nets, tennis and badminton racquets.

Incidentally, all football clubs are being advised that footballs will last much longer if not fully inflated. Now the only fear is that some husky will put a boot through the less-inflated bladder.

Round and about: An England vs. Scotland soccer International will be played at Wembley stadium Oct. 10 in aid of war charities... of a total of 2,359 acres in the Newmarket area held by the Jockey Club, for horse racing and training, 169 acres have been plowed and put under arable cultivation.

Prospects Good For Senior Loop

Montreal, Sept. 4. (CP)—Prospects that the Quebec Rugby Football Union will sponsor a large senior group for the first season in five years this fall appeared good last night after the first meeting of the season.

Officials said it seemed probable that eight or nine teams might apply for entrance into a senior group, which would operate in addition to the junior group which operated last year.

Teams seen as possible entries were Royals, Navy, Army, Huntingdon Training Centre, R.C.A.F. Montreal Headquarters, R.C.A.F. Manning Depot, Lachine, R.C.A.F. No. 1 Wireless School, Canadian Vickers and Montreal Football Club.

SOFTBALL GAME IS POSTPONED

Due to the greasy condition of the diamond at Exhibition Park last night, the fourth game between the champion Zellers and the Deacon Ladies' City Softball League squads was postponed until Tuesday night.

Manager "Stub" Barrett of the Deacon Blackshirts refused to field his team after looking over the diamond. Previous rains had coated the playing surface a greasy coat constituting a dangerous hazard to players in the Deacon manager's opinion.

Decision to play the game was made late last night following discussion between team managers and league officials.

DUCKS GETTING A REAL BREAK DUE TO WAR

Experts State 100 Million Birds Will Make Southland Journey

HUNTERS RESTRICTED

Chicago, Sept. 4—(AP)—In Northern Woodlands the wild ducks are breaking up housekeeping with the healthiest prospect in years of reaching Miami or wherever they're planning to spend the winter.

This fall a greater number of birds will wing over a lesser number of hunters equipped with enough ammunition but not enough times, tires or gasoline. The ducks can thank the war for this break.

The Izaak Walton League estimates well over 100,000,000 birds will lam it south the next few months. This would be 30,000,000 more than last season and three times as many as in 1935. Good weather and water conditions for breeding are responsible for the big flocks.

Though figures are unavailable, the league guesses that 500,000 hunters are using Uncle Sam's guns this season to blast at another kind of fowl. Of these probably 50,000 are duck hunters.

No Time to Hunt

Then there are untold thousands who won't have time to leave their defence work benches to spend a few days in the marshes. Those who find time probably won't have tires or gasoline to take them to their favorite blinds.

The smarter ducks—the ones that hunters swear went to high school—will lay out a route along our coasts. There, wartime regulations prevent civilians from going out in any kind of boat with a firearm.

Last year 1,400,000 duck stamps were issued to hunters. The Izaak Walton League figures the 1942 total may not exceed 1,000,000.

Plenty of Stock

Guns and ammunition are not a problem, according to a leading sporting goods house. While sporting shotguns are not being manufactured, there are stocks on hand for initiates into the army of hunters, who already have their guns.

There are enough shells in stock to supply this season's crop of hunters and some of next year's. Hunting doesn't clash with patriotism since shotgun powder is different from that used in military guns. Priority demands on brass and copper are the cause for a curb in production.

Schroeder-Russell Match Holds Interest In Tennis Championships

New York, Sept. 4. (AP) —Not at his best because of a sprained tendon in his racket wrist, Ted Schroeder Jr., of Glendale, Cal., probably was in some slight danger of meeting defeat in his quarter-final match against Alejo Russell of Argentina in the United States tennis championships today.

It could be close. Ted, the top seeded player in the tournament, has not been too impressive up to this point. He was carried to four strenuous sets by unseeded James W. Evert of Chicago in their match three days ago.

In his last two matches Russell played a lot of brilliant tennis to defeat Bob Falkenburg and Sidney Wood Jr., former Wimbledon champion.

The Schroeder-Russel match held most of the day's interest. The two women's matches were not calculated to have the fans standing in line overnight. Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, the favorite, figured to beat Mary Arnold of Los Angeles rather handily, and the other tilt brought together two New York hopefuls, Helen Bernard and Mrs. Helen Pedersen Rihbany.

Frankie Parker still looked like the man to beat. He was a smooth machine sailing along under perfect control and with plenty of power to spare, as he ran down Seymour Greenberg, Clay Court champion, yesterday, 6-0, 6-0, 6-4.

Pancho Segura of Ecuador was anything but impressive in his win over Billy Talbert of Cincinnati, by 6-4, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4.

BIG BUCK NEWSOM HURLS DODGERS TO 2-0 VICTORY

Returns Outlay for His Purchase Price to Washingtn Senators

A NEEDED WIN

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

When Brooklyn Dodgers bought big Buck Newsom from Washington Senators last Monday for a price now understood to have been $25,000 plus a minor league pitcher, they said they would be satisfied if the veteran won three games for them in the stretch drive for the National League pennant.

On that basis Newsom's debut for the Dodgers yesterday at Cincinnati was worth $8,333.33 and, with his rare ability for a grant gesture the veteran provided a performance to meet the value.

He shut out Cincinnati Red 2-0 on four scattered hits, no two in an inning, and struck out eight men in almost air-tight hurling duel with Johnny Vander Meer, who himself fanned eight and allowed only four safeties before being removed for a pinch-hitter in the last of the eighth inning.

The victory, closing Brooklyn's last western swing of the season, kept the Dodgers 4 1-2 games ahead of St. Louis Cardinals, who crushed New York Giants behind the four-hit hurling of lefty Howard Pollet.

First Win Since June 7

The young southpaw hadn't won a game since June 7, but he exerted his old spell over the Giants, whom he had beaten three times in the spring, and the only club he has beaten all year except Chicago Cubs.

The Cards made nine hits, five of them doubles in the box score, but three of them flukes on the field, as the Giants sabotaged old Carl Hubbell.

Philadelphia's night game at Pittsburgh was postponed.

In the American League the speeding Boston Red Sox gained half a game on the idle New York Yankees by smothering Detroit Tigers 2-0 on four-hit Bill Butland, who now has won six in a row. The Red Sockers were held to five blows, but made them good for one run in the third and another in the sixth for their fifth straight triumph and 23rd in 27 games.

Washington Senators turned the tables on Chicago White Sox and swept a doubleheader 3-2 and 14-0, getting the stupendous sum of 20 hits off Thornton Lee and Bob Weiland in the second game while rookie Rae Scarborough was checking Chicago on five. In the first encounter Sid Hudson pitched one-hit ball for seven stanzas, but yielded three together for both White Sox runs in the eighth.

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.)
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Sept. 4. (AP)— While the hollering is going on, what's the matter with Hank Borowy for the ""Rookie of the Year" prize? . . . We've had nominations for Vern Stephens of the Browns, Johnny Pesky of the Red Sox and John Beazley of the Cards, but has any of them bettered Hank's four shutouts and that almost-no-hitter for the Yanks? . . . Wonder what the scorer would have called that one "hit" Wednesday if it had come in the ninth inning instead of the first. . . .

Headline Headliner

When stories on the Newsom and Cullenbine deals came through the other day, the guy on Detroit News desk penned this self-explanatory banner :"Bobo and Roy 'inherit the earth'."

Signal Corps

The Dodgers have called upon so many relief pitchers lately that Chuck Dressen and French Bordagaray have cooked up special signals for them . . . When Chuck indicates a fat man, Hugh Casey comes in; a thin-man motion means Max Macon; for Ed Head, Dressen scratches his thatch; for Kirby Higbe he goes through the motions of eating a steak and for Whit Wyatt he pantomimes a man walking behind a plow.

ROYALS ASSURE SELVES A BERTH IN THE PLAYOFFS

Defeat Leafs Twice and Homers Used to Turn the Trick

BEARS ARE IN

By the Associated Press

The pennant-winning Newark Bears are the only ones enjoying the scramble being waged among five clubs to determine who will join the Bears in the International League playoffs.

Montreal Royals just about assured themselves a berth and at the same time left little hope for Toronto Maple Leafs last night as they defeated the Leafs twice 3-1 and 2-1.

Although Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe tossed a three-hitter in the first game, the Royals had to score two unearned runs to make him the victor. Toronto's only tally came on a circuit clout by Frank Colman in the second inning.

Successive home runs by Jack Graham and Les Burge in the fourth inning of the night cap gave the Royals the contest. Al Sherer held the Leafs to six hits and lost his shutout on a Burge error.

Baltimore Orioles advanced into a fourth-place tie with Syracuse Chiefs as they defeated Jersey City Giants, 5-4 and 3-2.

George Staller broke a 2-2 tie with a three-run four- master in the opener's sixth inning and the Orioles survived a last-inning uprising by the Giants.

All the scoring in the aftermath was limited to the first three innings in which the Giants scored twice and the Orioles three times.

Newark Bears suffered a heavy loss at they bowed to Syracuse Chiefs 4-1. More important than the defeat was the accident suffered by third baseman Joe Abreu. Abreu, who off the field has built up quite a reputation as a magician, was unable to get out of the way of a pitch ball thrown by Ewell Blackwell in the eighth inning. He suffered a cut and concussion but was reported in no immediate danger.

Rochester Red Wings and Buffalo Bisons were idle.

Washington Spotlight

(By J. F. SANDERSON)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 4 (CP) — The first high-ranking columnist to plump for a fourth term for Preardent Roosevelt supporter but, on ler, who writes a syndicated column for the Scripps-Howard chain of newspapers.

Pegler, who has never been an arden Roosevelt supporter but, on the contrary, a violent opponent of New Deal labor laws, writes:

" . . . Mr. Roosevelt is just so much bigger and tougher than any other man in the United States at this writing that he has no rival, and in the rest of the world his is the only name that represents the United States . . but if this war is going on in 1944, as it probably will be, a change of administration would be such a risky thing that it might be better to keep him, with all his faults, but with his great strength, too, and trust to the future and the wisdom of the people for the restoration of the old American liberties later on. At the present moment, there is no man in sight who would be an acceptable risk as successor to the presidency in the thick of war."

GERMANS, JAPS, ITALIANS HELD

There were nearly 1,000,000 Axis nationals in the United States when war was declared last December—934,1000 to be exact. It is a cheering note to report that it has been necessary for only 6,369 to be picked up as dangerous to national safety and of those arrested a mere 3,269 are now behind barbed wire. It is a tribute to the general policy of leniency proclaimed by Attorney General Francis Biddle that today the aliens situation is regarded as well under control.

James H. R. Cromwell, former American Minister to Canada and a millionaire several times over, has been paid a "substantial sum" by the "New Masses" for all costs relating to his $1,000,000 libel suit against the Left-Wing Magazine for naming him a member of what it called "Washintgon's Cliveden Set." The case was settled out of court with a public apology.

LO! THE POOR DIPLOMATS

Washington's diplomatic corps has been thrown into dismay and alarm by a ruling of the United States treasury ending the ancient right of diplomats to escape payment of excise taxes on liquor and tobacco imported from their own countries in bond. The State Department is being bombarded with protests but the treasury is standing firm. It's a cinch there will be fewer cocktail parties along Ambassadors' Row this Winter and in the homes of second and third secretaries.

NOTES THAT MAKE NEWS

The Ordnance Department of the U.S. Army is hot on the trail of plastics to take the place of essential metals. It already has developed plastic buttons, combs, safety razors, canteens and beds . . . as a result of the good neighbor policy of President Roosevelt, the American people are flocking to universities, colleges and night schools to study Spanish and Portuguese. The biggest group is composed of men and women who look forward to close business relations with Latin America after the war.

The Bureau of Printing and Engraving in Washington turns out 46,000,000 stamps a day in 70 varieties and for $1 it produces 140 paper bils. .. If you make less than $1,470 a year, don't move to Washington. The Labor Department has figured out it costs that much for a single person to live here. The rub is that some government employees are paid only $1,260 and they live here.

Raymond Clapper, Scripps-Howard columnist, commenting on charges brought against Henry J. Kaiser, West Coast shipbuilder, who is turning out cargo vessels faster than any many in history, charges that he went into the Black Market for steel writes: "Give us a dozen such scofflaws around this town and it might shorten this war and save thousands of lives. One thing is certain, they won't win this war with court cases that put our industrial Kaisers in strait-jackets." Clapper blames the War Production Board for permitting a steel Black Market to exist.

Reports from Georgia indicate that Gene Talmadge, the man with the red suspenders who shook up the State's university system because he said racial equality was being taught, is having a tough time in his campaign for re-election as governor. .. President Roosevelt may make a crosscountry trip this fall to inspect war establishments and pep up the people. .. The Solomon Islands were named because an early rumor spread around that gold from the islands adorned Solomon's Temple in Jerusalem. The Japs didn't find it, either.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Men of Texas"

One of those ever-appealing, full-blooded romantic adventure pictures, "Men of Texas" which is certain to meet with popular approval, is now on the McCarthy Theatre screen. Universal has hit the entertainment target squarely with this one. It is one of those pictures obviously designed to please every type of audience. Surefire dramatic elements have been skilfully blended to amplify the excitement and running suspense.

The list of headline personalities in the cast might guarantee the merit of almost any picture. In this picture, which is based on the deviltry and romance of post Civil War days in the Lone Star State, the players are unusually effective.

Foremost in the group are Robert Stack, Brod Crawford and Jackie Cooper. Stack portrays the Chicago newspaper reporter assigned to cover disturbances in the teeming Southwest. Crawford appears as a masquerading bandit and young Cooper is seen as the innocent victim of a renegade's bullet.

Roles Described

Miss Gwynne has the role of a southern belle in sharp contrast to the hard-boiled nightclub chorine she recently portrayed in "Broadway." Ralph Bellamy wears the uniform of a Union Major while Jane Darwell and Leo Carrillo have distinctly memorable assignments.

In addition to its warm dramatic depth, "Men of Texas" has all the sweep and impressiveness of "the wide open spaces" and contains more than the average amount of fast running action. Its authenticity is credited largely to Associate Producer George Waggner, recognized authority on Texas history and folklore.

"Hello Annapolis"

Co-starring Tom Brown and Jean Parker and a splendid supporting cast "Hello Annapolis" is the second swell feature offering now on the McCarthy screen and in addition a cartoon treat in technicolor entitled "Cinderella Goes to a Party" makes up a program McCarthy patrons can be certain of thoroughly enjoying. Performances on Saturday are continuous.

AT THE BELLE

"A Great Man's Lady

Three great stars who were first seen together in Cecil B. DeMille's "Union Pacific" are again united in the heart-stirring picture which Paramount is now presenting on the Belle Theatre screen. "The Great Man's Lady" co-stars Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea with Brian Donlevy in support—a trio of movie mighties to quicken the pulse of any film fan.

"Pacific Blackout" Timely

Paramount's exciting picture "Pacific Blackout" the added feature attraction is the first to come out of Hollywood dealing with civilian defence. The film teams Robert Preston and Martha O'Driscoll and features Eva Gabor, Phillip Merrivale and Louis Jean Heyat.

"Footlight Serenade" Tuneful

Betty Grable, John Payne and Victor Mature are starred in 20th Century-Fox's new musical, "Footlight Serenade," coming to the Belle Theatre this week-end which is hailed as the "perfect tonic for the times." Featuring love, laughs and lyrics, it is indeed a merry musical treat.

With a story that spells entertainment all the way, "Footlight Serenade" tells of a fighter who turns actor, Victor Mature realistically portrays the boxer, as John boys are "nuts" about curvaceous Betty Grable, as who isn't!

Rated by previewers as a worthy successor to "My Gal Sal" the picture is studded with topflight talent, such as Jane Wyman, James Gleason, Phil Silvers and Cobina Wright, Jr., produced with all the embellishments that mark a topflight musical, "Footlight Serenade" has been hailed as one of the best.

Leo Robin and Ralph Raingers have provided the sparkling music. Among the hits you will be hearing with increasing frequency in the coming weeks are "I Heard the Birdies Sing," "I'm Still Crazy for You," "Are You Kidding Me?" and "I'll Be Marching to a Love Song".

Dazzling new dances have been created by Hermes Pan, who teams with Miss Grable in some of the routines.

Chapter nine of "Sea Raider" serial will be exhibited Saturday matinee. Continuous shows will be presented Saturday.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Rise and Shine"

It was a mad, musical comedy that was shown at the Capitol Theatre last night, where the audience could not stop laughing at Mark Hellinger's "Rise and Shine." It has songs, dances, girls and laughs in just the right proportion to make a smash musical hit.

"Rise and Shine" has one of the grandest casts ever packed into one big musical fun film. It has Jack Oakie as the All-American Chowderhead, George Murphy as the guy who rescues romance from the rumpus, Walter Brennan as a Grandpa who still appreciates a finely turned ankle, Linda Darnell as the loveliest lovely that ever walked across a campus, and Milton Berle as the horse-laughing "Seabiscuit." All are top-notch fun makers in their funniest performances.

The laugh-provoking story is based on James Thurder's mad, mad autobiography, "My Life and Hard Times."

"Westward Ho!"

The added western "Westward Ho!" featuring the 3 Mesquiteers Bob Steele, Tom Tyler and Rufe Davis packs plenty of action and thrills in grand old western style. A funny cartoon "O Gentle Spring" and the 4th chapter of "Spy Smasher" conclude a grand entertaining program.

FOUND DEAD IN CAR

Hollywood, Sept. 4 (AP)—Radio actor Walter Paterson, 31, who enacted the role of Nicky in the radio program One Man's Family, was found dead in his automobile a garden hose extending from the exhaust pipe to the driver's compartment Police said he had been dead about 24 hours.

CHAPTER 18

Reunion

"It's so beautiful, I don't know how to--"

"That's a thank--you for those kind words, lady."

"Oh, but I didn't--"

"You've had more to do with it than you think," Steve answered hesitantly, wondering whether he should say all that he had meant to say. The speech he had rehearsed as the plane winged homeward from New York seemed stilted. "If I hadn't known your help and faith--"

"But you've been so generous already," Linda protested. "I have so many lovely things, furs, jewels--even my own car!"

"You deserve much more." They sat looking at each other in self-conscious silence, each striving to speak. Then she announced gravely:

"Greg Hollister is coming home next week." She had not meant to tell him, but the words came out in a rush, and Linda didn't know there was a lilt in her voice, a ring of happy expectancy. Nor did she see the eager light vanish from Steve's face, leaving it grim.

"So he's coming back at last." Steve paused to light his pipe. "Were you in town today?"

Linda told him quietly of her luncheon with Diane, but she omitted the details, for suddenly Steve's apparent interest in her affairs seemed to changed to indifference. He stared into space, not even listening as she described her meeting with the artist, and when, hurt and puzzled by his attitude, Linda rose and said good night, he scarcely nodded, and didn't look up until she had left the room.

The August weather was unbearably hot when Linda and Steve moved into their new apartment located on Chicago's fashionable north side. Mary had returned from her eastern trip and she offered her services in helping Linda get settled in her new surroundings. Mary was thin and pale. Deep circles ringed her eyes and much of her vivaciousness was gone. Linda felt concern for Mary's welfare, and ventured a query. But Mary laughed away Linda's fears.

"It's just that I was too active this summer," she said, "after the mad rush of getting settled in our new home after Phil and I were married. After a good rest I'll be as good as new. This time next month I'll be a different person."

"Perhaps we'll all be different this time next month," Linda said. "Oh, if only we knew what was in store for each of us!"

Mary eyed her soberly. "You're thinking about Greg Hollister," she said, and when Linda protested in surprise, Mary went on determinedly. "I'm not interfering, Linda. I know you and Steve are very happy together. You've been good to him and good for him, because he was sunk after Brenda broke their engagement. But well, haven't you been just a wee bit in love with Greg all these months?"

"I--I was very much in love with Greg when he went away," Linda admitted, "and so I suppose I won't know how enduring that love really was until I see him again. Naturally," here Linda flushed, "Steve comes first."

"Of course," Mary said. "Of course."

Linda looked at her sharply. Was it possible, she wondered, that Mary's innocent face masked far more comprehension than her outward appearances warranted? How much did Steven's little sister really understand?

Greg Hollister had been in Chicago for over a week before Linda heard of him again, and then, one morning, Diane telephoned, breathless with excitement.

"Brenda and Jerry Coleman just flew back from Bermuda, and we're entertaining for Greg tonight in their new home. You and Steve simply must come!"

"Brenda —" Linda experienced an odd pang of disappointment, and something else — something former model since the wedding re- akin to fear. She hadn't seen the ception nearly a year ago.

After their marriage, Brenda and her husband had spent the winter in Florida and then had gone to Bermuda and the West Indies for the Summer. Now Diane's cool voice assured Linda that Steve's former sweetheart had returned. Linda was at a loss to explain this strange, new emotion she was experiencing. Why should she wish Brenda would never return to Chicago? Surely the wife of Jerry Coleman could mean nothing to her.

"I know you two will be meeting up with old friends, but surely your own happiness is a safeguard against any —shall we say—embarrassing situations?"

Linda had scarcely heard Diane, but she said quickly, "It's just that it might be—well, a trifle awkward".

"Oh, surely not! We want you to come, so please don't disappoint us. Dancing starts at ten".

After she had replaced the telephone on its base, Linda ran to stare at her reflection in the mirror. Seeing her flushed cheeks and sparkling eyes, she knew that the feeling for Greg which had been dormant for so long had flared again. Linda glanced at her wrist watch, and then, with the knowledge of a thousand things she must do that day, dashed off a hasty note to Steve and left the apartment.

Returning home hours later, her arms filled with boxes., Linda found Steve waiting, still wearing jodhpurs after a day in the country.

"I tried all day to get you, but you were out," he said, eyeing her packages.

"I dismissed Mary for the afternoon and spent my time in the beauty shop".

"But not all afternoon," he grinned, "considering these packages".

Linda touched them self-consciously. "Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Coleman are entertaining for Greg Hollister. "We're invited".

"So", Steve said grimly. "We kill two birds with one stone".

"I don't know what you mean".

"As I remember", Steve said pleasantly, "the reason we entered into the blessed state of Holy Matrimony was because of Brenda and Greg and our unrequitted love. Now we all meet again, to prove—or try to prove—how happy and contented we are, when all the time—" Steve gripped her arm, forcing her to meet his eyes "—when all the time we're miserable. Isn't that right?"

Linda wanted to protest to cry out, "That isn't true; the past few months have been wonderful," but Steve's eyes were cold and remorseful, his manner foreboding. "I—suppose so," she murmured, and Steve released her so abruptly that she staggered back against the wall.

"Then let's get ready for the masquerade," Steve said brusquely. "We have no time to waste".

Never before had Linda given as much attention to her appearance as she did that night, and when at last Steve rapped discretely at her door, she was waiting expectantly, a lovely vision in shimmering cloth of gold, her shoulders rising smooth and white from the low-cut bodice. A single flower quivered in her copper curls, and her eyes pleaded for approval.

Steve stared at his wife without speaking, but Linda was unaware of the way his eyes lighted as they rested on her loveliness.

"Do I look the wife of a talented and successful author?" she demanded pertly, unconsciously happier because the temporary coolness which had existed between them seemed forgotten now.

"Linda," Steve began uncertainly, "I've been waiting for an opportunity to tell you—"

"And do you think Greg will recognize me as the little waif from Prairievale?" Linda was smiling to herself. She did not see the eager look fade from Steve's face, for although her words had been uttered casually she could not conceal her rising color or the way her nervous fingers tugged at the golden dress.

"Shall we go?" Steve asked, almost harshly, although Linda noticed a difference in his manner, she was too excited and carried away by her own thoughts to mention that fact until it was too late.

The beautiful new home of Brenda and Jerry Coleman was ablaze with lights, and the music of a famous orchestra drifted on the cool, autumn air. Walking into the mansion on Steve's arm, Linda was the centre of all eyes. Gone was the shy uncertain girl whose debut in Chicago had been very nearly disastrous. In her place was a self-assured young woman. This was Linda's triumph, and she revelled in it.

As they made their way through the crowded foyer, Linda heard excitedly uttered whispers as person after person pointed them out. "There's Steven Baridon and his wife . . . " "—Baridon, a writer you know—" ". . . certainly made a name for himself as an author, and that lovely wife of his . . . ."

There was a sudden flurry in the brilliantly-lighted ballroom as Linda and Steve entered; and from a huddled group of young men, smart and assured in their well-cut dress clothes, Brenda Coleman emerged, making her way across the polished floor, a tall, blonde goddess in white.

"Steve! Stevie, darling, this is a nice welcome home!"

She took his hand in both her own, smiling into his eyes, oblivious to Linda—his wife.

Only a year ago Linda Phillips might have stood by, awkward and ill at ease, as the scene was played before her eyes by one so adept at treachery as Brenda Coleman, but now Linda, Baridon said smoothly, gracefully, her hand sliding through Steve's arm:

"Of course, Brenda de-ear, I'm merely Steven's wife, but I'm here, too".

For Brenda the tableau was shattered by those words. The stately blonde could have overlooked shabby Linda Phillips, but Steve's wife was a new and spectacular Linda, with all eyes turned in her direction. To attempt an outright snub would be decidedly in Linda's favor.

All this went through Brenda's mind in a flash, and her glance in the other girl's direction was venomous, though her welcome was honey-sweet.

"But of course, Linda, it's so nice to see you again. I understand you have introduced Steve to the simple, rustic mode of life. Your mode of life, I presume?"

Linda colored at this sally. How like Brenda to bring her background and family into the battle of words with hidden meanings so skillfully. "On the contrary", she managed lightly. "Steve's mode of life has become mine".

Brenda turned wide, blue eyes on Steve. "You poor boy, shut up all Winter long on that old, broken-down farm". She was determined to ignore Linda, and the latter, not daring to look at Steve, wondered how he liked this reference to the beloved Hillsacres. She could not understand now how a man as fine and proud as Steve, with such depth of character and breeding could be attracted by Brenda's shallow beauty. Beyond her vanity and dazzling appearance there was no warmth, no strength of character or sweetness or understanding. There was nothing..

"You make it sound like a prison", Steve was observing, amused. He smiled down into Brenda's upturned, flower-like face.

"Was it that bad?" she said innocently. "Then I know you're simply dying to get into the swing of things again after your—your exile."

The fact that several months had passed since Steve and Linda came out of their self-imposed retirement, failed to impress Brenda. She was determined to believe that Steve had been forced to live the life of a hermit, awaiting her return..

"Linda, I'm not going to be the perfect hostess and escort you to the powder room", Brenda murmured sweetly. "I'm going to be selfish and demanding with Steve, because, after all, I did have him first. Isn't that true, darling?"

She turned to Steve with an air of helplessness. "Listen to the music, Stevie. They're playing one of our favorites, and we mustn't let such divine music go to waste. I insist that you dance this one with me—for old times' sake".

Seething with anger, Linda turned on her heel and left them, as Brenda led Steve onto the floor. She had no desire to watch Brenda make a play for Steve, using all the tricks that had captivated his affections before. Instead, she made her way up the wide, curving stairs to the elaborate powder room where some of her friends were chatting animatedly. As Linda entered, the conversation stopped abruptly there was a silence with guilt. Linda smiled to herself, knowing their conversation had centred around her. She wondered vaguely what had been said.

"This is quite an exciting night for you, isn't it," she managed to say lightly, "having Brenda and Steve and Greg and me gathered under one roof. Someone should do a play about it".

Four pairs of eyes were turned questioningly in her direction Four pairs of lips opened to protest, but Linda laughed: "Please don't bother to deny you're all terribly interested in what comes next. Frankly, I am too".

170 KNOWN KILLED IN DIEPPE ACTION 626 WOUNDED

Next-of-Kin of All Known Killed, Died of Wounds, Wounded, Missing, Notified

OFFICIAL STATEMENT

Ottawa, Sept. 4 (CP) — Major-General H. F. G. Letson, Adjutant-General, announced today that the total number of Canadian soldiers known to have been killed in the Dieppe combined operations raid was 170.

Gen. Letson's statement, issued through the Public Relations Department at National Defence headquarters, said 626 men were reported as wounded.

He also said "much larger numbers" were listed as missing and that some of these would be presumed to have been killed or wounded.

The Adjutant-General's announcement said that all next-of-kin of those known to have been killed in action, died of wounds or to be wounded, and those missing as a result of the large-scale attack on the German-occupied French port August 19 have been notified by National Defence headquarters.

As soon as further information was available to defence headquarters, it would be given next-of-kin immediately.

In accordance with the agreed censorship practice observed by all the United Nations, the names of the missing will not be published until a later date. This practice is followed for the sole purpose of safeguarding the interests of those now classified as missing. However, in every case, the next-of-kin have been notified.

Japan Explains Cause of Refusal

Tokyo (from Japanese broadcasts) Sept. 4 (AP) Domei asserted today the government refused the United States Red Cross permission for a chartered neutral ship, to bring supplies to American war prisoners because "Japan could not permit free and uninhibited American collection of information in areas of war operation as such a voyage would render possible."

"The Japanese government never has refused to permit such relief measures," the news agency said, "but has refused passage of neutral ships in strategic waters as a natural measure necessitated in the conduct of the war."

Domei asserted that the Tokyo government had advised the American Red Cross, though the International Red Cross organization at Geneva, that Japan "is giving American war prisoners and internees fair treatment in accord with the principle of international law. Hence the government does not recognize any special need for additional comfort and relief."

The news agency added that the government had no objection to American use of a second diplomatic exchange ship for sending supplies to prisoners and that negotiations to this end were expected to materialize soon.

TO STOP MAKING 1943 AUTO PARTS

400,000 Plates Already Made Probably Enough for Vehicles Operating Next Year

Toronto, Sept. 4 —(CP)— Manufacture of Ontario motor vehicle plates for 1943 has been ordered stopped by the Federal Steel Controller in the interests of conserving steel for war industry, J. P. Bickell, Ontario Registrar of Motor Vehicles disclosed today. As a consequence, with 400,000 plates of steel already manufactured at Guelph reformatory, any needed balance will have a plate made of some other material.

Only one plate per vehicle is being manufactured, and Mr. Bickell expressed the view probably only 400,000 vehicles will operate because of general conditions arising from the rubber shortage and gasoline restrictions. This year, however, the department issued 625,000 sets of plates.

C. F. Neelands, deputy provincial secretary, said a scheme has already been devised to manufacture the balance from tin, salvaged from large tins used at Guelph reformatory. He said Dr. J. D. Heslip, the superintendent, recently experimented with tin from two quart tins, salvaging some two tons which salvage organizations declined to use. Dr. Heslip had the tin pressed through the vehicle market machines, and it came out in good condition, comparing favorably with the lighter steel plate.

Motor markers which will go on sale Dec. 1 are of black background with yellow lettering, the reverse of this year's plates.

NAZI ALARM SEEN OVER R.A.F. RAIDS

Hitler Appoints General Hirschauer New Chief of A.A. Defences

London, Sept. 4 (CP)—Germany has announced Hitler's appointment of Gen. Rriedrich Hirschhauer as the new chief of anti-aircraft defences for the whole country and British sources said today that the step betrayed Nazi alarm over the growing destructiveness of Allied air attacks.

Gen. Hirschhauer, formerly the commanding officer of anti-aircraft defences of the 17th German air district, succeeded Gen. Schroeder.

British sources said the appointment was aimed at improving air raid precautions which have been taxed heavily, particularly by the "saturation" raids against industrial and rail centres of the Ruhr and northwest Germany.

HE GOT HIS MONEY BACK

Camp Blanding, Fla., Sept. 4 —(AP)—"I want my money back," loudly complained a soldier after he had put a dime in a juke box at a non-commissioned officers' club here. "Either I hear those two songs or I get by dime back," he threatened as he shook the box. Out popped a quarter. Before he could pick up the quarter, out fell $1.05.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 4 —(AP)— It was more or less of a dim-out in today's stock market although scattered issues were highlighted by moderate strength and weakness.

Variations generally were in fractions near the fourth hour.

American & Foreign Power Senior issues edged upward but most of the recently buoyant utility preferreds rested.

There was little action in Canadian issues. Lake Shore advanced 3-8, Distillers Seagram was down 1-4 and Canadian Pacific held unchanged.

Western Union and Postal Telegraph Pfd., among stocks, registered new highs for the year or longer. Occasional gains were posted for Chrysler, American Telephone, Chesapeake & Ohio, Dow Chemical and Montgomery Ward. U. S. Steel slipped at intervals along with Santa Fe, Anaconda, Du Pont, General Motors and Pacific Telephone.

Armour of Ill, prior pfd. recorded a sizeable loss at a new bottom since 1940 in wake of yesterday's dividend omission on this issue. Wilson & Co. Pfd. also fell substantially.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Sept. 4 (CP)—Dressedweight were up 10 cents at Stratford and unchanged at other bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Dressedweight: Barrie $15.65, Hamilton $15.90 delivered, Brantford $15.25 plus transportation; Hull $15 plus transportation; Stratford $14.25 plus transportation.

NEW NAVY PLANE

Columbus, O., Sept. 4 (AP)—The new Seagull, a scout-observation plane now rolling off the assembly line of Curtiss-Wright Corp. here, has gone into active service with the United States fleet," the ship can operate either from land on wheel gear or by catapult operation from battleships and cruisers, using floats for landing.

Weekly Livestock Report

Toronto, Sept. 4 (CP)—The small supply of cows, fed calves and bulls sold 25-50 cents higher on the livestock market here this week. Calves were 25 cents higher and hogs unchanged. Lambs were strong to 25 cents higher and sheep were strong to 25 cents higher and sheep were steady.

Total cattle receipts for the week of 3,377 head represented a larger run than that of the week before. The bulk of cattle offered was purchased by farmers as stockers and feeders. Most of the small supply of cows, fed calves and bulls were purchased by local butchers and outside buyers.

In cattle trade no weighty steers of any account were offered. Butcher steers and heifers sold from $8.75-$10.75. Fed calves were $11-$12.50. Butcher cows sold from $6.25-$9, with canners and cutters at $4-$6. A few common quality bulls sold from $7.50-$9. Good stockers and feeders were $10-$10.75 with stock calves up to $11.65. Common to medium quality stockers sold at $7.75-$9.50. Milkers and springers sold from $80-$125 each.

Calves held strong at $15.50-$16 for choice with other grades downward to $8. Grassers sold from $8.50-$9.50.

The light run of hogs sold steady at $16 dressed. Sows were $12.75 dressed.

Lambs sold strong at $12 for good ewes and wethers off cars and at $11.75 for those off trucks. Bucks were $10.75-$11.

Sheep sold steady at $4-$8.50, according to quality.

Demand for Butter Continues Brisk

Toronto, Sept. 4 — Demand for butter continued brisk on the local produce market Thursday with prices holding firm at Wednesday's levels. Receipts were again very light and this condition restricted trading. Wholesale prices were on the basis of 35 1-4 cents a pound for No. 1 creamery solids. Western butter was sold at 35 1-4 cents also. To the trade, price basis was 36 1-2 cents for first grade creamery prints.

A slightly better undertone developed in the egg market, although there was still no sign of a much heavier demand. Receipts were ample to cover all requirements.

Cheese market continued quiet, with new white make quoted at 20 cents a pound.

NAZI WARSHIPS SUNK

(By EDDY GILMORE)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Sept. 5 (AP)—Showing an amazing power of recuperation, the Red army was reported today to have shaken off triphammer blows at Stalingrad and stopped the German advance upon that Volga city industrial centre.

In the Caucasus also, military observers said, the Russians were checking the German progress; and in the central and eastern sectors were counter-attacking.

The only enemy advance recorded in today's dispatches was in the single sector of the western Caucasus north of the Black Sea naval station of Novorossisk.

Rzhev Offensive Pushed

The Red army meanwhile continued to push its own offensive at Rzhev, northwest of Moscow, on a smaller scale than the gigantic German campaigns in the Caucasus and in the Volga Basin, but strong enough to bend the German line farther back from Moscow. Several more populated points were reported recaptured on this western front.

About Stalingrad, the Germans were described as in difficulties with a screen of Red army fire ahead of them and a barren expanse of steppes behind.

Northwest of Stalingrad the Russians broke into some German positions, capturing prisoners and supplies and killing 270 of the enemy, today's communique said.

The Russian lines stiffened after three successive days of withdrawals and the newspaper Red Star said the enemy apparently was "assembling his last forces" in

FRIEND OF DEAF AT CONVENTION

George F. Stewart, 85, Formerly of O.S.D., Belleville, Welcomed

London, Ont., Sept. 5.—(CP)—George F. Stewart, 85, honorary president of the Ontario Association of the Deaf, teacher emeritus of the Belleville School for Deaf, and in outstanding newspaperman in Paris, Ottawa, Woodstock, Belleville and Brantford in his younger years was met with enthusiastic acclaim of hundreds of deaf delegates as he arrived here last night to attend the 25th Biennial Convention of the Association.

Hailed as "the Grand Old Man" who for 43 years gave patiently of his time and understanding effort educating students handicapped by lack of hearing, Mr. Stewart left a sick bed against his doctor's orders to be at this year's convention. Officials of the Association boast that only once in forty years has he missed a convention.

Starting his teaching career at the age of 18, Mr. Stewart continued in that profession for eight years before transferring his efforts for a time to editorial work, working in turn on five newspapers. In 1894, while writing on the Belleville Intelligencer, his ability as a writer and his record as a teacher came to the attention of Dr. Mathison, then head of the Belleville School for the Deaf, and he was induced to return to the teaching profession at that school.

But, apparently he left a mark in journalism in those days, for officials of the O.A.D. still cherish clippings lauding him and his work.

Prime Minister Equals Laurier's Tenure of Office

Ottawa, Sept. 5 (CP) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King received congratulations Friday from his colleagues and friends on having equalled the long tenure of office as Prime Minister of Canada achieved by his predecessor as Liberal leader, the late Rt. Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier held office from July 11, 1896, to October 6, 1911, the longest term of any other Prime Minister except Sir John A. Macdonald, Conservative leader, and first Prime Minister after Confederation.

Mr. King, who first became Prime Minister in December, 1921, now needs to remain in office less than four years more to achieve the record of aggregate years in office of any Prime Minister since Confederation.

Approaching his 68th. birthday, Mr. King appears to enjoy the best of health and vigor. He could, statutorily, remain in office until the middle of 1945 without calling a general election.

Sir Wilfrid held office continuously for 15 years and slightly less than three months. He was defeated in 1911 but remained opposition leader through the war years and to the time of his death in 1919.

Unlike Sir Wilfrid, whose tenure was uninterrupted, Mr. King has been in and out of office as Prime Minister, as was Sir John A. Macdonald who spent five years in opposition between two terms in office for an aggregate of just under 19 years.

British Army Shows Well Against Numerically Superior Forces

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 5 —(CP)— The record of the British army in the first three years of the Second Great War shows many reverses. But there have been successes, the more outstanding in that they were gained against numerically-superior forces.

Traditionally a small army, it became relatively smaller with the collapse of France, the senior partner in land operations. The crippling loss of material and equipment at Dunkirk only emphasized the weakness of Britain's position at the start.

British troops have fought bravely against formidable enemies and adverse circumstances.

Outnumbered, it has fought the enemy on the battlefields of Europe, Africa and Asia and has performed the key task of guarding Iceland, the British Isles, Gibraltar, Malta, Cyprus, Palestine, Iraq, Iran and India.

British resistance in Greece in the spring of 1941 undoubtedly upset the German timetable. The occupation of Iran secured vital supply lines by way of the Persian Gulf to Russia and defeated Axis intrigues in that quarter.

In the East African campaign British troops in a few months conquered Abyssinia, Gen. Sir Alan Cunningham's column, advancing from the south of Addis Ababa, covered 1,150 miles in 50 days.

More than 500,000 enemy troops were put out of action by British and Imperial forces in the African campaigns. The whole of an enemy army — 250,000 men — was defeated in the first Libyan campaign at a cost of fewer than 2,000 casualties.

A further 61,000 casualties were inflicted upon the Italians and Germans in the second Libyan campaign up to the end of January, 1941. Three hundred thousand of the Italian army were mopped up and scattered in East Africa.

These successes in Africa were achieved 1,000 miles by sea from the main base in the British Isles.

More than 70 per cent of the casualties suffered by armies of the Empire in all campaigns of 1940 and 1941 were among United Kingdom troops. And in the Empire army fighting the present battle in Egypt, United Kingdom troops again predominate, with most of the tanks, guns and ammunition in use British-made.

British Beat Off Three Heavy Counter-Attacks on Southern End of Line

3 AXIS SHIPS SUNK

Cairo, Sept. 5 (AP) — British forces beat off three heavy counter-attacks against newly-won positions in the central sector of the El Alamein desert front yesterday, a joint British headquarters-R.A.F. communique said today.

The positions, which the Axis forces were attempting to regain, had been taken Thursday night when British forces struck out to the southwest in the central sector. The objectives sought by the British troops were reached and occupied, the communique said.

Yesterday, Axis infantry and armored units were sent against the same objectives, but intense Allied artillery fire slowed up the counter attacks and helped the infantry to drive off the Axis troops.

While the British forces were improving their positions in the central sector, Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's forces on the southern end of the line in the region of Himeimat "again moved slightly westwards," the communique said—a new withdrawal of Rommel's units.

Mobile units and artillery continued to batter at the thwarted Axis forces in this sector and "continued their pressure on the enemy's main concentration," it was announced.

German tanks, abandoned during the withdrawal, were destroyed, the communique said.

Rommel's determination to find a favorable place in the Allied line for an all-out assault was further indicated in the movement of Axis vehicles, bound east on the road between Salum and Sidi Barrani. These vehicles were successfully attacked by long-range Allied fighters, the communique said.

Although air activity over the battle area was on a reduced scale yesterday, Allied aircraft pounded at enemy transport both on the roads leading to the battle front from Libya and over the Mediterranean.

Three Axis vessels, including a destroyer, were set on fire and probably sunk in the Mediterranean north of Tobruk last night by Allied bombers and torpedo planes. Three Axis aircraft were shot down near the battle front.

British commentators avoided the suggestion the movement of Allied forces was a counter-offensive, but one, noting that all arms of the British 8th army were engaged in "considerable fighting" throughout Friday, said "Rommel has lost the initiative and we seem to have seized it."

Gov't Sources State President Will Limit Wages And Farm Prices

Washington, Sept. 5 (AP) — A drastic Presidential order limiting all wages, salaries and farm prices was in store for the United States today in an unprecedented move, government officials revealed, to thwart a threatened runaway rise in the cost of living.

The responsible source who can not be quoted by name, said the decree, as drafted by President Roosevelt for issuance Labor Day, calls for creation of an economic administrator to carry out these policies and others designed to halt rising wartime living costs.

In effect the edict is scheduled to tighten the purse strings of every American to luxury or unnecessary spending but open them wide to payments of debts and more taxes, and to great war bond purchases.

Even Mr. Roosevelt's advisers who aided in preparing the message regarded it as almost revolutionary because an act of Congress virtually will be set aside by the Farm Price section of the order which affects a provision of the Price Control Act specifically forbidding any price ceilings on farm products at less than 110 per cent of parity.

(Parity is the United States agricultural department's determination of the fair price relationship between what the farmer sells and what he buys. For most commodities, it is based on relationships which existed during the pre-war period 1909-1914.)

While the order is not expected to affect directly other cost-of-living angles, it is anticipated Mr. Roosevelt's message to Congress and his radio address to the public will stress necessity of more taxes, more war bond purchases, more rationing, prompt payment of debts, and avoidance of hoarding.

As for an executive dismissal of legislation bolstering farm prices, it is expected Mr. Roosevelt will count on forestalling farm bloc protests by answering some of the objections in advance in a message to Congress preceding a radio address.

The president has said his message will not constitute a request for any legislation and consequently, it is expected he will explain his belief of necessity for freezing farm prices at present levels.

In the preparation of his anti-inflation program the president is known to have conferred with At-

ALGOMA PLANT NOW RUNNING AT FULL PRODUCTION

Three-Man Commission is Appointed to Investigate Steel Industry

CONFERENCE ENDS

By FRASER MacDOUGALL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Sept. 5 —(CP)—Steel flowed once again at its accelerated wartime pace from the extensive works of the Algoma Steel Corporation today as the plant returned to full production after almost a week's lay off while conferences were held at Ottawa to settle a wage dispute which threatened the plant with strike.

The final seal of approval to the solution the conference offered in the dispute — appointment of a three-man commission to investigate the Canadian steel industry—was given last night by a general meeting of the membership of the Sault local of the United Steel Workers of America.

The meeting gave its approval in unanimously endorsing a resolution expressing confidence in C. H. Millard, national director of the U.S.W.A. and other members of the steel delegation to the Ottawa conference as well as in a local committee which has handled the Union's case during the wage dispute.

The action was taken after U.S.W.A. District Director John Mitchell and Secretary William Mahoney had reported on the Ottawa conference, and followed by about two hours similar action by the Union's board of stewards. The special wage dispute committee had given its approval Thursday night.

Dispute Solved Temporarily

Union officials said the members will "sit tight" and await the result of the commission's investigation which solved at least temporarily the wage dispute in which the men were seeking a basic labor rate of 55 cents an hour, compared with a present rate of 45½ cents. They voted to strike to enforce their demands after the Ontario Regional War Labor Board rejected an application for the increase.

The dispute here—as well as one at the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation's plant at Sydney—reached its climax last weekend when strike action was slated for Monday night at 11 o'clock. However just 10 hours before the deadline, union officials announced that the work stoppage had been postponed in view of an invitation from Labor Minister Mitchell for the Ottawa conference.

WOUNDED COLONEL ON HOSPITAL BED TELLS OF DIEPPE

Story of Fusiliers O.C. Quoted in Montreal by Ross Munro, CP Correspondent

COURAGE PRAISED

MONTREAL, Sept. 5 — (CP) — Relatives and friends of Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal and other Montreal units that took part in the Dieppe raid, last night heard the graphic story of how their friends and kin-folk stormed the beaches there in company with other Canadian units.

The story came to 6,000 of them at the Montreal Forum, from Col. Dollard Menard, officer commanding Les Fusiliers, through Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent. Col. Menard himself was wounded five times in the attack but told his story from a hospital bed in England.

"My men were gallant, heroic, everything — they were the best in the world," the 29-year-old commander was quoted by Mr. Munro. "When I told them they were going into action they cheered. When they took to the boats they sang our song, 'Nous Sommes Les Fusiliers Du Mont-Royal.' A high officer once told us the Fusiliers were one of the best units overseas. There was none better at Dieppe.

'They Went Ahead Anyway'

"I saw officers and men wounded almost the minute we hit the beach over there. They went ahead anyway.

"As they crossed the beach they were fully exposed to the fire of the German defenders. The smoke screen which was to have concealed the landing had been chased away by a breeze.

"The Fusiliers reached the seawall opposite the heavily-fortified tobacco factory while hundreds of German snipers fired into their midst.

"I tried to climb the seawall to lead the men to the factory which was my rendezvous. I was wounded again in the right arm. I fell back. While I lay there on the beach trying to reach one of my officers who had a wireless set, I saw much of the heroism of Dieppe."

Munro's Story

Mr. Munro saw much of that heroism, too, and he told about it last night speaking of the Fusiliers, Montreal's Black Watch, the other Canadian units who landed, the navy and the air force.' It was his third stop on a tour of the home towns of the Canadian units at Dieppe, a tour that will take him to Weyburn, Sask., Sept. 7, to Calgary the following night, and back

CANADIANIZATION NOT OPPOSED BY AIR OFFICIALS

Air Marshal Edwards Says Time Not Ripe For Separate Air Force

MUST CO-OPERATE

(By CHARLES BRUCE)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 5.—(CP Cable) — Air Marshal H. E. Edwards, Air Officer in Chief of the R.C.A.F. overseas, told visiting Canadian newspapermen today that high authorities in the Air Ministry have no opposition to "Canadianization" of the R.C.A.F.

Speaking at a Press Conference which continued through brief air raid alert, the Air Marshal said he could see no reason against "Canadianization" although some people were talking a "lot of bloody nonsense" about splitting the Empire.

"If Canadians who see it from that point of view want to be mugs all their lives, that's their business", he declared.

"The very root of high morale finds itself in identity".

There was no objection from an operational standpoint, he said, citing the Americans who are "running their own show and doing a dam good job".

There must of course be co-operation and "Canadianization" would not handicap that, the Air Marshal said. The time was not necessarily ripe for creation now of separate air force but the aim was to build up units, followed by stations, then by groups. Creation of one Canadian bomber group, three fighter stations and an army co-operation group already had been agreed to, he said.

Airpower Decisive Factor

He expressed the opinion that airpower will be a decisive factor in winning the war. Calling the Channel a "tank trap," he said the only way either side can get across is through air power.

He asked the editors to send word to the Canadian people that the R.C.A.F. is "superb."

During the conference, which was followed by a luncheon at which the newspapermen were guests of the Air Marshal, London's ack-ack guns were firing. The visitors watched the show from the Air Marshal's office.

At the luncheon Air Marshal Edwards said the battle between security and publicity was inevitable. He felt sure the visitors would be gratified to see the steps taken to get news to the people.

British Bombers Attack Bremen In Strong Force

Submarine Shipways and Railways Are Major Targets In This Sector

11 PLANES MISSING

LONDON, Sept. 5 — (CP)—British and Russian airmen administered a punishing whipsaw assault upon Germany from west and east last night, a strong R.A.F. force kindling big fires in Bremen and the Russians scattering bombs over Eastern Germany and occupied Poland while unidentified Allied raiders made their first attack on Budapest.

The German war bulletin which reported the raids on Eastern Germany did not name the cities attacked, but the BBC quoted Scandinavian dispatches from Berlin as saying that the targets included Vienna in Austria, Koenigsburg, a city of East Prussia; and Breslau, in German Silesia.

Berlin broadcast an official Hungarian announcement that Budapest and points in Northern Hungary were hit by bombs dropped during a two-hour alarm by high-flying raiders. The Budapest announcement failed to give their nationality, but the Germans said they were Russian and substantiated this by saying they came from the Northeast — the direction of Russia.

First on Hungary

The raid was the first on Hungary since the early days of the invasion of Russia and the brief Balkan campaign in Yugoslavia last year. Axis radios have broadcast reports recently of strange planes making reconnaissance flights over Sofia in neighboring Bulgaria.

Following its night activity against Bremen, big northern seaport of Germany, the R.A.F. sent swarms of fighters and bombers across the Channel in daylight today and the Germans sent a single noonday raider over London and another over East Anglia where a shopping district was bombed.

Sharp gunfire broke out in London during the brief alert touched off by the appearance of the enemy craft.

Four persons were killed and 10 injured by bombs jettisoned from a German raider being chased over an East Anglian town by an R.A.F. fighter. Three houses were demolished.

The BBC quoted the German newspaper Danziger Vorposten today as saying that 6,000 refugees had arrived in Danzig and 2,500 in Poland from German areas razed by R.A.F. bombs.

"A heavy weight of bombs was dropped and many fires were left burning", the Air Ministry said of the Bremen assault. Fighter Command aircraft were over Northern France also on offensive patrols during the night.

London, long raid-free, had an alert today and there was a sharp burst of gunfire, but the all-clear signal came a short time later.

Eleven aircraft were reported missing from the raid on Bremen, a familiar bombing target on the Weser River 40 miles from the North Sea.

This was the 99th in a series of smashes against Bremen, of which the greatest was a 1,000-R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. bomber affair June 25. Submarine shipways and railways are major targets in the area.

It was the fourth straight night of assaults against war industries and communications of Hitler's Reich.

British, Soviet or American bombers might have made the long flight against Budapest, the capital of Axis-Allied Hungary and a commercial and industrial centre of 1,500,000 population on the Middle Danube, but the Berlin radio said they struck from the northeast—the direction of Russia.

Budapest's alert lasted 110 minutes. A heavy explosion sounded on the outskirts at midnight and several hits were scored within the capital, the Berlin account reported.

It is a round trip of about 1,850 miles to Budapest from Malta, the fortified British Island in the Central Mediterranean; 2,000 from British bases and a little less from Soviet airdromes which observers here regard as probable springboards for such long-distance operations against the Axis eastern European home fronts.

May Have Been Russian Planes

Red Air force squadrons have struck repeatedly at eastern Germany, Poland and Finland recently.

(Apparently seeking to justify weakening of aerial attacks upon Britain, Nazi Gen. Erich Quade told the German people in a radio address that every plane that could be spared must be used in the battle of Russia. He said: "We have avoided at all costs weakening our air force in Russia. In fact, we cannot be strong enough.")

The German radio acknowledged that points in Eastern Germany had been attacked and said some damage was done in "a town in the North German coast" by high explosives and incendiaries.

Nazi planes cruised over the south coast of Britain during the night, but there were no reports of bombings. The Germans claimed that heavy damage was done yesterday to railways and buildings near Folkestone and Sandgate.

Dover Strait batteries exchanged fire for a time. German batteries near Cap Gris Nez initiated the action with two salvoes after nightfall and long-range British guns replied immediately. Flashes lit up the sky and waterfront buildings were shaken.

Canadian-Made Trucks Haul Supplies To Russia Over Tough Mountain Road

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 5 (CP)—Canadian-made trucks and military vehicles are travelling in a steady stream these days along a winding, twisting road that only a few months ago was a camel track across the wild mountain country of Iran. They are headed for the battlefields of Russia.

The parts are shipped from Canada, assembled in a modern plant at Bushire on the Persian Gulf and then, with Persian drivers and loaded with military supplies from all over the world, put on the long road for Russia hundreds of miles to the north, across some of the wildest country anywhere.

The road rivals the famous Burma Road of the Chinese for its hairpin curves, steep grades, high cliffs and rickety bridges. In the dead of summer it is so hot the trucks must be halted every two or three hours to cool engines, tires and brakes.

Summer temperatures go as high as 120 in the shade but in winter the therometer will drop to 50 or 60 below zero with heavy snow blocks in the narrow mountain passes, some of which are 10,000 feet high.

The development of the Persian Gulf route to Russia was started only a year ago but it now carries the bulk of the military supplies shipped by Canada, the United States and Britain to the Red army and air force. It is thousands of miles longer than the Arctic Sea route to Murmansk or Archangel but is safer, considering the German air strength concentrated near Cape North on the tip of Norway and the narrow sea lane in the summer months formed by drift ice from the polar regions, forming a happy hunting ground for submarines and planes.

A single-track railroad runs from the Persian Gulf port of Bandar Shahpur to the Caspian Sea port of of Bandar Shah. Rolling stock and locomotives have been supplied by Canada, Britain and Australia; sidings and loops built; a modern signalling system installed and the roadbed reinforced in the mountains — the whole thing modernized and put in shape to carry heavy traffic. American engineers have developed the port facilities of Bandar Shahpur to handle the enormous tonnage being shipped over the road.

At Bushire, 200 miles down the Persian Gulf from the rail head, a truck assembly plant has been built to handle parts. It was started on a small scale but now is equipped to turn out 50 trucks a day.

The road follows the same general direction as the railway, finally meeting it at Tehran, not far from

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

800 FEET OF ROPE REPORTED STOLEN

The theft of 800 feet of rope with tackle blocks attached was reported to the police station yesterday afternoon by Frank Follwell, the theft taking place on Wednesday night. The tackle and rope were taken from a truck while parked near the Walker Hardware store on Front Street.

The only other disturbance reported to the police in a rather quiet day was the theft of a red tricycle from the home of Mrs. Firman, 330 Charles Street. The tricycle had been stolen from the side of the house, the woman reported.

WOLF CUB PACK RETURNS FROM CAMP

Twelve boys of the Belleville Wolf Cub brigade who since August 28th have been camping at Consecon Lake, Prince Edward county, are back in the city after a week's vacation. The boys camped on the farm of Mrs. H. Fenn, on the north shore of the lake and spent an enjoyable time as they participated in the various camp activities. Of the eight boys, who were taking swimming instruction from their brigade leader, Lloyd Gladwell, six of them can now swim.

Camp life for the brigade members was not all fun, however, as the boys gave a good account of themselves during their spare hours cutting and pulling weeds for the district farmers.

200 AIRMEN AT SERVICE

In observance of the National Day of Prayer in Canada which has been set for Sunday Sept. 6th., a large detachment, approximately two hundred men from the Mountain View Air Station will attend the 11 o'clock service in the Church of St. Thomas tomorrow (Sunday) morning.

SUNDAY WILL MARK DAY OF PRAYER

Churches of all denominations throughout the city will observe Sunday as a national Day of Prayer marking the entrance of Canada into the fourth year of war.

Special services will mark the occasion in most churches with congregations setting aside the day as a day of prayer and intercession to Almighty God on behalf of the cause undertaken by the United Kingdom, by Canada and by other Dominions in the Commonwealth of Nations and by other Allied and associate powers who are offering their lives for the cause.

PARTRIDGE SHOOTING DATES ARE SET

Not more than five birds per day or 25 in the season will be the quota of partridge for each huntsman during the two periods set apart for partridge hunting this season, it was announced today by Game Inspector, Herb McCabe. The two periods for hunting partridge will be October 3rd to the 17th and from November 2nd to the 14th, all dates in both periods being inclusive.

The duck season south of No. 7 highway will open on October 1st and north of the highway on the 15th of September.

GIRL'S CYCLE FOUND

A girl's bicycle was recovered in a sideroad on the Second Concession of Sidney yesterday. It is believed to have been stolen from the city and abandoned after the rear tire had gone flat. It was turned over to Provincial Police by L. E. Waite, Sidney resident, and at present is at the Provincial Police office.

LIEUT. R. J. GRAHAM GIVEN PROMOTION TO RANK OF CAPTAIN

According to advices received from the Public Relations Section of the Department of National Defence, Lieut. Robert J. Graham, now overseas with his unit has been promoted to the rank of captain.

Captain Graham trained with the Argyll Light Infantry Regiment (Tank) for some time, receiving his second lieutenant's commission with that unit before joining the active service forces and proceeding overseas.

He is a son of Mr. George K. Graham and was associated with his father in the Montrose Dairy prior to enlistment.

Obituary

LATE ALBERT J. BROWN

The funeral of Albert J. Brown, who died in Virginia, Minn., on Sept. 1st., took place from his Belleville home, 44 Highland Avenue, on Friday afternoon, Sept. 4th. The service in the home and at the graveside in Stockdale cemetery was conducted by the Rev. L. S. Wight.

The bearers were Messrs. G. French, A. H. McGuire, W. Johnston, W. J. Sharpe, D. Johnston and G. Bonisteel.

WALTER HICK

After an illness of six months' duration Walter Hick died this Saturday morning at his home, 10 Elmer Street.

The late Mr. Hick was born in Belleville eighty years ago and was the eldest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Hick. All his life was passed here and during his active years he was a painter and decorator. In religion he was a member of the Church of England and was associated with Christ Church parish. Many old friends by whom he was held in high regard will regret to learn of his death. Fraternally Mr. Hick was a member of the Sons of England.

Surviving him are his wife; two daughters, Mrs. E. R. Hinchey, of Belleville, and Mrs. Harold Hunt, Kingston; two brothers, Mr. Frank Hick, Montreal, and Mr. Fred Hick, Lethbridge, Alberta; one sister, Mrs. Ernest Bullen, Chicago, Ill.; five grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

8 Beaver Skins Cost Marmora Trapper $160

A fine of $160 and $3.00 costs was paid into the Marmora court on Monday by district trapper Sanford Laurence. It appears that a resident of the United States, who visited the district last year for the deer hunting season conceived a scheme for getting a cheap beaver coat. With the beaver so very numerous in that part of Hastings County and the Fish and Game officer ill, there was little difficulty in securing the beaver skins last spring. It is alleged that about the sixth of July the man who had bargained for the skins came over for a few days fishing and on his return to the U.S. took them with him and later took them to a tannery to get dressed. It appears a U.S. game inspector visited the tannery and discovered the skins. His investigation secured the admission that the beaver had been trapped and the skins purchased in Ontario. As a result the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries was notified of the transaction. The department in Toronto wrote J. A. Shannon, Game and Fisheries overseer for Marmora district to find out who had sold the skins and prosecute the guilty party.

As a result of his investigations Mr. Shannon discovered the identity of the man who had sold the skins. The latter pleaded guilty to the charge and the minimum fine of $20.00 per beaver was imposed together with costs of $3.00.

POLICE BLOTTER

One automobile and two bicycle thefts occurred from the McCarthy Theatre parking lot Friday night in what appeared to be an epidemic of thefts from the one locale and police are puzzled whether to attach the blame to a gang of thieves working in conjunction or if individual parties were responsible.

William Crawford, 30 Forin St., reported, that his 1929 Plymouth sedan bearing licence number 855-M-5 was stolen from the rear of the theatre, while the bicycles were owned by Donald Stone, 200 Station Street and by Max Turner of 105 1-2 Station Street.

Ross Neal, 197 Station Street reported money having been stolen from milk bottles, it being the second time this has occurred recently at his home. In the first instance payment for two bottles of milk disappeared while in the last instance payment for one bottle of milk had been stolen. Apparently the thief was lying in wait for the money as Mrs. Neal had noticed the money was gone only twenty minutes after the bottle was put out.

A fruit trucker from the Niagara district reported the theft of five baskets of peaches and one of grapes from his truck early yesterday morning, while he was making a delivery at a Front Street address. While he was in the store the six baskets of fruit had been taken from his truck he claimed.

REDUCED COUNCIL

The Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sir:—

Alderman Marshall's notice of motion regarding reducing the number of aldermen from thirteen to eight, is I think, a step in the right direction. The city's population must be nearing the 15,000 mark and then we will require to have twenty-one aldermen, unless legislation is arranged to the contrary.

We used to have twenty-one on the Board of Education but this was reduced to ten a few years ago and the business of the board was greatly expedited thereby.

Some, think that reducing the number of aldermen to eight would place a lot of power in too few hands, but this is not so, because the Municipal Board at Queen's Park keeps very close tab on all municipal expenditures nowadays. As a matter of fact they keep too close a check, because they twice refused to let us build a sewer on Dufferin Ave. (north of Victoria) until 25% of the lots were built on. This struck me as being the quintessence of the ridiculous. What are the 25% that build going to do about sewer and water in the meantime? However, the Ontario Municipal Board would not budge from their stand, and I must say that my opinion of them as a board is poor indeed.

Our local Public Utilities Commission is very well operated with a board of three, and they handle an enormous amount of business. I am thoroughly in favor of a reduced council and hope this will carry if and when it is put to a vote of our citizens.

Yours very truly,
Jamieson Bone.

Notices of Call Go To 1,200 During Sept.

Notices of call for compulsory military service will go to 1,200 residents of Military District No. 3, which includes Belleville, during the month of September, according to an announcement made by the Department of National War Services.

A total of 20,000 notices will be mailed to men between the ages of 20 and 40 across Canada.

The number of notices being sent to men of this district is considerably lower than that sent last month because of the serious shortage of manpower in District No. 3.

In August, 25,000 notices were sent to Canadians and it is believed fewer are being sent out this month pending the allotment of workers to the army or to industry under the new selective service regulations.

The number of requests for deferment in Military District No. 3 is said in some quarters to be high largely because of the pressure of war work in government departments where key men are needed. In addition since the district is in the heart of the farm area, numbers of men who otherwise would be eligible for active service are engaged in farm labor and will not be subject to call, if at all, until after the harvest is completed.

Large Offering Of Vegetables, Fruit on Market

Elberta peaches made their appearance on the local produce market in large quantities, selling at a five-cent premium over like grades of other varieties. Special grade Elbertas brought 65 cents a six-quart basket with No. 1's being quoted at 55 cents. Other varieties sold at 50 cents and 40 cents for No. 1's and No. 2's respectively. A few grapes were offered at 15 cents the berry box, or at 75 cents the basket.

Almost a full line of plums and gages were offered at prices ranging from 50 cents the six-quart basket for Blue Damsons to 65 cents for Burbanks and green gages. Pears sold at from 60 to 75 cents the six-quart basket according to variety while seasonal apples brought the usual 40 cents the peck. Cooking varieties such as Wolfe Rivers, sold at $1.50 per bushel.

Grade 'A' eggs brought 40 cents the dozen on the inside market with extras being quoted at 42 cents the dozen. Mediums sold at 38 cents. Some nice chicken was offered at 30 cents per pound, with well-finished spring birds bringing up to $1.90 each. Butter sold at the usual 40 cents the pound, and in some cases two pounds for 86 cents.

Tomatoes were offered in large quantities at 75 cents the bushel or at 20 cents the six-quart basket; potatoes were 40 to 45 cents the peck, watermelons from 10 cents to 40 cents and muskmelons five to 25 cents each. Vegetables could be purchased either by the peck or at the usual five cents per bunch for most varieties.

Mudcats were offered on the market for the first time this season and sold at straight 20 cents the pound with lake trout bringing 30 cents per pound or 35 cents sliced. Whitefish sold at 25 cents the pound.

Young porkers were not as plentiful as one week ago but the price remained the same—$7 to $8 each according to age and quality. One load of wood, mixed maple, beach and ironwood, was offered at $10.50 per cord.

TRAVEL 300 MILES IN LIFEBOATS

All Crewmen Safe After Five and Half Days at Sea Before Picked Up

Bridgewater, N.S., Sept. 5 (CP)—Battered by shellfire from an Axis U-boat, a three-masted schooner was sunk in the western Atlantic several weeks ago with no loss of life among the two officers and five-man crew, the Nova Scotian Captain related here on his return home.

Both officers were Nova Scotians Captain Louis Kenedy of Conquerall Bank, and Mate John Pottinger of Lunenburg. The five crew members were Barbadians.

The coastal vessel was bound from the West Indies to a British North American port when attacked, 11 days out.

The sub halted the schooner with an opening salvo, and the crew then was ordered to take to the boats. They were given time only to toss in a few provisions and water and collect a few of their clothes.

Captain Kenedy signalled the sub to approach, and appealed to its commander to spare the craft, but the German brusquely told him he was acting under orders.

The schooner's Captain then offered to give the Germans some American coffee and cigarets if he was allowed to return to his vessel for a few minutes, but was refused this. The sub commander said he had ample coffee and other supplies to do him.

Before leaving the men in the two small dories, the Germans provided them with some distress flares and suggested a course for them to follow. Capt. Kenedy, however, plotted a course of his own.

The men spent 5 1-2 days in the boats, travelling 300 miles before they were picked up.

Paratroops Graduate About September 10

Ottawa, Sept. 5. (CP)—The first 25 members of the 1st Canadian Parachute battalion will graduate from the United States Army Parachute Training School at Fort Benning, Ga., within the next ten days, with Sept. 10 the likely date, it was learned here last night.

It was presumed the men, who form the nucleus of Canadian paratroops, then will proceed to Manitoba to act as instructors to the battalion, to be trained at Shilo Military Camp, Military District No. 10, some 40 miles from Winnipeg.

The force, composed of five officers and 20 non-commissioned officers, went to Fort Benning from Ottawa three weeks ago under Maj. Hilton David Proctor of Ottawa, who will eventally command a hand-picked force of 600 men.

Canning Factory Operators Report Labor Supply Continues Satisfactory

There is no immediate shortage of labor for the canning of a tomato crop in this district that present indications point to being approximately 80 per cent normal, Department of Agriculture inspectors said here today.

Estimates of normalcy percentage of the canning corn yield are indefinite at present although inspectors state yields are spotty in varying sections of Hastings and Prince Edward counties.

The labor situation is not bad, it was stated. Tomato factories are getting their quotas of women peelers, while young boys are also assisting greatly in the work.

Farmers and farm women from the northern sections of the district where crops are either harvested or are failures, have "come south" to assist in the canning work. Many women of the larger centres as well as the smaller communities who never worked in canning plants before are doing their bit.

Thus far, inspectors states, there has been little or no complaint from canning officials regarding a shortage of labor.

Quality of district tomatoes is from "pretty good to good," and the peak of the yield is expected to arrive about the end of next week. There has been some trouble with "leather-ends" a yelllowish hard surface that forms near the blossom end of the tomato, but the situation is not regarded as being serious.

Acreage of tomatoes is about the same as that of a year ago, with corn being slightly above that of 1941. Only a little corn has been packed thus far due to lateness of the crop said to be caused by consistent Spring rains which delayed planting in many instances.

THE WAR TODAY

By De Witt MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

What's going to beat Herr Hitler in the long run — and never doubt that this throw-back to barbarism is going to be smashed — will be the Allies' overwhelming resources of all sorts, coupled with their control of the seas over which those resources must be moved to the theatres of battle.

Therefore, disclosure that the last two months have produced record-breaking destruction of U-boats, and a sensational drop in sinkings of merchant ships in the Western Atlantic, is great news for the United Nations.

The importance of control of the seas has been cited in this column numerous times, but it's so vital it is worth repeating. Without that domination we would lack adequate means of moving our resources, and our mountainous production would be love's labor lost.

For anxious months we seemed to be losing the Battle of the Atlantic. From January right through June of this year the sinking of ships by Hitler's sea-wolves went up by leaps and bounds. An Associated Press tabulation of announced sinkings showed that some 391 were sent to the bottom in that time, and close to 3,000 seamen were lost.

The victims of submarines rose steadily from 21 in January to a terrible peak of 109 in June. The shipyards were outdistanced in their efforts to keep pace. Then came a drop to 45 sinkings for July, and a further slump to 23 for August.

A few days ago Rear Admiral Emory S. Land said United States shipyard production was slowly but surely getting the edge on Axis submarine activity.

Now along comes A. V. Alexander, Britain's First Lord of the Admiralty who adds an illuminating chapter to the above. He says July and August were record-breaking months for the destruction of Axis submarines.

Moreover, Britain's heavy warship losses—the Admiralty already has announced the loss of 423, big and little—have virtually been made up British shipyards. And that's an item of vast importance, because it takes a mighty fleet of fighting ships to act as convoys and patrols and hunt down U-boats.

America's task at sea has been eased. United States warships have been escorting cargo ships in coastal waters and in the Caribbean. Canadian, United States and British airplane patrols have been working together, and a huge fleet of small craft, including innumerable one-time pleasure boats, are scouting.

On the face of it Hitlers seapack seems to have taken a nasty knock. However, Navy Secretary Frank Knox has had a word of caution for those who jumped to the conclusion that all was well. Said he:—

"This thing is not by any means solved. It is a long job and we may never lick it completely, but I believe we can reduce it substantially so that it will not interfere with victory in the war".

Mr. Alexander says that new methods of handling the submarine menace have been developed, and that the under-water boats have turned the offensive back to their more usual haunts. He didn't say what new methods he had in mind.

However, we lately have seen the birth of a most devastating anti-submarine weapon—the heavy bombing of U-boat shipyards in Germany by Allied bombers operating from Britain. Hitler has been turning out submarines in mass production, so they say, but between destruction of his U-boats at the source, and destruction of those already at sea, the Allied position in the battle of the Atlantic certainly is looking up at last.

Eighteen Families Respond to Appeal To Entertain Airmen

Eigteen families responded to the recent appeal of the Y.M.C.A. War Services to entertain airmen in their homes over the weekend or on Sundays. The airmen who were their guests were most appreciative of the kindness of their Belleville hosts.

Throughout the district Stations there are many chaps from the British Isles, from Australia and New Zealand who would be very grateful for the opportunity of spending their 48's in Belleville homes and if local residents are desirous of entertaining them they are asked to get in touch with Tom Hill at the local Y.M.C.A., Phone 2738 and arrangements will be made.

Belleville folks who have sons in active service and who are now overseas, have no doubt, received from their boys glowing accounts of the hospitality accorded them far from home. Parents can reciprocate this gracious treatment of their own boys by entertaining members of the armed forces who are strangers in this country.

Beef Famine May Hit City; Present Stocks Enough For Few Days; No More in Sight

May Substitute Chicken, Lamb, Pork, for Beef; WPTB Asumes Control of Export Trade

CHICKEN PLENTIFUL

Belleville's figurative Mother Hubbard may go to the cupboard this weekend and get herself a beef-bone, but all indications at present point to the family cupboard being bare of beef from the latter part of next week for an indefinite time.

Toronto, Hamilton and other large centres are in the throes of a beef famine. A survey of local butchers today revealed that there would be a limited supply of beef available for the next few days but from that point on there would be no guarantee of stocks.

Butchers with privately-owned beef "on the hoof" will naturally have a supply, but those dependent on packers for their beef are purely and simply "out of luck." There is a plentitude of pork, lamb and chicken, and it is quite within reason to predict that within the next few days beef lovers will be forced to substitute their favorite meat.

The majority of local butchers flatly predicted that no beef will be available next weekend, unless some unforeseen condition arises to alleviate the threatened famine.

Last night the Wartime Prices and Trade Board issued a statement that it would assume control of the beef trade and make the government-owned Wartime Food Corporation the sole exporters of beef to the United States. The board has assured shippers that it will grant them not less than ceiling prices, to be announced.

Cattle producers in Canada, it is stated, had settled down to the determined withholding of stocks from Canadian markets until the U. S. export quota of 50,000 cattle would once again be available, or until announcement of the fall and winter ceiling prices here.

Available beef supplies have been taken for the army, and the condition in metropolitan markets is such that it is doubted if enough beef can be secured for the military. Soldiers may have to be content with turkey or lamb.

The new WPTB order will keep Canadian cattle in Canada, but until the many price and other wrinkles have been ironed out, it looks as if Canada, and that includes Belleville, may have to be content with roast chicken, and other poultry lamb and an occasional pork chop until the emergency passes.

the Caspian and criss-crossing it from there to Bandar Shah which is close to the Russian frontier.

The trucks carry war supplies of all sorts to the Russian forces, most of it originating in the United States but a lot of it in Canada. They move along the road in convoys of 80 trucks. Some make the return journey with Russian exports which include such unwarlike commodities as silk cocoons for reeling in Syria.

WAR TAKES TOLL OF NEWSMEN

8 From United States Killed, 17 Wounded or Injured, 3 Missing in 3 Years of Struggle

New York, Sept. 5 (AP) — Eight war correspondents for United States newspapers, news agencies, and radio systems have been killed, 17 wounded or injured in line of duty and three were missing as the war entered its fourth year, Editor and Publisher, newspaper trade publication, said today.

(Editor and Publisher did not list Canadian correspondents in its review, but Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, landed at Dieppe and was in the thick of much heavy fighting. Wallace Reyburn of The Montreal Standard and Frederick Griffin of The Toronto Daily Star also went to Dieppe and Reyburn was wounded.

(Sam Robertson, of Ottawa, another Canadian Press war correspondent, was killed when the ship taking him back to the war front from a vacation in Canada was torpedoed in 1941.)

Casualties

Ralph W. Barnes, New York Herald Tribune, in the crash of a British bomber in Yugoslavia, Nov. 18, 1940; Melville Jacoby, Time, in a takeoff accident in Australia, April 29; Ben Miller, Baltimore Sun, in a plane crash at Witchita, Kan., last May during a "Production for Victory" tour of war plants sponsored by the National Association of Manufacturers; Webb Miller, Central European manager of the United Press, in a London blackout, in May, 1940; Harry Percy, of the UP's London staff, of malignant malaria in Cairo; Don Bell, NBC correspondent, bayonetted to death by the Japanese in Manila; Mrs. Lea Brudette, PM contributing photographer, killed by bandits in Iran last May, and Eugene Petrov, for two years a correspondent of the North American Newspaper Alliance, killed at Sevastopol.

Since 1938, American Press war fatalities have numbered 10; Edward J. Neil, Jr., Associated Press, and Bradish C. Johnson, Newsweek, killed when a shell exploded near their car during the Spanish civil war.

The missing include Witt Hancock and Vern Haugland of the AP, and William McDougall of UP. Hancock and McDougall have been missing since Java fell to the Japanese. Haugland was in a plane which was lost during a storm en route from Australia to New Guinea.

Health Minister Spikes Rumor

Ottawa, Sept. 5 —(CP)—Spiking rumors that further supplies of human blood are not needed, Health Minister Ian Mackenzie appealed to Canadians to give all the co-operation they can in the Red Cross Society's current campaign for an increase in blood donations.

In a statement issued here the Minister said Canada has been asked by the British government to provide additional supplies of blood serum for the forces stationed in the Far East as quickly as possible.

"Up to Aug. 31, the amount of human blood serum made available by this co-operative effort of the government, the University of Toronto, the Red Cross Society and the people of Canada was 36,610 cans. Each can represents the amount of serum necessary to make one injection, and the contents of each represents donations of a little more than two donors," the statement said.

The British government has asked Canada to supply 23,000 cans for fields of activity outside the United Kingdom, chiefly in the Far East, and this demand, together with Canada's own requirements, has necessitated a new plant at Toronto.

Ruling on 'Help Wanted' Advertising Clarified

The only persons permitted to advertise directly through the newspapers for hired help or employees under the new National Selective Service regulations are farmers and householders seeking domestic help, warned Mr. H. H. Reed, Manager of the local Employment and Claims office, this morning. Otherwise all placement of labor must be made through employment offices.

Quoting directly from the act Mr. Reed further pointed out that farmers and persons seeking domestic help are exempt from the order only "if not more than one person is employed on the farm or in the household."

Considerable misconception of the new regulations governing the employment of labor or the advertising for help through newspaper columns is noticed on the part of employers, it was stated by Mr. Reed. With the two exceptions noted above no advertising in newspapers for workers can be done without the approval of the National Selective Service.

Must Not Use Name

Also in connection with newspaper advertising the name of the advertiser must not appear in the advertisement. The appeal for workers must direct the potential worker to the nearest Employment and Claims Office, and no advertisements will be approved by the National Selective Service until the available supply in the particular labor category is exhausted.

A great amount of authority is vested with the manager of district National Selective offices, according to Mr. Reed, but he advised the new order did not mean jobs were altogether frozen.

Rules Governing Employment

If a worker desires to quit his present occupation he first must obtain separation notice forms from his nearest post office or employment office and give seven full calender days notice in writing to his employer. A copy must be in the hands of the employment officer before a work permit to seek a job elsewhere will be given and according to the act the National Selective Service can direct skilled workers to take jobs in their special category.

If a worker desires to obtain employment out of his present district, the employment office manager will at his discretion grant a permit to contact the Employment and Claims Office in the particular district in which the worker desires to move. He cannot issue a permit for the worker to seek direct employment in a district other than his own.

Considerable demand for work permits has been shown by district workers at the Belleville office, but according to Mr. Reed, not in the quantity shown in larger centres.

SURE CURE FOR BLUES

London —(CP)— Mary MacKintosh, 15-year-old evacuee to Canada, daughter of Sir Harold MacKintosh, has advised her father that she has found a "sure-cure" for homesickness. Whenever she feels blue she goes to the corner store near her home in Toronto, inserts a nickel in a juke box and listens to "There'll Always be an England."

Flier Gives Credit To Workers For Sturdiness of Canada's Bombers

Toronto, Sept. 5 —(CP)— Lean Young PO. John Higham of Boharm, Sask., one of five Canadian airmen who returned to the Dominion Wednesday night a few hours after bombing the Saarbruecken area of Germany, stood before an excited crowd of aircraft workers today and said:

"The fact that I'm here today depends on the way you've been doing your job."

Higham, taken to the DeHavilland Aircraft Plant before leaving for Montreal with his crew, received a tremendous reception from the 3,000 workers and was all but mobbed by them for autographs after finishing his speech.

"I'm not good at making speeches," he confessed. "I didn't put this uniform on for that purpose.

"We fellows over there greatly appreciate the work you're doing. One night, not so long ago, we were pretty badly mauled over Essen. There were three holes in our Wellington, big enough to put your head through. But the plane came through. The fact that you people put so much into your work is the reason why we were able to get home.

"That's something Jerry can't say of all his planes. Some of them can be knocked off pretty easily. My rear-gunner was credited with a Nazi night fighter and the front-gunner scored a probable. If anybody tells you you're not in the front line, you can take it from me that you are."

VICTORIA AIRMAN KILLED

Victoria, N.B., Sept. 5 (CP)—Sgt. Robert Albright of the Royal Canadian Air Force and six other crewmen were killed when their plane crashed while returning from a raid over Germany, according to a letter received by Mrs. J. Frank Albright from another son, Pte. Harry Albright, of the Canadian Forestry Corps in Scotland. The writer said he attended his brother's funeral.

ORDER PHYSICIAN'S TIRES CONFISCATED

St. Louis, Sept. 5 (AP)— Tire rationing officials in Salt Lake City have been notified to intercept a St. Louis physician, who is making a pleasure trip, and confiscate four new rationed tires on his automobile.

The doctor was given a permit last week for the tires, which were to be used solely in driving to attend his patients. The name of the physician was withheld.

A Night of Prayer.

Every night in the year, somewhere on this Continent—from Canad to Mexico, from California to Maine—some Wesleyan Methodist Church is spending the night in Prayer and Intercession. Next Friday night will be taken by our Belleville Church, and Christians of other Churches are cordially invited to share with us this season of intercession. Individuals may come and go as may be convenient for them—for a short time, or as long as possible.

The votaries of pleasure spend whole nights in dancing, dissipation, and the world's revelry. Shall it be esteemed strange that Christians should spend whole nights in prayer? Not while the rivers run red with the blood of strife and souls are dying and being damned by sin!

Labor Day

Labor has been emphasized by modern war. Never in history has labor been so necessary to maintain armies. This labor is of every kind, for war is all-absorbing and demands the ultimate in production. This is especially true in a scientific age. Armed conflict has always intensified the demands on labor but this present struggle calls for an all-out contribution by the massed working forces of the nation and demands more workers in industry. War demands a perfect balance between the fighting force and the force at work producing the materials of war.

So when Labor Day comes it has a new meaning to the average man. It is more than a holiday set apart, it serves to pay tribute to the worker and workmanship as a national asset. So on Labor Day, some industries close down but many thousands of workers keep at their posts in mills and factories making the "tools" of war.

This is the 49th Labor Day. Fewer plans were made for the day this year. There were plans laid by many to serve in the country helping their country cousins harvest the crops which are of bumper proportions this year.

Only in North America is Labor Day observed. In practically every other part of the world, the industrial population takes time off on May Day.

In 1894 Sir John Thompson, Prime Minister of Canada, introduced a bill naming September 1st as Labor Day, a statutory holiday for all classes. Later the date was changed to the first Monday in September.

Today the demands on labor and time are insistent and growing and jobs are continually expanding and calling for workers for the sake of war production through labor on the farm, in the factory, in the office, at the managerial desk under the widening scope of modern industry's participation in the war.

Men in Forces Leaders

Canadians appreciate the truth of a recent statement that "Canada's true leaders are the boys in uniform who are fighting on the seas and overseas." The people have not passed through three years of war without realizing this. In the skies over Europe, Asia and Africa, on the high seas and on the fields of battle, Canadian boys have by their loyalty to duty performed the last supreme act of devotion to their country or have offered to lay down their lives on the altar of freedom. Many have died that liberty may live and peace and victory come to earth. They have given the inspiration of leadership and Canadian forces will carry on the tradition to the highest achievement. This they do for Canada, for the Motherland and the Dominions of the Commonwealth, for the nations sorely stricken under the cruel Axis oppression and for the world of the future.

An ancient poet said "a sweet and glorious thing it is to do for native land." Of many young Canadians this may be sadly yet proudly said and their sacrifice, the endurance of those who continue the fight to the end and to victory and the sufferings of the wounded hallow a standard of plain living and high thinking by the Canadian people that they may be found worthy of these so great deeds of sacrifice and love.

Those who have enlisted and enlist and enter the forces express a readiness to give all. Let every other person then ask himself or herself, "Am I ready to give up all or acting as if I were ready to give all?" That is what the soldier, airman or sailor offers.

On Sunday as Canada observes the national day of prayer and meditation comes the occasion to rededicate our lives to the high ideals of country and faith.

The day of prayer provides public opportunity for a united people to exress its faith as the men in the army, navy and air force have expressed theirs in the justice of their cause, in righteousness and in victory by their deeds and service. The people will remember the sacrifices which have been made on their behalf, they will sorrow with those who have become bereaved through the war, they will seek to emulate the spirit of the men and women of the services and they will recognize the power of the spirit of prayer as they pray for Heaven's guidance in the days ahead.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS ...

BY

COUNTRY FAIRS

There are some people who have voiced the opinion that country and small city fairs should be cancelled as a war measure.

Frankly speaking we do not agree with this statement. Canada, primarily is an agricultural nation. She has been dubbed the "Bread Basket of the World" and her exports and rural production increasing each year, have given her an inalienable right to that nomenclature.

Millions of pounds of cheese, bacon and ham, as well as other produce of the good earth flow from her shores in an unending stream to Britain and other members of the United Nations.

Her rural sons are doing a splendid pob tilling the soil and producing the vital foodstuffs to feed her sons in the armed forces, her civilian population and those of the British Isles and other lands.

What better proof is needed to bring to the front what rural Canada is doing to help win the war, than the rural and small town and city fairs?

What better show-window can be procured for the splendid products of field, forest and rural home, than these autumn exhibitions?

It would do some of these sceptics good to visit the fairs. They would get first hand evidence of what the man on the back fifty is doing in these dark days of war when public nterest is centred on world events.

They would see for themselves the rapid strides being made in the breeding and production of blooded horses, cattle, swine and poultry. They would see the modern scientific achievements that have proven a boon to the Canadian farmer and now are proving no minor factor in the increased production so necessary at the present time.

And furthermore, they would mingle with one of the greatest families on earth. They would hobnob with simple, sincere, homely folk, who know what it is to toil frm sun-up to dark; to extend a helping hand to a neighbor or a stranger and who live in the main by the sweat of their brows, and are happier for it.

They would see Canadian life at its best. Unsophisticated young men and women; horny-handed, tanned-faced, sturdy men; full-bosomed womenfolk, faces agleam with sheer happiness; folks who have persevered and are persevering and are doing a man-sized job for their country through sheer hard work.

Apart from these facts, the small town and country fairs are as truly Canadian institution as maple syrup, or lumberjacks. They are events in the lives of the rural people and of a great many city dwellers as well. Children live for them. Young people work hard for them. The older folk take them for granted as surely as they do their church on Sunday.

They have a color and glamor all their own. The clanging noise of the midway; the hoarse shouts of the barkers; the pink lemonade and popcorn; fortune tellers; the happy cries of children; the quiet contentment of mature cattle, and the lusty bellowing of small calves; the neighing of blooded stallions, and the quick, nervous attitude of sheep; the blaring of brass bands; the noise, the dust, the happy camaraderie that is always evident, these are but the tnreads in a pattern of one of Canada's national institutions that will long outlive wars, plagues and pestilences.

Here, too, are blended into a happy whole, the varying personalities of Canada's rural life. In the small fair grounds of the nation are reborn friendships that may have faded with the years; others are made stronger for the contact.

To dispense with the small fair would be nothing short of a national disaster. It would mean the partial disintegration of a part of the nation's life. It would smack of segregation of our rural friends, and not even the most hard-boiled city dweller would agree to that.

Canada can no more do without the country fair, that important connecting link between her rural and urban populations, than she can her churches.

Three Mentioned for Post

The President is expected to announce his wartime powers and duties are sufficient authority for the order. Already mentioned as possibilities for the post of economic administrator are Governor Herbert H. Lehman of New York; Wendell Willkie and Bernard M. Baruch.

General provisions of the decree as outlined by authoritative informants is expected to prohibit wage increases above the January 1st., 1941, level by more than 15 per cent, the approximate rise in living costs since that date. Workers paid by the hour, however, will not be prevented from receiving more for extra hours employed, and it is indicated that those who received more than a 15 per cent. increase since January 1, 1941, will be permitted to continue on the basis of the increased pay.

No Increases Over $7,500

While wages will constitute the amount paid by an hourly rate or other compensation up to $75 weekly, salaries will include amounts ranging from that figure to $7,500 a year. It is still to be decided whether salaries will be frozen or permitted to be raised on the cost-of-living formula, but on salaries above $7,500 a year increases will be forbidden.

Farm prices will be frozen also although revision may be made later on the charges for some products with some of the revisions to be downward, it was said.

Government officials said income tax laws will be used particularly to enforce wage provisions of the order. Refusal to allow employers "business expense" deductions for unauthorized wage increases will bring increased taxes on employers. As a matter of normal economy, most employers are expected to abide voluntarily by the decree.

WOUNDEDCOLONEL

to Winnipeg, Sept. 9.

The mass meeting was arranged through the co-operation of the Montreal members of The Canadian Press and the Rotary Club. Second feature on the program was the introduction of the five touring Royal Canadian Air Force men who bombed Germany Tuesday night. The airmen were given a tremendous ovation in a brief ceremony which climaxed their busy round of engagements which followed their arrival from Toronto.

Ends Speech in French

Mr. Munro told amid applause the part the Montreal regiments played in the Dieppe raid. He won his most enthusiastic round of applause when he ended his remarks in French.

In introducing the speaker, Arthur C. Morton, president of the Rotary Club, who acted as joint chairman with De Gaspe Beaubien, a member, read a telegram from Prime Minister King in which Mr. King said the meeting was "a tribute to the men of Montreal" who took part in the raid.

"You will be prepared." Mr. King messaged, "I am sure, to have the gathering given the significance of a national tribute to all who participated in the raid. Their courage, their sacrifice and their achievements will constitute an immortal page in Canada's history."

Mr. King also paid tribute to the "graphically written" reports from Mr. Munro and said "Mr. Munro cannot be too warmly thanked for the service he is rendering in making so real to us all the deeds, the valor and the heroism of Canada's fighting men."

The Experts Say

By ISABEL ALLAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 5 —(CP)— Hints for strategists on the home front from those who should know.

PICKLING — It's time to put up pickles but — and here is the catch —you aren't allowed extra sugar . . . Laura Pepper of the Consumer section of the Department of Agriculture and her staff have been busy on this very problem . . . The result — a folder entitled "Wartime Pickles and Relishes" which may be obtained free of charge on request from the publicity and extension division of the Department of Agriculture.

COFFEE — Are you still worrying about making your coffee go further? Here is a tip from New York way — take the used coffee grounds and any left-over coffee and place them in the refrigerator —then when coffee-time comes around again, take them out and boil three times as long as you do fresh coffee . . . You'll be surprised how good it is.

CONVENTIONS — Many committees planning conventions are asking if they can have extra tea and coffee for their gatherings. "No," says Dr. George E. Shortt, director of Industrial and Institutional Rationing for the Wartime Prices and Trade Board . . . Supplies of these imported commodities are very scarce, he says, adding "I am sure that no Canadian will want to risk men's lives for a cup of tea."

FATS — Marion Harlow, assistant director, Nutrition Services, tells us we can kill two birds with one stone by cutting down on our fats . . . We'll be saving fat for war uses and giving a boost to our own health by cutting out fried foods and pastries, she says . . . However, she warns us not to omit such diet fats as butter, cream, eggs and meat from our menus. Did you know that we on the American continent eat more fats than those of any other area in the world?

MILK — Byrne Hope Sanders, "Mrs. Consumer" of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, says that consumption of fluid milk for the first half of 1942 increased nearly 10 per cent but production only increased four per cent . . . If you are a farmer's wife, you can encourage your husband to build up his herds . . . You know we want to send as many milk products as we can to Britain besides looking after ourselves.

RAYON — Here's good news for you — but the moths don't like it . . . Rayon actually requires no protection against these pests unless it is blended with wool — then the experts say the fabric should be treated as all wool and thoroughly de-mothed . . . But if you are storing away a suit or dress made of rayon or spun yarn, all you have to do is to make sure that it is clean.

CARRIER PIGEON FOUND IN CITY

The third carrier pigeon to be seen in the city within the past few weeks was picked up near the Belleville Fruit Company's premises yesterday by Frank Morell, son of Mr. Tony Morrell, 233 Foster Avenue. The pigeon was found in an exhausted condition and wore a rubber tag with the number 7116-T-E-142. He will be kept until he is able to fly again. Police are of the opinion there is a carrier pigeon farm somewhere in the Bay of Quinte district from which the pigeons are coming.

COMMON PURPOSE

Again we're all to stand to care,
Meet rising taxes without flinching
And daily heavier burdens bear
And learn the trick of penny pinching.
To folly now we say goodby,
No more by luxury attended
We're out for victory, live or die,
And will be till the war is ended!

Work more and play a little less
And do without what merely pleases;
To put aside our love of dress,
At least until the struggle eases;
To turn away from fad and frill
And all adornment merely splendid,
Forgetful of ourselves until
In victory the war is ended.

What does it matter, less or more?
The fate of all alike we're sharing.
A year ago this suit I wore,
And last year's suit my neighbor's wearing.
On simpler fare today I dine.
These shoes will serve when they are mended.
My neighbor's lot is much like mine
And will be till the war is ended.

Long years we've sat on pleasure's knee,
Known song and mirth and joyous beauty.
Now uncomplaining all must be,
Willing to heed the call of duty.
On what of hardship men will bear
Freedom when threatened has depended.
So here we stand the fight to share
For freedom till the war is ended.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED!

When the first constitution of the United States was adopted Canada was granted the unique privilege of becoming part of the Union without the formal consent of the states. The Articles of Confederation, adopted in 1781, provided:

"Canada acceding to this confederation and joining in the measures of the United States shall be admitted to, and entitled to all the advantages of this Union; but no other colony shall be admitted into the same, unless such admission be agreed to by nine states."

This invitation to Canada to enter the Union was not repeated in the federal constitution adopted in 1789.

General Council Of United Church Tackles Problems

Biennial Meeting Opening in Belleville, Ont., Sept. 9 Will Discuss Many Big Questions Affecting Religious Progress

Wartime shortage of ministers, advisability of continuing the United Church Publishing House as a business enterprise, staff reduction in the theological colleges, reorganization of the church's financial set-up—these are among the problems for discussions at the tenth biennial General Council of the United Church of Canada, opening at Bridge Street United Church here, Wednesday, Sept. 9. Among the memorials before the Council is one asking the United Church to send missionaries to the Soviet Union.

It is expected 286 commissioners from every part of Canada and Newfoundland will participate in the sessions, which will last for nine or ten days. Equal numbers of ministers and laymen make up the council. They represent the 11 Conferences of the United Church and include several women. The Council is the highest court of the United Church in Canada.

Election of a new Moderator to succeed Rt. Rev. Dr. Aubrey S. Tuttle, of Edmonton, will be one of the first tasks of the commissioners. He was elected in 1940 at the last meeting of the Council in Winnipeg. Election will be by nominations from the floor of the assembly. Decision is by the majority of votes cast.

Present tenure of the Moderatorship is for two years, but several discussions have been held on the question of changing the tenure to one year and will again be discussed. If a one-year tenure is adopted, two Moderators will be named, one to serve the first year after Council meets, and the other to serve in the second year.

Finance and Education

One of the recommendations of a commission on the finances of the church suggests a Board of Finance, with separate departments, bringing the whole field of financial endeavor under a single oversight. Since the death of Rev. Dr. Robert Laird, the treasurership has been vacant, and appointment of a successor is up for discussion. Harold Arnup, a layman, has been acting treasurer.

Placing the Missionary and Maintenance Committee under the Board of Finance is to be discussed. There is some feeling that this missionary promotional committee should not also be a money-raising body. A report from the War Savings Committee will be presented by Dr. John J. Gubson, chairman. Approximately $1,000,000 has been raised toward the elimination of the Church deficit through this committee.

At the last General Council meeting the Board of Christian education was instructed to study the situation of the eight U. C. theological colleges in Canada. Reduction in the staff of the colleges is known to be one of the recommendations in the report. There is no suggestion of closing any of the colleges, although many members and adherents of the Church feel that there should be fewer theological colleges. Dr. R. C. Wallace, of Queen's University, has played an important part in the deliberations of this committee.

Ministry and Pensions

The old problem of ministers' pensions will come again before the Council. Many presbyteries have memorialized the Council, suggesting that ministers' pensions should be deducted at the source. Equalization of ministers' salaries is another question before the Council regularly.

Shortage of ministers is also worrying the church. War conditions have aggravated this problem. Scores of United Church ministers have joined the services.

One proposal is that Council accelerate the present theological course for theological students so that the three years can be taken in two years. Rev. Dr. R. B. Cochrane, secretary of the Board of Home Missions, has taken an active part in finding ministers for vacant pastorates.

The War Service Committee, under Rev. Dr. Harold Young, will present a report showing that women's groups of the church have prepared 2,500,000 articles for the material comfort of the men and women in uniform. Representatives of the services' chaplains will speak to the Council.

Many Suggestions

In addition to the memorial asking the Church to send missionaries to the Soviet Union another suggests the Church send greetings to the Soviet Union in this time of suffering. Several memorials deal with the liquor traffic. They ask the Council to petition the government to curtail the manufacture and distribution of alcoholic beverages. Other resolutions coming before the Council deal with the immediate war situation and the need of an all-out effort. One asks the federal prime minister to give labor and agriculture, equal representation with other interests on all its boards and councils; another that a fact-finding commission and a commission on rural problems be appointed; still another seeks a general spiritual awakening of church people. A final memorial asks the moderator to call a conference of representatives of all religious bodies to see what can be done to bring about national unity in Canada.

Two commissions, one on the Church, Nation and World Order, and the other on The Farmer in the National Life will come before the Council.

LIAISON OFFICE IN NEAR EAST

Ottawa, Sept. 4 (CP)—A Canadian liaison office in the near east is being organized by the Royal Canadian Air Force headquarters in Britain, Air Minister Power announced today. It probably will be located at Cairo.

With around 2,000 Canadian airmen now in the Middle East, many of whom have been there for about a year, the need for an adequate liaison was imposed upon the Minister during his recent visit to the United Kingdom, he told reporters at a press conference.

Canada has received almost no credit for the splendid work its airmen were doing in the desert battles and in the defence of Malta, the Minister said. They were in the air daily and had been operating there long before any United States fliers reached Egypt and yet the dispatches usually couple the R.A.F. and United States air fighters and fail to mention the participation of a Canadian squadron.

Keeping Track of Airmen

An even more pressing need for a Canadian liaison in Egypt was the difficulty of keeping track of the Canadian airmen in that war theatre. The Minister cited one instance when a Canadian pilot was missing. His relatives had no word of him since the first of the year and were beseeching the Minister to inquire about it. Only recently had R.C.A.F. headquarters been able to find out that the flier had been missing since Jan. 3 when he started on a flight to Malta.

Mail going to Canadians in the middle east has been delayed and many episodes have developed which make it necessary that a liaison office be set up, Maj. Power explained. British authorities have been most co-operative in the matter and R.C.A.F. headquarters in Britain have already started organizing the office. The date it will be opened will depend on the time it takes to get the officers appointed to the post transported to Cairo.

THE NEW INCOME TAX

PART I - As it Affects

SALARY AND WAGE EARNERS

1. Question: WHO MUST PAY?

Answer: All persons in receipt of incomes over $660 single—or $1200 married.

2. Question: WHAT FORMS DO YOU HAVE TO FILL OUT?

Answer: Unless you are single, without dependents, and not making payments for allowable personal savings (Item 5D), you should file Form TD-1 with your employer. Otherwise he must deduct the amounts provided by the Table of Tax Deductions for a single person without dependents or personal savings.

If ¾ or more of your income comes from salary or wages, you must file your 1942 Income Return by 30th September 1943. If your income is not over $5,000, including not over $100 from investments, you will use Form T1-Special; otherwise you will use Form T.1.

3. Question: WHEN AND HOW IS YOUR TAX COLLECTED?

Answer: Your employer is required by law to make deductions from your salary or wages on account of your 1942 tax during the period September 1942 to August 1943. Each deduction must be the amount provided by the official Table of Tax Deductions for your current rate of pay, and family status and personal savings as declared on Form TD-1 (Item 2 above).

The Table is designed to collect about 90% of the tax on your salary or wages, leaving a balance of not more than 10%, in most cases, (plus tax on your other income, if any) to be paid with your Income Return to be filed in September 1943.

If your salary or wages are less than ¾ of your income, you must pay tax on your other income by compulsory instalments. (See Part II below).

4. Question: WHAT CONSTITUTES TAXABLE INCOME?

Answer: Your income is made up of your full salary or wages before any deductions whatsoever, plus living allowances, gratuities or bonuses (including cost of living bonus) and the value of any board, living quarters or supplies, etc., given you by your employer. It also includes such receipts as interest and dividends, rents (after taxes, repairs, etc.), royalties and annuities. From your total income you deduct payments (up to $300) into certain types of employees' superannuation or pension funds, charitable donations up to 10% of your income, and medical expenses over 5% of your income (maximum—$400 single, $600 married, plus $100 for each dependent up to four), to find the amount of your taxable income.

5. Question: HOW MUCH DO YOU PAY?

Answer: (A) Normal Tax—(whichever rate is applicable is applied to the full amount of your taxable income from the first to the last dollar).

(1) Single—with taxable income between $660 and $1800—7%
with taxable income between $1800 and $3000—8%
with taxable income over $3000—9%
(2) Married (or equivalent status)—
with taxable income over $1200—7%
(3) Dependents—tax credit for each—$28

(B) Graduated Tax—

(1) On first $660 of taxable income—No Tax.

30% on next $ 500	55% on next $ 5,000
33% on next 500	60% on next 7,000
37% on next 1000	65% on next 10,000
41% on next 1500	70% on next 20,000
45% on next 1500	75% on next 20,000
50% on next 3000	80% on next 30,000

85% on excess over $100,000

(2) Married (or equivalent status)—tax credit—$150

(3) Dependents—tax credit for each—up to $80

(C) Surtax—4% on investment income over $1500 without exemptions.

NOTES

(1) In no case are you required to pay a net tax (i.e., after credit for dependents) which would reduce your taxable income below $660 single or $1200 married.

(2) If a wife has unearned income over $660, then both she and her husband are taxable as single persons, but any amount a wife earns does not affect her husband's right to be taxed as a married person. A married woman is taxed as a single person under all circumstances except only when her husband's income is less than $660.

(D) Tax Credit for Personal Savings—
You may deduct from the savings portion of your tax (Item 6) 1942 payments on account of—

(1) an approved employees' (or trade union) superannuation, retirement or pension fund;
(2) premiums on life insurance policies issued prior to 23rd June 1942 (if issued after that date ask your insurance company or Inspector of Income Tax);
(3) annuity or savings policies not postponable without substantial loss or forfeiture; and
(4) principal payments on a mortgage or agreement of sale, existing prior to 23rd June, 1942, on one residential property; provided (a) they do not exceed the savings portion and (b) receipts are produced for the payments when filing your Income Return.

(E) National Defence Tax—
This tax does not apply after 31st August, 1942. The deductions made during January to August 1942 apply as a payment on account of your 1942 tax.

6. Question: HOW MUCH OF YOUR TAX IS SAVINGS?

Answer:

(1) Single—the lesser of
  (a) ½ the total of your Normal Tax, Graduated Tax and Surtax; or
  (b) 8% of your taxable income (maximum $800) plus 1% for each dependent (maximum $100 for each).
(2) Married (or equivalent status)—the lesser of
  (a) ½ the total of your Normal Tax, Graduated Tax and Surtax; or
  (b) 10% of your taxable income (maximum $1000) plus 1% for each dependent (maximum $100 for each).

You will get back the savings portion of your tax which you actually pay, plus 2% interest, after the war.

WEDDINGS

ROSE—BOWLER

A charming Autumn wedding took place at three o'clock yesterday afternoon at Holloway Street United Church when Evelyn Wyonna, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clem Bowler, became the bride of Frederick Rose, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. Rose of Preston. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. A. Dilts. The church was adorned with asters and gladioli for the occasion.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a lovely gown of white satin and net, in Princess style, floor length. Her net veil fell from a matching net halo and she carried Talisman roses. Miss Ilene Bowler was her sister's bridesmaid and wore shell pink jersey with blue veil caught with orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of pink Premier roses. Mr. Hugh McDonald, Preston, was groomsman.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, the rooms being attractive with asters and gladioli in pastel shades. About forty guests were present. The bride's mother was attired in hunter's green with matching accessories and corsage of pink carnations, while the groom's mother wore a black crepe dress and accessories with corsage of pink carnations.

Mr. and Mrs. Rose will take up residence in Toronto.

HOOD—THOMPSON

Picton, Sept. 5.—The home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. Thompson near Cherry Valley was the scene of a lovely wedding at three o'clock on Saturday, Sept. fifth, when their younger daughter, Bernice, became the bride of Verdun, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hood, Cherry Valley. Rev. J. F. Reycraft of Picton United Church officiated and the ceremony took place beneath an archway artistically decorated with colorful vines and greenery and banked with gladioli and other Summer flowers.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white satin made on Princess lines with puffed sleeves and shirred waist. Her three-quarter length veil of white silk net was held by a coronet of orange blossoms and her flowers were Sweetheart roses and fern.

Mrs. Murney Cole of Hamilton, was her sister's bridesmaid, wearing a similar dress of white satin and her flowers were Talisman roses.

Mr. M. Cole was groomsman.

Following the ceremony, a buffet luncheon was served to fifty guests. The bride's table with a linen cloth, was centred with the wedding cake and low vases of flowers. Tea was poured by Mrs. Elizabeth McNally and Mrs. Howard Lowery while the assistants were Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. G. Wood., Mr. H. Lowery. Mrs. Thompson, the bride's mother, was in blue crepe with white accessories, while the groom's mother chose blue triple sheer with navy accessories and corsage of sweet peas. The bride's grandmother, Mrs. John Thompson, Picton, and her grandfather, Mr. Bert Davis of Oshawa, attended. Guests also included Mr. and Mrs. Newton Stacey, Oshawa, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Thompson, Ottawa.

Mr. and Mrs. Hood left for a short trip to points east, the bride travelling in a light blue suit with white accessories. They will reside in Hamilton where both are engaged in war work.

A shower for the popular couple is being held at Cherry Valley hall on Monday night.

LYNCH—REDNER

At St. Michael's Church at eight-thirty o'clock this morning an interesting wedding took place when the marriage was solemnized of Florence Mary, daughter of Mrs. Redner and the late James Edgar Redner and William James Lynch, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Lynch. Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., officiated. Mrs. James Grant presided at the organ for wedding music and Miss Katherine Bawden, aunt of the groom, was soloist.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Frank Bateman, looked charming in her frock of Queen's blue sheer and lace with hat of the same material and shoulder length veil. She carried Briarcliffe roses. Miss Annie Hughes was bridesmaid, wearing shell pink with white hat and accessories and carrying pink supreme roses. Mr. Charles Bawden, uncle of the groom, was groomsman and Mr. James Morey was usher.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Philip Rikley, 256 Coleman Street. Mrs. Redner, mother of the bride, in navy figured crepe, with corsage of Talisman roses and Mrs. Lynch, mother of the groom, wearing black sheer with matching hat and accessories and corsage of sweet peas received the guests.

After a wedding trip to western points, Mr. and Mrs. Lynch will make their home in Belleville. The bride choose for travelling a beige redingote dress with black hat and accessories.

FITZGERALD—MATTIS

A very pretty wedding took place quietly at St. Michael's Church at ten o'clock this morning, when Gladys Theresa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Mattis, became the bride of John Daly Fitzgerald, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Fitzgerald of Toronto. The ceremony was performed by Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G. Mrs. James Grant presided at the organ for wedding music and Miss Shirley McCabe was soloist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a smart ensemble of ice blue crepe with wool redingote in the same tone, nigger brown accessories. She wore a corsage of red roses and bouvardia. Miss Molly Connell was bridesmaid and wore wine crepe frock with black accessories and corsage of Talisman roses and bouvardia. Mr. Clifford Williams, Toronto, was groomsman.

Following the ceremony luncheon was served at the bride's home. Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald left on a wedding trip to Toronto and Niagara Falls, the bride choosing for travelling a brown tailored suit with beige accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

Out of town guests at the wedding included Mrs. Gerald Fitzgerald, Toronto, Mrs. James J. Pratt, Allen and Joan, Rochester, N.Y., and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hauser, Rochester, N.Y.

The Gift of Perfect Grooming

Beautiful Lynn Bari always looks fresh and neat.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Perfect grooming is a gift. There are women who always look as fresh and blooming as a new-blown rose. There are women who, even when they are arrayed for the festive occasion, look a bit blowsy.

There are women whose homes are always in a state of disorder, newspapers thrown about, coats on chairs, dust on the furniture, while other bosses of the household keep the family diggings as neat as a pin. It all depends upon whether or not the lady has an orderly mimnd.

Details of the toilette need not take much time. There's no reason why any woman shouldn't appear attractive from the time she scrambles out of bed until she falls in again.

Looking well has so strong an influence upon the mind and spirits that it should be a habit. Look scrubby, feel scrubby. We've no patience with the little slouch who wears a soiled house coat and rundown slippers, has her hair looking like a mess of jackstraws, while she gets breakfast.

We aren't one who believes that a woman should be pretty so as to retain her husband's love, because true love will survive anyway. But we do believe that she should look her best for the sake of self-respect.

If Time is chasing at her heels, if children keep her on the go, she can have her bath at night, do up her tress ends in ringlets, cream her hands and face, putter with her finger-nails. No trick to run the comb through her hair in the morning, ply the lipstick, slip into a pretty house dress.

Are You Sure of Table Etiquette?

The "Plate-Passer" Annoys

Ah, such refinement—she thinks! But passing plates on and on only annoys other guests who wonder, "Who invited HER?"

It's correct to be guided by the host, who indicates which plate is whose. Usually the woman on his right is served first. If you are helping yourself to a dish near you, you might offer it to the person next you—but no elaborate passing!

Sure of such points—which are so easily learned—you can make such a charming impression. At the start of the meal, you let your partner pull out your chair for you. At the end, you leave your chair as it is—not awkwardly pushing it back in place.

You don't leave unpleasant pictures in people's minds—biting into a whole piece of bread, eating sticky iced cake with your fingers. You break the bread as you eat it, use a fork with iced cake. And chicken bones? How to eat asparagus, canapes?

Our 32-page booklet tells how to eat these and other foods. Describes correct use of silver, when to use fingers; gives dinner etiquette for hostess and guest—course by course. Explains what to do at teas, buffet parties, restaurants, clubs.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of "Good Table Manners" to The Ontario Intelligencer, Home Service, 166 Front Street, Belleville, Ontario. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

If Vision is Impaired at Night Lack of Vitamin A May be Cause

The tissues of the body richest in Vitamin A is the liver. The tissues next richest in Vitamin A are in the eyeball. There is good reason for this. Vitamin A makes a chemical combination with other substances in the eye so that a person may see well at night.

This vitamin is found in such foods as milk, cream, butter, carrots, spinach, and in a number of other foods. However, a lack of Vitamin A in the body frequently occurs.

When this deficiency devolps a condition known as night blindness is one of the things that occurs. This disorder in which the person is unable to adjust his eyes quickly to the dark, and is also unable to see as well as he should in darkness. When there is a lack of Vitamin A certain changes also develop in the conjunctiva, lining membrance of the eyeball. The conjunctive loses its luster, more blood vessels form in it and the lining membrane becomes dry. Lack of Vitamin A interferes generally with health and strength and may be a factor in lowering resistance to infections, particularly those of the nose, throat and lungs.

Vitamin A is stored to some extent in the body but it is advisable for every person to get a certain amount of this vitamin in his food each day. Three thousand units have been recommended as the daily requirement for grown-ups; 5,000 for pregnant women, and 6,000 to 8,000 for growing children. Other observers have suggested even larger amounts. A unit of Vitamin A is an amount that has a definite effect when given to animals.

A number of surveys have been carried out on large numbers of people to determine how many may be lacking in Vitamin A. These persons have been studied by using an instrument known as a biophotometer, which measures the occurrence of night blindness. As a result of these surveys it has been estimated that anywhere from three to ten of every hundred persons are suffering from Vitamin A deficiency. Studies of diets have shown that many persons consume less Vitamin A than they need.

There are certain disorders that may develop which interfere with the taking up and use of Vitamin A by the body. Any disease that interferes with the absorption of fat may cause a mild or severe deficiency of Vitamin A. For example, chronic ulcerative colitis or diseases of the gallbladder or bile tracts in the liver may interfere with Vitamin A absorption. In these cases, even though a person takes large amounts of Vitamin A the body may not really get all that it requires. Other conditions interfering with absorption of Vitamin A are malnutrition, kidney inflammation, ear infections, pneumonia, and jaundice.

According to Dr. Joseph Mandelbaum of New York, when a person has an infection, the use of Vitamin A by the body is interfered with. Thus it may be wise to give extra amounts of Vitamin A when certain types of infection occur. Since there are so many different kinds of food supplying this vitamin, individuals, as a rule, can get enough of it if they see to it that they eat the foods rich in Vitamin A every day.

CANNIFTON W.M.S.

The September meeting of Cannifton W.M.S. was held in the Sunday School rooms of Cannifton United Church on Thursday afternoon with a fair attendance. Mrs. Ray Lockyer, president of the Society, presided and took charge of the devotional period which consisted of two hymns, Scripture reading by Mrs. H. Empson and several short readings by the president.

Members of the Mission Band were present and favored the gathering with a chorus. During the business part of the meeting a report was read by the treasurer which was quite satisfactory. A number of articles were handed in for the missionary sale with several others promised.

After the Roll Call and the collection had been taken a period of discussion was conducted by the ladies on the subject: "The Community Around Our Church."

A number of short readings on "Small incidents in children's lives became big facts in later years," were read by the president.

The Mission Band sang another chorus after which the meeting closed with prayer by the president and a response by the ladies.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Army Officers' Introduction

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I have just begun my duties as a volunteer worker on a committee doing Army work, and I realize that I am expected to make many introductions. I have "boned up" so that I can now recognize the various insignia and their meaning as to rank.

But what bothers me terribly, in making these introductions of officers, is if, in an introduction, I should say "First" or "Second" before the title of "Lieutenant". And how about the various grades of "General" . . . for example, Major General, Lieutenant General, and so forth? Should I mention the definite title in the introductions?

E. R.

When you are making an introintroductions? 'self duction, you should introduce a Lieutenant as "Lieutenant". The "First' or "Second" is not used in

You use the title of "General" when you introduce (or address) a General or a Lieutenant General, Major General, or Brigadier General.

You use the title of "Colonel" when you introduce or address a Colonel or a Lieutenant Colonel.

Also it is most important for you to remember that when you make an introduction, you should introduce an office of lower rank to an officer of higher rank; that is, mention first the officer of higher rank. "Colonel Strong, may I present Lieutenant Forbes".

Tips For Waiters At Reception

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

We are having a wedding as well as the reception at a large hotel. I would like to know who tips the waiters. And is there a fixed tip?

I. S.

The bride's family pay all the expenses of the reception, and this includes the tips to the headwaiter or maitre d'hotel and to the waiters. For greater convenience, whoever in the bride's family makes the arrangements for the reception, asks to have ten per cent (at least, and usually fifteen per cent) added to the menu-bill, for the waiters' tips. Whoever is in charge of the reception (maitre d'hotel or head waiter) is given a separate tip, usually a generous one, in recognition of skillful and courteous attention and co-operation.

Corner Library

(By K. G.)

Readers will welcome the Fall season with its promise of outstanding books in all fields. Experienced writers in the world of current events, as well as literature, biography and travel will make the season an important one for Library borrowers.

Abend, Hallett — Ramparts of the Pacific.

"The New York Times correspondent for the Far East has written a gripping and timely account of defences, economics and war strategy of the Pacific. Based on his 40,000 mile air tour of the East, just before Pearl Harbour, his account includes a visit to Australia and New Zealand as well as the surrounding islands.

Rawlings, M. K.—Cross Creek

Among the leading biographies of the season is this sparkling reminiscence of life in the Florida hammock country told by the author of "The Yearling". Readers will find here the same haunting charm and sensitive awareness of nature that made the author a Pulitzer prize winner.

Flannery, H. W.—Assignment to Berlin.

The correspondent who succeeded William Shirer as C.B.S. representative in Berlin tells his personal experience in Germany and in Greece, France and other stricken countries.

Merrick, Elliott—Northern Nurse.

The adventures of an Australian nurse at the Grenfell Hospital in Labrador are described by her husband in this story of modern pioneering. During the illness of the doctors in charge she found herself doctor, dentist, nurse, surgeon, bookkeeper, dressmaker and church soloist.

Following evidence given by Constable Frederick Morgan, a charge of driving in a manner dangerous to the public was withdrawn against Byron Fitchett, Crookston. Several people were injured in the accident, which resulted in the laying of the charge.

Abe Ostrom, Trenton, was remanded to Sept. 11th., on a charge of arson. He will be examined by a representative from the Ontario Hospital, Kingston, while on remand.

Successful Summer Season Is Noted At Public Library

At the meeting of Corby Public Library Board held last evening the following report of activities for the months of June, July and August was presented by the librarian, Miss Kathryn Gallagher.

The library closes one of its most successful summer seasons with increases in all departments. The greatest increase was noted in the adult circulation figures when 1,734 more books were borrowed than last year. There was also a rise of 358 in boys and girls circulation, making a total increase of 2,092. Total use of books for June, July and August was 24,463. Of this number 19,357 were adult, 4,301 boys and girls and 805 reference books consulted.

218 new members joined the library in the summer months, 186 adults and 32 children. There were 63 adult and 16 children's withdrawals. Total membership now stands at 8,263, which means that about 58% of the city's population are registered library borrowers.

Books most in demand at the library during this period and continuing to be still leaders are Pearl Buck's "Dragon Seed," with Rachel Field's "And Now Tomorrow" and Nina Fedorova's "The Children" following. Books on current affairs lead the list in non-fiction with an interest in countries shown in the following order: Canada, Russia and the Pacific battleground, as shown by requests for Bruce Hutchinson's "The Unknown Country," R. E. Davies "Mission to Moscow," and Hallett Abend's "Ramparts of the Pacific."

Miss Delaney's "Aeroplane Book Tour" was a popular reading club for boys and girls during July and August. There were 52 enthusiastic members and approximately 400 books were read.

In the month of June two classes from the O.S.D. visited the boys and girls library and spent enjoyable hours browsing among their favorite stories.

In the early summer a donation of 120 discarded books and 30 magazines was made to the I.O.D.E. St. Julien Chapter in the efforts for books for the navy.

The library has received many generous donations during the summer. Mrs. W. E. Schuster donated a weekly copy of Stamp Magazine for use on the reading tables. Donations of books were received from Mr. George Gorman and Mr. Charles Brown. Flowers were donated by Mrs. N. Thompson, Miss I. Moore and Mr. Fenn.

Treating Infantile Paralysis By the Kenny Method

As the season is about at hand when infantile paralysis (anterior poliomyelitis) makes its appearance many physicians will for the first time try using the Kenny method of treatment brought from Australia to America by Nurse Elizabeth Kenny or Brisbane.

Heretofore, as some cases of poliomyelitis went on to the paralysis stage and some did not, the physician when the spasm, tightening or shortening of the muscles occurred, tried to prevent this shortening with splints. Often an orthopedic specialist was brought into consultation at or after the stage of paralysis in an attempt to prevent shortening of the muscles and get better working arms and legs.

The Kenny method of treatment is based on the belief that poliomyelitis in the acute stage is a disease which attacks not only the nervous system but the muscles as well. This is an inflammatory process within the muscle of which spasm is the outstanding symptom.

'Spasm of muscle is the earliest, the most common and the most damaging finding affecting the muscles in acute anterior poliomyelitis. Paralysis may or may not be present but spasm is the damaging element in the muscles attacked."

There is usually pain with the spasm and the spasm itself may be the cause of the pain. "One of the most striking features noted of the Kenny treatment is the prompt relief and the remarkable comfort of the patient within a few days after the treatment has begun".

Dr. John F. Pohl, Minneapolis, in the Journal of the American Medical Association, speaks of the work done at the Minneapolis General Hospital by Miss Kenny.

The relief of spasm is the first consideration in the Kenny treatment. The physician can readily discover the spasm by the stiffness and loss of motion in the muscle.

Treatment by moist heat begins as soon as the disease is discovered. Wool flannel packs of proper size are soaked in boiling water, wrung twice through a tight wringer at the bedside and quickly applied to the affected muscle or group of muscles. The pack must completely cover the muscle but joints are left free so that patient feels that he can move the joint. The moist packs are covered with oiled silk and then with dry flannel. The pack is changed every two hours but may be renewed every fifteen minutes if the spasm is very severe. Packs are continued through twelve hours of the day and are used until the muscle is able to extend itself completely.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was taking his 3rd cup of coffee with an innocent expression, and ma said, My, when I think of the price of food.

Why, is it —much cheaper? pop said, and ma said, Cheaper! You must be taking leave of your remaining senses. I stopped in at the market yesterday afternoon because I knew I was going to have a heavy day today and I decided at least to have the food question settled behind me, and do you know what potatoes were? she said.

Don't tell me they were spuds pop said, and ma said Well speaking of their appearance as a matter of fact they weren't much to brag about, little undernourished looking things, but I mean the price of them. Three pounds for 25 cents, what do you think of that for potatoes? she said.

It's high, pop said, and ma said, It's more than high, it's exorbitantly excessive. Somebody's taking advantage of this war William? she said.

I hope it's not the Germans, pop said, and ma said, And lettuce, the man at the salad stall wanted 15 cents for one tiny moth eaten head of lettuce.

Yee gods, I can get a good full size moth proof cigar for 15 cents, pop said, and ma said, I was so diskusted I turned my back on the vegetables and went to see the butcher, but I wont even tell you the price of meat, I'll spare you the shock. Suffice it to say I went away without buying a single item of food she said.

Good for you, pop said. If more people acted like that maybe food prices would be jolted back to normal. But hay, then what are we eating for dinner tonight? he said, and ma said, Not a solitary thing, I meant at least not here. I decided we'd go and eat in a resterant, and I'm glad to hear you say I did just right. Nora's off today anyway, so maybe it's all for the best, she said.

You win, and the world remains the property of women, pop said.

And he folded his paper and left for his office.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Navy Blue and Gold"

Acclaimed by naval officers the most authentic story ever written about the historic United States Naval Academy, "Navy Blue and Gold" opens Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre for a return engagement in answer to wide-spread popular demand.

The novel, steeped in colorful traditions of the institution, was written by George Bruce who also adapted it to the screen.

It portrays the poignant devotion of cadets pledged to their country's service, the heartaches of stern, character-building discipline, the thrilling sportsmanship of the Navy's titantic football games, and the love of the two players for the sister of their pal.

"Navy Blue and Gold" teams Stewart, Young and Tom Brown as buddies coming from different walks of life to rise to prominence as midshipmen at Annapolis. Stewart portrays a Navy oiler up from a battleship to try for his stripes at the naval academy. Young is seen as a Southern football hero who has no intention of remaining in the service. Brown has a contrasting role as the spoiled youngster of a wealthy family who learns how to "take it."

"Night of January 16th."
(First Belleville Showing)

A murder mystery well-garnished with laugh lines and situations is a piece of film entertainment to treasure and it looks very much like "The Night of January 16th," the new Paramount chuckle-mystery, which arrives Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre, is just that kind of picture.

It stars handsome Robert Preston and lovely Ellen Drew, a pair who would seem to complement each other admirably, to the satisfaction of their legions of fans. Preston has been scoring personal successes in picture after picture.

Miss Drew, one of the screen's best-looking enchantresses, has an acting ability that is outstanding, as she has proved in several recent performances.

Looking over the featured cast, one finds assembled a group of seasoned performers. Heading the cast is Nils Asther, smooth and polished film favorite. Among the others are Margaret Hayes, Clarence Kolb, Alice White, Cecil Kellaway and Cliff "Double-Talk" Nazarro.

The available advance signs point to "The Night of January 16th" as a movie with excitement, suspense and plenty of good laughs.

A special matinee will be run at 2:15 Monday, Labor Day.

AT THE BELLE

"Footlight Serenade"

20th Century-Fox is bent on keeping us happy for the duration, for right on the heels of "My Gal Sal" they have come forth with another grand musical just bubbling over with joyous humor, merry tunes, exciting dances and, best of all—Betty Grable, at her musical best. "Footlight Serenade" it's called and it is the feature attraction at the Belle Theatre today, Sunday after Midnight and Monday, featuring John Payne and Victor Mature.

Ah—that Grable! She's perfectly enchanting as she sings, dances and romances against a Broadway background. And to complement the gorgeous blonde, Johnny Payne and Vic Mature turn in swell performances—including a rousing pitching battle that looks as if the boys aren't kidding.

The star-studded cast includes Jane Wyman and Cobina Wright, Jr., who vie with Betty for the affections of Mature and Payne. James Gleason, as a dyspeptic producer, and Phil Silvers, his crony, team up for some genuine guffaws. The film boasts also some topnotch tunes of hit parade calibre, the best of which are "Are You Kidding me?" "I Heard the Birdies Sing," "Except With You," "I'm Still Crazy For You' and an inspiring air called "I'll be Marching to a Love Song"—all by those master tunesmiths, Leo Robin and Raph Rainger.

Hermes Pan, who created the dance routines for the hit, appears in several and shows why he is the top dance director in Hollywood. Ingenious Gregory Ratoff directed the film and kept it percolating at a fast clip.

"Footlight Serenade" is the perfect tonic for the times. Don't miss it!

Four Junior Features

"Wonders of the Sea" is the title of a novel and entertaining tale of the briny deep to be presented on the same program with the Belle Latest News Digest, and the latest camera record of the activities of Our Sister Dominion appropriately titled "Courageous Australia." A thrilling superman color cartoon "The Magnetic Telescope" completes the program.

Continuous shows will be presented today and Monday.

AT THE McCARTHY

Abbott and Costello

Bud Abbott and Lou Costello in their brief but spectacular career have portrayed detectives, cowboys, sailors, soldiers, mechanics and carnival spielers.

In their newest comedy hit "Pardon My Sarong" which opens Sunday midnight at the McCarthy theatre they will appear as bus drivers who later become castaways on an uncharted south sea island.

According to advance announcements, the new vehicle takes the famous comedians, halfway around the globe in a combination chase, treasure hunt and encounter with a tribe of south seas dancing beauties.

Virginia Bruce has the leading feminine role and the very imposing cast includes Robert Paige and Leif Erikson. Other notables in the line-up are Lionel Atwill, Nan Wynn and Samuel S. Hinds.

Entertaining novelties are promised by the appearance of Tip, Tap and Toe, dancers, the Saronga Dancing Girls and The Four Ink Spots of radio, stage and juke-box fame.

Score is Tuneful

Many new numbers are listed in the musical score which was supervised by Charles Previn. Selections include "Island of the Moon," "Lovely Luana," "Vingo Jingo," "Do I Worry," "Java Jive" and "Shout, Brother, Shout." The last three numbers are presented by The Four Ink Spots.

A splendid variety of short subjects precede the feature at all performances. Monday the show is continuous.

RUSSIANS BREAK

an effort to break through to the Volga.

Bloody fighting for a railway station southwest of the Volga River metropolis was reported in its second day. Frontal and enfilading fire cut into the huge tank and infantry formations hurled into that sector by German Field Marshal Fedor von Bock.

"The enemy attacks were repulsed," the mid-day communique said.

Checking of the German squeeze upon Stalingrad and an improvement of Red army positions on the Axis flank within the Don Bend had been reported 12 hours earlier.

Russias central front troops, resuming an offensive against the Rzhev-Vyazma salient west of Moscow, were reported to have captured a number of additional settlements.

Unit Wipes Out 400

"Red army men of one unit," it was announced, "wiped out about 400 enemy officers and men."

Violent pressure in the western Caucasus forced the Russians back in one sector north of the Novorossisk naval station but Red marines, land batteries and the guns of the Black Sea fleet pounded the Germans and their Rumanian allies hard, the midnight communique said.

"Six German tanks were destroyed, as well as 15 guns, while two battalions of infantry were annihilated," it was announced.

The Russians said the invaders had forced a river crossing in the Terek Basin near Mozdok and said "our troops were engaged in pressing the enemy back" in that theatre before the Caucasian mountains and the Grozny oil fields.

Without details, the communique said fighting persisted in the region of Rzhev, 130 miles northwest of Moscow.

"Our warships in the Baltic sank four enemy transports and two German torpedo boats with a displacement of 37,000 tons" the war bulletin reported.

Russian sources said also that eight Nazi planes were destroyed during a thrust against Leningrad Friday and that survivors of the squadron fled.

Attacks Repulsed

German attacks were repulsed both northwest and southwest of Stalingrad yesterday and counter-attacks above the Volga River industrial centre cost Field Marshal Fedor Von Bock heavily, it was said.

The active defence of the southwestern approaches against armored units and infantry was reported to have halted "further progress of the enemy in this sector".

"In another sector Nazi troops, who had driven a wedge into our positions were attacked by Soviet tanks and infantry", the communique said. "Eleven German tanks were destroyed and 600 Germans were killed".

Red Star declared that German officers, seeking the greatest use of their available manpower, were even forcing their own wounded into repeated attacks, killing those who were able to rise but unable to advance.

"The enemy is still strong here, but his hasty actions for a conclusion indicate he is assembling his last forces from other sectors and fronts", it said.

Zellers and Deacons Battle To Fifteen-All Draw, Game Is Called For Darkness

Teams Only Able to Complete 6½ Innings of Play

LUSTY HITTING

It was no contest in the fourth game of the girls' softball championship series between Zellers and Deacons at the fair grounds last evening as with six and one half innings completed and the score tied at 15 all the game was called on account of darkness.

It was the same old trouble, that has held up the final series in the girls playdown series for the past two years, with the teams not getting underway until too late in the evening. If seven full innings are to be completed the games will have to start shortly after six o'clock.

After spotting the Zellers nine three runs in the initial frame Deacons took the lead in last night's abbreviated contest and at the conclusion of the fourth inning had built up an 11-4 lead.

Then the power-house nine swung into action and went to work on "Stewie" Stewart, who was chucking for the shirt makers and in the sixth and seventh frames drove across ten runs to tie the score.

Deacons only have themselves to blame for not attaining a decision in their favour however as going into the seventh with a six-run lead they committed several errors of omission and commission which coupled by some lusty clouting on the part of Zellers saw their lead dwindle to zero before Douglas hit into a force play at third to end the game.

Not in Usual Form

Bessie Doolittle was "Chuck" Barnett's choice for mound duty but the Zeller reliable was not in her usual form and she was relieved by "PeeWee" Colden who took over from second base.

Errors there were and many of them to help mount the score but the pastime was also marked by heavy clouting on the part of both teams. "Toots" Sharpe, back in the Deacon lineup, excelled herself in the field and conked out a homer and a single. Freeman had a cheap homer and a triple, while Joyce Woodhouse clouted a double and single. Helen Garrow led Zellers at the plate getting a homer and two singles while Donovan hit a triple and Wilma Clarke three singles.

The series will be continued next week when a win for Zellers means the championship, while Deacons have to win two straight to cop the series.

Lineups — Zellers: Colden 2b and p; Clarke rf; Haslip cf and 2b; Donovan ss; Garrow 1b; Bennett 3b; Douglas lf; Flindall c; Doolittle p and Boyle cf.

Deacons: Freeman 2b; Samain ss; Sword 3b; Corneal 1b; Woodhouse c; Sharpe cf; Jane Sharpe lf; Moreland rf; and Stewart p.

Score by innings—

Zellers	301	014	6	15
Deacons	132	504	x	15

Umpires: "Speedy" St. Louis, plate and Kelleher, bases.

TENNIS STARS REACH PAY-OFF

Semi-Final Matches Will be Played at Forest Hills

New York, Sept. 5. (AP)— The National Tennis Championships approached the pay-off stage at Forest Hills today with the playing of semi-finals matches in the men's and women's division.

Pancho Segura of Ecuador faced the favored Frankie Parker of Los Angeles in the upper half of men's play, with Ted Schroeder, Jr., of Glendale, Calif., and Lieut. Gardnar Mulloy of Jacksonville, Fla., colliding in the opposite bracket.

In the Women's Department, favorite Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, sailed into little Helen Bernhard of New York City, while Pauline Betz of Los Angeles met Margaret Osborne of San Francisco.

Schroeder, largely on the strength of his brilliant and hard-earned 6-3, 6-8, 6-3, 7-5 victory over Alejo Russell of the Argentine yesterday looked like an odds-on bet against Mulloy.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By The Associated Press)

Vern Stephens and John Niggeling, Browns — Stephens hit pair of homers in double victory over the Indians and Niggeling pitched four-hit shutout in nightcap.

Enos Slaughter, Cardinals — Led team to victory over Reds with double and single and scored two runs.

Hiram Bithorn, Cubs — Beat the Pirates with seven-hit pitching.

GIANTS, DODGERS START CRUCIAL 3-GAME SERIES

Pete Reiser Returns to Dodger Lineup After Being Out With Injuries

CARDS MAKE GAIN

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Bolstered by the return of Pete Reiser and the bankroll of Larry MacPhail, the Brooklyn Dodgers faced a showdown in the National League pennant race today as they moved into New York's Polo Grounds to tangle with the galloping Giants, who have waited eight years for this opportunity.

It was in 1934 that the Dodgers jumped up from the second division and tripped the Giants on the threshold of the National League championship, forcing Bill Terry to eat his widely publicized query concerning the whereabouts of the Brooklyn club.

With the shoe on the other foot, Manager Leo Durocher of the Brooks has been careful not to include among his many utterances a statement which he also might have to devour, but the Giants haven't forgotten the humiliation they suffered in 1934.

Nor did they appreciate the Brooklyn hospitality on their last visit to Ebbetts Field, when the Dodgers took four in a row.

In spite of that quadruple setback, the Giants are winding up their best season since 1937, when they won their last pennant.

All of which makes the three-game series opening today the toughest test for the Dodgers between here and the end of the line.

Cards Given Half-Game

Taking advantage of Brooklyn's idleness yesterday, St. Louis Cardinals jumped to within four games of the pace setters by downing the Cincinnati Reds, 5-3, in a night contest, one of two which comprised the entire National League program.

John Beazley chalked up his 18th pitching victory of the year, although he wavered in the seventh, walking in Cincinnati's final run, and had to be rescued by Howard Krist.

The Chicago Cubs collected 10 hits off three Pittsburgh pitchers and whipped the Pirates, 5-3, behind the seven-hit hurling of Hiram Bithorn.

Bithorn handcuffed the Bucs until the ninth, when a single, a walk and doubles by Vince DiMaggio and Maurice Van Robays produced three runs. Dom Dallessandre started the Cubs on their way with a two-run triple in the initial inning.

Browns Take Both Games

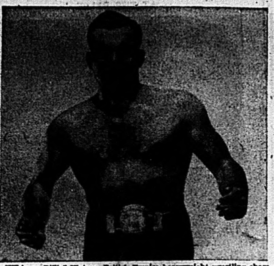
Play in the American League was confined to two teams, the St. Louis Browns and Cleveland Indians, who started a double-header with an afternoon game and finished it under the lights.

The Browns took both games, boosting their third place margin over the Tribe to two games and a half.

They won the opener, 6-3, although they were out-hit, but Johnny Niggeling pitched four-hit ball to hang up the nightcap, 4-0. Rookie Vern Stephens smashed a home run in each game, with a man on base each time.

The double bill, first of three in as many days for the two clubs, was in the nature of an experiment, with patrons being issued passout checks between games. Only 2,126 customers showed up for the daylight tilt, but 6,011 were on hand in the evening.

ADDED ATTRACTION



"Whipper Billie" Watson, British Empire heavyweight wrestling champion, who recently held "Wild Bill" Longson to a draw for the world championship. Watson appears as an added attraction at the Hume Arena on Wednesday, September 9th., when Nanjo Singh, the mad Hindu, meets Big Earl McCready, in a British Empire elimination bout. The winner will challenge Watson for his crown. A guaranteed Queensbury A.C. preliminary opens this outstanding card.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

(By SCOTT YOUNG)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Sept. 5. (CP)—Strange as it seems after all the official hullaballoo, football is almost upon us.

Hamilton Wildcats will start training for their Ontario Rugby Football Union Campaign in a few days. Nothing is definite about the O.R.F.U. lineup or schedule yet, but it probably will start the last week of this month or the first one in October.

Things look good for a Quebec Senior League, with that imposing lineup of prospects released the other day four Air Force teams, two army, one Navy, one war industry and two civilian clubs.

The Winnipeg City League will start September 15. Winnipeg officials still are hopeful a Canadian final will be played, although some observers think its chances folded with the Eastern Football Union. There is no reason why, with the O.R.F.U. definitely operating and the Q.R.F.U. and Ottawa City Leagues seemingly about to take the plunge.

Perhaps we could even have one for war charity this time.

Speaking of war charity, President Fred Hamilton of the Sports Service League (headquarters: Toronto) showed me a list yesterday of the military areas outside of Ontario to which the S.S.L. has sent sports equipment since it was formed in 1939.

The list: Debert, Halifax, Truro and Melgrove in Nova Scotia; Summerside, P.E.I., Calgary, Prince Rupertown B.C., Camp Shilo, Man., Valleyfield, Sherbrooke, St. Johns, Valcartier and Three Rivers, Quebec; N[illegible]undland, Ireland, Iceland, [illegible]nd, Hong Kong ($1,500 in equ[illegible]nt somewhere en route). Add to that list every camp in Ontario and you really have something.

Prexy Hamilton has something else cooking. About two weeks ago he wrote to Defence Minister Ralston asking that Major Conny Smythe of the 30th Battery, Canadian (Active) Army, be appointed army sports director—something akin to Sqdn. Ldr. Lionel Conacher's position in the R.C.A.F. Most violent opposition probably would come from Maj. Smythe on that one, because his opinions on over-emphasis of military sport are quite definitely against. Besides he often has made clear that he didn't enter the army to direct sports. If he had wanted to stay in sport, he could have remained with Toronto Maple Leafs and been much more comfortable.

But it's Hamilton's idea, and a good one in its adherence to the principle that one man should direct army sport.

JERSY GIANTS TAKE TWIN BILL FROM BALTIMORE

Ed. Robinson of Orioles Hits Two Homers but Team Couldn't Win

SYRACUSE WINS

By The Associated Press

Ed Robinson drove in runs No. 100 and 101 as he hit his 25th and 26th home runs of the season in the first game of a doubleheader last night but the slugging first sacker of Baltimore Orioles would have been glad to trade those blows for a hitless evening if his team, in return, could have won the doubleheader instead of losing it.

Baltimore lost valuable ground in its bid for an International League playoff berth as the third-place Jersey City Giants defeated them, 4-3 and 5-1.

In the nightcap the Giants scored three times in the first round and built up a 5-0 lead before Robinson did his specialty in the eighth inning. Ken Jungels allowed only six hits in tacking up the triumph.

By losing both games the Birds dropped out of a fourth-place tie with Syracuse Chiefs who defeated Newark Bears 9-5. They are only four percentage points ahead of the sixth-place Toronto Maple Leafs who were idle. The Giants, by winning, gained a full game on the idle second-place Montreal Royals and they now trail the Royals by one game.

The Bears knocked Charles (Red) Barrett from the mound in the second inning but they couldn't do much with his relief, rookie Jim Konstanty, who went on to his first victory.

London, Sept. 5 —(CP)— Flying Officer Walter Martin of Toronto, one-time Davis Cupper and Canadian doubles champion, noticeably lacked practice when he took part in a Red Cross charity lawn tennis match at London's swanky Queen's Club.

Attached to R.C.A.F. Overseas Headquarters, Martin and Flt. Lt. Dan MacPhail of the R.C.A.F., Scottish champion lost 7-5, 6-2, to Lieut. A. G. N. Lee, ranking English performer, and Flt. Lt. A. Witman, Polish Davis Cupper.

In the same tourney, Mrs. Michael Menzies, the former Kay Stammers, took only 25 minutes to whip 19-year-old Jean Nicoll, Britain's most outstanding young player, 6-1, 6-1, and receive unofficial recognition as women's champion.

CUFF COPY: Len Beynon of Swansea, Welsh featherweight champion now fighting lightweight, continued his unbeaten ways with a clear-cut decision over Cuthbert Taylor at Oxford. Now he'll fight Dave Crowley in London and if he gets the nod will challenge for Eric Boon's British lightweight title.

Award of a bar to the D.S.O. to Maj-Gen. Herbert Lumsden, M.C., a former amateur Grand National rider, has been announced.

O.R.F.U. ACCEPTS 4 TEAMS IN LOOP

Balmy Beach Refused Entry Unless Another Team Comes in

TORONTO, Sept. 5 — (CP) — The executive of the Ontario Rugby Football Union at an emergency meeting here late last night accepted four clubs to membership in the senior series but told the Toronto Balmy Beach club it could enter only if an entry came in from No. 1, Initial Training School, Royal Canadian Air Force.

The clubs accepted were Hamilton Wildcats, Kitchener-Waterloo Panthers, Toronto Oakwood Indians and a Royal Canadian Navy team from H.M.C.S. York at Toronto.

The Initial Training School, R.C.A.F., has approached the O.R.F.U. about an entry but no definite action has been taken. The executives told the Beaches club, one of the biggest drawing cards in the O.R.F.U., it would have to wait until a meeting next Wednesday at Kitchener, Ont., before decision would be made on its application.

SUDDEN SHOWER ROBS HAEGG OF 4-MINUTE MILE

Swedish Star Clicks Off Mile in 4:04.6 on a Cinder Track

MAY COME TO U. S.

Stockholm, Sweden, Sept. 5. (AP) —A sudden shower, just before Gunder Haegg took the track, may have robbed the Swedish runner of the four-minute mile.

As it was, the slender fireman whirled over the soggy Stockholm Stadium cinders last night in 4:04.6 for the fastest competitive mile on record. His time is surpassed only by the 4:04.4 of Glenn Cunningham made on the out-sized Dartmouth board oval with a trio of pace-setters.

The shower almost kept Haegg from attempting to run but officials prevailed upon him to keep his promise of 24 hours earlier in which he said he would try for a new mark. That promise lured approximately 27,000 spectators to the stadium.

Haegg galloped through the first 440 yards in 58 seconds and finished the half mile in 2:00 before the soft going and the high humidity slowed him down. A fantastic finish, however, carried him over the final 110 yards in 16 seconds.

It was the seventh time in two months that Haegg had bettered a world mark and the second time he had shaved the record in one-mile run. On July 2, he lowered Sydney Wooderson's listed 4:06.4 to 4:06.2. His other achievements were at 1,500, 2,000 and 3,000 metres and at the miles. He has broken the 2,000-metre mark twice.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5 — (AP) — Everything was so quiet when the Dodgers got back to Brooklyn yesterday that, as one fan remarked, you could hear a pennant drop ... but from here it looks as if them Bums could win without too much trouble ... if the Dodgers win 12 of their 23 games — and those seven with the Phils look mighty good — the Cards will have to play better than .700 ball the rest of the season to catch up.

Sound Advice

Al Holder, widely known Buffalo amateur golfer, dug up this one from an old English book on golf: "If the decision of the match hangs on the last putt, do not have a gloomy face showing Christian resignation, but fill your mind with vacancy, not even allowing yourself the consolation of religion." .. That "Fill your mind with vacancy" may be okay, but most guys we know also fill the air with strong language.

Shorts and Shells

Bill Dudley, who has been turned down as a naval aviation cadet because his weight (190) is too great for his height according to navy standards, won't need much toughening-up if he makes the grade later. Besides having a busted finger, he played 23 minutes of a Philadelphia all-star game with an injured foot and squawked mightily when Bob Zuppke wouldn't let his go back for the second half ... Mary Hardwick, the English tennis player, hears from her former Wightman Cup teammate, Peggy Scriven, that Peggy's husband was shot down over Germany nine days after their wedding and now is a prisoner.

Nehru's Daughter A Bride

Indira Nehru, only daughter of Jawarharial Nehru (considered the most important native leader of India today), is pictured during the ceremonies that marked her wedding to Feroze Gandhi who is seated next to her. At the extreme RIGHT is Mrs. Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit, sister of Nehru. The ceremonial rites to the chanting of the vedic mantras before the sacred fire are pictured at this instant. Both Jawarharial Nehru and Mahatma Gandhi were jailed when their party refused co-operation to the British in defence of India as a result of the breakdown in negotiations with Sir Stafford Cripps.

UNCERTAIN DESTINY

CHAPTER 19

REVELATIONS

Retracing her steps, Linda could not help smiling at the talk she knew must be going on in that upstairs room following her lighthearted announcement. She suspected the girls would be shocked and surprised and not a little thrilled by her affected sophistication.

Entering the ballroom once more, she saw Steve dancing with Brenda. He was smiling down at her, and suddenly the former model lifted her head so that her cheek rested against his. The sight made Linda strangely ill and unhappy. Then, seeing two determined young men approaching in her direction, Linda escaped to the verandah for a breath of air. The breeze was cool on her flushed cheeks, the music was tantalising, and Linda hummed softly, excitedly under her breath.

Suddenly a movement startled her into awareness that she was not alone. A man was standing beside her. A man, who tossed away his cigarette, chuckled drily, and spoke softly to her out of the darkness.

Standing frozen in darkness, Linda heard a strange, pleasant voice say: "I saw you slip out here. Is Brenda charming your husband again, Mrs. Baridon?"

Linda whirled suddenly, to see Brenda's husband beside her. She had never before spoken to him, but there was wistfulness in his voice that moved her compassion.

"I don't understand what you mean?"

"I think you do." He sounded amused. "Now that Steve is a success instead of a poor, struggling reporter, Brenda is determined to add him to her string of admirers."

Abruptly he broke off to say, "let's go in and dance."

The ballroom was the last place Linda wanted to be seen at that moment, but she allowed Jerry Coleman to steer her awkwardly across the dance floor because she wanted to hear more of his story.

"You seem surprised that I can see through my dear wife instead of being charmed by her beauty.

"In fact," he chuckled, but there was no amusement in his eyes, "you probably think I believe Brenda married me because she loved me instead of my fortune."

Linda missed a step and caught herself. "I don't know what to say," she admitted honestly. "I'm not used to such frankness."

"Why shouldn't I be frank?" he asked bitterly. "I've always known my beautiful wife wanted only my money. What else did I have to offer a girl like Brenda? She's young and beautiful and desirable, and I'm middle-aged and dull."

"If you knew what she was, then why did you marry her?"

"Fair question." He chuckled. "For the simple reason that I love her and I have the satisfaction of knowing she's my wife. If my money makes her happy, that's enough. But—" he looked Linda in the eye, his own gleaming with a sudden cruelty. "I hold the top card if Brenda ever decides to cast me aside. I'll never agree to a divorce, nor will I give her grounds for one."

Linda felt a chill of apprehension. Had this wealthy, unhappy man some ulterior reason for confessing his power over Brenda? Was this a warning for Steve that he could never win Brenda despite his newly-acquired wealth and position?

"I like you, Linda Baridon," Jerry said. "You look like a levelheaded woman, so let me give you a bit of fatherly advice." He smiled a little. "I'm probably old enough to be your father."

Linda could not protest, because what he said was undoubtedly true. She heard him saying: "You married a fine man, my dear. Steve Baridon is a gentleman, so don't make the mistake of misjudging values."

"Misjudging values? I don't understand."

"There is a young man about to cut in on us. He's been watching from across the room for the past five minutes, with a gleam in his eyes. He's an old friends of yours, Linda, by the name of Hollister."

Greg? At last? Linda whirled around into the arms of the man who had ruthlessly broken her heart!

"Linda," Greg murmured, in the low, teasing voice she remembered so well. "I could hardly believe my eyes when I saw you. You're changed. So—so grown up."

The same old Greg, his voice caressing, intimate. And yet as Linda tilted her head to meet his eyes, she detected a difference in his face, burned mahogany brown by South American suns. There was a hardness around his mouth, an expression of boredom in his eyes that she had never before noticed.

"You—you're looking well, Greg," she said stiffly.

Greg laughed delightedly. "Is this all you have to say to your old friend? I come back from South American wilds to find my village sweetheart married to Steve Baridon, rich, famous," his voice dropped artfully, "beautiful."

Skillfully he had led her across the ballroom through massive doors leading into the library. Now, in the secluded spot, heavy with the scent of flowers, Linda faced Greg Hollister, eyes steady, hands clinched. Was this grinning, fatuous face the one Linda Baridon had seen so many nights in her dreams?

She spoke then, and her voice was dangerously low and calm. "Is that how you thought of me?" she queried, "as your village sweetheart?"

"I'm only kidding," he evaded, "but lord, how you have changed. You put Brenda a mile in the shade when she wanted this to be her night, and she's mad as hops at you."

"I think you'd better go," Linda said, because suddenly this man was a stranger. A repulsive stranger.

"Go?" Greg stared in astonishment. "But why? We've got a lot to talk about, you and I." He made a slight move as though to draw her into his arms, and Linda moved back, out of reach.

"We have nothing to say to each other," she said coldly. "I'd like to be alone, please, and Diane may be wondering what has happened to you."

"Diane!" Hhe shrugged. "That's all over. Has been for months."

"I'm not interested," Linda said. "I'm not interested in anything you have to say now, or ever."

Greg whistled under his breath, and the expression in his eyes was ugly.

"So that's the way it is?" he commented angrily. "Steve's money was too much for you. You haven't any use for an old," his voice dropped instantly, "and dear friend."

"That's the way it is."

Without another word, Greg turned and left the room. The slam of the doors acted as a signal for Linda to sink, weeping, into a chair.

What a fool she had been, she told herself bitterly. She recalled the long Winter months at Hillsacres when she had dreamed of Greg's homecoming. Everything she had done, every thought and plan and dream had included him. And the pitying glances of Diane and Steve's sister Mary, and yes—even Steve knew what kind of man Greg Hollister really was while she, Linda, had been blind to his faults: dazzled by his polished air and arrogance.

What was it Diane had said the night she fled the artist's apartment? "Greg indulges in his little romances, but eventually he comes back to me." Linda had succeeded in overlooking the fact that he had ruthlessly destroyed her faith and trust to satisfy his own vanity.

Jerry Coleman's words flashed through her mind again: "Don't misjudge values." So he, too, knew she still fancied herself in love with Greg when all the time, deep in her heart, it was Steven Baridon she really loved!

She loved Steve! Linda gasped as the truth of that simple statemen dawned upon her. Steve Baridon, the handsome, polished gentleman who had befriended her when her faith in everyone and everything had been destroyed. Steve, whose every thought the past few months had been concerned with her own comfort and happiness. Steve Baridon—her husband.

Linda's first emotion was ecstatic happiness, but her joy was short lived. She couldn't tell Steve simply that she loved him, since, after all, their marriage was but a business arrangement. Yet, if he knew that she no longer cared for Greg, would it make a difference in his manner toward her?

The door leading to the foyer opened suddenly, and Linda lifted her tear-stained face to see a couple entering the room. Though it was but dimly lighted, she could see that the newcomers were Brenda Coleman, and — Steve!

There was no chance to escape. Linda slid down in the chair until she was completely hidden from view, but she could not help overhearing their conversation. Brenda's voice was low, tense with emotion, and Steve spoke curtly, yet with understanding.

"I've been so unhappy, Stevie," she was saying, ardently. "Oh, darling you don't know how dreadful it has been for me, missing you so. Everything I did—everywhere I went I thought of you and wished with all my heart that you were with me, instead of—of Jerry."

"Please, Brenda. You mustn't say those things. After all, you are Jerry's wife now. You wanted it that way even though I begged you to reconsider before it was too late. I asked you to stick with me until I made good, and you refused."

"I was a fool-" she cried. "Oh, Steve don't argue with me. We've lost so much precious time already, kiss me and tell me you still care for me."

Linda closed her eyes. If only she could blot out this dreadful nightmare. She had been unknowingly jealous of Brenda because she controlled Steve's emotion, his reason for living. Now she was trying to undo all that Linda's faith in the man had restored, his pride and self-control.

"You're another man's wife, Brenda." Steve sounded desperate. "And there's Linda to consider. She IS my wife, you know."

"Linda, Linda! Must you prattle about her too? What if she is married to you? Linda is perfectly mad about Greg Hollister. Everyone knows she married you only because she made a fool of herself over Greg and he ran out on her. Why, if he snapped his finger at her now, she'd leave you flat—"

"That's enough, Brenda," Steve cried harshly. "I don't want to hear any more about Linda and Greg. As long as she's contented, I won't take the first step to break our bargain."

"Bargain? What do you mean 'bargain'?"

Linda held her breath. Was Steve about to reveal their secret agreement?

"Marriage is a bargain between two people," he said. "Sometimes we make a mistake, but the thing to do is to—well, put up with it."

There was uncomfortable silence before he said, "we'd better get back before we're missed."

The door opened and closed after them. Linda sat very straight, her eyes suspiciously bright. There were no tears now. Trembling a little, she rose and moved to the door. Whereas a short time ago she had been uncertain of her course, the path now lay clear before her.

If people chose to believe she really loved Greg Hollister, then that would be her means of freeing Steve of his unhappy bargain!

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy. 103

Saabrucken To Ottawa In 22 Hours

The five members of the bomber crew, now in Canada, who shared in the terrific bombing of the German city of Saarbruecken, landed at the Rockliffe airdrome, Ottawa, grinning happily as if they had just been on a pleasure trip. But these youngsters had completed more than a score of operations over enemy territory, dropping thousands of bombs. They participated in the 1,000 bomber attack on Cologne and every important raid since. The plan to bring the bomber crew home to tell their story after a big raid, was contemplated as far back as mid-July. LEFT to RIGHT ABOVE are Flight Sergeant "Siggy" Lee, Flight Sergeant Karl Sveinson, Pilot Officer J. C. Higham, D.F.C., Sergeant Don Morrison and Sergeant Arch Loach.

Just 22 hours after they were bombing Saarbruecken, Gremany, this Royal Canadian Air Force bomber crew landed in Ottawa. "It was flaming like a ruddy circus," was the report of one of the men on his last glimpse of the German city, nerve centre of Nazi industry. Immediately after the lads landed their Wellington bomber safely in Britain, they transferred to another aircraft for the transatlantic hop. This photograph of the five crew members was taken in Britain a few moments after they returned from their raid. LEFT to RIGHT, they are: Sergeant Don Morrison, Sherbrooke, Que., the rear gunner; Flight Sergeant Karl Sveinson, Elfros, Sask., the wireless operator; Flight Sergeant S. C. "Siggy" Lee, Minnedosa, Man., the navigator; Sergeant Arch Loach, Islington, the front gunner; and Pilot Officer J. B. Higham, D.F.C., of Assiniboia, Sask., the skipper.

Weekly War Commentary

By Maj.-Gen. Sir Charles Gwynn

War Commentary (775)
(Written For The Canadian Press)
By Maj.-Gen. Sir Charles Gwynn

London, Sept. 5 (CP Cable) — Marshal Erwin Rommel has made his long-anticipated move and a battle is in progress.

Little information has been given as yet, but it would seem the attack has developed as a deliberate and slow advance, withdrawing where necessary under pressure, and it is possible the move is intended only as a reconnaissance in great force to test the British strength and obtain certain tactical advantages.

The restricted front available for an attack and the presence of minefields probably prohibited any rapid manoeuvre in the initial stages of the battle.

The main attack was delivered where expected, on the southern sector, and probably not much hope was placed in the attacks by Italians further north. Since the opportunities for wide manoeuvres were lacking, it may be that by choosing the most obvious front of attack in the first instance, Rommel hoped to draw his opponents' reserves in that direction prior to delivering a heavier blow at another point.

The speed with which tank attacks can be staged favors such tactics but, on the other hand, minefields slow up the rate at which a surprise attack can develop.

Stalingrad's Danger

Stalingrad, despite a magnificent fight by the Russians, evidently is in great danger. The attack from the northwest seems to be checked but it probably is being renewed and the assault by the Kotelnikov army has made progress.

It is possible that in the first instance the Kotelnikof army had not been made strong enough for its task. Its railway communications run via Rostov which may have been a congested bottleneck since the communications to the Caucasus armies also run via that city.

The slowing down of the attack on the Caucasus front may be due to the Kotelnikof army having been given priority on reinforcements and supplies. The situation at Stalingrad will become increasingly serious if the attacks from the northwest and southwest close in and are delivered simultaneously.

There are signs, however, that Marshal Semeon Timoshenko has been reinforced on this front and still holds his reserves. This he probably owes to the fact that the successful defence of Voronezh prevented communications from Moscow being interrupted.

Whether the Germans are approaching exhaustion and finding it difficult to produce fresh reinforcements is not clear. The dispension of their forces over so many points of attack makes this a possibility.

The Russian offensive on the central front is not likely to have drawn any formations from the southern front but it must have prevented Field Marshal Fedor von Bock from receiving reinforcements from the northern armies.

Russian Bombings

There is no definite information as to what is happening in the Leningrad region but reports of a Russian attack on Schusselberg which forestalled any Nazi assault on Leningrad from the north may be true. The heavy bombing of Helsinki which probably is a German supply base for attacks in the north tends to confirm reports of Russian bombing attacks on Germany.

This is an encouraging development and as the raids appear to be directed against the principal railway centres it may add considerably to what must already be the immense difficulty of keeping the armies in Russia fully supplied.

These attacks also may necessitate a recall of fighter aircraft from the Russian front.

FAR EAST IMPROVES

The news from the Far East is becoming more satisfactory. The Allied position in the Solomons seems to be well consolidated, although mopping up may go on for some time. Now the United Nations have a base for fighter aircraft. Further attempts by the Japanese to recapture Tulagi or bring the United States fleet into decisive action are less likely to be made.

The defeat of the Japanese landing at Milne Bay also was a notable feat for the attempt was not merely repulsed but involved the destruction of most of the force which landed. With the danger from Milne Bay removed, the Allies may expect Japanese attempts to reach Port Moresby over the Owen Stanley range.

The Chinese armies continue their remarkable advance in Chekiang Province and if the Japanese retreat is voluntary it involves important sacrifices and loss of face.

The Japanese navy now is seriously weakened and Allied strength is everywhere increased. It is hard to believe that any serious attempts to invade India or Australia will be made. It would involve the employment of a larger force than the Japanese have so far been compelled to use and much longer and more vulnerable lines of sea communications.

It seems more probable that Japanese strategy now is defensive, to maintain a hold on the territory she has conquered.

GLANCING BACK 25 YEARS

Abandoning daylight raids by airships and airplanes, Germany started night bombing raids on London and Eastern England during the first week of September, 1917. Bombs were dropped on Chatham, September 3, with more than 100 persons being killed.

The following night German airmen flew over London's metropolitan area. Nine persons were killed, but, considering the scale of the raid, property damage was small.

CONSERVATIVES CHART PROGRAM FOR THE PARTY

Meeting Detached From Parliamentary Representation and Organizations

LENGTHY DISCUSSION

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Port Hope, Ont., Sept. 5 (CP) — Breaking new ground in Canadian politics a group of some 150 Conservatives with a few others sat down today to chart a suggested program for the National Conservative Party.

The gathering was unique in that it was entirely detached from the parliamentary representation and from the active campaigning organization of the party. It was described by some of those attending as a "laymans" conference and in the official papers of the meeting as a "round table on Canadian policy."

"We are here to see whether by putting our hands and brains together we can do something to enable this fine old party to serve Canada in the future as in the past," said J. M. Macdonnell of Toronto, one of the organizers of the meeting, in a short keynote speech at the opening session last night.

The meeting then was given over to a discussion of procedure and after considerable discussion in which some delegates insisted on a full review of various public questions, the program laid down for the gathering by the organizers was approved.

Four Committees

That program calls for division of the conference into four committees, on war, rehabilitation, agriculture, and labor relations. The committees meet today in camera, but with liaison officers to keep newspaper reporters informed of their proceedings.

The reports of the committees are to be exchanged on Sunday and on Monday all reports are to be discussed at an open meeting on the whole conference.

"This is a meeting of some importance," said H. R. Milner of Edmonton after his election as chairman. "It is true we can not speak of the party nor its leaders but what we decide here will inevitably have an effect on their conduct and on the attitude of the Canadian people to the Conservative party."

The following is the agenda which is divided up among the four committees:

"1 — The whole conduct of the war so far as Canada's part is concerned.

"2 — The problems of post-war security and peace. This would include (A) Canada's obligations to Empire treaties and broader measures for collective security such as those of a revived League of Nations; (B) The revival of trade and economic measures, international co-operation.

A Broad Question

"3 — Rehabilitation. This will include the broad question of reestablishment of the men and women in the armed forces and we think the committee which deals with it might also deal with such matters as immigration."

"4 — The efficient development of Canada's natural resources. This would include such matters as (A) national fuel policy (B) development of the Northwest Territories, (C) transportation by land, water and air.

"5 — Industrial and labor relations with special reference to collective bargaining.

"6 — Agriculture under such headings as (A) cost. interest, loans, debts, (B) markets, (C) marketing machinery which will include probably the subject matter of price spreads and price controls in the marketing of agricultural products, (D) higher nutrition standards and their influence on farm prices.

"7 — Social security which will include measures to provide employment, basic national standards of education, medical services, nutrition and the like.

"8 — Dominion policy with relation to provincial finance.

"9 — Private enterprise and government control."

Leonard Fraser, Conservative leader in Nova Scotia, last night urged the meeting to consider broad principles and not get too much tangled up in details, to study government in the broadest sense of the term.

Charge C.C.F. Communistic

"We know where the C.C.F. stands" he said. "It stands for Socialism and as such it is a menace to the nation. We don't know where the Liberals stand, perhaps because they don't know themselves.

"We know where the Conservatives have stood. I am not sure we know where we stand today. We want to decide whether we are going to hew to the old line or take a new line."

All speakers at the opening session emphasized the unofficial character of the meeting. They wanted it understood that whatever views were expressed at the conference were the views of the individuals here and not those of the Conservative party.

Senator George Jones from New Brunswick, was the only active parliamentarian noticed at the meeting, although there were many former members and defeated candidates. Among these were Hon. Sam Gobeil, of Lac Ste. Marie, Que., former Postmaster General, John T. Hackett of Montreal, former member of the House of Commons; Col. T. A. Kidd, of Kingston, former speaker of the Ontario Legislature, Argue Marin, of Hamilton, former member of the Ontario Legislature.

The following were named chairmen of committees: T. R. Dent Woodstock, Ont., Agriculture; Fred G. Gardiner, of Toronto, Labor Relations; Col. L. D. M. Baxter, Winnipeg, Rehabilitation and Immigration; C. B. Smith, Halifax, War.

ARMY MAKEOVERS SAVING COUNTRY MUCH EQUIPMENT

Careful Salvaging and Co-operation With Other Sources Makes Useable Material From the Obsolete

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 5 —(CP)— "New equipment from old" is the slogan of men supplying Canada's modern army. Usually after every war an army is left with masses of equipment which is likely to be useless in later years because of changes in uniform and in armament.

In the present war, Canadian army officers noted some of this obsolete equipment was the 1908 pattern web equipment, part of which is a two-inch strap, 40 inches long. Another piece of obsolete equipment was a two-inch brass buckle. The ordnance workshops brought the two together. About 40,000 waist belts will be made when the conversion is completed, at a cost of five cents each. These belts will be used in place of a new article which costs 32 cents.

Lt.-Col. W. J. B. Dailley, chairman of the army salvage and disposal board, told a House of Commons war expenditures committee of the savings made possible by ingenious use of old and worn equipment. Condemned tents are examined for pieces of canvas still serviceable. This is used for the manufacture of pin bags, laundry valises, clothing valises and other articles required by the army. A manufacturer quoted a price of 50 cents a pair for ski boot covers. The ordnance corps manufactured the covers from serge and frieze with soles made of old web equipment. The cost was about 10 cents a pair.

Coats supplied for prisoners of war were of a special mackinaw type costing about $6 each. Obsolete army greatcoats were being mutilated and disposed of by the army. But the authorities decided that by dying the greatcoats black and sewing the regulation red patch on the back, economy would be effected. It was. About 10,000 of these coats for prisoners have been made at a cost of about $2 each, a saving of $4 over the former cost.

Because of their distinctive military appearance, unserviceable battledress blouses could not be disposed of, when unfit for troops, until they had been completely mutilated. This arrangement offended the sensibilities of salvage authorities.

An arrangement was made with the Indian Affairs Bransh to purchase these blouses at 25 cents each, to be dyed black or dark blue. Before handing them over, the returned stores group removes the shoulder straps and salvages the rubber buttons and the nickleplated buckle.

The dyeing operation is arranged for by the penitentiaries branch, and to date 15,000 of the blouses have been converted to the use of Indians.

What the army can use no longer, others may find of value. Old-fashioned waist belts numbering 8,000 have been sold to the Air Raid Precautions service for 15 cents each, although some 5,000 supporting straps from 1908 equipment have gone to ordnance workshops for the manufacture of handles of ammunition boxes. Examination of other obsolete supplies has shown several parts can be used with the most modern equipment.

Authorities found about 2,000 water bottle carriers, 2,000 pair of shoulder braces, 35,000 supporting straps and 15,000 bayonet frogs could be used.

The army rules water bottles unserviceable when water becomes rusty after a considerable period of time, but many condemned for the use of troops are serviceable provided the water is not left in them for more than 24 hours. After having tested such bottles, the A.R.P. authorities received 10,000 condemned by the army, which will eliminate the necessity of buying new ones.

Mattresses Cleaned.

In the past, badly-soiled army mattresses and pillows were burned. The salvage and disposal board found they could be effectively cleaned by a special solution. Thousands of mattresses and pillows are made serviceable in this way each month. Those unfit for cleaning are no longer destroyed, but are sold at prices from 25 to 35 cents.

NORTH BAY CHIEF DEAD

North Bay, Ont., Sept. 5.—(CP) —Chief Constable William Clark, 58, head of the North Bay Police Department since 1923, died at his home here last night. He had only enjoyed fair health since returning to his post nearly a year ago after being seriously ill with a heart ailment.

A native of Scotland, Chief Clark came to North Bay from Copper Cliff, where he also was head of the police department.

Previous to that time, he served on the Kitchener Police force.

HAD TO OPEN THE DOORS

San Francisco, Sept. 5 —(AP)— One thing John Howard Ruggles of the R.A.F. Fery Command won't forget in a hurry is Prime Minister Churchill's cigar. Ruggles, from San Franciso, was co-pilot of the plane that took Mr. Churchill to Moscow recently for his talks with Premier Stalin. "I'll never forget that cigar," he said. "We had to open the bomb bay doors."

MONEY GOES TO U.S.O.

New York, Sept. 5 (AP) — The United Service Organization is $8 richer because of a cat with Hitler's puss.

Because the cat has a black patch under its nose that looks like Adolf's someone kicked it early this week and broke its jaw.

Newspaper readers mailed fan letters containing coins to help Tabby pay its veterinarian's bill.

Dr. Charles Fletcher, the veterinarian, set the cat's jaw for nothing and donated all the contributions to the U.S.O.

Only 38 Out of 500 Survive of Men Who Are Devitalizing Mines, Bombs

One of the Most Hazardous Jobs This War Has Created Is That of England's "Death and Glory Boys," Who Deactivate Hitler's Unexploded Bombs and Mines—Courageous Groub of Men

"How the British organization known as the "Rendering Mines Safe Section," known as the "RMS" operate in deactivating unexploded bombs and mines is described by Linton Wells in an article in the September "Esquire" Magazine. It is reproduced here in condensed form.

One night last Spring a telephone call was hurriedly put thru' to London. It was the air warden of an English coast town speaking: "Nazi raid. An unexploded land mine is lying on the floor of the X factory. If it goes off the whole building will be wrecked."

Within five minutes a car with bright red fenders was careening along the road, its headlights blazing in defiance of black-out regulations. Policemen, seeing the triangle white-and-black insignia on its side, gave it priority even over military traffic. For its driver, a young naval lieutenant, was rushing to one of the most hazardous jobs this war has created.

He was one of England's "Death and Glory Boys," an incredibly courageous group of youngsters who devitalize the mechanism which sets off the explosive. They belong to the RMS—the navy's Rendering Mines Safe Section. So great are the risks they face that of the first 500 RMS recruits only 38 are alive today.

The RMS was formed originally to cope with a Nazi innovation in sea warfare—the magnetic mine. Late in 1939 one of these "secret" weapons, dropped from an airplane over the Thames Estuary, landed on shore by accident. Lieutenant-Commander J. G. D. Ouvry was detailed to solve its mystery. Ouvry first removed everything metallic from his person—keys, money, cigarette case, even shoes which might have nails in them—thus eliminating the risk of setting up a magnetic field. Next, using a set of nonmagnetic tools, he carefully unbolted a rear section of the casing and removed the detonator, an explosive-filled cylinder about the size of a water tumbler. Then for six and a half hours he dismantled the mine, removing nuts, screws, bolts, a second detonator, magnetic relays and ingenious clockwork, to reveal 700 pounds of ultra-high explosive.

The knowledge thus acquired enabled scientists to provide two protective devices; the "degaussing girdle"—wire wound around ships to create an artificial magnetic field—and a still secret method of locating and exploding the mines at sea.

To provide craftsmen for the dangerous job of dealing with unexploded mine, Captain G. N. E. Currey, R.N., set up an RMS Section at Portsmouth, organizing naval officers and civilian volunteers who had electrical engineering knowledge. There were 150 of these experts on hand when the great Nazi blitz started in August 1940.

Now sea mines became a secondary problem. Duds and delayed-action bombs paralyzed activity in England's cities. Still worse was Hitler's newest weapon—the land mine. Hanging from 27-foot parachutes, these aluminum cylinders, nine feet by three, floated down silently from Nazi aircraft. Designed to explode 22 seconds after coming to rest, they could cause heavy destruction for a quarter of a mile around. Many failed to go off on schedule, perhaps because their intricate mechanisms were jolted by the shock of landing.

From headquarters in London, Currey's men sped by plane, car, or train to combat these menaces. Frequently they were away from London five days at a stretch, operating two and three times a day. After each job they telephoned headquarters for further orders, but as the raids intensified, more and more men failed to call in. At the end of the 37 days' hell, only 12 of the original 150 men had survived.

The land mine is wholly unpredictable. If one fails to explode in the usual 22 seconds, it is impossible to guess when its mechanism will suddently start. Lieut. Stanley E. Jenner, for example, once rushed off to deal with a mine which had crashed through two upper stories of a Birmingham flour warehouse and was lying on the sixth floor.

"I didn't like the situation at all," he told me. "Moving it was out of the question and working on it there meant that I had no chance of escape if it should show signs of going off.

"Well, I started to work and in about an hour the mechanism suddenly began ticking—the Nazi rattlesnake's usual 22-second warning. I fell downstairs in a hurry, expecting every next step would find me on my way to Kingdom Come in a cloud of flour. But nothing happened, so after a bit I went back upstairs and found the ticking had stopped. Thirty minutes later the mechanism went into action once more. Again I moved out in a hurry.

"This time, when nothing happened, I sat down and smoked a cigarette. I couldn't leave the mine there, of course—flour is too valuable in England. So back I went for a third try. When the ticking started again 15 minutes later, I stuck on the job as though nothing was wrong. It stopped again and in two hours the mine was as innocent as a baby.

As though the hazards of chance were not enough, the Germans have added many snares designed to decoy the unwarry to their death. Lieutenant Rouson, R.N.V.R., uncovered one of the most ingenious traps. He was dismantling a mine and, through a microphone, telling a stenographer a mile away what steps he was taking. This is done to preserve information which might prevent another deactivator from repeating a fatal move.

Rouson had already removed one detonator and was fishing for the second, which usually comes out easily. This time it stuck. Stretching out on his stomach, Rouson thrust inquisitive fingers inside the mine. Tentatively he began to pull the detonator with his right hand and push from behind with two fingers on his left. Suddenly the detonator came out and a clamp closed on his two fingers.

He realized instantly that two copper spring flanges had been so placed that when the detonator was removed they would clamp together, establish an electrical circuit, and explode the mine. Only a finger separated him from disintegration.

With his free hand Rouson began to search his pockets for matches. The stenographer jotted down his muttered curses as he learned that the matches were in the pocket on which he was lying. Slowly and carefully he twisted around, eased the matchbox out and inserted it between the jaws of the clamp, uncertain that this would do the job. It did. Rouson retired briefly for a breathing spell, then returned to emasculate the mine.

Before long the Germans were testing British wits and courage with another deadly device. They inserted powerful springs under the detonators so that when the "keep ring" was removed the detonators would pop out and set off the explosive mechanism. This took a heavy toll in casualties before the cause was determined.

One rule in handling mines is treat them gently. Yet this is not always possible, for they have a perverse habit of landing in dangerously awkward positions. Many RMS men have been blown to bits because they had to move a mine in order to get at its vitals. Another rule is that only one man may work on any mine. When the field expert finally considers a mine safe, he sends it to Portsmouth for further study at the Mining and Torpedo School.

Sometimes a deactivating job can be completed in 30 to 45 minutes. Other mines require four or five hours of nerve-racking effort. In one mine that fell on Coventry, Lieutenant Jenner told me, gadgets were not where he expected to find them; the color of the wires had been changed; things stuck; the whole internal setup seemed to have been altered—and there he was all alone with it in a vast area of gutted buildings. Three hours of patient study and careful removal passed. Suddenly the clock started ticking and Jenner raced toward an underground shelter which he had selected in advance. When the explosion came he was completely buried but they dug him out unharmed.

The RMS experts say that bombs are "not half as tricky as mines." They are rather uniform in make-up and have only one detonator—generally in the nose—which can be removed in 15 minutes.

Most of the men confess, however, that they don't like bombs—partly because two or three days' hard labor often is required to dig the big ones out of the ground. They still recall the exploit of Lt. J. M. S. Patton, of the Royal Canadian Engineers. Clearing debris after a raid, Patton ran across an unexploded "Stan", a 13-foot giant weighing two tons. In blessed ignorance he fastened a cable to the missile, tied it to a truck, dragged it to a field and manoeuvred it into an old shell crater. Patton has since been taught the facts of bombs.

The recent "lullablitz" over Britain has given the "Death and Glory Boys" an opportunity to augment their forces, which are now prepared for all eventualities. New recruits, undaunted by the appalling casualty rate of their predecessors, are eager to match wits with the Germans.

Lieutenant Jenner has been in the United States helping to train naval officers for deactivating duty.

"Why do you want to do this sort of thing?" I asked him recently.

"You can't just leave those mines lying around, you know,' he replied. "Somebody has to do the job—and, well, you might say it's a stimulating sort of job to do."

Dispatch Riders, Cooks and Clerks Manned Bofor Guns at Dieppe

(By WILLIAM STEWART)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, Sept. 4.—(CP)—In the camp of a Canadian light anti-aircraft regiment on the south coast, they relate that dispatch riders, cooks, clerks and mechanics manned Bofors guns "and knocked the hell out of Jerry Bombers on Dieppe Day".

A good-sized detachment of the regiment was away that day—off to Dieppe with the Canadian raiding force to do special job. And while these men were away the gun crews from which they were formed in part were left shorthanded—or so it might have been except for those motorbike riders, cooks, clerks and mechanics.

Some at the regiment say "Jerry got the windup" when the Dieppe raid occurred and thought it was an invasion. Anyway the Nazi Ju-88 bombers appeared over here supposedly looking for concentrations of anything that might have been the rest of the Allied invasion force.

A string of those JU-88s happened by the gunsite here. RSM. D. J. Richards of Victoria, BSM. Andy Anderson of Vancouver and BSM. Russ Rennie of Edmonton were among others who quickly got their makeshift gun crews together.

The barrage those riders, cooks, clerks and mechanics put up — there were batmen, too, says Anderson—brought from a visiting air raid precautions officials this tribute: "This is as fine as anything London used to put up'. Andy said he tossed up everything but his old pair of boots.

Indeed it must have been so, because when they finished they had downed three JU-88s, probably shot up a fourth and damaged a fifth. In addition they singed the tail of a ME-109.

Members of a sharp-shooting crew included Gnr. G. F. Stevenson, St. Catharines, Ont.

WAR CONVERSION —PEN MACHINERY TO SHELL PRIMERS

Peace Industry for Materials of Conflict in Many Plants — Airplane Plant Staff 20 Times Former Strength

By SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, Sept. 5 — (CP) — The Axis knew at this war's beginning it would have to fight Britain's vast resources of manpower, armament and munitions, but no one could have known that one of the allied combatants would be a pen and pencil factory.

That is the way Canada is fighting today. Machines which once made fountain pens and automatic pencils are turning out shell primers. Other machines formerly engaged in peaceful pursuits are making a contrivance for weighing .303 bullets.

Even human talents have been converted from peacetime to wartime usefulness. For instance, in his mass-production manufacturing methods, mechanics, not gunsmiths, are most important in the manufacture of guns. A study of industrial conversion in Toronto reflects the miracles of industry accomplished by Canadians in the rush to gear this country to war production.

Increase All Round

John W. Strong, assistant factory superintendent of a fountain pen company plant here told The Canadian Press how the former plant has grown since production started on shell primers in December of 1940.

"Our staff has increased from 180 to 400 since then, and 95 per cent of the machinery we used for making pens and pencils before the war takes part in the 75 operations required to make one shell primer," he said. "We have added some additional machinery, of course, but our old plant is doing most of the job."

The pen company's experience, on a vast scale, has been the experience of most Toronto industries which converted their plants from peacetime to wartime use.

A screw and gear plant needed little change from its peacetime plant — except expansion, of course —to turn out the transmissions and differentials used in army transports. Some of its peacetime machinery was usable for making shell fuse parts and bombing mechanism. Now tools were added as production grew.

100 to 2,000

An airplane plant expanded from a staff of 100 to more than 2,000 to make training planes for the British Commonwealth air training plan schools. The old machinery is used with huge additions.

At an engine construction plant the ordnance division is completely new, making some of the United Nations' most useful firearms, including the Bren gun. But the old commercial division was converted into marine boilers and turbines, triple expansion marine engines and huge blast furnaces for steel plants.

A motor concern was one of North Toronto's better-known garages when war broke out. Now it has a machine shop converted to war use. Many other companies have stripped peacetime plants to provide personnel for government-owned war industries. A small arms plant makes Sten guns and Lee-Enfield rifles, and another big machine shop is back in a business in which it became internationally known in the First Great War — making wartime machine tools.

Ottawa Officials Kept Busy Scotching 'Silly Season Stories'

By PAT USSHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Sept. 5 — (CP) — Ottawa is devoting a lot of time these days to scotching rumors — rumors about what the government is going to do, sometimes about what it is supposed to have done—and still they crop up, faster than official spokesmen can knock them down.

Perhaps it's because the late summer days of August and September always produce a crop of "silly season" stories. Whatever the cause, the rumor-factories seem to have been working overtime

There was the rumor that War Savings Certificates would not be redeemed after Sept. 1. Finance Minister Ilsley dealt with that in a broadcast speech, denouncing such unsubstantial reports as "irresponsible" and "sheer nonsense."

There was the belief following issue of the new regulations tightening control of manpower that people were "frozen" in the jobs they now held and couldn't change them. The National Selective Service Department scotched that one, explaining it just wasn't so. People apparently were confused because the regulations require anyone seeking to change from one job to another to have a permit.

There have been rumors in plenty about "what is next on the list to be rationed." The Wartime Prices and Trade Board is especially annoyed about this type of gossip. Naturally, if it is planning to ration any commodity, it doesn't want anyone to know ahead of time

Donald Gordon, board chairman, showed just how seriously he took the rumors by issuing a statement the other day branding erroneous rumors about rationing as "definitely subversive." He termed those who spread such rumors "fifth-rate citizens."

Misreading of government orders and regulations cause administrative officials plenty of head-aches. Asked to clarify a point in the new manpower regulations, one spokesman said wearily: "Why don't people read the published statements? Why do they insist upon coming to us with complaints before they have even figured out what the regulations are all about?"

Reunion

Prime Minister Peter Fraser of New Zealand still knows the way to hoist a longshoreman's load and Hon. Frank Langstone still knows how to shear a sheep and shoe a horse, but they meet again in Ottawa this week-end as men who have learned the ways of politics and the intricacies of international diplomacy.

As High Commissioner to Canada from New Zealand, Mr. Langstone has been in Canada for several months, the first appointee of his Dominion to this post.

The labor government which both men supported came into power in New Zealand in 1935 and while Mr. Langstone held various cabinet posts, Mr. Fraser became deputy premier.

Both had unusual gifts as organizers when the labor movement in New Zealand was gaining its strength. The blacksmith Langstone — he called himself an "odd jobs man" in those days — organized the farm workers and sheep shearers, while Mr. Fraser organized the wharf workers.

Odds and Ends

Madame P. F. Casgrain may be the Liberal candidate in the Dominion Charlevoix-Saguenay riding, which has been vacant since her husband left the secretary of state portfolio to become a Quebec superior court judge ... if elected she would be the third woman in the present House of Commons ... a leader in the fight for women's rights and other feminine causes in Quebec, Madame Casgrain has frequently been mentioned for a Senate appointment ... her father, Sir Rodolphe Forget, used to represent Charlevoix in the House as a Conservative.

Possibility of the government joining with provincial administrators and temperance organizations in a campaign to bring about less drinking of liquor is reported but it is thumbs down on any proposal for a wartime federal prohibition measure. Persuasion rather than coercion is Prime Minister Mackenzie King's answer to such suggestions.

Finale

Did you know that shortly you won't be able to buy any bread and cake boxes or butter knives made of metal — unless you can run to gold or silver? They are among the 400 articles in manufacture of which use of copper, steel or any metal other than gold or silver is banned by government order, after the end of September.

Here are some of the articles on the banned list: bathroom accessories, beach umbrellas, dress ornaments, fish scalers, humidors, household ice-cream freezers, garden watering cans, children's play pens — and trophies.

British in Egypt Stronger Than Ever Says Churchill

Allied Shipping Production is Maintained Above Line Of Sinkings

MALTA 'BRIGHT GEM'

LONDON, Sept. 8 — (CP) — Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today that the storming by Canadian and British troops of Hitler's Europe at Dieppe was the "indispensible preliminary" to bigger undertakings and that Britain's army in Egypt "now is stronger actually and relatively than it ever has been."

Britain, he reported in a war summary to the reconvened Parliament, "may be confident in our ability to maintain a successful defence of Egypt not for days or weeks but for several months ahead."

Canadians Praised

Speaking of Dieppe, Mr. Chuchill said "military credit for this most gallant affair goes to the Canadian troops who formed five-sixths of the assaulting force and to the Royal Navy, which carried them all there and carried most of them back."

Mention of the Canadians was greeted with cheers.

The Prime Minister added it was a mistake to speak or write of Dieppe as a Commando raid though some Commando troops distinguished themselves remarkably in it.

"The raid must be considered as a reconnaisance in force," Mr. Churchill continued. "It was a hard, savage clash such as are likely to become increasingly numerous as the war deepens. We had to get information necessary before launching operations on a much larger scale."

He said that apart from its informational and reconnaissance value, the Dieppe raid "brought on an extremely satisfactory air battle in the west, which the fighter command wish they could repeat every week."

Casualties About Equal

"It inflicted perhaps as much loss on the enemy in killed and wounded as we suffered ourselves," he continued. "I personally regard the Dieppe assault—to which I gave my sanction—as an indispensable preliminary to full-scale operations.

"I do not intend to give any information about the operation and I have only said as much as I have because the enemy can see by daily reconnaissance of our port many signs of movement that we are unable to conceal from his photography."

Declaring that "the tendencies of war have continued to move in our favor" since he last addressed the House, Mr. Churchill disclosed that in the period from June to the first week of September "we have dropped a double bomb load on Germany compared with the same period last year."

Of the Middle East and Russia, which he visited during parliament's recess and reported on which many members had awaited results—"although now secret" — expectantly, Mr. Churchill said the will "justify any trouble or expense incurred," when they become apparent.

No Reason to Believe Reports

He found no reason to believe the condition "of the desert army and troops in Egypt" is not entirely satisfactory."

Mr. Churchill said that before he left England he "had some reason to believe the condition of the desert army and the troops in Egypt was not entirely satisfactory."

In his first explanation of the switch in command in the Middle East from Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck to Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, Mr. Churchill said that Gen. Auchinleck had "gone on leave" at his own request but that he hoped his "services might be available later in the war."

"The spirit of the troops was admirable, Mr. Churchill said, but "it was clear to me that the army must have a new leader."

He gave cheering news of the war at sea with the report that, though

Consideration Given To Unified Command Churchill Tells House

London, Sept. 8 —(CP)—Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today that suggestions for appointment of a commander-in-chief with full operational control over British land, sea and air forces, for unified control in each area and for establishment of a supreme war council, are "of considerable interest."

The Prime Minister's statement was made during the question period before his expected review of war developments. It was his first visit to the House, reconvening after summer recess, since his trip to Moscow.

His arrival was greeted with cheers.

Mr. Churchill said the ideas for unified direction "frequently engage the attention of thoughtful persons."

He declined immediate answer to a question of Emmanuel Shinwell, Labor, whether United States land and air forces in Britain were "under American control exclusively or under British control."

Of the Duke of Kent, who was killed in the crash of a Sunderland flying boat while on an R.A.F. mission to Iceland, Mr. Churchill said "his overwhelming desire was to render useful service to King and Country."

MANY WORKERS TOIL ON LABOR DAY

Others Take Part in Parades and Labor Rallies

(By The Canadian Press)

Canada observed its fourth Labor Day holiday in this war on Monday with the majority of workmen toiling in defence industries, although many took part in parades and Labor rallies.

Wartime gasoline and rubber restrictions cut highway traffic but cities across the Dominion reported one of the biggest rushes in train and bus services since the beginning of war.

The largest parade in the Dominion was held at Montreal where 25,000 workers paraded through the city streets. Leading machinists from the Canadian Pacific Railway's Angus shops were two Valentine tanks made in the plant. There were military bands and a number of floats.

Ottawa was one of the few cities in the Dominion reporting heavy highway traffic. Provincial Police there said traffic in the district was the "heaviest this year."

There were two Labor parades Monday at Toronto and as well as rallies, where speakers pleaded for increased production to win the war.

Bottle Explodes Youth is Killed

Sudbury, Ont., Sept. 8—(CP) — William Goltz, 14, of nearby Capreol, was killed last night when a bottle containing carbide and water exploded. He died of face, neck and chest wounds caused by flying glass.

The lad warned his playmates, his younger brother Gerald and a neighbor, Harold Campbell, to stand out of the way when he added water to some carbide he had in a ketchup bottle and prepared to screw the top on.

Police said the boy apparently intended to bury the bottle in a hole he had dug in the yard, which would have created a sort of "land mine." The bottle exploded sooner than was expected.

ROMMEL IN HOLE SAYS WILLKIE ON ARRIVAL IN TURKEY

Claims He Lost 100 Of 290 First-Line Tanks in First Battle Of Drive

QUITE OPTIMISTIC

Ankara, Turkey, Sept. 7 (Delayed) (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie, personal representative of President Roosevelt, announced today on his arival by plane from Cairo that 100 of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's 290 first-line tanks were knocked out by Allied forces in the first battle of the recent Axis offensive in the Egyptian desert.

"Rommel is in a hole," Willkie said in a press conference.

"He attacked the Allied positions and had 100 of his 290 first-line tanks knocked out by Allied forces in the first battle. I saw the ruins of these tanks myself.

"I am convinced that Rommel has lost 40 per cent of his punch."

Willkie, who visited the desert battlefield while in Egypt, said the truth of a great Allied victory in the Egyptian desert had not yet been made entirely public.

"Rommel claims that his manoeuvre was only for reconnaissance," he said, "but a few more of these and he won't have any troops left to fight with."

He said the Axis setback in Egypt was the beginning of a changing of the tide in the battle for the Middle East and would be followed by a changing of the tide of battle on other fronts throughout the world in favor of the Allies.

Willkie will make a round of engagements here.

He is scheduled to depart Friday on a trip that is to take him to many capitals before his return to Washington.

Under provisions of this order wholesalers and retailers whose prices had not reflected a processors increased prices now are permitted to adjust their esling price in conformity with the legal ceiling established by the processor.

CHURCHILL FOLLOWS PRACTICE

London, Sept. 8 (C.P. Cable) — Prime Minister Churchill, replying to a member of the House of Commons who asked for "the total number of casualties among our troops at Dieppe," declared it is not the practice to give exact figures of casualties in men or material sustained in individual operations.

"I see no reason to depart from practice in the present instance," he added.

GLEN ROBERTSON THIEVES STEAL $300

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 8— (CP) — Police today sought thieves who entered the premises of a soft drinks company here last night and removed a safe containing between $200 and $300.

Police said the burglars entered the building through a rear door.

TRAINING PLANES COLLIDE

Montreal, Sept. 8 —(CP— Royal Canadian Air Force authorities here announced today that two R.C.A.F. trainees were killed Saturday at Windsor Mills, Que., when their training planes collided in mid-air.

The dead are LAC. James Robertson Davie, 15, and LAC. Thomas B. Fetherston, 21 both of Toronto. Next-of-kin have been notified.

Germans Driven Out Of Wedged Positions In Novorossisk Sector

Nazis Either Driven Back or Held Fast in Mozdok Region of the Central Caucasus and They Lost Additional Positions on Central and Northwestern Fronts

5,000-TON ENEMY TRANSPORT SUNK

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Sept. 8 —(AP)— Defenders of Stalingrad were reported firmly regrouped today against reinforced German shock troops seeking to enlarge a new and dangerous salient in the western defences by non-stop attacks and southwestern lines also held overnight on battlefields stained with blood.

A Red army detachment took the initiative in a night raid, destroyed the headquarters of a Rumanian battalion south of the city, killed 80 Rumanian officers and men and blew up seven Axis ammunition trucks, the mid-day communique said.

Germans wedged into Russian positions in the Novorossick area of the western Caucasus, but were either driven back or held fast in the Mozdok region of the central Caucasus and they lost additional positions to the Russians on the central and northwestern fronts, it was announced.

Five Attacks Repulsed

Five or more attacks upon Stalingrad from the west were repulsed yesterday, but one Red army force then was compelled to retreat to new positions and Nazi formations flowed into the gap, the midnight communique announced.

Southwestern lines were declared to have held firmly against several large-scale assaults. The information bureau said eight German tanks were blown from a formation of 30 which made a vain attack upon a Red army artillery battery.

The midnight bulletin made no mention of the combat northwest of Stalingrad, where Soviet forces were reported in two previous communiques to have bettered their situation through counter-attacks.

Enemy Transport Sunk

The Russians battling south of the Terek River in the Mozdok area to hold the central Caucasus were declared officially to have recaptured a Nazi-occupied settlement, smashed a German headquarters and forced an invasion column to retreat after destroying 23 of its tanks.

"In the Barents Sea," the communique also announced, "the Soviet air force sank an enemy transport of 5,000 tons."

British military and diplomatic sources in London expressed belief that more depends on the battle for Stalingrad than on any battle in Russia since the Germans were thrown back before Moscow early last December.

The fall of the Volga River industrial centre, producer of many of the Red army's tanks, would split Russia's forces for the first time in the war. Loss of the rich Baku oil fields would force the Russians to rely on the Ural-Volga wells, with an annual production estimated at 7,000,000 tons.

Strategically, the occupation of Stalingrad would secure the German right flank for another advance upon Moscow this autumn or next spring.

JAPANESE TROOPS 60 MILES FROM PORT MORESBY

Heading for Pass in Owen Stanley Range and Battle Widens

REACH MYOLA

(By MURLIN SPENCER)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Sept. 8 (AP) — Japanese jungle fighters, forcing back Allied advance patrols, have pushed up into the Owen Stanley range and are in contact with the Allied defence line in the mountains guarding the way across southeast New Guinea to Port Moresby, Allied headquarters announced today.

A communique said fighting was on an expanded scale from earlier patrol clashes.

(It was not immediately clear whether the Japanese had won their way through the principal pass in the mountains or whether the Allied defence lines still guarded the high gap.)

Near Defence Positions

The communique said: "In a series of frontal attacks, combined with envelopment, the enemy had made advances, forcing back our troops in the forward areas, and now is in contact with our defence positions."

The scene of the Japanese advance was described as the Kokoda-Myola area.

Kokoda, scene of recent patrol clashes, is 1,000 feet above sea level on the north side of the range some 60 miles from Port Moresby. Myola, mentioned for the first time in today's communique, is 6000 feet above sea level, some 8 miles south of Kokoda on the way to the Allied port.

The fighting, which had consisted largely of patrol skirmishes, widened in extent and bitterness and both sides sent planes skimming over the mountain peaks to join in the struggle.

The drive to Myola came after another Japanese force, landed at Milne Bay in an apparent effort to move up the southern coast of New Guinea to Port Moresby on the Allies' side of the mountain range.

DAY AND NIGHT ATTACKS ON NAZIS CONTINUED BY RAF

Raids Climaxed by Bombing of Utrecht Railways and Rotterdam

CANADIANS ACTIVE

London, Sept. 8—(CP)—British Canadian and American Air Forces continuing their day-and-night assaults on the Nazis, climaxed two days of intense activity yesterday with raids on the railroad yards at Utrecht and Schiedan shipyards at Rotterdam — the longest-recorded operational flight of the war.

American Flying Fortresses followed up R.A.F. daylight raids on Emden, Mremerhaven and other targets in western Germany with a smashing attack into Nazi-held territory. The American bombers returned intact by fighting off a swarm of German fighters and shooting down 12 of them.

It was the 10th attack in Europe by the giant bombers since they entered the European theatre Aug. 17.

"With more crews and aircraft like these, there can be no doubt about the mastery of the air over Europe," said Maj.-Gen. Carl Spaatz, Commander in Chief of United States air forces in the European theatre.

"The Portresses have amazed the experts again," the air correspondent of the Daily Mail wrote.

One Canadian fighter squadron was among the escort for the Portresses, two others made divisionary attacks The Spitfires swept to Utrecht, a 300-mile round trip; while escorting and carrying out diversionary raids. The Canadians were led by Sqdn. Ldrs. Norm Bretz of Toronto; John Fee of Calgary and Keith Hodson of London, Ont.

Duisburg Battered

Sunday night a "strong force" of R.A.F. bombers escorted by two R.C.A.F. squadrons, battered Duisburg at the Junction of the Rhine and Ruhr Rivers and started tremendous fires in the important traffic and metallurgical centre. Nine planes were lost in that and

CANADA GRANTS RUSSIA CREDIT TO OBTAIN WHEAT

Agreement Signed In London Permits Up To 9,000,000 Bushels For Russian Use

$10,000,000 VALUE

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 8 —(CP Cable) A credit agreement under which Russia may draw up to approximately 9,000,000 bushels of hard spring wheat or flour was signed at Canada House today by representatives of the Canadian and Soviet governments.

High Commissioner Vincent Massey and Soviet Ambassador Ivan Maisky signed the agreement, the first major wheat deal ever negotiated between the countries, at a brief formal ceremony culminating eight months of negotiations.

Terms of the agreement were not announced but a statement released to the press said the British Ministry of Food had undertaken to act as agents for the Dominion and that some deliveries had already been made. The wheat is of the same quality as that supplied the United Kingdom. The announcement said:

Wheat or Flour

"A credit has been arranged by the Canadian government with the U.S.S.R. whereby the U.S.S.R. may draw up to approximately 9,000,000 bushels of hard spring wheat or flour. The flour the U.S.S.R. will use under the credit will be of the same quality as the United Kingdom is importing at the present time.

"Shipments are already preceeding under this credit. The Ministry of Food of the United Kingdom is acting as agents for the Canadian government in these transactions and both Canada and the Soviet Union find this most helpful as it avoids congestion and shipping problems.

"Conclusion of the agreement is a source of great satisfaction to both parties and it is to be hoped it may be the forerunner to closer economic relations in better times to come."

Interim Loan

The credit, understood to approximate $10,000,000 is believed to be more or less an interim loan which may be increased later if Russia is unable to feed her people from her own supplies or from wheat delivered under lease-lend agreement with the United States.

It is possible, too, that wheat supplied by the United States may be supplemented by Canadian wheat through an arrangement similar to that under which Canada produces tanks and other munitions for lease-lend.

The Germans have overrun the best of Russia's wheat-growing provinces and it will take years for the Soviet Union to restore them to full production after the war. Canada may well serve as one of her granaries during that period.

Massey Acts for Canada

Negotiatios for the present deal began during the winter and have been conducted for Canada by Mr. Massey and officials of the Canadian Wheat Board.

The Ministry of Food, by agreeing to act as agents, has taken the delivery problem off the Canadian government's hands.

Executive Power Will Be Invoked To Stabilize Prices

Congress Told By Roosevelt They Must Act to Prevent Inflation by Oct. 1

'FIRESIDE' CHAT

By JACK BELL
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Washington, Sept. 8 (AP)—Widespread demands for statutory control of wages came from members today as an aroused Congress awaited introduction of a legislative blueprint for President Roosevelt's drastic new program to stabilize living costs and prevent inflation in the United States.

Mr. Roosevelt's statement he will invoke executive powers if Congress did not act by Oct. 1 to knock down farm-price ceilings and provide new taxes brought retorts the President is "pointing a pistol" at Congress, is waving a "club" and is setting out on "uncharted seas" of Presidential authority.

(President Roosevelt's program to arrest inflationary trends in the United States is of paramount interest to Canada because Canadian government spokesmen, including Donald Gordon, Chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board have said that Canada's price control machinery would collapse if American living costs got out of control.)

Out of the storm of criticism that arose over the language in which he conveyed his objectives to Congress in a message yesterday and to the people in a radio "fireside chat" last night, these trends were discernable among legislators:-

Influential Democrats and Republicans appeared agreed that over-all controls of the country's economic machinery are needed, with many contending that wages as well as farm prices should be stabilized by legislation.

Farm state members rallied to insist that if ceilings were to be fixed on the prices of agricultural commodities at parity levels, parity returns for all crops should be guaranteed to the farmers by the government.

No Specific Wage Controls

It seemed certain, in view of the President's outline of his message and radio talk, that specific wage controls would be proposed in the legislation.

Some farm state senators were critical of the attitude the President took on agricultural prices, but others said that if some guarantee was given for farm income, it might be possible to lower present ceilings. This might be done, it was suggested, by passage of legislation already approved by the Senate, to provide 100 per cent parity loans on major crops.

Decision on Second Front Made Last July At Conference Held At London

APPROVED BY ROOSEVELT

Washington, Sept. 8 —(AP)—The White House announced today, after President Roosevelt had made it plain that preparations were under way for opening a second front in Europe, that the "necessary decisions regarding military operations" were made at a London conference between British and American officials in July.

The conferences, held with Prime Minister Churchill and the British chiefs of staff lasted 10 days and covered the whole conduct of the war.

The United States Government was represented by Harry L. Hopkins as President Roosevelt's personal representative. Gen. George C. Marshal, army chief of staff, and Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of naval operations.

Stephen Early, presidential secretary, was in London at the same time conferring with Brendon Bracken, Britain's minister of public information.

Decisions Not Revealed

The decisions on military operations were, of course, not revealed, although Mr. Roosevelt in his radio "Fireside Chat" Monday night pointed out there are at least a dozen different places at which attacks could be launched.

There was a probability that the meetings, described by the White House as important, were related directly to the recent conferences in Moscow between Mr. Churchill, Premier Joseph Stalin and W. Averell Harriman, American lend-lease agent in England.

The announcement follows:—

"Announcement was made at the White House today (Tuesday, Sept. 8, 1942,) of a conference held in London in July, between British and American officials.

Hopkins Attended

"The representatives of the United States Government were Harry L. Hopkins, personal representative of the President. Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the army, and Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of naval operations. The American chiefs of staff and Mr. Hopkins held important meeting covering a period of 10 days with the British chiefs of staff and the British Prime Minister. At these conferences the whole conduct of the war was canvassed, and, with the approval of the President, the necessary decisions regarding military operations were made.

"Stephen Early, secretary to the President, was in London at the same time for conferences with Brendon Bracken, British minister of public information.

"On the return trip from London the American conferees visited Iceland and inspected the American bases there."

Wants Authority

President Roosevelt told of the offensive preparations in reporting to the country that he had called on Congress to give him quick and specific authority to stabilize the cost of living as a means of averting economic chaos on the home front.

"The power of Germany must be broken on the battlefield of Europe".

He added:—

"In due time you will know what these decisions are—and so will our enemies. I can say now, that all of these decisions are directed toward making the offen-

Russia Fortunate to Have Stalin 'Great Rugged War Chief at Her Head'

London, Sept. 8. (CP)— The main purpose of his mission to Moscow, Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today, was "to establish the same relations of easy confidence and perfect openness I have built up with Mr. Roosevelt".

"Of Stalin, he said: "It is very fortunate for Russia to have this great, rugged war chief at her head. He is a man of inexhaustible courage and willpower and he is even blunt in speech. . . . I believe I have made him feel that we are good and faithful comrades in this war.

'But that, after all, is a matter which deed, not words, will prove".

Mr. Churchill said he and Russian leaders shared the conviction that in the British Empire, the United States and the Soviet Union Hitler has forged an alliance "strong enough to beat him to the ground and steadfast enough to persevere not only until his wickedness has been punished but until some, at least, of the ruin he has wrought has been repaired".

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

PERSONNEL OF I.T.S. TO PARADE THURS.

The entire station personnel of No. 5 Initial Training School will route march through the city streets on Thursday morning, leaving the station at eight o'clock in the morning, it was announced by station officials this morning. Wing Commander A. J. Snetsinger, commanding officer of the station, will lead the parade, the route being the same as taken during the last station personnel parade two weeks ago. The route will be east on Highland Avenue and Bridge Streets, to Charles, north to Victoria Avenue, west to Front and then south to Bridge Street. Turning west over the bridge the parade will turn south on Coleman Street and then proceed back to the station by way of West Dundas Street.

NO. 5 I. T. S. HOLDS SPECIAL SERVICES

Sunday, observed throughout Canada as a Day of National Prayer and of Intercession, was fittingly observed at No. 5 Initial Training School when over 500 airmen attended special services held on the station sports field with Flt.-Lt. MacPherson, station chaplain, conducting the service. Many friends of the airmen were also present at the service at which the local Salvation Army Band attended to play the various hymns. The text of the sermon delivered by Flt.-Lt. MacPherson was : "The fire shall ever be buring on the altar and shall never go out."

AIR CADET SQUADRON APPEARS IN UNIFORM

Youthful members of the Belleville Rotary Air Cadet Squadron made their first public appearance in uniform yesterday when they appeared at the 8th Annual Field Day of the Trenton Station of the R. C. A. F.

Looking very smart in their blue dress with trim forage caps, the future fliers assisted the Station Sports Committee in the distribution of programs to the large crowd that thronged the field.

Later the lads were given the freedom of the station and enjoyed a tour of the buildings. They were under the supervision of Air Cadet Pilot Officer Tom Hetherington and Air Cadet' WO. 1 Sam Johnson.

SILO FILLING BEGINS

Visual evidence that the "good old summertime" is on the wane and that real autumn weather can be expected soon, the first silo-filling to be observed this season was seen in the Oak Hills district on Labor Day. The honor of the first silo-filling went to Mr. Alec Tanner.

This is considerably earlier than in most seasons for silo-filling as ordinarily this phase of farm operation does not commence until around the 20th, of September.

BOTTLE OF LIQUOR FOUND ON PASSENGER AFTER TAXICAB CHASE

City police were given a hectic chase late Monday night before apprehending a local taxicab on Ann Street driven by J. Whiting of this city. After being forced into the curb, following a chase along East Dundas and Ann Streets, Constables Ellis and Arnott reported to Acting Chief Harman they had found a bottle of liquor on the floor in the rear of the vehicle. Later at the police station M. R. Murphy, a Point Anne sailor and passenger in the cab, told Acting Sergeant Evans the liquor was his property. Murphy was admitted to bail of $100 while Whiting paid a careless driving fine of $5.00 and costs in city police court on Tuesday. The excess speed of the taxicab drew the attention of the patrolling officers, who gave chase along Dundas Street little realizing anything but a speeding charge might result.

TOURIST MISTAKES POLICE STATION FOR A HOTEL

"I'd like to have a room for the night," casually stated the traveller as he entered the local police station one night last week to seek quarters from the night desk sergeant.

"Certainly," replied Acting Sergeant William Evans, thinking his visitor was a transient merely wishing to occupy the cell room overnight, and perfectly willing to carry the joke through, "we'll give you the best we got."

Reaching for the key to the cell block the sergeant moved to open the door when his visitor mentioned that his wife and young son were in his car "just outside." That was a new one for the police officer but he was equal to the occasion and returned: "Well, I suppose we can put her in the woman's cell for the night."

Then the visitor twigged something was wrong and casting a scrutinizing eye over the room, stated. "Why this is the police station. I thought it was a hotel."

TRUCK DAMAGED WHEN HIT BY CAR

A truck driven by Robt. Blaind, Ashley Street, was struck by a motor car at the intersection of Dundas and Church Streets early Sunday morning. Local police investigated and were informed by eye witnesses that the driver of the motor car, James Kivell, of the Trenton R.C.A.F. base, was proceeding along Dundas Street in a rapid manner. Damage estimated at over $150.00 resulted to the front of the truck while lesser damage was seen on the motor car. Constables Wright and Arnott investigated and charges are pending, police added.

SLIGHT DAMAGE DONE BY SHORT CIRCUIT

Only one alarm, that for an automobile reported ablaze at 96 Cannifton Road, was answered by the Belleville Fire Department over the weekend. The fire caused by a short circuit in the electric wiring did not do much damage and was quickly extinguished by the brigade.

LIEUT. J. GOODMAN HOME FROM BRITAIN

Lieut. Jacob Goodman, of the First Canadian Anti-Tank Brigade of the C.A.S.F., arrived home from overseas over the weekend, and spent Sunday and Monday with his relatives after some eighteen months overseas service. Lt. Goodman arrived in New York last Friday along with a large number of Canadians, who have returned from overseas. As far as he knew Lt. Goodman stated there were no other Belleville boys on the boat which he returned upon, although several members of the armed services from the immediate district were included in the return draft.

MOTOR CAR ABANDONED IN DESERONTO

An automobile stolen in Belleville last Friday was recovered west of Deseronto abandoned late Sunday night by Traffic Officer J. H. Hatch. The vehicle, a 1929 Plymouth Sedan, bearing Ontario licence plates number 855M5, is the property of Wm. Crawford, 50 Forin Street. The vehicle was returned to Mr. Crawford who was surprised to find that a valuable amount of fishing equipment in the rear of the vehicle, was undisturbed.

HOUSEBREAKERS LOOT EAST HILL HOME

Housebreakers entered the home of W. T. McNeil, 150 William St., over the holiday weekend and after thoroughly ransacking the premises, made off with valuable goods. Included in the loot, police were told, was a mantel radio, a pen and pencil set, a black leather club bag, and other smaller articles yet to be identified. Entrance was gained during the absence of the residents, by means of cutting a hole in the screen door and subsequently reaching inside to unlock the secured door. Constables Wright and Arnot investigated and found the contents of drawers and cupboards strewn about the floors. The robbery was perpetrated during the absence of the house occupants late Saturday night.

Traffic at Peak In District

Traffic in the Belleville district reached the season's peak over the Labor Day holiday, according to District Highway Patrol Officers today. Despite the fact increased motor traffic resulted during the presentation of the eighth annual Trenton R.C.A.F. track and field meet when an estimated crowd of 10,000 attended, the general trend of motorized traffic in the Bay of Quinte area reached its highest peak of the season over the weekend. The fact that Labor Day is the last holiday period of the vacation season is attributed to the increased volume of motor car traffic. However, Provincial Police reported no serious motor accidents resulted despite the large volume of traffic.

CARS COLLIDE AT INTERSECTION

Damage to a large financial extent resulted to motor cars in collision at the intersection of Queen Street and Bleecker Avenue Monday morning, when an automobile driven by Russell Derry, Kingston, was in collision with another motor car driven by Lionel Reid 28 Johnson Street, Belleville. Reid alleged that Derry failed to observe the stop sign, while travelling west on Queen Street and forced Reid into the ditch causing $150.00 worth of damage to the front of his motor car. Reid was proceeding along Bleecker Avenue when, he told P.C. Wright the investigating constable Derry drove out of the stop street and was in collision with his vehicle. Minor damage resulted to the Kingston-owned vehicle. The matter is still under the surveillance of the authorities pending charges.

NORTH COUNTY CROPS DAMAGED BY FROST

According to city residents who spend the weekend holiday in the northern sections of the county, Jack Frost put a definite quietus on standing and field crops in that area on Saturday night and Sunday morning.

Crops in the main, suffered quite heavily from frost a few weeks ago, but the Sunday night invasion left corn a brownish yellow and more tender crops a blackened ruin.

North of Bass Lake, it was reported today, everything fell before the cold onslaught. In the southern section of the county temperatures dropped to 38.2, six points above freezing. Officials of the Belleville Purification Plant were of the opinion that high temperatures of the water in the bay thwarted any attempts of frost to do any crop damage.

HUSBAND READING BIBLE

New York, Sept. 8—(CP)—During New York's Labor Day air-raid Alert, caused by an unidentified plane, an 8th Avenue Hotel reported its desk received many calls for bibles. One woman, who insisted on one being sent up immediately, was told there was a bible in her room. "I know that," she countered, "but my husband is reading it."

THE WAR TODAY

(By DeWITT MacKENZIE)
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Wendell Willkie's mission to Ankara probably represents the most important phase of his tour as personal representative of President Roosevelt, for upon his shoulders rests the burden of strengthening Turkey's belief at a critical time in the Allies' ability to win the war.

That's a great mission, for the Turks mustn't be allowed to waver if the all-important Middle East is to be preserved. They want to believe in the Allies, and undoubtedly do, but it takes a mighty faith to withstand the demonstrations of power which Hitler is staging in the Caucasus not far north of the Turkish border.

Mr. Willkie's arrival at the capital was achieved in such manner that all might see—both friends and foes. As a matter of fact, he has been travelling like a tracer-bullet; you couldn't miss his trail. The result was that his advent at the Ankara airport was in the nature of a major triumph, for the diplomatic corps—minus the Axis representatives—turned out to meet him, and several hundred Turks were among those who greeted him.

This must have put Berlin's nose out of joint, for only yesterday the Nazis announced in a broadcast that Ankara was about to give the American envoy the cold shoulder. It doesn't look like a case of refrigeration, especially since Turkish Foreign Minister Menenjiglu is entertaining Willkie at dinner.

The presidental representative has arrived at what looks like the psychological moment—close to the peak of the crisis in the battle of the Middle East. He has been able, for one thing, to give the Turks first-hand information about the setback suffered by Nazi Marshal Rommel in Egypt. And that's a matter of vast importance to them, since Turkey lies within the field of the pincers which Hitler is trying to clamp on the Middle East, through the Caucasus and by invasion of Egypt.

In any event news of Rommel's difficulty would be calculated to encourage the Turkish belief the Hitlerites aren't supermen.

Meantime Moscow reports the defenders of Stalingrad are holding against the assaults of Nazi troops. The Reds also are doing well on the central Caucasus line, though the Nazis wedged into the Bolshevist positions in the zone of the naval port of Novorossiak.

In short, the position today on the Russian front is such as to emphasize President Roosevelt's declaration in his broadcast last night that Russia will hold out despite any setbacks, and with the help of her Allies will ultimately "drive every Nazi from her soil."

Death Ends Colorful Career Of John Moore Rupert, Hillier

Death wrote finis to another colorful career when John Moore Rupert, well-known and highly respected resident of Hillier died recently at his home in the Prince Edward County community. He was 77 years of age.

A former "Mountie" and volunteer militiaman, he saw service in Canada's Northwest and was present at the hanging of Louis Riel. He lived for several years in the west before settling down in Hillier Township.

Mr. Rupert was the eldest son of the late Charles Willard Rupert and Elizabeth Moore, and was born on February 25th., 1865, in Madoc Township near Eldorado.

The early part of his life was spent on the old homestead, receiving his education at Blakeley's school. On October 26, 1885, at the age of twenty, he enlisted with the volunteers under Captain Moodie and entrained the same afternoon for Regina. He was put immediately on guard duty outide the guard room where Louis Riel was a prisoner and was present at his execution on November 16, of the same year. One of his prized possessions was a small strand of the rope with which Riel was hanged. His old uniforms are still in the possession of the family as well as a very fine collection of pictures and photographs which he had kept.

For five years he was a member of "A" Troop in the North West Mounted Police doing patrol duty, tracking down whisky smugglers and Indian horse and cattle thieves who had crossed the border from Montanna.

In July 1888 he was promoted to corporal by Commissioner Herchemer and was commonly known among his friends as Corporal 'Jack.' He played lacross, was the pitcher on their baseball team and took part in the musical ride.

His heart was always in the West and he never tired of telling his experiences and adventures while in the police force. In October 1890 he took his discharge and returned to the East. He returned to the West fifty years later and again in 1941. He found the West a very different place from that which he had left. Villages are now cities, beaten trails are highways and waving fields of grain stretching endlessly to the horizon, replace the wild, sparsely populated plains he knew so well. He was able to locate a number of his old companions, among whom were, Col. G. E. Sanders, C.M.G., now past ninety, R.T.D. Sergeant Bottley and J. R. Royce all of Calgary. Inspector Primrose who later became lieutenant-governor of Alberta was a special friend of his.

In October 1893 he was married to Wilhelmina Elizabeth Empey of Eldorado and resided on a farm near there. In March 1908 they moved to Hillier where they have farmed for thirty-four years. Mr. Rupert had put in his crop himself this spring.

He took quite an interest in community life. He was an active member of the L.O.L. for fifty-nine years and was a Past County Master. He was a staunch Conservative and was at one time president of the Hillier Conservative Association. Being very fond of children he took a keen interest in matters pertaining to education. For twelve years he acted as school trustee and for a number of years was school attendance officer. He drew up the plans for the Hillier Public School. For many years he dealt in lumber and coal and for the past five years acted as caretaker and C.P.R. express agent at Hillier station.

Mr. Rupert was a man of very high principles and had a host of friends among old and young alike.

The funeral was held from his late residence, Thursday, August 27th., the service being conducted by the Rev. E. N. Grant, Wellington. As the casket draped with the Union Jack was borne to the hearse by his five sons and nephew, Major Thomas Rupert, of Madoc, a group of the Reserve Force, standing inside the gate, gave a last salute. In this group were Sergeant-Major Burkett of Madoc, Major William Davern, Captain Garnet Taylor, Lieutenant Wilbur King, Sergeant-Major Don MacDonald; Rev. Captain Grant.

The body was taken to Eldorado Cemetery for interment. A guard of honor under the command of Sergeant-Major Burkett, followed the body to the grace. After the committal a two minutes' silence was observed and the bugler sounded 'Last Post,' and 'Reveille.' A number of his old Madoc friends attended the burial service.

Leaving to mourn his loss are his wife, five sons, Robert of Golden Valley, Arthur of Bancroft, William of Toronto, Frank of Capreol, Ford of Kapuskasing, two daughters, Margaret and Mary of Ottawa. There are also ten grandchildren and one sister, Mrs. Robert Henderson, of Saskatchewan. Two brothers and two sisters predeceased him some time ago.

Dundas St. Residents Alarmed at Actions

Residents on West Dundas St. became alarmed on Labor Day morning when they saw occupants of a motor car apparently taking pictures of the surroundings of a local war industry. Provincial Police were immediately notified, but despite the fact that officers hastened directly to the alleged scene, no signs of such a vehicle or persons were in evidence. The West Dundas Street informants later provided the officers with what they believed were the licence plate numbers of the vehicle, through which the police are conducting further investigations.

Once previously, in the summer of 1940, an American tourist was seen taking moving picture shots of the Trenton R.C.A.F. base. Within 15 minutes of the time this incident was reported, Provincial and Federal police here had the American and his movie camera in custody. The film was confiscated after the tourist had satisfied the police he was merely taking shots of the base to show his friends in Chicago. The film was retained by the R.C.M.P. and sent to Ottawa.

Track And Field Meet at No. 5 ITS. Open to Public

The monthly flight track and field meet at the No. 5 Initial Training School R.C.A.F. base will be held on Wednesday afternoon by permission of Wing Commander A. J. Snetsinger with the public being invited to attend.

The winners of the various events will later compete in the Ontario Regional R.C.A.F. track and field meet at Toronto on Sept. 19th. Winners from the Trenton eighth annual R.C.A.F. field day held Labor Day will also compete in the Regional meet.

On Wednesday evening a station dance and hospitality evening will be held at No. 5 I.T.S. which is open to all ranks and their friends

CONSERVATIVE LAYMEN FAVOR TARIFF CHANGES

No Specific Declaration Made on Canadian Post-War Tariff Rates

ENDORSE CHARTER

(By FRANK FLAHERTY)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Port Hope, Ont., Sept. 8. (CP) — Adjustment of Canadian tariff policies in accordance with the aims of the Atlantic Charter and a hoped-for regime of international cooperation is favored as a Conservative policy by the group of 150 unofficial Conservative who met in Trinity College here during the weekend.

Members of Canada's traditional high tariff party they made no specific declaration on Canadian postwar tariff rates.

"The peace for which we fight must produce a world in which the benefits of specialized production are not destroyed by barriers to trade," said the formal report of the group which was adopted unanimously, not as a platform but as a "statement of aims and beliefs."

"We believe that the guiding principle of Canadian tariff policy should be the extent to which tariffs contribute to the assurance of gainful occupation and maintaining real standards of living.

Endorse Atlantic Charter

"We endorse the aims expressed in the Atlantic Charter and believe that Canada, without reservation, should join in the setting up of effective international machinery to give them practical application."

The report is broader than the usual official party policy adopted for presentation to voters during an election. It attempts to state the Conservative view of the philosophy of democracy and predicates the various economic, social and political measures suggested on a spiritual concept of government.

It says democracy's values are spiritual, the individual is a religious being having a belief in God as the centre of order and authority and deriving his individual worth and dignity from a Divine endowment which makes all equal before God and entitled to equality of opportunity under the law.

Break New Ground

On labor relations, the conference broke its new ground for a collective Conservative viewpoint on Labor Day. That ground was the endorsation of collective bargaining to be enforced by penalties on employers who refused to bargain with associations of their employees.

On war, the prosecution of which was declared to be the sole immediate concern of Canada, the gathering declared for immediate conscription for service anywhere in the world.

On agricultural problems it urged co-operation, land conservation and creation of a central farm bank to deal with the problem of credits for farmers.

On rehabilitation it called for governmental measures to make sure that every man able and willing to work has employment at rates of pay which will enable him to maintain a family.

Call for Expanded Programs

It stated the provision of opportunities for work to be a fundamental objective of the state and called for expanded programs of public works during times of trade depression.

"We believe that when Canadians develop a united will to victory in this war, that united will can be carried forward in the tasks of reconstruction and peace until Canadian men and women who now serve in the various branches of the armed and war services are fully re-established in gainful occupation," said the report.

The chairman of the "round table on Canadian policy," as the conference was called, was H. H. Milner of Edmonton, and the secretary was R. K. Finlayson of Winnipeg. Both are former close associates of Viscount Bennett when the latter was Prime Minister of Canada.

Mr. Finlayson was principal secretary to Viscount Bennett at Ottawa and Mr. Milner a legal associate in Albert.

Red Cross Tonsil Clinics Fill Great Need at Outposts

Toronto, Sept. 8 — Despite the tremendous war time demands made upon it, the Canadian Red Cross bravely carries on with its normal peace time services. In those far flung isolated sections of the province, the outpost hospitals operated by the Ontario Division of the Red Cross daily administer medical help and care to stricken adults and children.

Recently, no less than 29 operations were performed at the tonsil clinic held at the Whitney Red Cross outpost. Several of these were of a very serious nature, and without the skilled medical nursing care supplied by the Red Cross, the patients would have been in a critical condition.

The doctors in each case turned their fees over "for repairs and maintenance of, the Whitney Hospital."

Another tonsil clinic was recently held at the Red Cross outpost hospital at Wilberforce. Eight operations were performed with the simple equipment available.

One of the patients was a bright little lad with a very serious eye condition. A doctor in attendance was of the opinion this eye should be removed immediately in order to save the other. "If cases of this nature are to be neglected when medical assistance can be secured," declared a Department of Public Welfare official, "there is something wrong in our country." The eye was later removed and the young lad is recovering satisfactorily.

KEITH DUNNING, 17, LATTA, ARRESTED

Charged With Theft by Conversion and Remanded Until Thursday

Keith Dunning, 17-year-old Plainfield lad, was arrested by city police here Monday night on a warrant issued by Provincial Police. Dunning was arraigned before Miss Mary Butler, local Justice of the Peace, today and remanded in custody until Thursday on a charge of theft by conversion.

Provincial Police allege that the accused youth found a wallet, the property of Horace Law, 82 College St., near Latta last Sunday after Law had lost his purse, while fishing. Mr. Law claimed the wallet contained $106.00 in cash, a war certificate, a cheque and all of his various licences and registration cards.

Dunning was apprehended in a local billiard parlor and found in possession of over $80.00, stated Provincial Constable Jas. McKenzie, who preferred the charge.

"DOSING" WON'T CURE CONSTIPATION

Harsh Cathartics Give Only Temporary Relief

LONDON, Canada: One of the most common causes of constipation is lack of the right kind of "bulk" in the diet. If this is your case, KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN supplies the "bulk" you must have to become regular as clockwork.

Eat ALL-BRAN every morning as a cereal with milk, cream or fruit, or baked in delicious muffins, drink plenty of water, and see if your "trouble" doesn't disappear! In two convenient sizes at your nearest grocer's. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

Y.M.C.A. War Services

Belleville Red Triangle Club

Owing to our attendance at the War Services Supervisors' Conference at Geneva Park, Lake Couchiching, we were unable to publicly thank the ladies of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church for the splendid manner in which they looked after some eighteen Australian Airmen on two days' leave. The boys report having a most enjoyable time and were most appreciative of this opportunity of enjoying a few hours of home life. The importance of this sort of morale building was greatly stressed by the leaders of our war effort at the above-mentioned conference, and we are most anxious to hear from all local citizens who are able to contribute in this manner.

In view of the additional activities at Trenton and 5 I.T.S. Stations this week, the regular Hospitality Club dance at the Quinte Golf Club has been cancelled.

Wednesday evening's dance in the Y. is progressing numerically, and servicemen from Trenton, Mountain View and 5 I.T.S. report this one of their favorite parties.

Magazines, books and games are constantly being received here for distribution to the adjoining stations and we are always glad to call at homes to bring them to the Y.

The good lady and gentleman who have been taking groups of airmen out for boat rides and picnics deserve special mention, not only for the unique entertainment afforded but also because of the genuine 'make yourself at home' atmosphere developed.

When arranging corn-roasts, parties, etc., we will be glad to send along any number of servicemen citizens feel able to entertain.

Contact Club - Y.M.C.A. Activity

Five new members were welcomed to the Club on Thursday. The girls had a busy time swimming, sewing and knitting. A story hour was arranged for the children. A mixed party was planned for September 15th. when the members will entertain their husbands. All Airmen's wives are welcome to these weekly gatherings on Thursday afternoons. Phone 2738 or call in at the Rooms Registry Office at the Y.M.C.A. any time for further information.

No. 5 I.T.S.

"DID I SAY THAT," a show directed and mc'd. by that very capable showman, Ken Soble, was put on for the entertainment of the Airmen of the R.C.A.F., at No. 5 I.T.S. in their auditorium last Thursday night. Quoting the eminent Mr. Soble, the Airmen who took part showed a high I.Q. rating and were awarded a considerable sum of money in prizes. This program, a regular feature of the CBC network, was recorded and will be broadcast within the next few weeks.

Before Ken Soble's arrival, an enthusiastic audience responded to the fine singing of a tall, dark and handsome lad, by name, John McCullough. Two of his selections were compositions of his talented accompanist, A. L. (Jock) Spence, of Windsor. These tunes, "Something I Can Dream About" and "Our Hearts Will Meet Again", were exceptionally good and well deserving of publication, if the applause which followed their rendition is any indication.

After the solos, a general singsong, ably led by Flt. Lt. Standing and accompanied by the above mentioned Spence, was held, and a number of Air Force songs were sung, as well as a couple of currently popular novelty tunes.

The audience was distinguished by having with them Air Commodore McGill and Group Captain Dunlap, who appeared in common with the rest of the boys to have enjoyed the entire show, and appreciation was expressed to Reg. Hackett of the Y.M.C.A. for arranging the highly successful evening.

An exciting movie, a corn roast and delightful music formed the basis of Wednesday night's entertainment, all this being aided and abetted by a campfire, a moon, and a soft breeze.

All the boys and girls present had a mighty fine time. According to all reports, the next Corn Roast will be even better attended.

A big event at No. 5 I.T.S., Wednesday, September 9th., will be the annual Field Day, held on the Station grounds. Airmen of the Station personnel will be allowed to escort friends to the afternoon activities. The day will be completed by the first Station dance of this season. We hope to welcome the girls of the St. Michael's and Belleville Hospitality Clubs at this dance. All in all it will be a big day.

THE WAR RISK INSURANCE ACT

Government plan provides for purchasable insurance at low rates

The Government of Canada, by Act of Parliament, has set up a Plan of War Risk Insurance against damage to property caused by enemy action—by countermeasures taken against the enemy—by explosions of war munitions handled by third parties.

In terms of general information, it may be stated that the Plan provides a certain limited FREE COMPENSATION for damage to owner-occupied homes and to chattels, but the main feature of the Plan is that owners of most types of property can protect their property by PURCHASE of GOVERNMENT WAR RISK INSURANCE at very moderate rates.

This type of War Risk Insurance is not being sold today by private insurance companies, because of the risk involved. Consequently, the Government has established a national scheme to make it possible for each citizen in Canada to purchase the sense of security that comes from knowing that if his property does suffer war damage (and the war has come much closer to Canada in the last twelve months) he can call on the resources of Canada to help him make good his property loss.

HOW TO OBTAIN GOVERNMENT WAR RISK INSURANCE

The Fire Insurance Agents and Companies of Canada have volunteered to the Government the services of their extensive facilities and personnel, on a non-profit basis, thus avoiding the setting up of the large organization that otherwise would be needed to handle details of this nation-wide Government War Risk Insurance scheme.

YOUR FIRE INSURANCE AGENT OR COMPANY WILL GLADLY SUPPLY COMPLETE DETAILS OF THIS GOVERNMENT INSURANCE PLAN.

TO HOME OWNERS HOUSEHOLDERS AND OTHERS

Limited free compensation is provided under the Act for War Damage by enemy action to owner-occupied homes up to $3,000. Damage to Householder's Chattels, up to $800—for those of his wife, up to $400—for each child under 16, up to $100—for others, not householders, up to $200:

No policies are needed in this classification but insurance additional to the above amounts may be purchased.

Ask any Fire Insurance Agent or Company for complete details.

THIS ANNOUNCEMENT IS PUBLISHED so that the public may have notice of the Government War Risk Insurance scheme. The information given above is not intended to be a complete resumé of the scheme. Full information regarding conditions, exclusions, etc., is available elsewhere.

Hope of Youth

The hope of the youth of the world is in the United Nations, the democracies, the lovers of freedom and justice. President Roosevelt made an incisive remark the other day which exposed all the trappings and appendages of Nazism and the Fascism of Italy and Japan, when he said that these could offer nothing but death while the cause of the United Nations is the cause of youth itself.

One has but to recall the news of a number of years ago of the manner in which the Axis leaders fed the childhood and youth of the three countries, Germany, Italy and Japan. From the time boys knew they were individuals with individual wants, Hitler, Mussolini and the Japanese militarists fed them with ideas which mean exactly what Mr. Roosevelt said "death." The President spoke of Hitler's "mental, forced feeding of a diet of false facts, distortions and prohibitions"—all backed up by the guns of the Gestapo. Likewise Il Duce led the Italian lads astray.

But what a different picture Mr. Roosevelt was able to paint of the childhood of the democracies, enjoying the inalienable rights to freedom of speech, freedom of religion, freedom from want and freedom from fear.

It is therefore no wonder that the youth of the United Nations are all on fire to serve the cause of democracy, that the young men cross the seas to do battle with the ogres and political monstrosities of the Axis lands for all the democratic lands have and are is due to the noble heritage of freedom which the young and their elders have enjoyed in the free world.

Hitler and Mussolini if brought before the court of humanity can be charged with innumerable crimes and not least among these will be the misleading of the youth of the nations they professed to govern. They led them to be slain for false doctrines and for tyrannies over body and mind. The Axis faces the world of the future with an awful handicap of false ideals. To mainly the youth of the United Nations falls the task of uprooting those false doctrines of state and of individual life from the thoughts of the young and older people in Germany, Italy and Japan.

Italy Battered

A little more than two years of war should be a lesson to Italy. Mussolini himself has been so battered that he plays little or no part. If ever a dictatorship was proven to be the height of folly it has proven so in the case of Mussolini and Italy. It has sent to the bottom of the sea or damaged more than two thirds of Italy's merchant fleet and about half of her once-proud possessions of the Royal Italian Navy is beneath the waters of the Mediterranean. Italy has been largely cut off and there has been little chance of replacement. Her commerce is gone. Her empire of Africa is gone and the little in the north of what is Italian territory is defended in the main by Germans, with Rommel at their head. Italy has no voice, Mussolini has probably none in Axis affairs but to make Italians hewers of wood and drawers of water to do the sordid will of Hitler and Gestapo. Italians do serve in parts of Europe, but Hitler directs them. They have earned the deep hatred of Yugoslavia where they are used as garrison and prove ineffective in dealing with the patrioats of that country.

Truly the Mediterranean is the graveyard of the mad hopes of Mussolini's Fascism.

The man that would be a renewal or revival of Julius Caesar is a ridiculous figure, a tatterdemalion of a leader, a ragamuffin.

Extension of Main Street

When Mr. Roosevelt spoke the other day to youth in the armies of the United States saying that the road which had led them to the Solomons, to the Red Sea or the coast of France was but an extension of "Main Street," how truly spoken!

It means too that the way Canadians have gone to serve their country whether on land, sea or in their air, is but an extension of Front Street, Yonge Street or Princess Street and wherever they fight, they are "fighting in defence of your own homes, your own free schools, your own churches, your own ideals."

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

A MOTHER GOES TO SCHOOL

He was a little chubby-faced fellow. Bravely he strode along Bridge Street this morning, his hand tightly clutching that of his mother. Under his arm was a book. His eyes shone with excitement. He looked inquiringly at dozens of other children, more or less veterans of the classrooms, who were going back to school.

Summer holidays were over. Ahead lay the fall and winter terms. Days and nights of study loomed up dissolving visions of happy, lazy days spent on beaches, playgrounds and at home.

But these things did not trouble the little fellow. Ahead of him lay a glorious unknown. An intangible something that clutched at his little heartstrings. "How murh farther is it, Mummy?" he said eagerly.

"Not very far, Sonny," replied his mother.

The bright sunlit street slowly faded. She saw a young man, his face alight with a smile. On his head was a steel helmet. He was khaki-garbed. He bent over her, as he walked slowly by her side.

"I won't be away long, dear," he was saying. "Look after Junior. Look after the other children. It is this for which we are fighting. Their future, and yours and mine. We must make it so that in the years to come other mothers can walk along sunny streets, the happy, clamoring voices of little children ringing in their ears. We must make this world the classroom of liberty. We must make it so that Junior will never know the heartaches, the heartbreaks, the pain of parting, the sorrows and chaos of war. This is our war, yours and mine. We must make it our war. And it is up to the people like you and me to win the war. Cheer up. Keep smiling. The silver lining may not be so far away—but there will be pain and suffering, sacrifice and the agony of suspense, before peace once more illumes the dark horizon of the war-torn world. You mothers must do your part. Keep our children happy. Tell them about their daddies. Tell them about their country and the ir God. They must not know a Poland, a Czecho-Slovakia, a Belgium, or a France. And, God willing, they shall not know."

The soldier faded away. The sunlit street gleamed ahead. The chubbyfaced boy was pulling at her hand. "Mummy, he cried, "why don't you speak to me. I think we are nearly at the school."

The woman and the boy turned slowly northward along Ann Street. The red brick of the school lay on their left. Children slamored about its doors .School teachers moved slowly among them. In little groups other mothers and shy boys and girls stood, awaiting the great moment that would send Young Canada away on one of the most important phases of its life.

A bell rang. Then suddenly it was all over. The young mother turned slowly toward the street. A tear glistened on her cheek. "Please God, may it ever be so," was her silent prayer. Then she straightened. Her head was thrown back. A look of determination came over her face. Her stride quickened. "For you, Jim and Junior," she whispered. I will make this war my war. I will do my utmost to make my family happy; my husband cheerful, and my country victorious. It cannot, it must not be any other way."

FOREVER, ENGLAND

Rubble from bombed homes and buildings in bristol, England, was used as fill, in constructing the East River Drive, New York.

A bronze plaque, finely phrased, has been erected to mark the area and the words are very well worth reading:

BRISTOL BASIN

Beneath this East River drive of the City of New York lie stones, bricks and rubble from the bombed city of Bristol in England . . . Brought here in ballast from overseas, these fragments that once were homes shall testify while men love freedom to the resolutions and fortitude of the people of Britain . . . They saw their homes struck down without warning . . . It was not their homes but their valor that kept them free.

* * *

And broad-based under all
Is planted England's oaken-hearted mood,
As rich in fortitude
As e'er went worldward from the island-wall.

Hitler Finding Last Fifteen Miles Hardest

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

According to official Nazi admissions, Hitler's troops are finding the last fifteen miles or so the hardest in the attempt to take Stalingrad. Swarming Nazi reserves are still being held at arm's length from the city to the north, west and south a week after Berlin declared that its capture was at hand.

However, the die-hard Russian resistance offers little assurance that it can do more than delay the German juggernaut and cut ever deeper into Nazi reserves. It is making the most of the fact that Stalingrad cannot be surrounded its flanks being protected by the Volga.

The battle has been reduced to a costly frontal assault for the foe. The Russians are making him pay heavily for every inch gained. They are standing on a siege perimeter that reaches apparently from the Volga north of the city in the vicinity of the Village of Dubovka to Krasnoarmeisk, junction point of the Volga and the Don-Volga Canal, about the same distance down river. A half-circle on a fifteen-mile radius from the centre of the city apparently would cover the Stalingrad front.

Threat to Nazi Flank.

There is one chief danger point for the Nazis. Within the Don bend northwest of the city in the Kletskaya-Kremensk sector, the Russians have been striking southward. The north face of the Don bend must be held by the Germans to protect the bulge toward Stalingrad south of it. A deep Russian advance southward in the bend could cut off the northern Axis pincers entirely and threaten even the southern advance along the Don-Volga Canal.

In any event, the time and effort the Nazis have expended in the attempt to take Stalingrad virtually forbids German progress eastward beyond the Don-Volga line this year even if the city falls soon. Nor does it seem possible that a new major German offensive to the north, or even to the south in the Caucasus, could be organized in time to beat another Russian winter. The first snows are due in the heights of the Caucasus range within less than three weeks.

Therefore, Hitler faces the prospect that his lines in Russia will be even more extended and difficult to supply than those he fell back from last winter. His hopes of checkmating Russia definitely before winter, then swinging his legions westward to face an impending Anglo-American second-front operation next year, have already been shattered by the Russian stand.

Second Front in Egypt.

Nor is it certain that he may not face a critical second-front attack this year—not from the west, but in Egypt. Collapse of the Axis effort to turn the British left flank is reported from Cairo. Marshal Rommel has back-tracked from eight-mile dent he made across British mine fields, with every evidence that he suffered heavy losses under aerial attack without ever coming to grips with the reorganized and strengthened British 8th Army.

It is too soon to believe Rommel has given up hope of breaking through somewhere to Alexandria or Cairo. It is not too soon to believe that with his withdrawal westward, the British High Command is reckoning the chances of wrestling the initiative from him completely and staging an attack in its turn aimed at trapping Rommel and destroying his threat to Alexandria and the Suez Canal once for all.

VOTE OF CENSURE PASSED AGAINST WM. J. MORRISON

Belleville O.S.D. Head Censured for Leaving Hall During Discussion of Point Raised by Former Pupils of School

MR. STEWART HONORED

London, Ont., Sept. 8 (CP) — David Pelkoff, of Toronto, was re-elected president by acclamation of the Ontario Association of the Deaf at the closing business session of that body here Monday. Robert Robertson, of London, this year's chairman of convention arrangements, was elected vice-president; R. E. McBrien of Peterboro, was re-elected secretary, and H. J. Lloyd of Brantford, treasurer, both by acclamation.

Directors elected were: Victor Shanks, Toronto, and Joseph Rosnick, Toronto, ex-officio; James Green, Toronto.

Vice-President Robertson was chosen on the third vote over Jas. Green, William McGovern, Toronto, and Romeo Dallaire, Windsor.

The convention took into consideration the added heavy duties of secretary, with proposed work on the association's magazine, and divided the post, with the executive to name a corresponding secretary, at which time Mr. McBrien will act as recording secretary only.

The election of officers came after the convention had passed unanimously a resolution of censure to William J. Morrison, superintendent of the Ontario School for the Deaf at Belleville, which censure it was said is being sent the Department of Education as the result of Mr. Morrison's leaving the convention hall Saturday.

The Resolution

The resolution read:

"Considering the fact that Superintendent W. J. Morrison appeared at the 25th. Biennial Convention of the Ontario Association of the Deaf as representative of the Department of Education to inquire into causes for widespread dissatisfaction of former pupils of Belleville School for the Deaf over the present system of education, his conduct in throwing the convention session into uproar over his flat refusal to sit through the hearing and because of his unethical resort to insulting personal remarks on leaders of the organization, we assembled in convention go on record as desiring such matters to be brought to the attention of the Department of Education and to the Premier.

"His conduct is anything but a good reflection upon a public servant and the O.A.D. publicly protests the behaviour of a man supposedly dignified and businesslike in his approach to a grievance raised at the convention."

Though the resolution carried unanimously, the convention decided after discussion, to rename Mr. Morrison to the position of Honorary Patron, and the decision was made unanimous.

George F. Stewart, of Belleville, teacher emeritus, and guest of the convention was re-elected by acclamation as honorary president.

Mr. Stewart was called to the platform, and presented him with a purse of money and a scroll telling him the association's affection toward him.

Timmins Pilot Lives After Head-On Crash Into Messerschmitt 109

New York, Sept. 8 — (CP) — The New York Times in a dispatch from Cairo yesterday relates the experience of Sgt. W. Belec of Timmins, Ont., a French-Canadian fighter pilot who crashed head-on with a German plane and lived to tell the story. Belec's patrol was attacked by three Messerschmitt 109s and he flew straight toward one.

"I thought I certainly had him," Belec is quoted as saying. "Suddenly he pulled up his nose again, and it was obvious we were going to hit each other. I had not time to get out of the way, so I gave my aircraft the hard rudder, pulled the wing over and shut my eyes. Then we hit."

A wing of Belec's plane was knocked off in the crash. He went into a spin and pulled out. The German plane crashed.

The harness holding Belec in the cockpit was broken by the strain of the collision and he finally was thrown out of his craft. He parachuted safely to earth.

SERMON ON FISHING

"Ah," said the Bishop, "grumble not.
Nothing by whimpering is gained.
Man should, whatever be his lot,
Believe by faith is worth attained.
To do his best with strength and skill
Is Victory in the Master's sight.
At times the cleverest anglers will Go fishing when they fail to bite.

"Mere wordly men view loss and gain
By worldly standards. Mark them all!
They always whimper and complain
Whene'er their hopes in failure fall.
Their fishing trips are good or bad,
Judged by the catches they have made,
And by the sort of luck they've had
Is every day's adventure weighed.

"Who sees life through this narrow slot,
And counts his fortune by his gains,
Will through the long years miss a jot
Of comfort for his aches and pains.
Who counts his fishing joys by fish
Should serve the market and no more
And have, than bass, no higher wish
Whenever he sets out from shore.

"But if the man would stretch his soul
And 'scape a little while from care;
If he would see God's purpose whole
And drop the burdens all must bear;
If sky and stream and breezes clean
And fellowship mean pure delight,
Then he can have a day serene,
Although he never gets a bite."

LITTLE JACK HORNER

Little Jack Horner
Sat in a corner,
Eating his Christmas pie;
He put in his thumb
And pulled out a plum,
And said, "What a good boy am I!"

Some scholars gravely tell us that the Jack Horner of this old English nursery rhyme was a real historic person.

They belong to a school of thought that interprets many of the Mother Goose jingles as carefully disguised satires on men who, because of their prominence, were beyond the reach of more direct criticism.

John Horner, whose death was recently reported from Yorkshire, England, took pride in claiming to be a descendant of the Little Jack Horner of the nursery rhyme.

The story is that John Horner was steward to the Abbot of Glastonbury at the time of the dissolution of the monastries in the reign of Henry VIII.

A deed to the Manor of Mells, near Glastonbury, was concealed for safety in a pie or some sort of pastry and sent to the king by Jack Horner, the abbot's steward.

While on the way to London with the pastry the steward, because he was either curious or hungry, lifted a corner of the crust of the pie and took a peak at the contents.

In the pie he discovered the deed to the Manor of Mells.

Just what Jack Horner did after discovering the "plum" in the pie is not quite clear.

At any rate, so the legend goes, the former steward of the Abbot of Glastonbury became Sir John Horner and the master of a considerable estate.

Perhaps he was rewarded by the king for his faithfulness in delivering the document, or perhaps he took advantage of his knowledge of the paper's importance to advance his interests.

However, that may be, Sir John left descendants who were sufficiently proud of what happened to preserve the story in the family traditions.

One difficulty with this theory is that there is no evidence that the nursery rhyme about Little Jack Horner existed earlier than about 1750, which was more than 200 years after the alleged incident.

PRESENTATION

Frankford, (Special) The friends of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lawson (nee Mary Waddel), gathered at the Frankford Community Hall on Wednesday evening to express their congratulations to the newly married couple. The many beautiful gifts with which the bride and groom were presented show clearly the popularity the young couple hold in this community.

The employees of the Bata Machine shop gave a purse of money, sufficient to purchase a china cabinet. The fellow-workers of Mrs. Lawson at the Bata munitions gave them a set of dishes "Rosedale 18 karat" and an electric toaster. In additions there were many miscellaneous articles that were both beautiful and useful gifts. Mary and Walt in a few words thanked their many friends for the kindness that had been shown them. All joined in singing "They are Jolly Good Fellows".

Throughout the evening the young people enjoyed themselves with dancing. At midnight a delicious lunch was served, bringing to a close a most enjoyable and happy occasion.

FOXBORO W.M.S.

The September meeting of the W.M.S. was held in the Sunday School rooms on Thursday afternoon with the second vice-president Mrs. W. Scott, in charge. After giving the theme "The Church in My Community", a hymn was sung and some passages regarding "The Mothers of Our Land" were given by the leader. "The New Canada We Seek" was read by Mrs. W. Hodgen, followed by passages from Scripture telling the work of the church today and Mrs. I. F. Eggleton offered prayer. A hymn was sung, following which some business items were discussed. The Autumn thankoffering is to be held in November and the meeting closed by repeating the Lord's Prayer in unison.

WEDDINGS

WEBSTER—HART

An interesting wedding took place at Bridge Street United Church parsonage at three o'clock on Monday afternoon when Mabel Irene Hart, Smith's Falls, became the bride of Fred Oswald Webster of Smith's Falls. Rev. Dr. James Semple officiated.

The young couple were attended by Miss Eleida Isabelle Desell, Durham, and Mr. Marvel Henry Hart, Newburg. Mr. and Mrs. Webster will reside in Smith's Falls, where the groom is employed by the C.P.R. The bride who is a graduate of the Beleville General Hospital, has been on the staff of the Smith's Falls General Hospital.

SILLS—FOLEY

In a beautiful setting of gladioli and ferns, the marriage took place at the home of the bride's parents at four o'clock, Monday afternoon of Berna Jane Louise, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Foley and Jack Hilliard Sills, R.C.C.S., Kingston, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur A. Sills, Belleville. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. James Semple, pastor of Bridge Street United Church. Miss Helen Cook played the wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of autumn-leaf gold jersey with draped torso-length bodice and full skirt. Her chapel veil was of matching tulle illusion and she carried a shower bouquet of Talisman roses and bouvardia.

The bride's only attendant, Miss Isobel L. Stewart, chose aquamarine jersey with matching headdress and carried a Colonial bouquet of Dulsberg roses. The groom was attended by Mr. Thomas L. Foley, brother of the bride.

At the reception following the ceremony the bride's mother received the guests wearing a dress of Queen's blue crepe with a corsage of gardenias and was assisted by the groom's mother in a dress of gypsy violet crepe with a corsage of Johanna Hill roses.

The young couple left on a motor trip through the Kawartha Lakes district. For travelling the bride wore a Harris tweed suit in lime shades with brown accessories and Holland sable jacket, the gift of the groom. They will reside in Kingston.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Harry J. Mahoney.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and the bridesmaid was Miss Gladys Lucas, sister of the groom. The groomsman was Hubert Wiley, brother of the bride Only a few immediate relatives were in attendance. The couple will reside in Marmora Township.

Junior Library Readers Receive Diplomas In Airplane Book Tour

Members of the Boys' and Girls' Department of Corby Public Library who completed or who were Tour were entertained at an enjoy- runners-up in the Airplane Book able party held on the Library lawn under the direction of Miss Olive Delaney, librarian, and Miss Mary Wright, junior assistant.

The Airplane Book Tour with an enrolment of fifty-two members took the readers on an imaginary world tour, books from different countries the air liners visited being selected for reading. The following members were presented with Reading Club diplomas Ted Boyle, Paul Bruyea, Anne Burton, Elizabeth Dawson, Robert Foreman, Jeanette Fink, Lois Greenleaf, Tom Lally, Eleanor Legate, Ernest Poirier, Betty Snare, Ruth Snare, Doreen Stiver, Olive Thompson, Diane Upper and Ronald Zeran.

The boys and girls enjoyed a series of games, the afternoon's festivities starting at three-thirty Saturday. Ice cream and cookies were served.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Shall She Give Him Her Photograph?

Not a day passes but some girl asks if she shall give her photograph to the attractive soldier she met for the first time the night before.

The request for the picture usually was petitioned with something like, "I've never asked a girl for her picture before," or, "It's never hit me just like this" or, "I never imagined this could happen to me," and other phrases denoting complete surrender on the part of the man in khaki.

But when a girl writes: "Dear Miss Fairfax: He has asked me for my picture and I got the best. They cost me $25.00 I sent it to him and haven't heard a word from him since"—well she'd better watch not only her step but her pocketbook.

If the girl is an Old Hand at the game, she knows exactly what these fine sentiments are worth. Maybe one time in fifty they're true as Gospel, but usually it's just one of a man's 57 varieties of making himself agreeable. The Old Hand, a girl who knows her onions, takes it for what it's worth.

There's a mousey type of girl to whom no one has paid much attention before, and these words seem written in the stars. In the twinkling of an eye she's changed. She acquires the beauty that is given to those who are devotedly loved (as she sees it.)

So, when it comes to asking for her photograph, the girl not only consents but has some of those splendiferous photographs taken that will cost her a week's pay envelope, and so large perhaps the doughboy bound for overseas could not conveniently take it along.

Then the nice, quiet, little girl begins to realise that making love, sweet speeches, a kiss or two, and a plea for a photograph is nothing on which to buy one's trousseau. And if she isn't too confiding, sooner or later she becomes another "Old Hand" and she wastes no more big money on big photographs.

Snapshots are all right. They're fun for the boys to take overseas, look them over and remember jolly times. They cost nothing or practically nothing and it doesn't really matter in these days of the candid camera who snaps them. But unless you know your soldier boy well, and have known him for some time, and know he's not "kidding" when he says these things to you, better not put your money in expensive photographs.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Remember that your Christmas cards for service men overseas must be mailed early.

Christmas gifts to be sent overseas must also be mailed early.

Postal authorities urge you to write "Christmas Mail" on every Christmas card, letter or package. And remember, when you address your Christmas cards, letters and packages, print the name and address with extreme care. Use only necessary abbreviations, and remember that most abbreviations are not necessary. In other words, do everything you can possibly do to make that card, letter or package arrive to give that service man the Christmas joy and comfort you want to give.

In your Christmas letters to service men, don't write things that might add to a soldier's homesickness, to the difficulty of his separation from home and family and friends at Christmas-time. In most cases this won't be an easy thing to do, but if you make up your mind to have a soldierly quality too, you'll do it. In your letters make cheer and devotion your watchwords. Don't dip your pen in gloom—such a letter isn't appropriate for Christmas, even this Christmas.

If your man is in service and you have a job, fill your after-work hours with activities—writing newsy, comforting and inspiring letters to your service man, joining social activities, doing Red Cross or other war-work. Too much time for brooding will destroy your morale. A sensible proportioning of your after-work time for social recreation and relaxation and your time for war-time activities is a grand plan.

In a recently published book for boys and girls under twelve—in war time, the author gives the sound democratic advice to "have a meeting of the family and divide the work so that each one has special duties that are his and his alone." That's democracy at work early in life, imparting a sense of personal responsibility, a sense of personal value. "And," warns the author, "it takes only one noisy, quarrelsome, grouchy brat to spoil a home!"

People singing together! In camps, in schools, in communities, at meetings of all kinds, at parties—everywhere where even a few are gathered.

Have you some books of song collections in your home? You can buy wonderful collections now containing all the grand old standbys. Patriotic songs, old familiar tunes, any many not so familiar, but thrilling to learn: songs especially adapted to community singing, beloved old spirituals, inspiring hymns.

Gala Dance Concludes Field Day Program By Trenton R. C. A. F.

The Airmen's Dance at Trenton R.C.A.F. Station which brought to a close the annual field day program yesterday was an outstanding success last evening. Among the guests, many of whom came from distant points for the holiday event, were the members of the Hospitality Club and St. Michael's Club of this city. The dance was held in the recreation centre. Trenton Station orchestra provided dance music which satisfied the most exacting. The dance was opened by a Grand March and the interesting program contained many prize and novelty dances.

The guests were welcomed by Air Commodore F. McGill who expressed pleasure at the success of the field day and cordially welcomed the dancers to this last part of the day's program which climaxed in a very delightful way the interesting events of the afternoon.

A highlight of the dance was the floor show by pupils of Miss Mary Forster who also received the acclaim of the audience when they took part in the Variety Show which was held in one of the station's theatres previous to the dance. Those who took part were Barbara Abramsky, Grace Carleton of Stirling, Shirley Wickerson, and Betty Ann Breach, four tiny tots whose "Military Tap" and "Dutch Dance" had an enthusiastic reception; Miss Madeline Walden, accomplished young dancer in an acrobatic number and a military presentation; Miss Joyce Cooper, whose singing and dancing of "Amapola" won all hearts and little Dorothy and Arlene Dickey as sailors in a very spirited rendition of the hornpipe. Mrs. Grace Calvert acted as pianist for the concert. As an expression of appreciation of the station, Miss Mary Forster was presented with orchids by Mrs. McGill, wife of the Commanding Officer.

During intermission a buffet supper was served after which dancing continued until one o'clock. The dance was one of the largest held on the station and was a fine success.

Previous to the dance, Hostess House of the Trenton Station had a busy evening, entertaining the guests of the station at afternoon tea. The hospitality extended by Miss Helen Muir, in charge of Hostess house and her co-hostess, Mrs. H. Hedges, was greatly appreciated by the guests, especially those who had come from out of town for the holiday event.

Variety Show

The Variety Show in Theatre "B" took place at seven-thirty and at the same time as the wrestling and boxing match was underway in the Recreation Hall. Mr. Irvine Wismer, Y, representative presented Flying Officer Bob Estes as Master of Ceremonies. The show introduced pupils of Miss Mary Forster's School of Dancing, Belleville, talented musicians among the airmen at the station, and the Trenton R.C.A.F. orchestra whose torrid music aided by the clarinet of the master of ceremonies brought down the house. F/O Estes was formerly with Benny Goodman's band and "gave out" with swing in masterly style.

Interspersed with the dances were vocal solos by Cpl. Sanders, piano selections including on original composition by George Varley of the R.A.F., guitar numbers by Dave Goldberg R.A.F. These musicians were artists of outstanding ability and the appreciation of the audience was expressed in the thunderous applause which greeted their numbers.

A sing-song led by Art Jackson with Sgt. Clapp as accompanist added further variety to the program. Throughout the program the inimitable wit of Flying Officer Estes kept the audience in a hilarious mood.

Those in charge of the program and the artists taking part were complimented by the Commanding Officer, Air Commodore McGill, for the success of the Variety Show, a splendid part of the day's excellent show.

CANADIAN BISCUITS TO FIGHTING FORCES

Canadians may have to go without biscuits due to the huge quantities needed by the armed forces of the United Nations.

Housewives may wonder why there should be a shortage of soda biscuits, when Canadian flour is so readily available, but Mr. F. W. St. Lawrence, Vice-President and Managing Director of George Weston Limited reports, that even the soda biscuits machines are now in full operation on iron rations for the troops.

With the biscuit industry, as with all industries, "the war comes first.

Reckless Driving Charge is Laid After Accident

Bancroft, Sept. 8—Provincial Officer S. W. Palmateer of Bancroft arrested Dominic Volda of Wilno, Ontario, Thursday night on a charge of reckless driving. Volda was brought to Bancroft and lodged in the local jail and taken to Lindsay Friday by Provincial Officer McBryon of Lindsay where he will be held until the next court.

The charge of reckless driving resulted from an accident which occurred twelve miles West of Bancroft on Highway 28 on July 27th when Volda, driver of a truck, proceeding towards Peterborough lost control of his vehicle on a abrupt turn, the truck turning over several times throwing seven men who were riding on the truck out on the ground. One passenger Peter Matcheski of Barry's Bay was instantly killed and the other six passengers were brought to Bancroft Red Cross hospital for treatment. Two of the injured Paul Dombroski and Maxi Mintha are still confined to Bancroft and Toronto hospitals respectively.

Late W. C. Childs

Mr. William Charles Childs of Hermon, Ontario passed away at his residence Thursday evening from a heart seizure. When found, the elderly gentleman was found slumped in his chair. HEALTH CHATS

By Dr. Herman N. Bundesen
President, Chicago Board of Health

Not many years ago, sulfonamide drugs were unknown and vitamins were just names. Today the diseases that respond to treatment by these remarkable substances form many volumes of the medical record. Consider only the eyes, the nose, ears and throat. Of the newer drugs, the sulfonamides, which have been found so effective in the treatment of infections, have found great usefulness in eye diseases.

Trachoma, a chronic inflammation of the eyes, gonoccal infection of the eyes, streptococcal inflammation, eye complications developing from meningococcal infections and inflammation of the lining membrane of the eyeball due to streptococcal or pneumococcal infections all seem to respond quite well to the sulfonamide drugs.

At present, infection of the middle ear with streptococcus also is effectively treated with sulfanilamide or some similar preparation. In fact, in the opinion of Dr. John H. Tait of Iowa, it is often not necessary when the sulfanilamide is used to even have to cut the ear drum open to drain out the infected material.

In infections with the pneumococcus, sulfapyridine is used, and when the stophylococcus is responsible sulfathiazole is employed. Sometimes an ulcer or sore may form on the front part of the eyeball. Sometimes these ulcers become chronic. It has been found that these ulcers can be effectively treated with vitamins A and D in the form of liver oil from a fish known as burbot.

Inflammation of the optic nerve, called optic neuritis, has been found to respond quite well to the use of vitaminB-complex. Vitamin C has also been used with benefit in inflammation of the back part of the eye, or retina which occurs in diabetes. When bleeding into the eyeball occurs vitamins C and K may be given with benefit.

One of the ear conditions which causes a great deal of trouble is known as Meniere's disease. In this disorder there are dizziness, sickness to the stomach and vomiting. It has been found that the injection of a substance known as histamine into a vein not only relieves all the symptoms but sometimes even brings improvement in hearing, which is defective in this disease. Meniere's disease has also been treated effectively with the drug known as prostigmin.

Another great advance made in the treatment of eye, nose and throat disorders has been the development of effective local anesthetics. These are drugs which deaden pain and make it easier to carry out operations on the nose, throat and eyes. These many new drugs have been found extremely helpful in treating a variety of eye, ear and nose disorders.

Daring Air Show at Trenton Air Station Culminates Track And Field Meet For Personnel

Labor Day Celebration One of the Best Ever Held at the Station

LARGE ATTENDANCE

Daring Royal Canadian Air Force pilots, their planes flashing in a brilliant September sunshine wrote a spectacular finish to the 8th Annual Field Day of the Trenton Station, R.C.A.F. late Monday afternoon.

Thousands of personnel, their friends, relatives and civilian guests, alternately gasped and thrilled as the pilots of the station road their planes in precisive "V" formation, in line astern in fifteen's, threes and singly.

"Balloon busters" performed sensational aerial stunts before bringing down their elusive quarries; trios of Sessnas barrel-rolled and spun in a whirling flash of wings over a station, that was cobble-marked with the upturned faces of thousands of admirers.

The entire Field Day went down on the station books as one of the most successful since the inception of the annual "At Home" eight years ago.

To use a time-worn phrase, there "was never a dull moment". Foresighted committees had taken care of everything. There were sports, entertainment, music, races for civilians; refreshments; football games, wrestling and boxing tournaments; clowns and other attractions with a dance at night to culminate a perfect Field Day.

Kids Had Swell Time

But perhaps the largest feather in the figurative cap of officer commanding Air Commodore Frank S. McGill his officer staff and personnel, was the treat provided for the children of the station and the hundreds of tiny guests in attendance. A circus or a Midway could not have been more complete.

The kiddies had a swell time. They had rides on a station conveyance drawn by a huge grotesque dragon fly. They were sent down slides in miniature automobiles. They were given free tickets to roulette wheels and were given free ice cream, popcorn and candy. They galloped around a small arena on real live ponies with "cowboy" airmen in attendance. They were given rides on miniature trains drawn by actually working locomotive models driven by "railroad" airmen engineers. They thrilled to the antics of a clown and examined with genuine childish interest and delight a "model airplane" that was the last word in ancient parts.

They took part in athletic events and were awarded handsome prizes for their efforts. A feature of this part of the program was an exhibition half-mile run by seven-year old Douglas Hinton, son of FO. Hinton of the station staff. The youngster showed his stamina, when he sprinted the last fifty yards after the hard run on the cinder track under a blazing sun.

Precision Drill Given

Another highlight of the afternoon program was the exhibition rifle drill performed by a precision drill squad under Flying Officer Hinton and his chief instructor. Headed by the crack station band, the drill-clad airmen performed intricate manoeuvres to the sound of a whistle. The squadron showed marked ability, and evidence of marked training. They received a loud ovation from the large crowd.

The field day proper was heralded by a parade of the participating athletes prior to the official opening by Air Commodore McGill, The colorful parade with the band swung through the station to the Nathanson Athletic Field, where the main events were held. It was part of a show that was outstanding in variety and color.

A gymnastic display preceded the station championship track and field events. Followed the usual dashes and distance runs with the whole being marked with an obstacle race than even the "famous army commaddoes might have found a bit tough. It was a grueling test of stamina and endurance but the fine young athletes participating came through with flying colors.

Station Open to Guests

The station was thrown open to the guests. Courteous R.C.A.F. attendants conducted groups of guests through the various buildings where they saw first hand how Canada's air fledgelings and personnel live and train. The various messes of the station were the meccas for hundreds of guests of officers, N.C.O.s and airmen, where they received genuine air force hospitality.

The guests, many of them participated in the special novelty races arranged for their benefit. Adding to the sports attractions were races arranged for the various ranks. In other parts of the field, soccer and lacrosse games were played for the benefit of lovers of these sports.

In the evening the inter-unit softball championships were held with boxing and wrestling in the Sports Hangar. A variety show was given in one of the Station theatres. A 'squadron" of clowns, grotesque in weird make-up added much to the general enjoyment and found particular favor with the children guests.

High-ranking air force officials in attendance with the officer commanding included Air Vice Marshal J. A. Sully, A.F.C., now director of personnel, Ottawa, and a former commanding officer of the station: Air Marshal G. O. Johnston; Air Officer Commanding No. 1 Training Command, Toronto also an ex-officer commanding the Trenton station and Air Vice Marshal T. Crowley, Dir. of Organization, Ottawa. Following are the officials of the Field Day: Referee—W/C J. Stephenson; Honorary Judges—W/C Hoare, W/C Coath, W/C Noble, W/C Mitchell, W/C S. A. Terraux, W/C Cairns: Chief Judges: A/C F. McGill, W/C Carling-Kelly: Judges: P.T. Officers of K.T.S. Training Wing: Timers: P.T. I's of K.T.S. Training Wing; Recorders: P/O W. Ronson; P/O MacNab; Announcers: F/O J. Passmore; S.W.O. 1 J. TED SCHROEDER TENNIS CHAMP

Defeats Frankie Parker in Five Sets in Forest Hills Finals

New York, Sept. 8. (AP) — Ted Schroeder, a big awkward-looking youngster with a "plowboy" walk something like Bob Feller's, is the United States' first tennis champion of the present war era.

He polished off the veteran Frankie Parker with undisguised ease and relish in the finals at Forest Hills yesterday, 8-6, 7-5, 3-6, 4-6, 6-2, proving himself a much finer tennis player than had been realized previously.

The two sets he lost were window dressing for the crowd of 9,000.

When he slammed the ball away for the final point of his victory, Schroeder spoke his valedictory to tennis for the duration.

Within a week he expects to be in the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Schroeder shared another championship when he and Louise Brough won the final of the mixed doubles from Alejo Russell of the Argentine and Mrs. Patricia Canning Todd of New York, 3-6, 6-1, 6-4. Miss Brough also paired with Margaret Osborne of San Francisco to capture the women's doubles with a 2-6, 7-5, 6-0 victory over Pauline Betz of Los Angeles and Doris Hart of Miami.

Miss Betz scored an upset triumph over Miss Brough in the women's singles final on Sunday, 4-6, 6-1, 6-4.

STIRLING TRIO WINS HONORS ON THE GREEN

Bowlers From North Annex Corbin Cup in Close Competition

BELLEVILLE SECOND

Coming out of the north of the county a trio of Stirling Bowlers captured top honors in the annual mens' trebles sponsored by the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club on their spacious greens, Labor Day. The winning team, that took home the Corbin Cup, emblematic to the championship, was composed of three well and tried veteran Stirling bowlers, "Hap" Tompkins, Bill Whitty and Tommy Solmes, bowlers who have been well tried and proven on Eastern Ontario greens. A close second and winners of the Ackerman Trophy, however, was the Belleville trio consisting of Cliff Argue, "Mac" Maclean and H. Pascoe.

Teams from many parts of Eastern Ontario competed, Belleville and Kingston entering the majority of the trios for the annual competition. Belleville entered eleven teams, Kingston, seven, Warkworth, Stirling and Havelock two each, while Hastings, Tweed, Madoc and Campbellford all contributed competition in President Cliff Argue's annual Belleville trebles.

Each competing trio played three 15-end games by draws, the results of which were:—

Tournament champions for the Corbin Cup — Stirling: H. Tompkins, W. Whitty and Thos. Solmes, score 54 plus 18.

Runners up, for the Ackerman Trophy — Belleville: C. Argue, L.E. Maclean and H. Pascore, score 52 plus 3.

Three high — Kingston: T. Green, H. Newman and R. Derry, score 51 plus 10.

Next three high — Kingston: — Jos. Topping, W. Wickam and H. McCorkingdale, score 47 plus 13.

Two games high — Belleville:— C. Clapp, E. Ford, W. Price, score 54.

One game high — Belleville: — Chas. Sulman, C. McGuire and H. Middleton.

The Belleville Lawn Bowling Club annexed three of the major honors of the day's play, capturing the Ackerman Trophy, and high in the one and two games high scores in one of the keenest contested tournaments enjoyed by Eastern Ontario lawn bowlers this season.

Ted Williams, Reiser Retain Batting Titles

New York, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Ted Williams keeps going up and Pete Reiser keeps coming down, but thus far both have retained their major league batting leaderships.

Williams, the long, lean slugger of Boston Red Sox who a week ago had a mark of .346, today had lifted his average to .352 and the only question about his winning the American League hitting crown for the second straight year appeared to be the distance over the rest of the field.

As of today there was no indication who would even finish second to him, for teammate Johnny Pesky, one of the Rookie wonders of the year, had risen into a tie with Joe Gordon of New York Yankees for the runnerup berth at .331.

Reiser's long batting slump, which was interrupted but not ended by a trip to Johns Hopkins Hospital at Baltimore, finally was broken with three hits at Boston yesterday. But even so the Brooklyn Dodger ace dropped from .328 to .324 during the week and would have lost the lead except that Enos (Country) Slaughter of St. Louis Cardinals, previously his most persistent pursuer, also skidded sharply.

In a week Slaughter, dived from .325 to .318 and yielded second place to teammate Stan Musial, a Rookie, whose average was .320.

JERSEY GIANTS AND CHIEFS PLAY TO BREAK TIE

Teams Finish Deadlocked For Third Place in Int. League

LEAFS IN 6TH PLACE

(By The Associated Press)

Syracuse is host to Jersey City tonight in an International League game that will break the third-place tie between the two and determine the set-up for the circuit's annual Governor's Cup series.

The Chiefs were denied a chance of taking the field in yesterday's windup of the league schedule and Jersey City skidded into the deadlock by dropping both of its contests with Newark, the pennant winner.

It is the third time a special tie-breaking game has been necessary in the 10-year history of the Cup competition which involves only the four first-division teams.

Should the Little Giants triumph tonight they will move on to Montreal for the opening of the playoff series Wednesday night. Syracuse would remain at home to entertain the Bears in that round's opener Thursday night.

If Syracuse wins tonight, however, Montreal will open in the Chiefs' Wigwam Thursday night and the two Jersey Clubs will get together in Newark Wednesday afternoon.

Best Four Out of Seven

The semi-final rounds are for the best four of seven games and two-game opening series will be played at the sites to be determined by tonight's fracas. They will be followed by three-tilt visits to the opponents' parks during the weekend.

The first tie-breaking game since the introduction of the Governors' Cup was won by Rochester from Newark, 5-2, in 1936 and assured the Wings second place. Frank Kelleher's pinch home run, however, gave the Bears fourth place over Syracuse in 1939.

In yesterday's finale, Newark swept its two-game encounter with the Little Giants, 3-1 and 7-5. The Bears won the opener in a hurry, getting two runs in the third inning and another in the fourth, but pushed across two tallies after two were out in the final frame to decide the nightcap.

Buffalo lost the first of the two games at Toronto, 6-2, but Floyd Giebell's four-hit pitching job in the nightcap brought the Bisons a 1-0 triumph.

Montreal made sure of second place by taking the first game of its holiday menu with Rochester, 9-1, and then blanked the Red Wings, 8-0 behind Bob Chipman's steady flinging.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8 — (CP) — Sam Breadon insists he and Branch Rickey haven't come to a parting of the ways, in spite of all rumors, but he adds, "Just suppose there wasn't any minors next year, you wouldn't need a farm head, would you?"

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, Sept. 8 — (CP) — The word is about that the Canadian Basketball Association may be next major sports organization to fold for the duration ... it has been more difficult to keep going than some others, because for many years only British Columbia, Ontario and Quebec have been producing good teams ... box lacrosse has the same trouble, but there are no signs of retrenchment in that sport ... guess anyone connected with boxla is too tough to retreat..

Pat Egan, the noted Brooklyn Americans bad man, is hated thoroughly by one and all among B. C. lacrosse followers ... he plays defence for Vancouver Norvans, the club New Westminter Salmonbellies are playing in the coast final — strangely enough, the referees treat him like a little angel ... he had only 18 minutes in penalties this season ... Mayor Fred Hume of New Westminster has promised the Salmonbellies he'll fly them east for the boxla playoffs if they win the B. C. crown ... that'll make New Westminster's two Ontario trained players, Bill Wilkes (Orillia) and Ed Downey (St. Catharines), hit the opposition with increased enthusiasm.

Incidentally:

Jack (Cornwall Standard - Freeholder) Park comments thusly on military sports: "If the service clubs put the accent on entertainment and recreation, rather than on the winning of titles, the real place of sport in the war effort will be attained." When writing of the sports service league's activities the other day, forgot to mention the money spent so far on sports equipment for soldiers: $70,000 ... Tom (Calgary Albertan) Moore sees Johnny Longden's debut as a harness-horse owner as an indication the Alberta jockey will still be with the horses when he has a long white beard ... harness-racing men hit their prime about 55 or 60, some even later ... that despite the strength and skill required in this gentle homely branch of the equine sports ... for my money, harness racing is the better sport to watch.

Andy Branigan, Bill Juzda and Wally Stanowski will wear the same uniform both at work and at play this year ... they're with the R.C.A.F. in Winnipeg and will be in the backfield of PO. Bob Fritz's team in the Winnipeg city league ... there was no bigtime soccer in Montreal yesterday — not because there weren't plenty of players, but because the players wanted to spend the holiday resting like other people ... it's a refreshing approach.

DODGERS, CARDS 2½ GAMES APART, BOTH TEAMS TIRED

Starting Pitchers on Both Clubs Unable to Finish Games Over Weekend

GIANTS GAIN

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer

Brooklyn Dodgers and St. Louis Cardinals are giving the National League its typical tight finish, but both clubs seem likely to stay within the speed limit in the races down the stretch.

Both clubs looked tired and wobbly in dividing Labor Day doubleheaders and kept the margin between them unchanged at 2 1-2 games. Today the standing was:

	W.	L.	G.	B.P.
Brooklyn..	93	45	-----	18
St. Louis..	91	46	2 1-2	17

At the end of the Dodgers' recent western trip Manager Lee Durocher named the five pitchers he was relying on to bring Brooklyn home in front. They were Rookie Macon and the veterans Whit Wyatt, Curt Davis, Kirby Higbe and Bobo Newsom. During the week-end all five worked and not one of the veterans, pitching on short rest, was able to last a complete game.

Yesterday at Boston Davis was removed after three innings although Dolph Camilli had given him in a three-run lead with his 22nd homer in the first frame. The Dodgers untimately won 11-4 with a six-run splurge in the fourth frame, but rookie Les Webber received the credit.

Newsom Charged with Loss

Then in the nightcap Newsom lasted less than six innings and was charged with the 5-3 loss, Hugh Casey, John Allen and Larry French also seeing service. Pete Reiser, the staggering batting champ, was removed for a pinch-hitter in the first game, but broke his slump with three hits off Jim Tobin in the second affair.

The Cardinals showed the extent of their reaction to pressure by letting Pittsburgh Pirates score 11 runs after two were out in the sixth inning of the first game although Max Lanier had been given a five-run lead. The Pirates won 11-6 but the Cards came back battling to take the nightcap 6-4. Johnny Beasley, working on two days rest, gave nine hits and was floundering when the game was finally halted because of darkness at the end of eight innings. It was his 19t victory.

Yanks Gain Half Game

In the American League the story was a bit different with New York Yankees sweeping a double-header from Philadelphia Athletics and gaining half a game on Boston Red Sox, who won the one encounter that escaped the weatherman at Washington. This put the Yanks nine games in front and able to win another pennant by any combination of eight victories or eight Boston defeats from here out.

Roy Cullenbine, latest acquisition of the world champions, hit a home run with two out in the ninth inning to decide the first game 6-5 and milkman Jim Turner, the veteran pitcher also picked up a week ago by the Yanks, received the credit with two innings of hitless relief work. New York bunched 10 runs in the sixth inning of the second game to coast to an 11-2 verdict while Hank Borowy was holding the A's to six hits for his 14th triumph against three setbacks.

Boston clubbed Sid Hudson for 14 hits and beat the Senators 9-7 although Washington worked down to the ninth inning with the score tied.

Browns Divide

St. Louis Browns and Detroit Tigers divided their doubleheader. In the first game Al Benton attained his first success since the all-star game as two timely singles by Pinky Higgins and a homer by Jim Bloodworth figured in a 5-3 decision. In the second game Harlond Clift made five straight hits to bat in all runs as the Browns won 3-0 on seven-hit hurling by Bob Muncrief and Geo. Caster.

Cleveland at Chicago was postponed till today.

New York Giants pounced on Philadelphia twice 5-3 and 4-0 to extend the Phils' losing streak to 13 games, longest of the National League season, as Bill Lohrman and Bob Carpenter pitched five and four-hit ball, respectively.

Bucky Walters finally achieved his 13th victory with a six-hit job as Cincinnati, held to seven blows by Bill Lee, nudged out the Chicago Cubs 3-1 in the first game of a double-header. Then the Bruins took the second affair on the strength of Lou Stringer's three-run double in the eighth inning.

The Labor Day program drew 123,000 fans at seven parks.

T. Carruthers Shoots Hot 32 To Break Record

Shooting four holes below the par mark Tommy Carruthers, well known Belleville golfer, established a new course record over the Bay of Quinte Country Club golf course on Labor Day when he carded a 32 score. Mr. Carruthers was playing with Joe Legault and Bill Steer, club members, at the time of his "hot golf" feat. He carded four birdies over the nine-hole Country Club course for a 32 on a par 35 course.

His score card read—

Par	-4	4	4	3	5	5	3	4	3	—35
Carruthers	-3	5	4	2	5	4	3	4	2	—32

Several weeks ago William Little equalled the previous course record of 34, but yesterday's 32 score hung up by Tommy Carruthers shattered all previous golfing the difficult Country Club course.

Batawa Beaten By Eastdale 10-2 In "C" Finals

Hopes that at least one provincial softball championship would come to the Bay of Quinte district this year went glimmering on Monday evening at Bayside Park in Trenton when the Batawa Intermediate "C" team went down to defeat by the Eastdale nine by a decisive 10-2 score.

It was the first game of a best-in-three series with the return game being scheduled for the Hamilton district team's home town on Saturday afternoon.

Prolific hitting on the part of the Western nine soon left the Frankford team trailing on the score sheet, although for the first two innings it appeared as though the ultimate score might be close. In the third they established a three run lead and blasted Coe from the Frankford hilltop with Ellis doing a fine bit of relief hurling up to the seventh when Eastdale broke out with a six-run rally to decide the issue.

Roy Banks, veteran 43-year-old hurler for the Westerners dispelled any chances Frankford had of closing the gap between the two teams, as with a baffling change of pace and a variety of twisters, had the shoemakers popping up to the infield or fanning the air. Eastdale presented a well-balanced squad of ball-tossers, the infield being apt at cutting down runners and kicked in with a couple of double-plays to nip Frankford rallies short.

Score by innings—

Eastdale	012	000	240	—10
Batawa	100	010	000	2

YESTERDAY'S STARS

By the Associated Press

Dolph Camilli, Dodgers, and Jim Tobin, Braves..former hit first-inning homer with two aboard to help win first game and latter pitched three-hit ball for seven innings to take nightcap.

Roy Cullenbine and Hank Borowy, Yankees—former's ninth-inning home run decided first game and latter pitched six-hit ball to win second.

Lou Finney, Red Sox—drove in five runs with triple and two singles against Senators.

Bill Lohrman and Bob Carpenter, Giants—pitched double triumph over Phils, former allowing five hits and latter four.

Pinky Higgins, Tigers, and Harlond Clift, Browns—Higgins drove in two important runs with two singles in first game and Clift made five straight hits, including a triple and two doubles, to account for all scoring in nightcap.

AT THE BELLE

"They Flew Alone"

This picture brings feats and romance of fliers. A romance between two famous fliers, and its dramatic outcome, makes up the basis of "They Flew Alone", the new Anna-Neagle-Robert Newton starring vehicle based on the lives of the late Amy Johnson and her husband, Jim Mollison, now on the Belle Theatre screen.

Filmed in England, and with many of its scenes made at Croydon and other places where the daring Amy scored her aerial triumphs, the picture is said to be one of the most dramatic offerings of the year, as well as one of the most unusual.

Beginning with Amy's schooldays and her amazing solo flights to Australia in a borrowed second-hand plane, the flight that catapulted her into world-wide fame the film stresses the subsequent highlights of her career in vivid fashion.

Amy's record-breaking trips to Japan, South Africa and America, her friendly rivalry with Mollison in the air and her marriage to him, the break-up of that marriage six years later from causes beyond her control, and her gallant attempts to win back to her earlier fame when the war called her into service, all make for gripping drama as they are presented in the RKO Radio picture, produced and directed by Herbert Wilcox.

"Powder Town" Punch-Packed

Sensational thrills make "Powder Town" a terrific film hit. The interplay of raw human emotions and passions in their relation to a national defence enterprise of major proportions constitutes the main thematic basis of "Powder Town" a new and thrilling RKO Radio film drama, announced as the companion feature attraction.

Featuring Victor McLaglen at the head of a cast which includes Edmond O'Brien and Dorothy Lovett as the chief love interest, "Powder Town" dramatizes our nation's fight to save itself from the enemy within, in this instance a band of ruthless saboteurs plotting the destruction of a huge munitions plant.

O'Brien is a naive and absent-minded young scientist seeking to develop a new type of powerful explosive. Roy Gordon, head of the powder plant, details McLaglen to guard him. McLaglen thinks his sweetheart, June Havoc, is falling for O'Brien and hates him, but in reality a torrid love affair is developing between O'Brien and Miss Lovett. Eddie Foy, Jr., Mary Gordon, John Maguire, Damian O'Flynn and Marten Lamont also are effectively cast.

The Belle latest Movietone News completes the program.

AT THE McCARTHY

Abbott and Costello

See the picture and enjoy the greatest number of loud laughs you've ever had in your lifetime.

No other words we can think of could recommend to you the new Abbett and Costello hit "Pardon My Sarong" now playing at the McCarthy more in earnest.

The comedy kings have three times the opportunity of being funny, since they start out as bus drivers in Chicago who got bored with the monotonous day-in, day-out ride on the same old route. So they leap at the chance to take a charter trip to Los Angeles, ferrying a wealthy playboy and ten cute chorus girls.

The second phase of the picture takes place when the boys board a yacht at Los Angeles to escape the law, and head for Honolulu as sailors. A hurricane blows them off their course, and when they sight an uncharted island the third chapter in their adventures begins.

The island sequence gives the comedians an opportunity to don sarongs and cavort with the native maidens. More adventure is cooked up by a smooth villian who is swindling the islanders of their hard-earned pearls and gold.

Romance is provided by Robert Paige and Virginia Bruce while the menace is portrayed in convincing fashion by Leif Erikson and Lionel Atwill. Nan Wynn, a newcomer to the screen, is attractive as the native island girl who becomes more than fond of Costello.

Entertaining specialties are contributed by Tip Tap and Toe Dancers, the Saronga dancing girls and The Four Ink Spots.

"Rainbow Rhythm" with Al Donahue and his orchestra which is a fine musical short subject, a real funny comedy cartoon entitled "Pigeon Patron" and latest Universal News events with the first pictures of "The Battle of Dieppe" are presented in addition to the comedy feature which we consider to be the best Abbott and Costello, Universal studios have as yet produced.

AT THE BELLE

They make things hum in "Powder Town." Left to right, Dorothy Lovett, Edmond O'Brien, June Havoc and Victor McLaglen. "Powder Town" now on the Belle Theatre screen is a fast, exciting story, with plenty of laughs too! Anna Neagle and Robert Newton in "They Flew Alone" is the story of "The Flying Mollisons."

AT THE CAPITOL

"Night of January 16"

A murder mystery that springs hearty laughs in addition to suspense and thrills is the frothy Paramount comedy mystery, "The Night of January 16th," which is now showing at the Capitol Theatre, starring Robert Preston and Ellen Drew.

The writers who adapted the well-known Broadway stage play to the screen evidently thought that what the script needed was a light, deft touch and good sparkling dialogue in the mixing of hilarity with homicide. It is evident that Director William Clemens agreed with them, and so did Robert Presson and Ellen Drew and the rest of the cast, who all have caught the lively spirit that makes "The Night of January 16th" fresh and witty as well as exciting and suspenseful film entertainment.

Commendable acting performances are turned in by the talented featured cast, including Margaret Hayes, Clarence Kolb, Alice White, Cecil Kellaway and Cliff Nazarro.

For a cinematic mixture the bubbles with laughs and teems with excitement and thrills in the clever turns of plot, "The night of January 16th," is most heartily recommended.

"Navy Blues and Gold"

M-G-M's stirring navy story, "Navy Blues and Gold," starring James Stewart, Robert Young and Lionel Barrymore, the second feature on the Capitol screen for a return showing in answer to widespread popular demand.

The colorful story of life at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis gives its big trio of stars every opportunity for telling dramatic performances, aided by Florence Rice in the feminine lead, with an outstanding supporting cast featuring Billie Burke, Tom Brown, Samuel S. Hinds, Paul Kelly and Barnett Parker, under the direction of Sam Wood.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sent a company to film much of the scenery on the picturesque grounds in Maryland. Other sequences were photographed at the famous Pasadena Rose Bowl. The picture, accordingly, bears all the marks of authenticity and carries an impressive story.

"Navy Blue and Gold" is ace entertainment for all types of movie patrons because it combines romance and drama in a story as timely as the latest headline news.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma ate breakfast with her hat on, on account of having shopping and things to do, saying to pop, The Current Events Chapter of the Daughters of Cleopattera is having a meeting this afternoon, William. The Topic of Discussion is going to be the place of tipping in the new world order. I mean we feel if there's really going to be a new order of things, then a new order of tipping will certainly be in order, she said.

To tip or not to tip, is that the question? pop said, and ma said, Well yes, in a general way. If the dignity of labor is going to be raised to a high par by everybody being payed a living wage so every home will have luxuries and necessities on the same table, why then tipping will gradually become a relic of barbarism, which of course is its rightful place in a perfect civilization, she said.

But of course civilization may not achieve perfection for at least a year or two after the war, even at the most conservative estimate, pop said, and ma said, Well yes, that's very true, and that brings up the proverbial question of 10 percent tipping, as it is practiced in resteraunts. I mean if everybody is expected to tip 10 per cent of their bill according to unwritten law, then it becomes an obligation and a demand instead of a free will offering in return for attentive service, and if I rise to speak at the meeting I think that's the platform I'll stand on. Have you any suggestions on the subject, such as tipping while traveling, William? she said.

Well, my experience has taught me one infallible rule, and anybody that follows it can never go wrong, pop said. The rule is, always over-tip, he said.

And he folded up his paper and left for his office, and ma thought about it a while and then claimed it didn't make sense.

Trenton and District

Col. Howard Graham Appointed Brig.-Gen. in Command of Brigade

TRENTON — (Special). — The many friends of Colonel H. D. Graham, Commanding Officer of the Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment overseas, were delighted to learn of his promotion to the rank of Brigadier General and appointed to the command of an infantry brigade. This is a well deserved promotion as Brigadier Graham has taken a particularly keen interest in military affairs since he first enlisted from the Trenton High School in the early years of the First Great War. After serving in the First Great War in France and Belgium he returned to his native town of Trenton and proceeded to Osgoode Hall, Toronto, from which college he graduated.

He practiced law in Trenton from that time until he enlisted for active service at the outbreak of the present war. He was a very brilliant lawyer and when young in law practice had the distinction of being honored with K. C.

Brigadier Graham was also extremely interested in all branches of community life in Trenton. He was very active in church, school and municipal affairs, was a councillor for several years and ended his term by being elected Mayor by acclamation. It is therefore natural that Trentonians, as well as their country neighbors, are highly elated at his promotion.

CHAPTER 20
ALARMING NEWS

Unnoticed, Linda slipped out of the library and up the steps once more to the powder room. When she had secured her wrap and freshened her make-up, she retraced her steps to the foyer below.

Greg was standing at the foot of the stairs, an expression of sulkiness evident on his dissipated features. Linda stared at him, seeing him through new eyes. So this—this was the man she had fancied herself to love. This — Beau Brummel!

"Greg!" She smiled at him. "I've been looking everywhere for you. I—I'm not feeling very well and I don't want to spoil the party for Steve. Would you take me home, please?"

If Greg was surprised at her change of heart, he gave no sign. "Of course, Linda," he agreed. "I'll go and get the car."

"But shouldn't you leave word for Diane? You're together, aren't you?"

"She'll be all right."

The abrupt way he dismissed Diane from his thoughts made Linda realize more and more that the man had no consideration for anyone other than himself, and while he hurried away for his car, Linda pencilled brief notes to Steve and Diane and summoned a footman to deliver them. Then, resolutely, she went out to join Greg.

Sitting rigidly in his speeding car, eyes fixed on the winding Lakeshore Drive, Linda scarcely heard his ceaseless monologue. Hot tears filled her eyes and heart, and a still, small voice far back in her brain repeated the words, "you're walking out on Steve .. walking out .. Steve! Steve, I love you and it's too late. Too late."

Dimly she heard Greg's voice: "But to think I'd come to Chicago and find you! And what a change you've undergone, Linda. You're beautiful. Absolutely beautiful!"

"Thank you, Greg." Automatically. "You don't think I'm drab and—and just a small-town girl, any more?"

"I was a fool to go away," he declared passionately. "Linda, believe me when I say I didn't know you took our little flirtation seriously. I'd forgotten you until I learned I had to go to Kansas City, and Diane suggested I drop into her home-town and call on you."

Every word he uttered made Linda realize more than ever how foolish she had been, but she endured him silently.

"When you barged into Chicago and I saw you in Diane's apartment, I didn't know what to do. Diane wanted me to tell you the truth then, but you looked so darned innocent, and I—" He laughed ruefully. "—I didn't have nerve enough. I knew this job in Brazil was open, so I took it."

"I — understand you've done very well there. You're returning to Brazil next month, aren't you?"

"Linda!" He pulled the car to the side of the road and turned off the switch. "Don't evade things, darling. The minute I saw you across the dance floor tonight I realized how I had missed you. I'm crazy about you, Linda."

He made a move to take her in his arms, but Linda, conscious of sudden revulsion, struggled from him.

"No, no, Greg," she cried. "This is all wrong. I'm not free even to listen to you."

"Why not? Don't you love me?"

"I—I'm married to Steve."

Greg laughed sardonically. "So what? You married him only because I—" He floundered and stopped abruptly.

"Why don't you go on?" she demanded bitterly. "Say I married him because you jilted me and I had nowhere to turn."

"I guess I had that coming to me," Greg said humbly. "I'm—sorry, Linda. I'll take you home now."

Linda awakened the next morning with a splitting headache, to face a somber day. Staring from her bedroom window at the rain clouds lurking overhead, she was conscious of a feeling of defeat. She remembered Greg's words, and Brenda's too. So everyone knew that she was still madly in love with Greg. Everyone, that is, except Linda herself. At last a sadder and wiser woman left the bedroom, to find Steve at breakfast, engrossed in the morning papers.

He smiled pleasantly when she appeared, and his familiar, crooked grin stagged Linda to the heart.

"This is an unaccustomed pleasure," he said with a trace of irony, "having my wife breakfast with me. I'm sorry you weren't feeling well last night, and couldn't stay at the party. Did Greg bring you home at a reasonable hour?"

Linda looked up sharply, but Steve did not meet her startled gaze. He seemed completely absorbed in the newspaper beside his plate, and Linda realized that he had expected no answer to his question.

Linda scarcely touched her grapefruit. For the first time she was conscious of Steve as a man—the man she loved. Before she had regarded him as the gentleman, polite, always impersonal, an individual to help her forget her heartache. Now, seeing this lithe, muscular figure, the bronzed skin and amused blue eyes, Linda was filled with a sense of shame that she had not long before recognized Steve for the man he really was. She longed to break down the polite barrier between them, to know his thoughts, to share his happiness and disappointments.

"What a fool I've been," she told herself.

"What's the matter this morning?" Steve surveyed her suddenly. "Aren't you feeling well?"

"Perfectly," Linda lied. "I was just thinking."

"About what?"

"That I've never yet seen the zoo or the planetarium or musemu." Linda named the points of interest in a desperate attempt to hold Steve's attention, if only for a little while. "Your sister Mary promised to take me sightseeing, but since she's under the weather —"

"Shall we go and look them over?" Steve was gazing out the window. "I think I can qualify as a guide."

Linda started to refuse, thinking, "he's only being polite. He doesn't really want to go," but suddenly she was grasping at this one chance to have Steve to herself for one day. To have the memory to cherish.

Never before had Linda enjoyed herself as she did that day. Together they peered at the animals in Brookfield Zoo. They studied the brilliantly colored fish in the aquarium, flashed up and down the lake in a speed boat, to emerge damp from the spray and weak with hilarious laughter.

Linda now saw a new Steve, audacious, amusing, delightfully modern and charming. Gone was the sober, industrious writer. They were mirth-provoking, fun-loving companions. Riding on the second story of a Michigan Avenue bus, Linda said happily:

"I'm having the most marvelous time ever, Steve. You're —" she groped for a suitable word — "a marvellous guide," she finished lamely.

"Fun, huh?"

"Nothing better."

As they scrambled off the bus and climbed into the long, low-slung roadster, Steve said gaily: "What say we top everything off with hamburgers, with everything on?"

"Everything but onions," Linda wrinkled her nose.

Steve scoffed. "What's a hamburger without onions!"

"Better than a hamburger with onions."

Driving homeward after an orgy of hamburger sandwiches without onions, soda pop and fat, chocolate doughnuts, Linda relaxed contentedly against the leather seat.

"I'm saying it again, Steve. I had a wonderful day."

"So did I, Linda."

"Greg would think a day of sightseeing very, very dull." Linda had meant nothing by her mention of Greg's name, but she didn't know that Steve stiffened in the seat, his jaw grim.

"So would Brenda," he volunteered, and it was Linda's turn to flush, remembering the other woman in Steve's life. Miserable, unhappy, they said nothing more until the apartment had been reached. For each of them, unknowingly, their brief happiness was forgotten, lost in the depths of misunderstanding which, by a few simple words of explanation, could have been cleared away.

As it was, Steve strode grimly into the apartment to find a telegram lying on the oval hall table. He tore it open, scanned it briefly, and then called to Linda:

"Yes?"

"It's—it's bad news for you," Steve said.

"Oh, no!" Steve saw her whiten as she read the brief message:

"Mother gravely ill. Suggest you come at once."

"Steve, what shall I do?" Linda clung to him desperately, sobbing in his arms, not knowing how tenderly he held her, the expression in his eyes as he gazed down at the slim, shaking shoulders.

"I've been so cruel and thoughtless about mother .. sometimes not writing for weeks at a time, and now—now—"

"Poor little girl," he whispered gently. "Don't blame yourself for this. It's not your fault."

"But it is," she insisted. "It is. If only I'd been more considerate. Instead I waited until she was sick and needed me. Steve, I'm so selfish!"

She reached for Steve's handkerchief to wipe away the tears.

"You'll leave on the next train, of course," he said, "I'll make your reservations. Have Ellen pack your bags."

Linda yearned to ask Steve to accompany her to Prairievale. Even in her moment of distress she dreaded the homecoming, the whispers, the talk she was sure her trip would precipitate. Still, she felt she could not ask him to do so. It would be better to keep her chin up, to go alone.

Glancing down at her simple sports frock, she whispered, "I'll have to change to something more practical for travelling."

"You'd better hurry, then. I believe the train pulls out at nine, and it's after eight now."

The moment for which Steve had been waiting was past. Once again he was crisp and curt, as Linda fled to her bedroom to return, scant minutes later — calm and ready to face any emergency.

"I'm ready, Steve," she said quietly.

"Good." He took her bags. "Have you any instructions for Ellen before you go?"

Linda took a long breath, glancing around the apartment as though she might never see it again. "No," she whispered. "I—I'd rather leave now, quickly, before I lose courage."

"You'll never lose courage," he assured her gravely. "I'm very proud of you tonight, Linda, my dear."

Rumors Say Japan Made Unacceptable 'Suggestions' to Russia

Chungking, Sept. 8—(AP)— Reports circulated in foreign circles here today that Japanese Ambassador Naotake Sato had presented recent "suggestions" to Russia which the Soviet government found unacceptable, and that as a result a beak into open conflict between the two nations is expected at any moment.

These reports did not specify what suggestions Japan was alleged to have made. They were said, however, to have been laid before the Russians since the resignation of Shigenori Togo as Japanese Foreign Minister last week.

An army spokeman said at a press conference that China and no new knowledge of Japanese troop movements outside of China, but reports reaching other quarters in this capital continued to describe a steady flow of Japanese forces into Manchukuo, across the border from Siberia.

STATUE REMOVED

Tokyo, (from Japanese broadcasts,) Sept. 8—(AP)— A Domei dispatch from Singapore said yesterday one of Singapore's well-known landmarks for the last 55 years, the statute of Sir Thomas Stamford Raffles Founder of the City, is being removed from its place in front of the city to the Shoan (Singapore) museum for safe keeping. During the fighting last winter the statue was undamaged.

Americans Strafe Jap Ships Trying To Regain Lost Footholds in Solomons

Americans strafe Ja .. ..

Washington, Sept. 8, (AP)—American land and air power blasted today at scattered Japanese forces which gambled heavily with troops, ships and planes in an effort to reinforce their isolated patrols in the southeastern Solomon Islands.

Announcing the latest enemy attempts to regain lost footholds in the strategic Solomons, the United States navy reported yesterday that planes bombed and strafed fleets of small landing boats. Three were destroyed ,several others were damaged and "a large number of troops" were killed.

Presumably, the Japanese sucseded in landing some reinforcements. The navy communique, however, referred to the landings as "attempted" and added "our marine forces are continuing their efforts to search out and dispose" of isolated patrols which had withdrawn to the mountains and jungles after American occupation.

A United States air patrol discovered the latest enemy attempt at a landing Saturday near the western end of Guadalcanal.

Earlier, the navy reported, the Japanese sent several small detachments into the southeastern Solomons and a landing party was sighted Thursday near San Jorge Island about 65 miles northwest of the important San Jorge airfield on Guadalcanal.

Planes attacked the group of small vessels sinking several, the navy said, and raked the decks with machine-gun fire causing "heavy loss of life".

Japanese efforts to reinforce their small forces also brought several attacks by land-based bombers apparently from the enemy's mandated island bases to the north. Nipponese submarines, too, have shelled the Island at night. The navy termed the shelling "ineffectual" and said the bombings failed to cause serious damage.

Despite these attacks which exacted "a heavy toll of enemy planes", the communique added, the American forces have continued to land supplies and reinforcements for the marines who captured the Guadalcanal-Tulagi area August 7. Shore positions also have been strengthened and the Guadalcanal airfield developed.

Twenty-six bombers and twenty Zeros made the latest attack but three bombers and one fighter were shot down, the navy said.

MURDER CHARGE IS PREFERRED

Member of R.C.A. Accused of Murdering Mother and Sister

Guelph, Ont. Sept. 8 (CP)—Case of Clarence Dickinson of Guelph, charged with the murder of his mother and sister last Spring, was presented to a Grand Jury today as the Fall Assizes of the Supreme Court of Ontario opened here.

Dickinson, a member of the Royal Canadian Artillery, at the time the crime was committed, has been held in custody in the county jail awaiting the trial.

Mr. Justice W. D. Roach, of Toronto, is the presiding judge. Dickinson is being defended by Reid Bowlby, K.C., Hamilton, assisted by R. Stewart Clark, K.C., Guelph. E. S. Livermore, St. Thomas, is acting for the Crown.

The accused is alleged to have walked into the local police station the day the crime was committed, and placed a gun and a box of shells on the counter. Police investigating found Mrs. Dickinson dead in bed, and the accused's sister, slumped in a chair in the kitchen.

The last murder trial held in Guelph two years ago involved a soldier. At that time Pte. William Moulton was convicted of the murder of Pte. Arthur Phillips, at Niagara-on-the-Lake. Moulton was found guilty and sentenced to death. The sentence was later changed to life imprisonment.

Regiment Carries Objective in Less Than Ten Minutes

Weyburn, Sask., Sept 8. (CP)—The story of the "Fighting men from the Prairies" was told here last night by Ross Munro, Canadian Press War Correspondent, who brought to thousands of South Saskatchewan people an eye-witness account of the Dieppe raid

"It was the Prairie boys who showed everyone how to fight that day", said Mr. Munro as he paid tribute to members of the South Saskatchewan regiment who played a valiant part in the great assault.

A thousand people crowded into the Legion Hall at the memorial meeting to hear the war correspondent. Outside on the main street more than 1,000 chairs were placed in front of loud speakers. They were filled.

Next door in the City Hall auditorium, loud speakers carried his voice to another 200, while at Grace Church, other hundreds listened. Close to 4,000 came to Weyburn from surrounding districts to hear Mr. Munro.

"Until Dieppe the South Saskatchewan regiment did not have any particular distinction. It was just another regiment of the line in England. But coming back from Dieppe I heard more fighting men mention the S.S.R. than any other regiment", he added.

"The men of the S.S.R. made the best landing of the whole operation and captured their objective in less than ten minutes".

While the flames they had helped to ignite were still consuming vast areas of the German city of Saarbruecken, a Royal Canadian Air Force bomber crew landed at Ottawa midnight Wednesday(Sept. 2nd.) A little less than 22 hours after they had dropped their bomb load on that nerve centre of Nazi industry, five Canadian lads were back in the Capital city of their own country. "It was flaming like a ruddy circus" was one of the lad's reports on his last glimpse of Saarbruecken. Immediately after the lads had landed their Wellington bomber safely in Britain they transferred to another aircraft for the trans-Atlantic hop and they filed out on Rockliffe aerdrome grinning happily as if they had just been on a pleasure "flip." But these youngsters had completed more than a score of operations over enemy territory dropping thousands of pounds of bombs. They had participated in the 1,000 bomber attack on Cologne and every important raid since. Pictured above are the five lads as they were greeted by the Prime Minister and two of the Defence Ministers. From LEFT to RIGHT are Major the Hon. C. G. Power, M.C., Minister of National Defence for Air; Sergeant A. Loach, 19-year-old wireless-operator air gunner from Islington, Ontario; Col. the Hon. J. L. Lee, 29, of Kildonan, Man., observer; Prime Minister King; Flight Sergeant M. G. K. Sveinson, aged 24, wireless air gunner from Elfros, Sask.; Pilot Officer J. B. Higham, D.F.C., 22-year-old skipper of the aircraft, from Assiniboia, Sask.; and Air Vice Marshal N. R. Anderson, Acting Chief of the Air Staff. — R.C.A.F. Photo.

DAY AND NIGHT

German bombers made their appearance over England last related operations, indicating that hundreds of bombers participated. night, planes being noted over East Anglia, the home counties and London. But a communique said the few bombs dropped caused slight damage. One person was reported injured. Many flares were dropped in the London area, but heavy anti-aircraft fire drove off the planes before bombs were released. One invading bomber was reported destroyed.

The Flying Fortress raid yesterday brought forth a new story of a gallant crew and sturdy plane.

"In returning from the attack at Rotterdam", a statement issued by United States Army Air Forces headquarters said, "a formation of B-17S encountered enemy fighters and the engine of one aircraft was damaged.

"The pilot, Capt. Aquilla B. Hughes of Waco, Tex., endeavored to keep up with our formation by diving his aircraft, but in doing so the Flying Fortress fell behind and became a special target for 12 Focke-Wulf 190's which dived at tremendous speed from a higher altitude.

Brings Bomber Home

"On a second attack of 12 enemy aircraft, Sgt. Gilbert Goar of Clarkesdale, Miss., himself wounded shot down a F-2 190 which caught fire as it fell. Then Sgt. Jerry D. Johnson of Milwaukee fired a single burst from his .50 calibre machine gun into a second F-W 190 which also burst into smoke. The Navigator, Lieut. Morris E. Mansell of Houston, Tex., put a burst of .50 calibre bullets into a third F-W 190, but could not confirm its destruction".

Capt. Hughes fought off all attacks and brought his bomber back to his home airdrome. The running battle lasted 15 minutes.

"During this raid", the statement said, "twelve German fighters were destroyed and many others probably destroyed or damaged. ."

The Daily Mail's air correspondent, in writing that the Flying Fortresses had "amazed the experts again", said "it is highly probable that the achievement of the great American bombers in close co-operation with the R.A.F. fighter command will now convince the authorities both here and in Washington of the opportunity provided for a great new daylight blitz against the enemy".

Attempt to Locate Bases

Against the stray raiders which appeared over the London area during the night, it was recalled that two years ago last night the German air force launched the first great fire raid on Britain's capital, starting conflagrations in East End Dock areas.

The raiders which appeared last night dropped flares of an unusual type. Thousands who watched in the streets described them as as resembling "silver rain".

The only bombs, however, were in two areas of the home counties. It was considered likely the planes there were attempting to locate air bases of night bombers and fighters.

JAPANESE TROOPS

tion." Taking advantage of unfavorable flying weather which prevented Allied air attacks, Japanese naval units entered the bay Sunday and Monday night and shelled the Allied positions, it was reported.

The foresight and skill with which the intended Japanese invasion at Milne Bay was met and defeated indicated the enemy force advancing from Kokoda might be moving forward to unpleasant surprises.

Allied planes flying over the mountains were reported diving down to bomb and machine-gun Japanese supply lines and installations. Larges fires were started and direct hits scored on huts in which the Japanese had installed themselves, the communique said.

A group of 26 Japanese bombers with fighter escort attacked Port Moresby, but the damage caured was slight and there were no casualties, it was reported. One enemy bomber was destroyed.

An Allied bombing attack on Nubo, nine miles south of the Japanese base at Salamaua, New Guinea, indicated the Japanese have installed themselves there. Results of the raid were not observed, it was said.

walked into ambush and disaster.

Some Still at Milne Bay

Some Japanese were still lurking in the Milne Bay area on the extreme southeastern tip of New Guinea, but today's communique said the Allied mopping-up operations there were "nearing comple-losses still are heavy, they had dropped so sharply they are at a slower rate than replacements through new building.

Built Faster Than Sunk

Still, he acknowledged, the Nazis have been building submarines faster than the Allies have been able to sink them. Nevertheless, he said, the bombing of German shipbuilding yards "will have increasing effect upon the output and assembly of U-boats."

With direct reference to American air co-operation in the European theatre, he commented:-

"United States daylight bombing is a new and increasingly-important factor and there is no doubt that both in the accuracy of high-level aim and in mutually defensive power new possibilities of air warfare are being opened by our American comrades and their Flying Fortresses."

The peak strength of the 8th Army in Egypt, Mr. Churchill said, is due to the fact that "so large have been its reinforcements that it is to a large extent a new army which has been created while fighting actually was in progress."

"We are entitled to consider this last week's fighting as distinctly not unsatisfactory," the Prime Minister declared of the North African front, And, he went on:-

"The desert army will wecome every opportunity offered to them and further developments may be awaited with good heart."

Willkie Optimistic

This optimism corresponded closely with the view of Wendell Willkie who, arriving today at Ankara after a visit to the Egyptian front since the battle flared up again, reported that Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel had lost 100 of 290 first-line tanks and "is in a hole."

Mr. Churchill said:-

"I have never seen any army which deserved victory more and I await with confident hope the further unfolding of the scroll."

Of his visit to Moscow to talk with Joseph Stalin, Mr. Churchill conceded that "The Russians do not think we or the Americans have done enough so far to take the weight off them."

"This is not surprising in view of the terrific onslaught they are enduring which such tenacity" he continued.

But, he said, "we made their leader feel confidence in our loyal resolve to come to their aid as quickly as possible and without regard to losses or sacrifices involved so long as the contribution was toward victory."

The House cheered when Mr Churchill declared that "one thing stands out in my mind after this visit and that is the inexorable resolve of Soviet Russia to fight Hitlerism to the end."

Discussions Reported

The topics of discussion within the Kremlin must remain unannounced, Mr. Churchill said, but he toldthe House he had reported them to the war cabinet and that W. Averell Harriman, U. S. lend-lease co-ordinator who accompanied Mr. Churchill to Moscow, reported them to President Roosevelt.

"During the month of July Mr. Roosevelt sent a most important mission to this country," Mr. Churchill informed the House, recalling the London visit of Gen. George C. Marshall, United States army chief of staff; Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of naval operations, and Harry L. Hopkins as the United States President's personal representative.

Over 10 "very important days the whole field of war was explored and every problem of importance in it was scrutinized," he disclosed.

He spoke of "continued efforts" to unify the Allies both in command and action and, for the first time, cited one spectacular instance of co-operation.

"As far back as March," he related, "I asked President Roosevelt to loan me shipping to transport an additional 40,000 or 50,000 men to the Middle East so as to have something to bear an oar on, so as to have a force which we could turn in various theatres in which danger might develop.

President Consented to Plan

"The President consented and placed at our disposal a number of American ships and, in consequence, we had rounding the Cape a very large and well-equipped force which could be directed immediately to Egypt.

"It is to that that the improvement and maintenance of our forces in that raging must be largely attributed."

Mr. Churchill warned that "When the hour of liberation strikes in Europe, as strike it must, it will also be the hour of retribution," and added:—

"Particularly do I identify His Majesty's Government, and Commons with the stolen words of President Roosevelt that those guilty of Nazi crimes will have to stand before tribunals in every land where their atrocities have been committed in order that an indelible warning may be given to future ages and that successive generations may say, 'So perish all who do the like again'."

Mr. Churchill disclosed that at one time after the collapse of France he had feared Hitler might use the political prestige of his victories to establish himself as "a kind of Charlemagne of Europe and would unite many countries under German sway while, at the same time, pointing to our island as the author of the blockade and the cause of all their woes." has vanished: "Germany is now more hated in every country in Europe than any race has been since the human record began."

House Empties Quickly

Arthur Greenwood, Labor Leader who was first speaker in the war debate scheduled to follow Mr. Churchill's review, declared that Britons felt too little had been done for Russia and expressed hope that the Prime Minister's flight to Moscow "may lead to closer co-operation".

The House emptied so quickly after Mr. Churchill's speech that Members calling for a count found less than a quorum. The necessary attendance was supplied from the lobbies, but the house adjourned for the day without hearing any major criticism of the Prime Minister's report.

"Our warfare on U-boats," he added, "has been more successful than at any other period in the war."

The Germans, Mr. Churchill said, could see at British ports "movements we are unable to conceal" and observe a "steady and rapid influx into these islands of United States divisions and other troops".

The enemy, Mr. Churchill went on, does not know "when and where, with what force and in what direction he will be smitten. . . All this, it is desirable, should be left to his own fulminations unassisted by British or American advice and comment".

Again, the Prime Minister said: "There is no reason to suppose that we have not the means on victory in our hands providing that the utmost in human power is done here and in the United States".

Mr. Churchill warned the House that "losses at sea still are very heavy", but he gave it the reassuring word that August and the first week of September showed a "definite improvement" over previous months.

Ship Production Above Sinkings

He disclosed furthermore, that the production of merchant ships in the United Nations "definitely has crossed and maintained itself above the line of sinkings".

Arrival of the recent convoy at Malta guaranteed the "life and resistance" of the fortress for "a good many months to come", he said.

The price paid by the Royal Navy, said the Prime Minister in his first speech in parliament since his conversations in Moscow with Joseph Stalin, "was not excessive for the results obtained".

This also was Mr. Churchill's first report to the Commons since it gave him a substantial majority to override a motion of censure nine weeks ago and the Prime Minister thanked the members for the vote as proof to the world of "the inflexible steadfastness of Parliament."

Malta Bright as Gem in King's Crown

He described Malta as a gem "as bright as shines in the King's crown" and said the effectiveness of the Mediterranean isle against any communications with North Africa was vital to the Middle East's strategic situation.

He called the re-supplying of Malta, after a running battle with enemy sea and air forcesthrough the Mediterranean, new proof of "the value of aircraft carriers" and the increasing power of the gunnery of the fleet and armed merchantmen.

Of the Russian front, Mr. Churchill had but one terse comment, an oblique reference to the fact that Hitler still is to gain his objective against the Soviet Union and that another Russian winter is not far behind the Axis armies.

"I will only at this moment say," the Prime Minister observed, "it is the eight of September."

He informed the Commons that "complete agreement" has existed between Britain and the United States on policy in waging global war since the end of July.

He also disclosed that the British heavy cruiser Shropshire has been transferred to the Australian navy to compensate it for the loss of its own cruiser Canberra.

EXECUTIVEPOWERS

The president said in his message that agriculture ceilings ought to be permitted at either parity or the price levels which prevailed at some recent date, whichever was higher, leading some legislators to believe there might be grounds for compromise somewhere between th 100 and 110-per-cent levels.

The president's contention he had executive powers to carry out his objectives found widespread dispute in Congress.

Law Explained

Members of the senate finance committee, who already have declined to close some of the tax loopholes which the president cited in his message, appeared unlikely to accept is recommendation for rate increases which would limit individual incomes to $25,000 a year. They speeded consideration of the new revenue measure in an attempt to bring it before the senate by Sept. 21.

In his message to congress, the president said he is prepared to act in an executive capacity to stabilize wages, but insisted that farm prices must also be controlled. He contended the present law would permit the average of all farm commodities to rise to 116 per cent of parity.

Legislation to be introduced in the senate and house of representatives this week to carry out his objectives thus is expected to call for repeal of section 3 of the price control act which contains these restrictions on the operation of price ceilings.

Beyond that, the legislation is expected to outline a broad new economic authority which would be headed by an administrator who would take over much of the work of controlling the cost of living.

DECISION

sive".

By implication, he said that at least 528000 American troops alread have been sent overseas, or as he put it, more than three times the number sent to France in the first nine months of the last war.

On the Russian front, he said the Germans "are still unable to gain the smashing victory which, almost a year ago, Hitler announced he had already achieved". Russia will hold out despite any setbacks, he said, and with the help of her Allies will ultimately "drive every Nazi from her soil".

In the Pacific, he warned that the Japanese, while stopped in one major offensive, "still possess great strength" and undoubtedly will strike hard again.

The battle for domination of the Mediterranean and Middle East area has been joined, he said, with the Axis Powers fighting to gain contact with the Japanese navy.

Home Front Too Complacent

But on the home front, the President, said, "we are not doing enough".

"Wars are not won by people who are concerned primarily with their own comfort, their own convenience, their own pocket books," he said.

In his demand for legislative control over the cost of living, with particular emphasis on farm prices, the President gave solemn assurance that "failure to solve this problem here at home—and to solve it now —will make more difficult the winning of this war".

"If the vicious spiral of inflation ever gets under way", he said, "the whole economic system will stagger. Prices and wages will go up so rapidly that the entire production program will be endangered. The cost of the war, paid by taxpayers, will jump beyond all present calculations. It will mean an uncontrollable rise in prices and in wages which can result in raising the over-all cost of living as high as another twenty per cent".

"Over-all stabilization of prices, salaries, wages and profits is necessary to the continued increasing production of planes and tanks and ships and guns".

Tax Collections Reported To Be Exceptionally Good

Said by City Hall officials to be one of the best collections in the history of the city, taxes amounting to slightly over 75 per cent of the total reached the city exchequer on Sept 3, the final day of the third payment instalment. The fourth and final payment falls due on November 1st with the 3rd being the final date.

City Hall officials today expressed themselves as being highly satisfied with the response of the tax-paying public.

The final payment in May of this year saw a high percentage of taxes paid, many people paying in a lump sum. Others have maintained their payments, and it is expected that practically all of the taxes will be in the hands of the city treasurer on or before November 3rd.

POWERFUL TIME BOMB DISCOVERED

Man Who Turned it Over to Guard and Was Arrested Says He Planted it to Show This Could be Done

Newark, N.J., Sept. 8 (AP) —The discovery of a powerful time bomb in the Western Electric Company's Yearny plant was disclosed by the Federal Bureau of Investigation today with the arrest of an employee who supposedly had found it.

E. E. Conroy, assistant F.B.I. director, said the bomb had been set to explode at 11 p.m., Sunday, but that at 10.42 p.m., it was turned over to company guards by Bernard Joseph O'Donnell, 21. Guards ripped out wires to prevent a detonation.

Had the bomb exploded in a strategic spot, Conroy said, it could have killed 100 persons.

O'Donnell was charged with attempted sabotage, but Conroy said the prisoner protested he had made and planted the bomb only as heroics and to demonstrate that it could be done.

POLICE COURT

Belleville's city post-holiday police court, held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd, saw several pleas of guilty to minor charges such as violations of the city parking bylaws.

Michael O'Brien, no address, was the only one of several men, who were convicted of the folly of consuming too much holiday "wobble water", to fail paying the conventional ten and costs and therefore was committed to the common jail for 14 days in default of the payment of the assessed fine.

Had Liquor Illegally

Conrad Barnhardt, Tyendinaga, enhanced the city's coffers to the extent of $5.00 and costs after being convicted of being found in the illegal possession of spirits.

McAllister Remanded

Glen A. McAllister, 37-year-old Montreal man, who was arrested in Toronto ten days ago on charges of breaking and entering the Elite jewelry store and stealing therefrom a number of diamond rings, appeared before the court again today, but at the request of Acting Chief Harman the matter was again enlarged for one week. "The police wish to continue investigations in this matter", revealed Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C.

TWO SOLDIER BOYS RECEIVE DUCKING

Two khaki-clad soldier boys received an unsuspected ducking in the Belleville harbor, when the canoe in which they were paddling capsized. Altough they were unable to swim the two soldiers managed to cling to the over-turned craft until assistance came from Tisdale's nearby boat livery. The boys received little less than a ducking and continued on their respective ways after drying their outer garments.

ROMMEL IN HOLE

Tracked

But the bulk of the tank and infantry forces with which Rommel launched his drive had back-tracked to an area within a few miles of their jumping-off point. Allied planes, British light tanks, armored cars and mobile guns maintained their pressure.

Defensive power was illustrated by the wreckage of Axis tanks and trucks strewn across the battlefield. Rommel was reported to have told his troops just eight days ago that "we'll be in Cairo next week."

Among the invasion dead was listed one of Rommel's most trusted aides, Gen. Georg Von Bismarck, a distant relative of the Iron Chancellor, Count Otto Von Bismarck, who created the first German Reich in 1870.

Prisoners reported the death of the general. They said he had taken command of an armored division in the desert after service in Russia.

British lines remained intact all along the El Alamein front from the Mediterranean to the Qattara Depression.

Texas Flier Gets 2 Messerschmitts

Flt. Lt. J. H. Curry, of Dallas, Texas, a member of the R.C.A.F. shot down two Messerschmitts in dogfights over the central sector yesterday.

British fleet headquarters at Alexandria announced that British submarines operating against Axis supply lines in the Mediterranean had sunk five large and two medium-sized merchant ships and damaged three others recently.

Admiral Sir Henry Harwood, commander-in-chief, said heavy inroads were being made upon German and Italian shipping despite an increase in both surface and air protection. He reported Bengasi and Tobruk, Libya, were the chief ports of entry for reinforcements and war supplies consigned to Rommel.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SOCIETY OBSERVES DAY OF PRAYER

Christian Science Society joined other churches in observing Sunday at a "Day of Prayer". During the service the following message from the Board of Directors was read from the desk:

"It is our most earnest hope and prayer that Christian Scientists everywhere will do all within their power to speed the fulfilment of our Leader's prophecy—

"Brave Britain, blest America!
Unite your battle-plan;
Victorious, all who live it,—
The love for God and man'.

At the close of the service the congregation sang the National Anthem.

City Schools Reopen With Increased Registration As 2,087 Return To Study

School bells sounded in Belleville today calling to the local seats of knowledge sub-teen aged boys and girls to return to their studies following two months of hilarious vacation period. Registration in the four public schools and St. Michael's Academy totalled well over the two thousand mark in attendance this morning when a total of 2,087 were registered in the five primary schools. This total for a first-day registration is slightly in advance to previous years, it was estimated.

The largest enrollment was recorded at Queen Alexandra School where a total of 470 youthful pupils resumed their studies. Of this number fifty were beginners and twenty were new-comers to the school district, revealed Principal W. G. Anderson. Next was Queen Victoria School, where Principal A. C. Wilkin stated that a total of 460 pupils had been enrolled today of which forty were beginners and twenty newly-admitted students. Third in attendance was St. Michael's Academy, where 416 students were registered, of which sixty were beginners. At Queen Mary School a total of 370 were enrolled, forty-seven being beginners and fifteen new-comers to the district, Principal C. I. Frederick revealed. At King George School Principal C. A. Brown announced an enrollment of 370 of which forty-six were beginners and twelve new students.

The Belleville Collegiate will not re-open until September 21st.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.A.F. Somewhere in England, Sept. 5 —(CP)— PO. J. E. Loree of Guelph, Ont., has destroyed an Axis aircraft and is $18 wealthier as the result of a shipboard bet made while two Australians and two other Canadians were travelling to the Middle East.

There was such an argument as to which of the five would be the first to get an enemy machine that they drew up a contract, each promising to pay one pound to the winner. Then they went off to different squadrons.

Loree settled the argument within a few days, during a mass attack on two neighboring landing fields. Flying a fighter-bomber, Loree dived after a Junkers 88 and sent the bomber crashing in flames.

Sgt. Pilot Mart Naylor of Vancouver starred in a track meet for R.C.A.F. personnel in the Midlands the day after he spent a harrowing 20 minutes bobbing around in the North Sea.

A mishap to his aircraft gave Naylor no time to float his dinghy when the machine hit the water and he was forced to rely on his "Mae West" until rescuers picked him up together with his operator.

After a night in hospital, Naylor flew back to his night fighter squadron and contributed 13 points to their winning total. He placed third in the individual honors race winning the hop, step and jump and broad jump, and taking second in the 100-yard dash.

A teammate, Flt. Lt. E. L. McMillan of Chatham, Ont., came from a victory in the sky to win valuable points for his team. He placed second in the three-mile race after losing a close decision for third in the mile. McMillan destroyed a DO217 a couple of days before the meet.

Army co-operation squadrons of the R.C.A.F. are being equipped with the new Mustang fighter-reconnaissance plane, an American aircraft now in service with the R.A.F.

Trial performances tickled the Canadian pilots who feel they have the machine they need for big operational jobs with the army. The squadrons have been on manoeuvres several times with their new planes, co-operating with Canadian infantrymen and armored formations.

The Mustang in outward appearance somewhat resembles the ME 109E but has a more graceful body. It has a wing span of 37 feet three inches and is 31 feet three inches long. Powered by an 1,150-horsepower liquid-cooled engine, it carries machine guns in wings and fuselage.

A Fighter Command station in Kent with its satellite airdromes has become the first in Britain to reach a score of 900 enemy aircraft destroyed since the start of the war.

An Englishman, an Australian and a New Zealander were responsible for topping the 900 mark and in doing so created a thorny problem for the station intelligence officer. Each shot down a Focke-Wulf 190 at approximately the same time, so it probably never will be known which of the three got No. 900.

TWO BIKES STOLEN FROM PARKING LOT

The continued disappearance of bicycles in Belleville confronted city police over the holiday when two bikes were stolen from the Bell theatre parking lot on Saturday night. The bikes are the property of Leon Spafford, Herchimer Ave., and Thomas Stepnenson, 105 Great St. James Street. City police are convinced that the epidemic of bicycle stealing in Belleville is being perpetrated by the same parties. who have little use for the bikes except for jay-riding and a severe penalty awaits the alleged culprits when they are apprehended and convicted.

FRANKFURT RAIDED BY STRONG R. A. F. FORCE

SOVIET ARMY HOLDING FIRM AT STALINGRAD

Sixth Night Raid In Last Eight Nights Gives Nazis No Rest

Other Targets In Rhineland Attacked And Large Fires Left Burning

7 BOMBERS MISSING

London, Sept. 9 —(CP)— British bombers in their sixth night raid on Germany of eight nights this months struck in strong force last night at Frankfurt, the Air Ministry announced today.

Large fires were burning, the Air Ministry said.

While the principal objective was Frankfurt, last raided on the night of Aug. 24, other targets in the Rhineland also were hit.

It was the 35th time the R.A.F. has struck at Frankfurt, a leading commercial city and important Rhineland port and rail centre more than 400 miles from British bomber bases.

Fighter Command aircraft at the same time carried out offensive patrols over German-occupied territory.

Seven bombers were reported missing from the Rhineland raids, three fighters from the patrol operations, and two Coast Command aircraft from patrol work yesterday.

The night raids followed daylight assaults by Boston bombers upon German submarine nests at Le Havre and Cherbourg.

Only two nights this months has German sleep gone undisturbed by the drone of British bombers overhead or the crash of their explosives.

Weather Improving

Improving weather apparently helped in the intensification of the bombing campaign through which Air Marshal Sir Arthur Harris has pledged: "We are going to scourage the Third Reich from end to end."

Only two R.A.F. raids were made upon Germany during the first eight nights of July; three in the first night of August.

As to German raids on Britain last night, British authorities said there was little activity and two Nazi planes were shot down.

German pilots used dozens of flares to light up an East Anglian town for bombardment. Propaganda leaflets—their contents withheld by authorities—were dropped in southern England.

Houses Destroyed

Bombs loosed upon a southwest coast town before nightfall destroyed several houses and killed a man and three children.

Two escorting fighters failed to return from the bombing of the docks at Le Havre and Cherbourg, but there was no report of losses among the participating bombers.

Watchers at a town on the south coast of England said the air throbbed with the continuous thunder of motors as the R.A.F. squadrons sped through star-lit skies to the night attack upon Germany.

TWO AIRMEN KILLED

Calgary, Sept. 9 (CP)—No. 4 command, Royal Canadian Air Force, announced last night that the airmen killed in the crash of a training plane Sunday near De Winton, Alta., were: Sgt. Pilot W. A. Howell of Glossop, Derbyshire, England, and LAC J. R. Thompson of Ipswich, England.

Maj. H. Proctor, Paratroop Leader, Killed in Jump

Fort Benning, Ga., Sept. 9—(AP)—Brig.-Gen. George P. Howell, Commanant of the United States Army Parachute School, announced today that Maj. Hilton D. Proctor, 30, leader of a contingent of Canadian paratroopers, was killed in a jump here Monday when a transport plane sheared into his parachute.

The army said announcement of the accident was withheld pending clearance with Canadian authorities.

Maj. Proctor, a native of Ottawa, plummetted to earth after a plane following his own fouled his newly-opened chute, and army investigators said it was probable he was killed instantly by contact with the plane. The body was to be flown to his home in Ottawa today, accompanied by a representative of the Canadian army and a representative of Fort Benning. He is survived by his widow and one daughter.

Led Canadians to Fort Benning

Maj. Proctor led a group of 27 officers and men, Canada's first paratroopers, here five weeks ago for training at this school. The paratroopers were the "guiding lights" for the first Canadian Parachute Battalion to be trained at Shilo, Man.

The Canadians will be graduated from the school Saturday.

Maj. R. F. Routh, 28, of Montreal, was second in command of the Canadians here. He and Maj. Proctor, and the other four officers received exactly the same training as the non-commissioned men who were chosen for volunteers for the new force.

Besides Maj. Proctor and Maj. Routh the other officers were: Lieut. C. F. Hyoman of Charlottetown, attached to the group temporarily from the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps to discuss medical problems with American Medical Officers of the United States parachute troops; Capt. H. A. Fauqier, brother of the R.C.A.F.'s famed Wing Cmdr. Johnny Fauqier; Lieut. T. W. Brier of St. Johns, Que., and Lieut. H.K. Robinson and Lieut. Marcel Cote of Montreal.

ALLIES SLOW UP JAPANESE FORCES IN NEW GUINEA

Planes Also Attack Several Battleships And a Destroyer Believed Damaged

PATROL SKIRMISHES

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Sept. 9 (CP)—Allied forces have slowed up Japanese troops in the steep and rocky aproaches to "The Gap"—a mountain pass 8000 feet up on the Owen Stanley Range about 50 miles from the important Allied base at Port Moresby—and Australian troops have practically destroyed 700 Japanese troops in the Milne Bay area of New Guinea, Allied Headquarters, announced today.

While the defenders were tightening their grip on this northern bastion of Australia in the face of determined Japanese infiltration Allied bombers and torpedo-carrying planes attacked Japanese warships supporting the invaders and probably damaged a destroyer.

Two Japanese warships, a cruiser and a destroyer, were discovered Monday near Normanby island and attacked under poor weather conditions, a communique said. Fighter planes strafed the deck of the warcraft.

Two more attacks were made on the warships among the Tobriand Islands yesterday and it was there that a destroyer probably was hit. Weather conditions made observation of results difficult.

Had Shelled Milne Bay Area

The warships apparently were those which shelled Allied positions Sunday in the Milne Bay area of the Southeastern tip of New Guinea, where a Japanese landing force now has been practically destroyed, it was declared. This force was named the Kure No. 5 landing force, presumably after the Kure naval base near Nagasaki, Japan.

Japanese casualties on this expedition was estimated at approximately 700.

Nine Japanese bombers and five fighters attacked the Milne Bay positions yesterday, but damage and casualties were listed as slight.

After Japanese forces were reported yesterday in contact with Allied defence positions north of the key mountain pass leading to Port Moresby, 50 miles to the Southwest, the situation today was described as static.

A headquarters spokesman said the area of conflict there lies at an altitude of 6,000 feet in a pass which leads from Kokoda to Port Moresby. The fighting has been on the Kokoda side of the mountains and about 2,000 feet south of "The

Germany's Best Tanks Smashed As Well as Illusion of Invincibility

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

With American Tank Crews in Egypt's Western Desert, September 9—(AP)—Scattered over the desert are wrecks of German tanks destroyed by British and American tank crews in thwarting Marshal Erwin Rommel's latest drive toward the valley of the Nile.

British crews knocked out by far the larger number of the Nazi tanks, as only a small fraction of the Allied armored formations was composed of Americans.

(Wendell Willkie said in Ankara that, in all, the Allies smashed 100 of the 290 first-line tanks at Rommel's disposal.)

These were the tanks which were considered virtually invincible as they broke through France's defences two year ago and later models were strengthened by face-hardened armor plates.

If there are any illusions left about the invincibility of German tanks one has only to look at these burned-out and smashed junk heaps which once were Hitler's armored pride and joy.

It can be said safety of the Americans' part in the action that the number of tanks which they destroyed was greater than the total of American-manned tanks in action.

The score of one American tank alone is five German tanks—not merely disabled but blown to bits.

Not a single fatality has been reported among the Americans.

One group of American-manned tanks went into action the first day of Rommel's offensive August 31. One tank in this group was commanded by Staff Sgt. John E. Tindall.

Tindall's gunner was Sgt. Barney Rossi, of Brooklyn, (who said in a post-battle interview that "If we'd had our latest tanks we'd have moldered all dem bums.") Today, Rossi said:

"We were wakened at 2 a.m., Monday and told that the Germans had started to attack.

"We were in position by 3.30. It was on Ragill Ridge. We waited all day but nothing happened until 5.30 in the afternoon when the Stukas bombed us. Half an hour

Fire Severely Damages Former Liner Manhattan, Now Naval Transport

Charred Hulk of 24,000-Ton Ship Salvaged and Towed to Atlantic Coast Port — Fire at Sea of 'Undetermined Origin' — Thrilling Rescue of Passengers and Crew Made by U. S. Naval Craft

1,600 PASSENGERS AND CREW SAVED

Washington, Sept. 9 — (AP) — The naval transport Wakefield, formerly the liner Manhattan, was severely damaged by a fire at sea Sept. 3, the United States Navy announced today, but more than 1,600 passengers and crew members were removed without loss of life.

The charred hulk of the 24,000-ton ship, one time queen of the United States merchant fleet, has now been salvaged and towed to an Atlantic coast port, a navy statement said.

Adding that "preliminary reports indicate that all the passengers and crew were safe," the navy said several were injured.

The fire was described as being of "undetermined origin."

Breaks Out on Deck Level

It broke out on one deck level and spread swiftly throughout the 10-year-old, $10,000,000 ship.

It soon became necessary to remove the more than 1,000 passengers, many of whom were civilians, the others presumably being men in the naval service, the navy related.

There were, according to the vessel's normal complement, 600 to 700 officers and crewmen aboard, commanded by Cmdr. Harold Gardner Bradbury, of Port Angeles, Wash., a coast guard officer.

The navy said the rescue was brought about in a thrilling manner by warships protecting the convoy in which the Wakefield was travelling to an East coast port.

A cruiser manoeuvred its bow alongside the stern of the transport and a destroyer placed itself along the side. At these close quarters the passengers were transferred rapidly from the blazing exliner.

Necessary for Crew to Leave

The crew remained aboard the ship fighting to bring the fire under control, the navy account continued, but their efforts were unsuccessful and it soon became necessary for them also to transfer to the cruiser.

Aboard that ship they waited until the intensity of the fire had decreased somewhat and Cmdr. Bradbury then led a special fire fighting party back aboard the transport and succeeded in bringing the flames under control.

Meanwhile tugs and salvage craft had been summoned and when they arrived they began successful towing operations. They finally delivered the former Manhattan to port.

The vessel was built in 1932 for the United States lines by the New York Shipbuilding Company at Camden, N. J.

The navy said that at the time of her completion she was the largest transatlantic liner built in the United States.

The Manhattan was taken over by the navy in 1941 and renamed the Wakefield in accordance with the navy's policy of naming transports for historic shrines, in this instance the birthplace of George Washington.

SALUM-MATRUH ROAD BOMBED BY BRITISH FIGHTERS

Trucks, Tank and Staff Cars Destroyed, Disrupting Rommel's Supply Lines

DESTROYER HIT

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 9 —(AP)— Long-range British fighters attacked Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's supply lines along the Salum-Matruh road yesterday, destroying trucks, tank cars and staff cars, and in air fights over the El Alamein battlefield shot down three German planes, a communique from British headquarters said today.

On the ground there was little save machine-gun exchanges in the northern and central sectors to report, the communique said.

One large Italian plane and an unidentified biplane were destroyed on the ground by Allied fighters.

One destroyer and two merchant vessels were hit by bombs Monday night during an attack by bomber and torpedo aircraft on a southbound Axis convoy in the central Mediterranean, the communique said. One of the vessels was listing and pouring black smoke from the stern when last seen.

Total Blackout Ordered

A total blackout was ordered for the northern Nile delta area starting last night.

British and United States airmen have pounded the Axis supply port of Tobruk with 3,000 tons of bombs since June 23 and the flying trip to the city has been labelled the "milk run" by Allied pilots, R.A.F. headquarters said.

TO TOUR DOMINION

Montreal, Sept. 9 (CP)—Maj.-Gen. J Knox, Chief Controller of the British Territorial Service and Col. E. M. Gowers, Chief commander of the Auxiliary Transport Service, on a tour of Canadian Women's Army Corps camps in Canada, arrived here yesterday.

SUGAR PURCHASE MAY BE MADE FOR ONE MONTH

Vouchers for Purchase of Home Canning Invalid After September 30

Ottawa, Sept. 9—(CP)—Revision of the sugar rationing regulations to allow consumers to buy four-weeks' supply at one time was announced last night by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

Simultaneously, the board announced abolition of sugar purchase vouchers for home canning after Sept. 30 and new quota systems for industrial users, public caterers and institutions.

Prior to last night's order, the announcement said, each numbered coupon of the temporary ration cards represented two weeks' supply at the rate of one-half pound per person per week. The new regulations validate two sugar coupons per month and hence permit a person to buy a full month's supply of two pounds at one time.

Sugar coupons 1 and 2 in the new ration books became valid on Monday, Sept. 7; numbers 3 and 4 may be used on and after Oct. 5. The last one, number 13, will not be accepted before Feb. 22, 1943. The coupons continue to be good for the purchase of sugar at any time after their valid dates. This also applies to unused coupons from the temporary ration cards.

Until the end of September sugar may still be obtained by purchase voucher for home canning purposes, but it must not be used later than Oct. 31. The announcement said the board will introduce new provisions in plenty of time for the next canning season.

It added: "For preserving and canning perishable fresh fruits, the ratio is one-half pound of sugar for each pound of fruit, or, if the preserving or canning is done by the syrup method, the syrup used must not contain more than one part of sugar to two parts of water. Until further notice, sugar for apples may be had at the rate of one pound of sugar for eight of apples.

VICHY PROTEST OVER BOMBINGS REJECTED BY U. S.

U. S. Says Attacks Will Continue on German Factories At Work in France

MAY CAUSE BREAK

By WADE WERNER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 9 —(AP)— Rupture of United States relations with Vichy loomed again today on the diplomatic horizon.

This time it was Vichy's protest against American raids over occupied France, and the United States' sharp rejection of that protest, which revived talk of an imminent break.

The protest, delivered personally to the American Charge D'Affaires in Vichy by the pro-Axis Chief of Government, Pierre Laval, was "immediately" rejected, the State Department said last night, and Laval was notified the bombing of German military plants in France would continue.

Laval protested specifically against recent bombings of Le Havre and Rouen both in the occupied zone in which he asserted there were numerous civilian casualties.

Rejecting the protest and assuring Laval the attacks would continue, the American Charge D'Affaires, S. Pinkey Tuck, said "military plants operated by or for Germany and other German military properties in France will be bombed at every opportunity in the future."

No Desire to Cause Suffering

Tuck emphasized that Americans have no desire to see Frenchmen suffer any more than can be avoided, "since they have already suffered to an incalculable extent under German occupation," but he left no doubt that attacks on German objectives would be continued regardless of protests.

While the bluntness of the American rejection caused new speculation as to a possible break with Vichy, there was no indication that the State Department contemplated such a step. Observers familiar with the recurrent crisis in Vichy-United States relations expected that a break, if it came, would be on Vichy's initiative under German pressure.

Entering into such speculations were reports that Germany was pressing Vichy for permission to station troops and planes at Dakar, strategic French base on Africa's west coast.

VICHY, Sept. 9 — (AP) — A source close to the Laval government said today that Washington's rejection of the Vichy protest over the American air raids on German-occupied France had not yet been received officially.

This informant, who insisted that his name must not be disclosed, asserted that the bombing of Rouen —the immediate cause of the protest — was "at Stalin's orders."

"The French nation will not be duped," he declared, adding that "such raids will only succeed in uniting the indignant French around their legitimate government against their real enemies."

British Gun Factory Shipped Piece by Piece to United States

Philadelphia, Sept. 9 —AP)— A gun factory which six months ago stood in a bomb-scarred city in England has been dismantled and shipped piece by piece to the United States, Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., lend-lease administrator, said today. It was easier and faster to ship the factory than to ship the guns.

Stettinius, in an article in the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post, cited the transfer to show that lend-lease now is "no longer a one-way street" directly aiding only United States allies.

Britain has also sent "several thousand" barrage balloons to "protect vital spots along our coasts" and from England and other Allied nations the Government has received "guns and tools, military and scientific information —anything which they can spare and we are in a better spot to use than they are."

Stettinius added, however, that "we are still paying for many of the things we get" from United Nations partners, and explained:-

". . . It is a vital part of our policy to prevent the war from destroying our Allies' finances . . . Our Allies have practically exhausted their dollar reserves. The only way they can get dollars to pay for necessities not covered by lend-lease is by selling things to us," he wrote.

"Doctor Goebbels was confident that when the British dollar balances ran out in the spring of 1941 the war would be practically over," he wrote. "He told the German generals that 'plutocratic' Americans would never supply arms to Britain unless we saw cash on the barrelhead. Well, the doctor was wrong."

No Withdrawals By Russian Troops In Last 36 Hours

Ten German Tri-Motored Planes Destroyed at Axis Airdrome in North

CAUCASUS FRONT FIRM

By EDDY GILMORE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Sept. 9 (AP)—Reinforced German divisions concentrated attacks upon the western defences of Stalingrad today in an effort to widen a hard-won wedge and the situation was described here as "particularly complicated," but the Red Army was reported holding fiercely in every sector."

The Russians said Nazi tanks and infantry, sheltered by dive-bombers had deepened the salient from the west yesterday while Soviet troops beat off flanking attacks from the southwest.

Today's mid-day communique, however, mentioned no new withdrawals and announced further gains in the central front offensive.

Russian troops dislodged the enemy from a fortified district west of Moscow and occupied three more settlements, it said. They killed 400 Germans and captured prisoners and war supplies.

Soviet artillery turned back a preliminary thrust by armored vanguards of the divisions arrayed west of Stalingrad and see-saw fighting for a village cost the invaders five tanks and about 450 officers and men, the Soviet information bureau said.

Counter-attacking Red Army tanks were declared to have upset a flanking offensive on the steppes southwest of the Volga River arsenal city named for Premier Stalin.

Nine Tanks Disabled

"Nine German tanks were disabled and a company of Hitlerites annihilated," it was announced.

Mixed brigades of Red Navy and Red Army men are reported fighting tenaciously to contain German and Rumanian forces which had seized a salient within the defences of the fortified naval station of Novorossisk, on the Black Sea.

The battle of the central Caucasus apparently was stabilizing in the Mozdok region of the Terek River valley, 50 miles or more west of the Grozny oil fields. The strongest Soviet counter-action during the weeks of dogged retreat some 350 miles down the Baku railway from Rostov was reported against a Nazi column which had crossed the Terek.

"Soviet infantry, co-operating with artillery and anti-tank riflemen, disabled or destroyed 10 German tanks and six armored cars and killed about 850 officers and men," a communique said.

"The enemy, unable to withstand the attack, attempted to withdraw from the action. Our troops inflicted a flanking blow and are continuing the fight aiming to annihilate the group."

8 Killed When Bomber Crashes Apartment Bldg.

Newark, O., Sept. 9—(AP)—The mid-day crash of a twin-motored United States army bomber into an apartment building killed eight persons—six occupants of the plane and two women civilians, authorities reported today.

City firemen, directed by army officers investigating the accident, early today found the body of Mrs. A. L. Weston, 62-year-old widow, under debris of the two-storey structure which she owned. Mrs. Dollie Campbell, returning from a shopping trip, was killed while walking by the building.

Salvage workers still probed the wreckage for the bodies of two of the plane's occpants, Lieut. Russell E. Newlin, 30, of Indianapolis, and O. A. Pecon of Dayton, O., civilian crew chief at Wright Field.

One wing broken, the bomber hedge-hopped over Newark's business district yesterday noon, damaged a residence and struck the Weston building, which was demolished as a gasoline tank ripped loose from the plane and exploded.

Second earlier, two men leaped from the low-flying bomber and plummeted to death when their parachutes failed to open.

At Wright Field, Dayton, where the ship took off, its occupants were identified as Col. Douglas M. Kilpatrick, 33, of Houma, La., pilot; Lieut. Lawrence S. Lawyer, 29, of Freeport, Ill., co-pilot; Pte. Charles Watson and Cpl. R. A. Arens, 21, both of Dayton, Lieut. Newlin and Pecon.

Assassins Kill Police Sergeant

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Sept. 9 —(CP)—Assassins on bicycles killed Police Sergeant Dennis O'Brien of Dublin this morning as he drove away from his home at Ballyboden, County Dublin, it was reported from Eire's capital. One of the cyclists carried a tommy-gun. The attackers escaped.

The motive for the killing was not known.

Northern Ireland has increased and armed her guards along the Eire border as a result of disorders, including sniping. Linked with agitation by the outlawed Irish Republican Army against the presence of British and United States troops in Northern Ireland.

Cargo-Carrying Aircraft Ordered By Great Britain

London, Sept. 9. (CP)—The British government has placed orders for cargo-carrying aircraft and a "suitable production program has been arranged", Col. Llewellin, Minister of Aircraft Production, told the House of Commons today.

"With the assistance we hope to get from the United States", he said, "a substantial number of these aircraft should be available".

STIRLING MOTOR CAR REPORTED STOLEN

Provincial Police today are seeking to recover a 1928 model Chevrolet coach, bearing Ontario licence plates number 356-S-I. The vehicle is the property of P. J. Doughty of Stirling, and was taken without the owner's permission early today. Peterborough authorities were notified by District Headquarters of the O.P.P. to be on the alert for the car described as Mr. Doughty was of the opinion the vehicle was driven away in that direction.

MONTREAL YOUTH HELD FOR PARENTS

Hopes of joining Canada's fighting forces after running away from his Montreal home were abruptly dashed on the rocks of despair, when 16-year-old Alex Brewster, of Montreal, was apprehended in the Canadian National Railways yards here on Tuesday night. Young Brewster's parents, fearing he was en route to Toronto to join the navy, notified police at Belleville giving a description of the lad's appearance. Constables Arnott and Rathwell, assisted by the C.N.R. authorities apprehended the lad as he came into Belleville aboard a fast freight Tuesday night. The teen-aged youth is being held until he can be returned to his home in Montreal.

WOMEN'S HOSPITAL AUX. REALIZES $472 FROM SATUR. TAG DAY

The very gratifying sum of $472.20 was realized by the Women's Hospital Auxiliary on Saturday, the proceeds of their annual Tag Day. Belleville public was most generous and the members of the auxiliary extend sincere appreciation to all those who contributed and especially to the taggers who so zealously carried out their duties. The Auxiliary is holding its first meeting of the fall season on Tuesday when plans will be made for the projects the Auxiliary will carry out for the benefit of Belleville General Hospital.

JEWERY TO HONOR ISRAEL'S HOLY DAYS

Israel's most holy days fall on Sept. 12th., 13th., and 21st., this year. Jews throughout the world will turn to Israel's maker on these momentous holidays and offer special prayers for the triumph of the British Empire and its Allies, engaged in a terrible far-flung unsought war, fighting side by side to defend themselves from aggressors and to preserve the liberties so dear to all democratic peoples. War has wrought so many drastic changes in our daily lives. It has restrained our actions and sobered our thoughts. It has also awakened in us a keener sense of our responsibilities to our country in this hour of need. Services will be conducted by Rabbi Kuronick and an invitation is extended to all men in service stationed in the district to attend.

"Y" PREPARES FOR FALL OPENING

Following its usual policy, the local Y.M.C.A. is busy getting ready these days for the opening of the Fall program. Workmen have been busy sanding and refinishing the bowling alleys, and painters have brightened the walls ready for opening on Monday.

The gymnasium is now closed to give the men a chance to refinish the floors, repair and install equipment, and make ready for what looks to be a heavy program this fall and winter coming. The swimming pool will also be closed for a thorough cleaning and redecorating later this month, and everything will be put in readiness for the commencement of gymnasium and swimming activities for the season.

The Association is sparing no pains in an effort to keep the building and its equipment in shape to continue its contribution to the community and to men in uniform.

CHILDREN RAISE $3.55 FOR RED CROSS

Three dollars and fifty-five cents were the proceeds of raffle tickets sold by Kathleen Morell, Nancy David and Billie Cook, of Foster Avenue. The Red Cross received the money and Mrs. White, Albion Street, was the winner of the cake.

SUSTAINS FRACTURED ARM IN COLLISION

As two motor cars collided at the south end of the upper bridge Tuesday evening Mrs. Bruce Wright of Marmora sustained a fractured right arm and injuries to her right leg. Mrs. Wright was riding in a motor car driven by Carman Cooper, also of Marmora, when the vehicle was in collision with an automobile driven by Mrs. Fred Garrison of Corbyville. Strangely enough only minor damage resulted to the two vehicles, as they collided to damage front fenders. Constables Arnott and Rathwell investigated and found that Mr. Cooper was coming off the upper bridge, while Mrs. Garrison was proceeding out of Station St., to proceed south on Front St., when the vehicles collided.

SESSIONS OPEN TO GENERAL PUBLIC

It was announced at Bridge Street United Church here today that sessions of the General Council of the United Church of Canada, now being held at Albert College, would be open to the general public and a cordial invitation was so extended by Rev. James Semple.

Hundred Airmen Give Donation At Blood Clinic

Comprising the largest clinic held since the inception of Kiwanis Centre over one hundred airmen personnel of the Trenton Air Station gave voluntary donations of blood to the Red Cross Blood Donor Clinic last night.

The clinic was the second large blood donation from members of the Royal Canadian Air Force, No. 5 I.T.S. personnel giving eighty donations a few weeks ago.

Wing Comander Noble, chief medical officer of the Trenton Station was in charge of the clinic, assisted by Squadron Leader Hubbs, also of Trenton. The airmen were transported from the station to the clinic by bus.

The procedure took from eight o'clock until eleven. Many of the airmen were veterans of the last war.

Peterborough Kiwanian New Lieut.-Governor

Bigwin Island, Ont., Sept. 9 — (CP)—Canada should have been paying people to make munitions of war in the period of depression in view of world conditions at the time, Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario declared in an address to the Ontario - Quebec - Maritime Kiwanis convention here yesterday.

The Premier said Canada and North America generally would have been better prepared if the Australian plan had been followed. "Instead of paying people for being idle we should have employed them on the vital task of producing materials for the war which even then loomed on the horizon," he said.

At the concluding session the following officers were elected:

Governor, W. Harold Male, Toronto; Lieutenant - Governors, Northern Division, No. 1, Jack Linklater Noranda, Que.; Central Division, No. 2, J. Hiles Templin, Hamilton, Ont.; Western Division, No. 3, Lyle Burdick, St. Thomas, Ont.; Southern Division, No. 4, John Trope, Peterborough, Ont.; Eastern Division, No 5, Ronald Bourque, St. Laurent, Que.; New Brunswick Division, No. 6, J. C. Hoover Moncton; Nova Scotia Division, No. 7, Cyril Coghlin, Bridgewater.

Convention city for 1943 will be Niagara Falls, Ont.

Moderator Dr. A. S. Tuttle Opens Tenth General Council Of United Church in Canada

Election of Moderator Will be First Item of Business on the Agenda

286 DELEGATES

Two hundred and eighty-six ministerial and lay commissioners heard the Right Rev. Aubrey S. Tuttle, M.A., D.D., LL.D., moderator of the church officially open the Tenth General Council of the United Church in Canada at an impressive communion service in Bridge Street United Church this afternoon.

The commissioners represent the eleven conferences of the church from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Included were Newfoundland representatives.

Tonight in Bridge Street Church the incoming moderator or moderators will be elected. Commissioners will decide the question of tenure of the moderator, whether one moderator will be elected for a period of two years or two moderators for a period of one year.

Billeted in Homes

The commissioners arrived in the city yeterday and today, and are billeted in private homes, hotels and at Albert College. Many homes of the city have been thrown open to the visitors although some difficulty was experienced in securing sufficient room. To offset this, the facilities of Albert College were utilized to accommodate the overflow.

Many important problems will be discussed during the coming General Council. It was intimated this morning that a general reorganization of the church will be asked for.

His Worship Mayor Glen E. Thompson will officially welcome the commissioners and afford them the freedom of the city.

Bridge Street Church is royally garbed for the reception of the visiting commissioners. The Sunday School rooms have been converted into rest lounges, committee rooms and general offices. A half dozen stenographers stood poised this morning ready for the work that lies ahead. Furniture and draperies that add to the comfort of the Sunday School rooms were made possible through the generosity of the Lipson Company here.

New Moderator to Speak

The General Council will immediately swing into the important business following the election of the moderator or moderators tonight. Dr. Tuttle will give his retiring address and the incoming head of the church will also address the commissioners.

Among the commissioners attending the conferences, and who are former students of Albert College are Mr. Fred Mann, Brantford, who was a student here in 1889 and Judge Forin, Vancouver, who attended in 1883. Judge Forin acted as an observer for the Presbyterian Church at the large Methodist Conference held here in 1883, and is a former member of the city council, here.

Belleville, it was learned today, is the smallest city that has had the honor of being the host to commissioners of the General Council of the Church. This city enjoys, it was pointed out, the honor of being the locale of some of the most important conferences in the history of not only the United Church but those of other denominations as well.

Soldier Wants Name on List

Although it was primarily organized for the purpose of supplying cigarettes to Belleville boys serving overseas, recently Chairman Matt Currie of the Kinsmen Fag Fund was requested to place the name of a soldier on the Kinsmen's mailing list. "I have no relatives left in Canada, but frequently see Belleville boys receiving fags over here through your fund and if it is at all poshmiblet all possible I would appreciate being included on your mailing list," was an excerpt from the letter. Today Chairman Currie received a card of deep appreciation for cigarettes from Pte. J. A. Pike, the Canadian soldier who had requested his name be included on the Belleville list, although not a native of this city. "It was just a service we could render as a service club," remarked President Buster LaBarr.

Besides Pike's card of appreciation, others to send personal thanks to the Kinsmen for their recent shipment of 300 cigarettes each included Sergt. Clem. V. Allen, J B. Leslie, Harry Artis, J.H. Embury. James Ling., J. Beaumont, Wm Argue and N. J. Adams.

The forty Belleville boys to be sent cigarettes through the Kinsmen Fag Fund this week included;

Tabernacle Church W. M. S. Aux. Opens Fall Activities

About twenty-five members of Tabernacle Auxiliary of W.M.S. met in the ladies' parlour, Tuesday afternoon, September 8, for the opening meeting of the Fall season, with the President, Mrs. H. W. Froats presiding.

A short song service preceded the opening hymn, which was followed with an invocation by Mrs. A. H. Fisher, and The Lord's Prayer in unison.

A business period disclosed that twenty-two calls had been made during the summer vacation period, and the Treasurer reported the financial status about equal to the amount raised in 1941 for the same period, ending August 31st. It was decided to cater to the ladies attending The Leaders Conference to be held September 29, in Tabernacle Church.

A short memorial service for two deceased Life Members, Mrs. J. E. Walmsley and Mrs. M. Farley was conducted by Mrs. Froats.

During the Worship period, Mrs. C. Hogle led in the responsive reading of Psalm 91. Mrs. F. Jarrell led in prayer and Mrs. G. F. Lent read the Scripture Study from the Book of Esther.

Guest Speaker

Introducing the speaker of the afternoon the President said that on a former occasion she remarked that Mrs. Spafford of Aikens needed no introduction to Tabernacle ladies, but at this time she wished to present Mrs. Spafford as the new president of the Belleville Presbyterial.

Mrs. Spafford speaking from the subject, "For such a Time as This", said that both Faith and Strength were needed by all people as well as courage, especially by women in the church, so that they may face these trying times. We hear a lot about the discouragements of these times, but she wished to stress some of the encouragements. First of all, God is still over all, and all power still comes from Him. Also God's family is everywhere; and all Christians are united in that family. She cited an occasion of a Sunday in a German Prison Camp when the men in the camp flocked to worship both morning and evening under the leadership of a Presbyterian and an Anglican chaplain. It is at such times that men recognize and realize the Power of God.

The Church of Christ in China, under China's Christian leaders, is a concrete example of God's power to bring good out of any evil, no matter how illogical the circumstances may be. China's church is a proof of the necessity of continuing mission work everywhere. Sir Stafford Cripps and Lord Halifax both exhort all churches to continue their missionary work. As Christian women we must exercise our privilege to live during such times as these, in order that we may raise the trend of public opinion, through ideals that are higher than our laws. Privileges all means sacrifices. It costs something to be a missionary-minded women at this time. We may think our number few in each auxiliary, and that our influence is of small moment, but though each society makes just a faint sound, all the auxiliaries together will make a tremendous noise, which echoes round the world. It is only necessary for all members to be willing to be used by God in whatsoever sphere they are placed.

Mrs. Spafford closed her remarks with the telling of a Chinese parable of the Bamboo Tree that service means sacrifice.

An appropriate duet, "My Task", was beautifully rendered by Mrs. M. P. Duff. and her sister, Mrs. Leidman of Barrie, and was greatly enjoyed by all present.

The hymn "Here Am I" and prayer by Mrs. Harrison brought to a close a profitable and inspiring program, after which the social committee served dainty refreshments, with Mrs. T. G. Bell pouring tea.

Splendid Achievements of Branch During August Outlined at Meeting Of Belleville Red Cross Society

The regular monthly meeting of the Executive of the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society was held on Thursday, September 3. Mrs. Lazier introduced Mr. H. J. Clarke as acting-president, the latter then taking the chair. Mrs. E. A. Geen in the absence of the Secretary, Miss Tickell, very kindly consented to act.

The Treasurer, Mrs. Zeran, reported for July as follows:—

Donations	$ 297.60
Star Fund for British Bombed Victims	54.24
Blanket Fund	8.00
Total Receipts for July ..	$ 359.84
Accounts to be paid......	$ 202.69

Three cases of honey donated by Red Cross Auxiliaries, Aikins Unit and Foxboro Aux., have been shipped.

Miss Lynch, the new member of the Executive, was warmly welcomed by the Acting President and submitted her report on a case referred to this Branch from Overseas.

The report of the Women's War Wok Committee was presented by Mrs. Lazier as follows:

Report—Women's War Committe, September 1, 1942.

Mr. President, Members of the Executive, Belleville Branch:—

The work of this Committee for the month of August has been outstanding. Fifty cartons of supplies have been sent to Headquarters. These contained 1,696 articles: hospital supplies; 511 knitted garments for the services; 125 garments for British Bombed Civilians; in all 2,332 articles. The sheets for Russian Red Cross hospitals reached a total of 1,610 made, in comparison with 510 in July.

The wheeling for the seamen's stockings has arrived and expert knitters are asked to help us with a quota of 500 pairs.

This Committee wishes to thank all the groups and individuals who have helped so faithfully all through the summer.

Respectfully submitted,
FLORENCE M. LAZIER,
Chairman W.W.W.C.

The total now is 2,865 with the 245 sheets which were packed and sent off yesterday. Foxboro workers have been very industrious with this project looking after 278 sheets. Those who have sheets out are asked to return them as soon as possible and those who have not yet helped with this project are invited to help out so that the last thousand will be finished up in record time.

Point Traverse Boy Rescued From Water

Point Traverse — (Special) — R.A.F. airmen and commercial fishermen were instrumental in averting a near drowning tragedy here on Monday afternoon, when Lowell McGregor, 7. son of Mr. and Mrs. Stinson Hyatt, narrowly escaped with his life, when he fell into the harbor from a tiny rowboat.

A.C. 1 Joe Lennard and A.C. 1 Watson, Marine Craft Section, plunged into the water and effected the rescue just as the small lad was going under the surface of the water. Clayton and Raymond McIntosh also assisted in effecting the rescue. Lowell's condition is favorable and he is none the worse for his harrowing experience.

Battle Grass Fire

A grass fire which threatened the Point Traverse fishing colony with disastrous results for several minutes late Saturday night, was brought under control by a small band of civilians and R.A.F. airmen, but not before several acres of hay and a section of patent fence had been consumed by the blaze.

The fire, which started at No. 3 bombing range from flash bombs dropped during night bombing practice, spread with great rapidity. Firemen and fire fighting equipment from the Picton Bombing and Gunnery School were summoned, and firemen remained at the scene until Sunday forenoon. after the blaze had been extinguished.

Anti-Aircraft Battery Bivouacs at Armouries

A battery of anti-aircraft from the Royal Canadian Artillery, now operating at a practice range in Prince Edward County, will bivouac at the Armouries here tonight, Lieut.-Col. A. B. Gribble, officer commanding the Argyll Light Infantry (tank) stated today. The anti-aircraft unit has been on manoeuvres near Consecon Lake since Sunday and is stopping in Belleville en route to their base. During last night's heavy downpour of rain the entire unit bivouaced on the ground and without the protection of canvass overhead, officers told Lieut.-Col. Gribble. Forty vehicles are included in the parade and will be parked on the market square tonight.

Fliers of the Red Banner Baltic Fleet were credited with destruction of 10 German tri-motored planes in an attack on an Axis airdrome, breaking through "a solid anti-aircraft barrage" to loose their explosive cargoes.

350 Slain in One Engagement

A Russian minefield west of Stalingrad blew up three German tanks and Soviet gunners damaged six others of a formation manoeuvring in front of the field, the communique said.

Red Army motor batteries and riflemen were reported to have slain 350 invaders in two of a series of actions southwest of the Volga River industrial centre, where field dispatches said Italian and Rumanian troops and fresh tanks from other fronts had been moved into action.

Four successive assaults supported by massed planes were repulsed in that sector, Izvestia said. The government newspaper said the aircraft "were literally hanging over our front line and bombing our positions," but the Russian forces waited them out and then arose to drive off the enemy land forces.

Red Army patrols and mortar batteries wiped out 230 Germans in the overnight fighting about Novorossisk, a Black Sea naval base, and 40 German troop trucks were smashed, the Russians said.

Attacks Unsuccessful

Red Star reported that a violent battle raged around the wedge which the Germans and Rumanians have thrust into this sector. The defence position was described as both strained and difficult. German tank charges against a Russian flank were declared unsuccessful.

Soviet resistance appeared firmer in the Mozdok district of the central Caucasus, where a battle is under way south of the Terek River. The Russians were reported fighting to annihilate a German formation which crossed the river.

"Five German tanks were disabled and a company of enemy infantry was wiped out" yesterday in phases of this continuing engagement, it was announced.

Red Star said the Russians had driven the Germans from a village of that sector at bayonet point; Red Army cavalry hurled back a German regiment and forced the invaders to withdraw from an important position; and the Red Air Force raided crossings where the Germans were attempting to move reserves to the south bank and wrecked a number of bridges.

ALLIES SLOW UP

Gap," which is virtually only a trail.

The supply problem is particularly difficult for both forces. Native carriers climb through steep, rugged terrain under extremely bad weather conditions to supply the Allies.

Beached Barges Fired

New clashes were reported at Mubo, eight miles south of the Japanese base at Salamaua, between patrols, but the strength of the Allied units in this region was not disclosed.

Allied heavy bombers added new complications to the Japanese supply problem by setting fire to a group of beached barges used to bring supplies along the coast to Buna, where the Japanese landed for their push toward Kokoda and the mountains.

In advancing to the region of the pass, the Japanese lost heavily in close fighting in which Allied patrols frequently used bayonets, it was reported here.

There were fierce fights between opposing patrols for the possession of small areas of the jungle bordering the trail leading up the mountains.

One Australian patrol of 20 men, opposed by 300 Japanese, carried out an effective ambush with machine guns, Tommy guns and rifles Snuday, and the following day another patrol attacked a Japanese post with grenades and killed six Japanese without loss.

GERMANY'S BEST

later we saw German tanks and we were scared.

"They came right at us. We couldn't stop counting them there were so many.

"We were ordered not to fire so as not to give our position away. We got hit three times right on the nose but the shells didn't come through.

"Then we got mad and we started firing back. On the second shot I saw the tank that had been firing at us go up in smoke.

"Gee, it was beautiful! Then they changed position on us."

At nightfall the Allied tanks withdrew but were in position again before dawn next morning. so were the Germans.

The battle raged through Tuesday. While it was not on as big a scale as some desert tank battles in last winter's campaign, many British veterans said it was the fiercest tank fighting they'd ever seen.

It was a fight to the finish. At the end of the battle on Ragill Ridge scarcely a tank remained intact on either side. Victory must be credited to the Allies as the Germans had at least double the number of tanks.

Battles such as this one inflicted such heavy losses on the Axis forces that after a week of it they started withdrawing to their starting point.

In another General Grant tank in this engagement, Sgt. Harry L. Walters of Butler, Pa., was behind a gun. He, too, saw what his shells could do to the Germans.

When an enemy shell crashed through the next tank a British lieutenant was pulled out seriously wounded. He was laid on the sand awaiting a stretcher. Shells were bursting all around.

Walter's tank moved in front of the wounded officer. It took three shells which would undoubtedly have killed him and those ministering to him if this American tank had not stopped them.

Among the lessons learned by Rossi in battle was to take better care of his rations.

"We had three days' rations and we strapped them on the outside of our tank," he said.

"They were shot off and then we went hungry. Believe me, from now on we're gonna keep our rations inside that tank."

Naval Officer Describes Sea-Air Battle on Trip of Convoy to Malta

(The following story of an Allied convoy's fight to get through to Malta was told in the BBC magazine, The Listener, by Cmdr. Anthony Kimmins of the Royal Navy).

London, Sept. 9—(CP)—The object of the operation was clear-cut and straight forward the relief of Malta, the only base from which really effective steps can be taken to destroy Rommel's supplies from Italy.

First went the leading ships of the destroyer screen, then the convoy with its escort of cruisers and destroyers, closely-guarded by battleships; and immediately astern, the aircraft-carriers. By the first light we were well to the eastward of Gib.

Suddenly the peace was shattered. A great brown column of water rose from the side of the Eagle to about three times the height of her topmast. Almost immediately there was another column, then a third—a salvo of torpedoes.

Eagle Sank Rapidly

Eagle was an old ship and the torpedoes were too much for her. She listed rapidly with aircraft slipping off her flying deck into the sea. Soon almost before one could believe it was true—she had gone.

Everyone was subdued until later in the afternoon we received a report of enemy aircraft approaching. The carriers turned into the wind and fleet air arm fighters got off. From then on they were at it continually, but mostly out of sight.

The known results were 39 enemy aircraft shot down and the raggedness of the enemy formations which did get through made it clear what those gallant young naval pilots were doing for us.

My last impression of that day was a Ju88 making an attack astern. He found himself committed to making a getaway over the fleet. Tracers screamed from all directions. We soon steamed past a burning patch in the water where he had crashed.

That was Tuesday.

Airmen Fight Continuously

Next morning, our fleet air from fighters were off again at the crack of dawn and throughout the day they were almost continuously in the air as formation after formation of enemy came into attack.

During a lull in the evening, there was a flash, a terrific explosion and complete darkness left by shattered lights. A U-boat had got a torpedo home to us. The ship started to list as we groped our way to doors.

A Destroyer approached and the admiral shouted to the ship's company: "I hate leaving you like this, but my job is to go on and get the convoy to Malta, and I'm going to do that whatever happens."

As the admiral and one or two of us moved over to the destroyer Ashant, a dive-bombing attack developed in the fading light.

I shall never forget the scene. Stukas roared down, their bombs dropped and explosions split the air.

The cruiser Cairo settled rapidly by the stern. A merchant vessel which had been hit burned fiercely. A great pall of smoke rose up into the sky. There patches of flame where aircraft had crashed.

The cruiser Manchester was hit by mines or torpedoes and later had to be sunk. The merchant ships were not unscathed. On the credit side, at least two U-boats were blown out of the water.

With Thursday's first streaks of light, back came the dive-bombers and torpedo planes in a desperate effort to smash the convoy on its last lap.

Coupons Valid Only at Intervals Of Four Weeks

Ottawa, Sept. 9.—(CP)—Forestalling a host of possible rationing questions, the Wartime Prices and Trade Board Tuesday issued a new order bringing ration regulations up-to-date as the new ration books, now in the hands of every Canadian citizen over the age of 12, went into effect.

Tea and coffee coupons in the permanent ration books are effective beginning Sept. 7, the Board said, but the coupons on the temporary ration cards distributed last June are still valid. However the Board emphasized that the tea and coffee coupons on the temporary books are each good for only one week's ration, while those in the permanent books each have the value of two weeks' rations.

The new ration book coupons become valid only at intervals of four weeks, the order said. Coupons 1 and 2 are good from Sept. 7 the next pair from Oct. 5, and so on up to the odd one, No. 13, which may be used on and after Feb. 22, 1943.

"SYNTHETIC" RUBBER? Goodyear has the "know-how"—based on 15 years' experience

● We, at Goodyear, are fully aware that Canadians are anxious about the rubber situation. Not only are you apprehensive about future tires for yourselves but, like the rest of our people, you are asking: (1) "Will our fighting services continue to be supplied with needed rubber products?" and (2) "Can 'synthetic' rubber be obtained in time and in sufficient quantities?"

Our answer to your first question is . . . Yes! Everything the army, navy and air force need they are getting. Rubber materials of all kinds are flowing and will continue to flow to them in a steady stream.

Our answer to your second question is again . . . Yes! "Synthetic" rubber can and will be made in adequate quantities for all essential needs.

You might ask a third question; "What does Goodyear know about 'synthetic' rubber?" Well, more than fifteen years ago, when the whole world was at peace, we started work on an extensive research program. We knew that "synthetic" rubber could be derived from a wide variety of products, such as coal, grain alcohol, acetylene, petroleum, natural gas and other hydrocarbons and that the processes were many. In all we explored hundreds of different chemical compounds and from the date of our first patent, 1927, to now, we have been granted, or have applied for, sixty-five patents covering the manufacture of "synthetic" rubber.

Out of this work came success . . . Goodyear Chemigum. (Pronounced Kem'-ee-gum). This "synthetic" has a globular structure and physical properties very similar to natural rubber. By compounding, Chemigum can be endowed with qualities definitely superior to natural rubber for many purposes. Having achieved this much, Goodyear built the first complete plant on the continent for producing rubber of this type and began the manufacture of Chemigum products for various industrial uses.

There, briefly, is Goodyear's experience in "synthetic" rubber . . . a comprehensive experience in laboratory research, in practical testing and actual manufacture. Today, as an aid to United Nations' governments, all that experience, plus sixty-five important patents, have been pooled with the knowledge and resources of others so that a united effort can be made to achieve quantity production at the earliest possible date.

WHAT ABOUT "SYNTHETIC" TIRES?

Our first "synthetic" tires were made from Chemigum in 1938. These tires actually outperformed, in most respects, tires made from natural rubber. They were standard All-Weather tires and the tests given them were actual and arduous road tests on standard automobiles. Tires made from Chemigum were not made available to the general motoring public for the simple reason that cost, then, was too high. It was seen at that time that cost could be licked only by quantity production, but could be licked when, and if, the need arose. Today, we can say that not only does Goodyear know how to make "synthetic" rubber, not only does Goodyear know how to use that material in tires, but Goodyear is actively working for actual quantity production and can see the time, not too far distant, when "synthetic" tires will be produced at or near the costs of those made from natural rubber. Please do not misunderstand us . . . there is no apparent prospect of "synthetic" rubber tires, or any other kind, being available for the duration, except tires for war and essential civilian uses. War demands are too great for that . . . and ever-growing.

Then, the situation today is this: The big job has been done—because Goodyear and others were farsighted. That big job was finding and knowing how to use a brand-new material. If, when there was no need to do so, research had not been started, and had not been successful, today we would have been facing fifteen years of research instead of having it behind us.

We give you this information so that Canadians will know that Goodyear, the leader in the rubber industry, is wide awake, straining every resource and making every effort to ensure an adequate supply of "synthetic" rubber in this country.

Welcome to General Council

Belleville welcomes the Tenth General Council of the United Church of Canada which will be in session for nine days in Bridge Street United Church and will be attended by almost three hundred commissioners, both ministers and laymen, representing every conference of the Church in Canada. The General Council is the law-making body of the church and meets every two years. Its deliberations will reach to every church community in the Dominion and to the outside world through its missionary cause.

In coming to Belleville and in meeting in Bridge Street United Church , the General Councl has chosen a familiar setting of church conferences. Here great church gatherings, so fewer than six conferences, were held between the years 1836 and 1871 and the United General Conference met in this church in 1883 to see the union of the four branches of the Methodist Church in Canada consummated. Bridge Street Church itself is one of the oldest congregations in Ontario with its origins dating back before the opening of the nineteenth century to a day when a circuit rider held the first recorded services in this community in 1795. One hundred and thirty-seven years ago a circuit was formed from Belleville to Port Hope and in 1815 the first Methodist Class was formed. Other religious communions have also had their roots deep in this past in this city and have had a notable record of service among the people.

This is the second General Council gathering held during the war and this struggle naturally shadows these council sessions as it does the thoughts and deeds of everyone and every other event because Canada and the rest of the British Empire and the United Nations are so vitally concerned in the achievement of victory and enduring peace.

The United Church is one of the great religious bodies which have been profoundly influencing the lives of the people and the national life of the Dominion. In these days it is not difficult to realize how important is the task taken by the church which deals with the social, moral, ethical and spiritual values of individual and nation. Canada truly owes much to the religious ideals which have helped to mould history in the democratic way for the churches have helped to build a freedom-loving nation. This freedom is assured by law which is the expression of the collective will and ideals of the people. The churches have been loyal to the liberty and rights they have enjoyed and have been able thereby to render a truly great contribution to the life of Canada.

The city of Belleville and the citizens individually welcome the commissioners to the Tenth General Council of the United Church. They appreciate the honor which has been shown Belleville and Bridge Street Church and the other communions of this city in holding their deliberations in this place. They express the hope that the commissioners deputed to attend this gathering of this supreme church body will enjoy their sojurn here in a section of the Dominion where organization for worship has been as a part of the life of the people since the days of the earliest settlements.

Rev. Dr. James Semple, minister of Bridge Street Church, the Council church, and one of the most active and best known of the ministers of the United Church of Canada, has as host to the General Council organized local arrangements with the aid of a committee for the welfare, comfort and entertainment of the visiting commissioners. This task has been well and thoroughly performed and will be appreciated by those attending the Council.

Russia's power of resistance when the Hun is at the gates has been demonstrated most powerfully before Stalingrad. The threat which endangered Moscow early last winter is recalled and the world will not soon forget what the resolute resistance of the Russians did at that time with the consequent retirement of the Germans. Men and women of the United Nations hope that this great centre will remain in the hands of the Russian patriots fighting to save their country from a desperate bandit horde.

I am never less at leisure than when at leisure, nor less alone when I am alone.—

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

WE ALL MOULD PUBLIC OPINION

The majority of Canadian citizens are on the march again. With heads erect, eyes front, their ranks are skirting past luxuries and non-essentials, on their way to purchase the new Victory Bonds.

Every man and woman in that parade is performing an extra war service for his country. He is setting a powerful example that will atract other citizens into the ranks of the majority.

In these war days, we can no longer afford to spend any more than is absolutely necessary for good health. Our sailors, soldiers and airmen are crying for every other penny of our earnings to make their striking power more and more potent. Every time any one citizen answers that cry,—resolutely turning his back on the temptation to buy something he doesn't really need,—his example helps materially to create solid public opinion.

When we shut out our short-sighted selfish inclinations so that we can buy Victory Bonds, we not only take a direct part in the war. We perform an invaluable service in crystallizing a strong united Canadian voice that shouts,

"Nothing matters but Victory!"

"PLEASE PASS THE GROCERIES"

You don't have to hold out fifteen cents from your pay envelope or go home with a red hair n your lapel from your neighbor's cocker spaniel to land in the divorce court, says Cal Norris in Judge. You'll have that little man hiding in doorways with your subphoena if you are not careful of your manners when you are grinding the vitamins. Remember your bride has to sit across the table from you and watch your face expand and contract like a concertina. You can take more liberties after you have been married for a year or two because by that time she has become a ceiling gazer or a newspaper scanner. But for the first few months of married life she is watching every move you make because she thinks you're so wonderful.

It's not that you want to look like an ostrich swallowing a watermelon. It's usually because you are in deep thought about where to hide those old phone numbers now that the cuffs have been taken off your trousers. But you better give plenty of attention to how you look while stuffing the yawning cavern or you'll find a note on the dresser when you come home from work.

Try this test to get some idea of how you shouldn't look to your wife at meals. Set a large mirror in the centre of the table and be sure to act as you always do. Then watch yourself while you are expanding the girth and what you see will tell you how long you will remain a married man.

Of course there are some things you have no control over. For instance your teeth. You may have the clanking kind that sound like Fred Astaire doing his tap dance, when you are eating. You can't help this anymore than you can that snapping jaw that was broken because you believed a blonde who said her husband was out of town. Your wife will understand these faults and sympathize with you, but when you try to cram all the food into your mouth at one time and munch like a kid chewing bubble gum, you're heading for an alimony headache. Remember you're not going to hibernate and there will be another meal along in a few hours. Don't eat so fast, either, that your cheeks look like stuffed laundry bags or a kid with the mumps. Don't gnaw on a chicken or a turkey neck until it is as white and dry as a desert skeleton. If you are a bone gnawer wait until Rover gets fed and then you and he can enjoy yourselves together.

Don't smack your lips so that it sounds like you were walking through mud.

Don't excavate your molars after meals, not even behind your napkin. If you must pick your teeth, wait until there is a blackout.

In ancient times the Greek host considered it praise of his meal if the guest burped, but brother your bride is no ancient Greek, and although she may have a word for it, you can bet your income tax receipt that it will be "pig."

And speaking of words, if you want to celebrate your first anniversary don't tell her that her pies have a crust like a door to door salesman. One bridegroom tried that just recently and started a furious situation that ended with his wife in court. On the stand she weepingly said, "I only remember of havng the gun in my hand and then everything went black."

OUR FAITH

Ours is the faith in right,
Not crushing might;
In brotherhood
And all things good;
In marriage and the home,
Spire and cathedral dome.

Ours is the faith in prayer,
In all things just and fair;
In school and meeting hall,
Mansion and cottage small,
Playground and gardens gay
And hours for work and play.

Ours is the faith in love
And always God above;
In truth; in motherhood;
And that being understood
No power can grow so strong

Russia And Us

New York, Sept. 9—Our military situation is as grave as it can be. It is understandable that we stress every battle where United States forces are engaged, and emphasize gains symbolic of their tough spirit. But they are only symbolic and there is still only one front where the great war, in all its global implications, is being fought.

No gains in the Pacific, or in Egypt, or in the air fight over Western Europe, are compensations for defeats in Russia. The fate of the Russian front will determine the length of this war and the number of American and British lives that will have to be spent to win it if Russia collapses.

Our Russian allies—I call them that though they try in vain to make a treaty of military alliance with us—are fighting in a spirit beyond praise. Their resistance before Stalingrad is one of those miracles that Paul Reynaud, in France, invoked in vain. But the spirit alone is not decisive in this struggle and we are not even helping that spirit adequately.

Russia's Power Menaced

We will live bitterly to regret it. We have to face the strong possibility that soon the German troops will reach the Caspian Sea, and cut the Volga traffic lifeline of Russia. It is obvious that the Russian Army, a few months after that event, will be short of oil, and thus will lose its main offensive power.

Furthermore, the southern supply line to Russia will be cut, the most important food areas of Russia are already lost, and the steel centre of Stalingrad is in shambles.

The consequences for us are that the Germans will be able to wage a defensive war in Russia next year and to shift more than a hundred divisions to the West, together with the main part of their air force.

The winter this year is not going to be on the side of the Russians. They have lost this summer the coal mines of the Donets Basin, and to bring up materials from Siberia means that their communication lines are this time much longer than the Germans'.

Nazis Also Overstrained

The offensive power of an army is not lost from one day to the next. There are still great reserves in Russia. And if the Russians are able to launch a successful counter-offensive late this fall or in the early winter, as they did last year, there is still a chance to turn the tide against the Nazis, who also are over-strained.

But that tide will not be turned without our help. It is not our task to develop military plans. But behind military plans, and always influencing them, are political questions.

It is impossible to act intelligently, boldly, and realistically in the present political atmosphere. And if this political atmosphere continues, it can contribute to a disintegration in Russia that will not be in our favor. Such a disintegration would be neither anti-Communist nor pro-Ally. The Russians would continue to fight as guerillas and partisons, emphasizing their Bolshevist tradition and with the feeling of being the victims of Western treason.

And when our fighting armies began to realize what the collapse of Russia had meant in blood and tears the political reaction in our own countries would be anything but desirable.

Russians Show Energy.

The Russian leadership has done all in its power to prevent such a development in Russia. Russian leaders from the outset emphasized the national, not the revolutionary, character of their war, and were careful not to arouse exaggerated hopes of Allied aid. The Russian press has stressed the solidarity of Russia, Great Britain and the United States in fighting a common war for survival. The Comintern has advised workers in all countries to pursue the war, increase production, and abandon any kind of activity likely to impede production. The slogan, "Proletarians of all countries unite," has been changed to: "Proletarians of all nations unite against Fascist invaders."

Molotoff, visiting London and Washington, had tried to reach a real agreement with the United States, but he had only limited success. He was accompanied by General Shilovsky, who the other day said in Russia that we need a united command of British, Russian and United States forces, and that if such a command had existed in the first World War the Bolshevist revolution might never have taken on the radical form that it did.

For then as now—and both Lloyd George and Churchill are witnesses to this—Russia bore the brunt of the first two years of the war, and the result of not waging a true war of coalition was the additional loss of three million Western European and American lives.

Aleutian Islands Lost

Meanwhile, we have permitted the loss of the Aleutian Islands to Japan, and our publicists have acted as though they were unimportant far-off posts, and not on the main communications line between America and Japan and America and Russia.

I want us to win this war and survive. And unless we get clear in our minds what our strategy absolutely demands, regardless of our political and class prejudices, we are in a good way to losing this war and not surviving.

Why There are Fewer Operations For Peptic Ulcer

As a student I was taught that if medical and diet treatment of stomach and duedenal ulcer (peptic ulcer) failed, then operation must be performed. The operation consisted in closing the usual opening from stomach into first part of small intestine (duodenum) and making a new opening. However, as years passed it was found that another ulcer developed in or near the new opening.

Why did a new ulcer develop?

New ulcer developed because the individual did not change his daily habits not only as to the diet itself but also as to his other habits—rapid eating, eating when tired, excited or depressed, inability to meet problems or emergencies with calmness of spirit.

It is known tthat it is only when the stomach is empty that the pains from ulcer occur. This is because so much of the acid digestive juice is present that it irritates the wall of the stomach and intestine and the pain occurs. The movement of the walls of the stomach further irritate the ulcer.

The medical treatment of ulcer is giving foods easily digested and the use of alkalies to overcome the acid digestive juice. A dose of baking soda or other alkali usually gives prompt relief.

I wrote recently of the use of cream and milk at the time the stomach is empty to use up the acid of digestive juice. It is interesting to learn that two years ago, Dr. George A. McEvoy, Newton, Mass., in Medical Record stated:

"Almost every ulcer patient has a pain two or three hours after a meal. The pain shows that the stomach is empty and if it is allowed to remain empty the extra amount of acid digestive juice is free to irritate not only the glands (which manufacture the acid juice) but also the ulcer. If the proper food such as a glass of half light cream and half milk is given just before the pain occurs, the pain will not occur again".

It is gratifying to learn that operations on stomach and intestinal ulcers are not as numerous as they were a few years ago as the family physician, knowing that the disposition or personality of the individual is a big factor, now advises him about the importance of calmness of spirit, and places him on an easily digested non-irritating diet. Surgery, of course will always be necessary where complications — obstructions, perforations—occur.

USES THE METRE TO SIT

Kansas City, Sept. 9 —(AP)— Burgner Jones, temporarily in Cheyenne, Wyo., informs friends here that he saw this happen: A visitor to Cheyenne dropped a nickel in a parking metre during a rush hour and defied police and motorists to move him—despite the fact he had no car. He just sat there.

BLACKOUT CAUSES ONE DEATH

Boston, Sept. 9 —(AP)— One death was attributed to a realistic 17-minute blackout test that took the 1,800,000 residents of metropolitan Boston by surprise last night. Frederic M. Kenyon, 63, of Newton, died of a heart attack shortly after reporting for duty as an air raid warden.

IN THE LIMELIGHT

A person in a conspicuous position before the public is said to be "in the limelight."

This phrase has had an interesting history.

The original "lime light" was invented in 1825 by a British army officer, surveyor and administrator named Thomas Drummond.

After serving as a captain in the royal engineers, Drummond became assistant to Col. T. F. Colby of the British trigonometrical survey.

While attending a series of lectures on chemistry and physics delivered before the Royal Institution in London by the great scientists William Thomas Brande and Michael Faraday, Drummond learned of the brilliant luminosity of limelight when incandescent.

This suggested to him the use of lime light to make distant surveying stations visible.

Drummond produced a steady, intense white light by directing an oxyhydrogen flame on a cylinder of lime.

In 1825, while surveying in northern Ireland, he put his new lime light to a practical test by completing observations between two mountains 67 miles apart.

A few years later Drummond adapted his lime light for use in lighthouses.

In those days before the use of electricity there was no satisfactory or adequate system for lighting the stage in theatres. Stage lights, footlights, floodlights and spotlights as we know them were not yet developed.

Accordingly, the Drummond Light, as it was called at first, was adapted for use in the theatre. The stage lighting instrument was equipped with a lens to concentrate on a particular point a beam of light produced by an oxy-hydrogen flame on a cylinder of lime.

The part of the stage where the most important action was taking place came to be referred to as "the limelight."

In the process of time the leading player in the piece was said to be "in the limelight." The phrase passed into general speech and still survives, although the system of lighting to which it refers has long been supplanted by other systems.

Thomas Drummond in 1836 became under-secretary for Ireland and proved a successful administrator. "Property," he told the Irish landlords, "has its duties as well as its rights." He died in Dublin in 1840 at the age of 43.

Sure the war costs money. Paying for it will be tough in the months ahead. Let's accept that fact—and face it. Now is the time to sharpen our pencils and figure what our taxes actually are... how we are going to pay them ... and how we can adjust our living habits to get along on what's left. Miss Kathleen Morrison of the Belleville Collegiate is also to be congratulated on her high standing, having made eight first class honours and two second class honours in ten papers tried.

WEDDINGS

SEAMES—DOLDER

On Saturday afternoon at two-thirty o'clock, a quiet but pretty wedding took place at St. Michael's Rectory, when Ellen Joan, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Dolder, 22 Harriett Street, became the bride of Signalman Herbert Philip Seames, R.C.C.S., youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. George Arthur Seames, 61 Foster Ave. The ceremony was performed by Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G.

The bride was attended by Mrs. John Sword and Mr. Ray Peets was groomsman.

A reception was held at the home of the bride, following the ceremony, and a buffet luncheon was served to immediate friends and relatives. Gladioli were used in the decoration of the rooms and the brides table was centred with a handsome wedding cake, and caught with streamers from a large white bell.

LEITCH—COOKE

A quiet, but pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of the Rev. H. Graham on Wednesday, September 2nd., when Jeanetta Blythe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cooke, was united in marriage to Mr. Richard Bell Leitch, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Leitch of Shannonville.

The bride looked charming in a street length dress of rose sheer with white accessories and wore a corsage of Talisman roses. Mrs. Martha Juby, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid and wore a dress of beige crepe with brown accessories and corsage of Talisman roses. Mr. Robert Leitch, brother of the groom, was groomsman.

A reception was held at the home of the brides parents for the immediate relatives. The happy couple left for a short trip to Toronto and on their return will reside in Belleville.

How to Madden One's Friends And Lose Them

By ADELAIDE KERR
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New York, Sept. 9 (CP)— Ever think about the best ways to lose friends and antogonize people? Ilka Chase can tell you a few.

The other day when we were talking about unpopularity-markers, the actress,-author-radio star let fly with a list that would keep you in solitary splendour for years.

Tucking one foot under her she said with a gamin grin!

"If there is anything that makes me sore, it's a woman who says, 'I'm afraid I don't remember that, dear. I'm too young to remember that.' With that sweet, sweet, smile. You seldom care to speak to that woman again.

"There's another little trick that will antagonize any woman. It's being sympathetic with her husband when she has a legitimate beef at him for failing to do something he should have done.

"Personally I can't stand a woman who pretends before a man to be vague and cute and helpless, when she's really as intelligent as he is and strong as a horse. You understand pretending is a fair game when you're alone with your light of love or the president of the company—men fall for it so. But pretending in front of women is an awfully good way to lose a lot of friends."

The Weaker Type

Miss Chase, who keeps three careers going like a triple ring circus went on from there:

"If there's anything that makes a career woman sore it's the little ball of fluff who says, 'I don't know where you get all the energy to do all you do, dear' And saying it in a way so that you seem a big muscled Amazon who ought to be in blue jeans and she a sweet feminine little niece who has to be shielded from knocks.

"You can antagonize me mighty easy with this one too! You look lovely,' dear. I always did like you in that dress'."

Miss Chase paused for breath. This is unusual for Miss Chase, who zooms around with a speed which leaves the average beholder dizzy. She has just returned from a movie-making sojourn in Hollywood, will soon star in "Susan and God" in a brief tour of Princeton, N.J., Philadelphia and Brooklyn and will then begin a lecture tour to the coast.

Remember Napoleon

"If you want to lose your men friends," she went on with a soft little smile," just pay attention to something else when they are around. Knit, or lavish attention on a dog. Men are awfully jealous of women's affection for animals. Remember Napoleon and that dog of Josephine's. The thing was always hanging around and drove him wild. He could conquer Europe. But he couldn't kick the dog.

"Being late consistently is another way to make a man furious. Keep that up indefinitely and eventually he'll be among the missing. There is another kind of woman he can't stand—and that is the point killer—the one who leaps in with the point of a joke before he can come to it.

"But if you really want to make a man wild, just be calm in a crisis when he is excited and all steamed up. That drives him crazy."

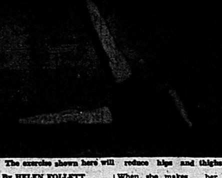
Exercise for Beauty's Sake



The exercise shown here will reduce hips and thighs.

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHAT? YOU can't get into last autumn's pretty frock? You have taken an extra inches at the waist and hips? And you want to be nice and skinny as on your young days? We've heard that plaintive cry many times before. Along in the forties something is likely to happen to the svelte shape in nine cases among ten it is a thickening of the mid-section.

Perhaps it is your own fault, lady. If you had minded your groceries, closed your eyes to luscious pastries, and if you had done your daily dozen like a good girl, maybe you wouldn't be thinking of yourself as an incipient heavyweight. But we won't say a word about it. That would be cruel.

A girl with large hips can reduce them by rolling on the floor. She must lie on her back, lift the right leg and the right arm, roll to the left, touch the floor with fingers and toes, stretching arms and legs to the limit. It is not only the rolling but the stretching that does the presto-change act for her. When she makes her muscles strong fat cells will melt away.

Reducing Exercises

Ten times to the left, ten to the right and repeat. When fatigued she must lie on her back, breathe deeply, lifting and lowering the abdomen. This form of breathing will, if done persistently, reduce a tummy shelf to nothingness.

Bending exercises are recommended. Stand tall, feet six inches apart, hands at the sides. Lift the hands high, then go up on the toes. Down the heels and touch the floor without bending the knees. At first you may not be able to do it. Keep on trying. If you continue this exercise for ten minutes ever day for two months you should be able to place the palms of your hands on the floor

Posture is important. Let the body fold together in the middle and you'll be inviting adipose tissue to dwell upon you. Women who stand, sit and walk with the body erect are less likely to cultivate cushions than the slouchy lady.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Christmas Card Signature

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Last year my husband and I were given some beautifully engraved Christmas cards. On these cards we had engraved our names—John and Mary Smith. Several of our friends criticized the order of our names, suggesting that it should have been Mary and John Smith.

I know that the man's name is preferred first in business usage and that this is the order on formal invitations and on joint visiting-cards. Personally, I like this order better in such social usage as the names on Christmas cards. Are we wrong?

What is the rule when the signatures are written by hand?

"Mary"

Since it is customary, when only first and last names—without the titles—are printed or engraved on Christmas cards, for the woman's name to be first, your friends would be apt to wonder at your departure from this custom. Using the wife's name first seems to be more "becoming" and appropriate to these informal cards than using the formal sequence of Mr. and Mrs. Usually a husband prefers having his wife's name used first on informal Christmas cards.

If the wife takes the point of view that it is more courteous for her to sign her husband's name first, no one can deny that her point of view is a polite one.

Guest of Honor

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I am giving a tea in honor of a dear friend, and I am sending the invitations on my visiting-cards. I am inviting quite a few guests, but all of them know the guests of honor very well.

I do want to indicate on my card-invitations that the tea is in honor of this friend and I do know that it is customary to write above the hostess name, 'To meet Miss Honor Guest'. But this seems a rather ridiculous form to use when all the guests have "met" and know very well the guest of honor. What should I do in a case of this kind?

M.A.L.

I agree with you that it is meaningless to write "To meet Miss Honor Guest' when all the guests know her. So instead of writing this, write, above your name:

For Miss Honor Guest

Courtesy Tip

Hostesses, when you are inviting guests to a party, realize that they may be uncertain about what you expect them to wear, and that it is thoughtless of you not to give them the information. If you telephone your invitation it is simple for you to give this clothes information. If it is a note, you can easily give a gracious clothes-hint.

Khaki Closeups

Somewhere in England, Sept. 9—(CP)—Score one for a light anti-aircraft battery of the Royal Canadian Artillery on guard on the south coast of England. The battery, recruited mostly in Ontario, has shot down its first victim, a Focke-ulf 190.

The Bofors gun crew on duty when the once-vaunted fighter attempted to breach the coast defences were L. Bdr. Jeff Richmond of New Westminster, B. C., and two Indian brothers from Thetford, Ont., Gnrs. Ken and Tom George.

The duel, during which the Bofors crew was machine-gunned by the raider, was described by Bdr. Phil Calder of Owen Sound, Ont. who watched with fellow battery members from a nearby spot.

"The Focke-Wulf came in 25 feet over the sea," Calder said. "He flew low over a row of trees and when he spotted the battery he dived for it. The duty crew fired at him at 200-yards range and portions of the fuselage dropped from the plane.

"The pilot banked sharply and at the same time fired his machine guns at the gun crew but his aim was bad and the bullets went over their heads. He then headed out to sea with smoke pouring from his tail. Soon he lost control and fell into the sea."

Among the men who watched with Calder were Sgt. Harold Pearson of Fort William, Ont., Gnrs. Cliff George, a cousin of the brothers, Roy Hodgins of Woodstock, Ont., Gordon Curry of Dresden, Ont., and James Allen of Sarnia, Ont.

Capt. W. S. Hunt of Montreal, member of the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps attached to the Calgary tank regiment, contributed this description of the Dieppe raid which will tickle the fancy of McGill University graduates:

"It was worse than a McGill-Queen's football game."

DOUBLE DUTY FOR SIRENS

Complete Rest Most Important In Treating Heart Disease

For centuries physicians have known that rest is an important part of the treatment of many forms of heart disease. That seems reasonable. If the heart is weakened, let it rest to regain strength if possible. However, if the heart is to rest, the body must also rest. Rest of the body and of the heart seems to be effective in prolonging life after an attack of coronary thrombosis.

The muscle of the heart has a blood supply which comes through arteries known as the coronary arteries. If these arteries become blocked by a clot of blood, the disorder is known as coronary thrombosis. This is often responsible for sudden death.

If coronary thrombosis occurs, proper treatment may serve to prolong the patient's life. Dr. J. Wilson Reid of Liverpool, England, advises that treatment immediately after the attack followed by a rest period, then convalescence, and finally a period of maintenance, all must be given consideration. By the maintenance period is meant regulation of the patient's life so as to put the least possible strain on the heart and still allow him to carry on his necessary activities.

When the attack first occurs the patient must be kept at rest in bed. As a general rule some narcotic such as morphine must be given to relieve the pain and to allow for complete rest. A complete rest period in bed for from six to eight weeks helps the heart to regulate its strength. Before the patient is due to get up it is suggested that he have a gentle massage of the legs and exercises for his feet.

During this rest period, the food intake should be restricted sufficiently to keep the patient's weight down and perhaps even to bring about a little loss of weight. Fresh fruits, because of their high content of vitamin C, are important in diet. Vitamin B-complex tablets may be found useful. It may even be helpful, according to Doctor Reid to give tablets of ascorbic acid or Vitamin C, and he believes they may help speed recovery.

When the patient is first allowed to get up he is kept confined to his room, but after about two weeks he may be allowed to start going out. The first exercise permitted is walking, but it must be so regulated that no strain is put on the heart. At first the only walking permitted is down hill. Then walking on the level is permitted, and finally, the patient may walk up a slight incline. The patient is instructed to rest as soon as he feels tired, short of breath, or weak. Finally, the patient may be able to return to his work, which must be modified so as to prevent any excessive exertion.

On taking up his work the patient should at first have short hours. If any signs of fatigue develop, rest at once is necessary. The patient should go to bed early, increasing the length of his working day as he gets stronger. One day a week should be a rest day and ought to be spent in bed. If pain around the heart occurs on exertion, the use of a tablet of nitroglycerine placed under the tongue may give relief. Of course once a person has had coronary thrombosis, he should remain under the care of his physician; he should have regular examinations and follow the advice his doctor gives.

CARRY OUT DEAD SON'S WISHES

In a letter written shortly before his death, he urged his parents to "put all the money you possibly can into those war bonds and stamps" and instructed them to invest his savings in the bonds, should he not come back.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Love's Definition Depends on Definer

Never have I been so flattered as when a friend—a college professor, at that—asked me to define Love.

He's been giving a highly successful course of lectures on Love and Marriage in a co-educational college for the last six years. He reminds me that at the turn of the century, when he was a college student, this column anticipated what psychoanalysts did later—freeing of complexes through confession. In those old days we used to call it "writing letters about love".

Perhaps unconsciously, when I inaugurated this column, I may have recalled the wisdom of my old grandmother who, whenever she felt irritated and wanted to "reason with" (when it happened to me I called it "scolding") any of her ten children, she wrote them a letter and then put the letter in the fire. It made her feel ever so much better to get the matter off her chest and it didn't offend any of the ten who adored her.

After considering the college professor's question, I wrote him: "Who could define Love? No one, to date, has been able to give the perfect answer. Genius has made approaches to a definition but the true essence of Love seems to have evaded translation".

The Brownings whose love was considered perfect had this to say. Mrs. Browning in "The Sonnets from the Portuguese":

"I love thee with a love I seemed to lose
With my lost saints,—I love thee
with the breath,
Smiles, tears, of all my life!—and,
if God choose,
I shall but love thee better, after death".

And Robert Browning, her husband, wrote:

"God be thanked. The meanest of his creatures boasts two soul sides—one to face the world with, one to show a woman when he loves her".

Plato, who believed in platonic friendship, summed it up: "At the touch of love, everyone becomes a poet". Centuries later, Madame De Stael:

"Love is a symbol of eternity. It wipes out all sense of time, destroying all memory of a beginning and all fear of an end'.

Shakespeare, who certainly knew a thing or two about love, wrote: "Except I be by Sylvia in the night There is no music in the nightingale".

In another mood he wrote:

"Men have died from time to time and worms have eaten them, but not for love".

And Antoine Bret: "The first sigh of love is the last of wisdom".

I recalled to my friend, the professor, if he had read "Napoleon as Lover and Husband", he might enjoy this quotation from one of Napoleon's letters: "I have never loved anyone for love's sake, except perhaps Josephine—a little".

Fashion Flashes

Dinner at home is the apt name of a smart pyjama suit with trousers of black velvet cut on slim lines and worn with a fitted pale pink crepe jacket patterned in black sequins in scroll design.

There's comfort as well as beauty in the new fur coats. Safari brown Alaska sealskin is used for a boxy coat made with a vent in back. Big antique gilt buttons trim the sleeves and the double-breasted closing.

Very kind and flattering to every type is a general wear hat of purple or red felt made with a high peaked, head-fitted crown and a wide, softly shirred brim that is adjustable to any angle.

Vastly different from the old Daniel Boone type of fur hat that used to be the usual fur headpiece is a charming little hat of rose satin, its heart-shaped brim edged with mink, with a mink flower lifting and holding the brim in back.

It looks like wool, it feels like wool and it is as warm and light as good wool. We refer to a grand new synthetic fabric developed from milk casein, a real plastic fabric. It is used as the inner lining for toppers, snow suits, street coats and robes and is just as serviceable as wool interlining.

There's need for a tailored silk shirt blouse in practically every wardrobe. A new fall model is in dull finish taffeta plaided in soft tones of green, red, brown, blue and navy. Flap patch pocket at breastline.

FORMER A. V. G IN NEW YORK

New York, Sept. 9 —(AP)— A group of American fliers who went to China to beat back Japanese airmen at 10-to-1 odds are on a peaceful sight-seeing tour here. Brooklyn Just Another Ball Club to St. Louis Cardinals As Teams Prepare for Series

Southworth Says He Plays 'Em As We Meets 'Em

BROWNS NOW THIRD

By SID FEDER
Associated Press Sport Writer

Take it direct from Billy the Kid Southworth, himself, Brooklyn Dodgers don't look any different to his St. Louis Cardinals than any other club in the National League.

As he led his roaring Redbirds into their final full scale invasion of the East today — an invasion that the Cards still confidently expect will wind up with the National League pennant — Billy the Kid came right out with his battle strategy:—"We play 'em as we meet 'em, game by game."

He stayed by this theory, even though the Bums boosted a gaudy three-game bulge on the Cardinals as a result of Ed Head's four-hit whitewash job to give the Dodgers a 4-0 victory over Pittsburgh Pirates yesterday.

"But we're still confident and we're still in the fight," Southworth insisted. "We play this single game with the Giants today. Then we move into Brooklyn for those two games Friday and Saturday. And then we have the Phillies and Braves after that.

"Well, we're playing every ball game as it comes along. Brooklyn is just another ball game, the same as Boston and Philadelphia. We're trying to win each one of 'em and get this — we're not looking forward or backward. We're only looking at what's right there in front of us each day."

Take Advantage of Situation

Meantime, the Dodgers took advantage of the situation. Head had the Bucs rolling over and playing dead, and when his mates gave him a run in the first frame, the whole thing was over right there. In fact, after the first inning, not a Pirate got as far as second base.

This was the only battle on the National League calendar for the day, while over in the American League three games were run off, chief of which saw Washington Senators nosing out Boston Red Sox in a "close pitching duel," 15-11. A second game of a scheduled doubleheader had to be called at the end of four innings so both teams could catch a train.

The setback sank the Sox 9 1-2 games behind the idle New York Yankees and left them with only 15 to play.

St. Louis Browns put a firmer grab on the American League's third place by whipping Detroit Tigers 4-1 with the help of a couple of Yankee castoffs — Steve Sundra, who served up a four-hit pitching job, and Walt Judnich, who whacked his 10th homer of the year.

Cleveland Indians and Chicago White Sox were slated for a doubleheader, but after young Ray Poat's seven-hit twirling whipped the Sox 10-0 in the opener, the second game had to be called off.

MAX SCHMELING SEVERELY HURT

Former Heavyweight Champion Injured in Fighting in Crete

New York, Sept. 9.—(AP)— The Berlin radio said yesterday that Max Schmeling, a para-trooper in the Nazi army and a former heavyweight boxing champion, was injured so severely in the battle of Crete he would never enter the ring again.

The statement was attributed to Max Machon, Schmeling's manager.

Schmeling has not boxed since 1939 when he knocked out the current German heavyweight champion, Adolf Heuser.

The fighter was called up for training with the German troops in July of 1940 and early in 1941 was denied a furlough to oppose Heinz Lazek of Vienna for the European title.

Later the same Spring British sources reported, unofficially, that Schmeling was killed in Crete but the Germans said he was recuperating in an Athens hospital from tropical fever.

Schmeling, now 36, won the world title in June 1930, when he was declared the victor over Jack Sharkey on a foul in the fourth round. He lost the crown to Sharkey on a 15-round decision two years later.

That Extra Something!

...You can spot it every time

SKILLED workers have "know-how". So have the makers of Coca-Cola. Coca-Cola has that extra something. Almost anybody can make a soft drink, but nobody else can make Coca-Cola.

There's a finished art in its making which gives Coca-Cola a special quality...its unique taste comes from a blend of pure, wholesome essences,— refreshment that can't be copied.

No other drink gives this special plus...this unique taste and after-sense of refreshment.

Wartime limits the supply of Coca-Cola. Those times when you cannot get it, remember Coca-Cola, being first choice, is the first to go. Ask for it each time. No matter how short the supply, the quality of Coca-Cola will not be changed in any respect.

Long, hard-working hours tire you out,—slow up production. You need a brief rest-pause. So, when the schedule calls for time-out for a "breather", a moment for ice-cold, energy-giving Coca-Cola leads to better work.

Toronto, Sept. 9 —(CP)— Canada's most successful professional baseball pitcher this year was Don Osborn (correct), playing manager of Vancouver Capilanos . . .His club won the western International League Pennant, and Osborn personally won 22, lost four, was chosen the league's all-star manager and was sold at season's end to Los Angeles in the Pacific Coast League . . .Even if Osborn never hits the bigtime (and don't stake the shirt on that) he'll have a permanent spot in baseball's record books for this feat: He has won 33 consecutive daylight games since 1940.

It stuck in the bracnhes of a maple tree that spread out over the green. A moment later two putters fell down. Charlie picked up the second putter, examined it carefully, and finally said: 'wondered where that putter had got to.' "

Presidents of Various Leagues to Transact Business

DURHAM, N. C., Sept. 8—(AP)— The annual convention of baseball's senior leagues, one of the biggest diamond gatherings on the calendar, will be dispensed with this year in accordance with the government's wishes, President W. G. Bramham of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues announced today.

The usual business of the Association, however, will be transacted in a congress of league presidents, who have the voting power of the minors. Amendments, revisions, and other matters docketed for action will be brought before the presidents. League presidents will be called together at a time and place to be announced later.

GAME CANCELLED DUE TO WEATHER

Syracuse and Jersey City Unable to Play Off Their Tie Game

By The Associated Press

The scourge of club owners, schedule makers and ball players—the weatherman — was up to his old tricks yesterday as he caused postponement until tonight of the playoff game for third place between Syracuse Chiefs and Jersey City Giants of the International League.

Although no prize money is at stake in tonight's battle the winner receives the award of not having to face the champion Bears in the first round of the Governors' Cup series.

The present schedule calls for the first-place Newark club to face tonight's lower and the second-place Montreal Royals to play the winner.

It is the third time since the Shaughnessy system was begun 10 years ago that a tie has delayed the start of the playoffs.

If the weatherman acts up again tonight the game will be re-scheduled for Thursday. Should the Chiefs and Giants, however, conclude their game tonight, the semi-final rounds will begin Thursday. Otherwise the present plans will be discarded and new ones drawn up.

HOTTEST FISTIC 'NATURAL' IN YEARS COMING

Louis and Conn, Both in Army, Matched to Fight October 12th

MONEY FOR RELIEF

By SID FEDER
Associated Press Sport Writer

New York, Sept. 9—(AP)—Simply for the pleasure of giving the wives and children of United States soldiers $1,000,000, a couple of soldiers are going to climb into Yankee Stadium's ring on Columbus Day to fight the hottest fistic "natural" in six years.

It is almost as sure as a bombsight's aim that the heavyweight championship return go Oct. 12 between Cpl. Joe Louis, boss man of the beak busters, and Pte. Billy Conn, who almost took the title a year ago, will hot the $1,000,000 jackpot for the first time since the bomber's second go-round with Max Schmeling in '38.

Will Bring Customers in

The memory of the fireworks they set off in their first brawl is enough in itself to bring the customers storming back again. And, if more help was needed, the fact that this one is entirely for army emergency relief will more than make up the difference. What's more, Promoter Mike Jacobs is shooting at a crowd of 77,000 and a gate of $1,2000,000—with tickets scaled from $3 to $40—and he figures a lot of the folks who will be here for the World Series the first week in October will stick around and help jingle the cash registers.

Yet, not one nickle of it, except for minor expenses, will go to either fighter or Jacobs. The son of the Alabama Cotton Picker, the tough Irish kid out of Pittsburgh and the fight promoter who grew up on New York's bloom-less sidewalks and now likes to raise gardenias will dump the whole pot into the bank account for the families of the soldiers who are in there pitching at the Axis. It will be easily the biggest "score" the army fund has made in any single event to date.

Army Sanctions Bout

The army, at long last, gave its official blessing to the get-together yesterday after keeping all hands in a lather of doubt about it for a dozen weeks or so.

In this tussle, the bomber and the Pittsburgh pretty boy are going to do a pretty fair country job of rewriting the record books on the subject. The simple fact that Joe and Billy are putting this one on for the house—doing the almost unheard of stunt of fighting for the World Heavyweight Championship for nothing—is about enough to have them read out of the union.

Then, too, it marks the first time in the history of legalized nose-mashing that two soldiers have fought for the richest prize package in the business. On top of that, it will be the first daylight fight for the big bauble since Jack Dempsey and Tom Gibbons broiled under the sun at Shelby, Mont., 19 years back. Because of dim-out regulations here, Jacobs plans to move it up to 3 p.m.

Both Steamed Up

Conn, stationed at nearby Fort Wadsworth, and Louis, who is doing his bit with the cavalry at Fort Riley, Kansas, were both as steamed up as a couple of kids with a bag of candy over the prospects of putting on a re-run of the thriller they fought last year. In that one, Conn amazed even his closest pals by taking a long lead for 12 rounds, only to get his "Irish up," try to trade Sunday shots with Joe in the 13th, and run smack with the bomber's knockout drops.

Billy, scaling 185 now, will do his training at a specially constructed camp at Jacob's Rumson (N. J.) estate. Louis, who said that he is "12 or 15 pounds overweight"—which would put him in the neighborhood of a hefty 220—will round into fighting shape at his long-time base at Greenwood Lake, N.Y.

The war department announcement outlined the set-up under which the big battle will be developed. Back of Jacobs as promoter will be a committee of New York sport writers as "advisors."

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Sept. 9 — (CP) — Perhaps this is a pessimistic outlook, but if the war lasts long enough sport in Britain will be blacked out through lack of equipment.

The end of the sports trail is a long way off but a Board of Trade order banning manufacture of sports equipment except under government order, is the beginning of the end for tennis and golf. These two sports, which have produced hundreds of thousands of dollars for war charities, are not included in games to enjoy priority.

Priority games are football, netball, cricket, field hockey, boxing, rounders, gymnastics and athletics. The fighting services and attendant organizations will have first call on material for these sports.

Nigel Sharpe, who organized big charity lawn tennis matches, thinks the order sounds the death knell of the game after this season. Golf will last longer and there'll always be some played even if substitute balls are used.

Tests for synthetic golf balls are going on and one of the famed golfing Whitcombe brothers, Charles, announced he is quite prepared to return to cork balls. He learned the game by swatting round corks after soaking them in water to add weight.

"Corks are resilient and you can get quite good drives of 30 yards or more," he said. "I'll go back to corks rather than give up the game."

It's the channel swimming season around Dover — although none is going on — and Jock Maclean is reminded of this yarn.

Back in 1923 when Henry F. Sullivan of Lowell, Mass., swam the channel to Calais, newspapers throughout the world requested hourly bulletins on the attempt. The problem was to get the information to the shore from the boats accompanying Sullivan through what turned out to be a 27-hour swim.

But Jock was a carrier-pigeon expert. He made the trip with several pigeons in one of the boats and a bird was released every hour or so with the latest story in a capsule on its leg.

"We had no proper place to write the messages on," he said. "As Sullivan's chances became greater, the messages became longer. Finally I had them written on long strips of paper which I wound around the birds' legs and bodies, and got them through like that. The pigeons were so burdened they could scarcely fly, but I never lost one."

New York, Sept. 9 (AP)—Although the army officially doesn't know where the Louis-Conn fracas will be staged, we expect to spend Columbus Day at Yankee Stadium —and not watching a high school football game, either....Mike is the promoter, and Mike knows he can draw more dough here than anywhere else....The Sports Writers' Committee is composed mostly of New Yorkers....And plans already are set for Joe and Billy to train within shouting distance of New York....It's only natural, because the world series will be bringing sports fans east if they want something to do with their time after that is over, three first-class football games are on tap here the Saturday before the scrap....P.S.: We pick Louis to win, figuring army life will hurt Conn's speed more than Joe's punch.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

'TIS OFT BEEN SAID—"ALL good things come to an end," but it seems as though each year following vacation time it becomes more difficult to resume activities in front of the trusty old Remington. Maybe it's old age.

MUCH HAS OCCURRED IN THE realm of sports in and around Belleville-on-the-Bay in the past ten days. Both our softball nines went down to defeat and elimination, the passing of the Army & Navy Vets perhaps being the most surprising (?) reverse. Over at Trenton the R.C.A.F. staged their eighth annual track and field meet before upwards to 10,000 spectators, who were given added thrills with breath-taking exhibitions of flying both in formation and stunting. The Belleville Lawn Bowling Club staged its annual Labor Day men's trebles with the Stirling trio of Hap Tompkins, Billie Whitty and Tommy Solmes showing the way home to 27 other teams. However, Cliff Argue, Mac MacLean and H. Pascoe kept Belleville's lawn bowling colors flying high by capturing the second honors, as local trios took three of the six prizes. Behind the guidance of President Cliff Argue the Belleville Lawn Belleville Club is coming to the end of another successful season in wartime, but it has only been accomplished by the wholehearted co-operation of every last member with the executive. Which is as it should be.

REMEMBER WHEN THE FIRST world's heavyweight boxing championship battle under the Marquess of Queensbury rules was staged between John L. Sullivan and James J. Corbett at New Orleans exactly half a century ago this week? Corbett won with a 21-round knockout only to lose the crown to Bob Fitzsimmons five years later. Sullivan, who had reigned as bare knuckle champion for many years, held the heavyweight crown longer than any other living fighter, including, of course, his reign as bare-fist champion.

WITH SUMMER SPORTS ALL caught up locally the sport-loving public will have to be satisfied with professional wrestling, which Promoter Frank Tunney may present weekly during the cooler autumn months. Tonight's Empire elimination scrap between that mad Hindu, Nanjo Singh and big Earl McCready seems to be a much better match than 'Boss' Tunney's main bout of Martinez and Kirchmeyer scheduled for the Maple Leaf Gardens tomorrow evening. It was just a month ago that McCready had to forego his bout with Singh to hasten to his father's sick bed in Regina. With the critical illness abated McCready returned east last week and immediately asked to continue the British Empire elimination bouts. The fact that Tunney has included champion Billie Watson in a special bout alone should prove sufficient attraction to the female patrons in itself, as the popular York Township title holder is the apple of all the ladies' eyes. Both McCready and Singh informed Promoter Tunney they would challenge Watson for his crown in the event of a win tonight.

WHEN IT COMES TO HOT golf that score carded by Tommy Carruthers up at the Bay of Quinte Country Club on Monday really sizzled. Tommy, who was playing with Joe Legault and Bill Steer, the genial advertising manager of this G.F.J., carded a 32 score for nine holes. Par at the Country Club is 35. Tommy had birdies on four holes, the first, fourth, sixth and ninth, while he was one over par on the second, a four-par hole. Only a few weeks ago Bill Little, the club professional, carded a 34 to equal the course record, but Carruthers' 32 is now tops. Perhaps the crowning achievement in Tommy's fine golf on Labor Day came on the ninth and final hole. He had a 30 score as he teed up and only needed a par three to break the course record of 34. His iron shot from the tee rolled onto the green about 20 feet from the pin. He was certain of a 33, but elected to hole out in two and after measuring his shot made a perfect 20 foot putt into the cup and that's championship golf, in any man's game.

AFTER THE SECOND OSHAWA-Peterborough Intermediate O.A.S.A. play-off in the Liftlock City, Scribe George Campbell, the demon Motor City sports scribe and mentor —of the Colts, held that Umpire Dormer, of Peterboro, was the best player the Petes possessed. Campbell contended that Dormer kicked around about six or seven decisions, all of which he said materially helped the Peterboro's win, Maybe there was more truth and imagination to Mister Campbell's contentions, because when the Peterboro Plazas were ordered to play a third and deciding game at Port Hope with neutral umpires from Belleville on Labor Day, the Plazas tossed in the sponge and defaulted the series. The Oshawa Colts now meet the Kingston Vics and from this neutral corner it would appear as though the Colts will take the Limestoners just about as easy as the Victorias rubbed out Johnny Bawden and company last week.

ALTHOUGH THERE WAS much controversy it was always a bright outlook for a bout between Joe Louis and Billie Conn sometime this fall. Yesterday the United States War Department placed its stamp of approval on such a meeting and in all probability the scrap will be held in the Yankee Stadium on the afternoon of Oct. 12th. Now such a date would be a break for Canadian fight lovers, as Oct. 12th has been set aside as Thanksgiving Day, thus giving the fight fans of the Dominion an opportunity to hear the blow-by-blow description over the radio. In their last meeting Conn had Louis beaten on points for 12 rounds, but made the unforgivable mistake of trying to outfight Louis and the inevitable happened—Louis K.O.d Conn. All profits from the bout will be given to the U.S. Army Relief Fund. The result—well, army life won't interfere with a puncher like Louis, but might slow the Cobb boxer type down.

THIS AND THAT—The fourth Zeller-Deacon softball play-off will be played Thursday night. . . . The delay was timed well, even though Skipper Barnett is enjoying a week's vacation. . .

Thought Missing Allan Mills Soldier Safe After Dieppe Raid

Allan Mills—Mr. W. S. Stiles has purchased the farm belonging to Mrs. Gussie Stiles.

Mrs. Fred McKeown spent Thursday with Mrs. A. Thomson.

Mrs. Alf. Wright, Arthur and Jean, visited Mrs. A. Burkitt on Thursday.

Mrs. A. McComb spent a few days with Mrs. Don Thomson of Sine.

The many friends of Signalman Raymond Anderson, son of Mrs. Lillian Anderson, Bonorlaw, will be overjoyed to hear that he is safe after being reported missing on Monday, August 24, after the Dieppe raid. A telephone message to Havelock from Ottawa, on Sunday bore the good news that Raymond is safe in England after participating at Dieppe.

He was with the Second Division and has been overseas two years this September with the 6th Canadian Infantry Brigade. Two of his brothers are also in England, Clarence with the R.C.A.F., and Lorne with the R.C.A.

Anniversary services at Rylestone Church will be conducted on Sunday, September 13th., at 11.00 a.m., and 8.00 p.m. Daylight Saving Time.

The special preacher for the day will be Rev. Mr. Harding of Bethany. Rev. Harding is a former minister of Rylestone Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Amos Green of Belleville, visited Mr. and Mrs. A. McComb on Sunday.

Born—To Mr. and Mrs. Don Thomson (nee Edna McComb), a son, Allan Gilbert, on September 2nd., at Mrs. Nicholson's Nursing Home, Stirling.

About two hundred friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Thomson on Thursday evening in honour of the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Thomson.

Mr. F. M. Rutherford acted as chairman and after a few remarks, Russel Rowe was asked to read the address. The bride and groom graciously thanked their many friends for the lovely gifts.

After some speeches all joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows".

Mr. and Mrs. Thomson will reside at Burnbrae, Seymour.

A cable was received from Ottawa on Friday by Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rowe of Bonarlaw, informing them of the death of their son, Sgt. Pilot Officer Rowe, on Active Service Overseas. The heartfelt sympathy of this community is extended the bereaved family. Left to mourn his loss are his father and mother, two sisters, Mrs. Thos. Dutton, Mr. H. Brunton of Bonarlaw, two brothers, Russel of the R.C.A.F. and Howard at home.

Frankford

Frankford — The Stockdale W.M.S. and W.A. of the United Church gathered for their August meeting at the home of Mrs. Cecil Palmer. In the absence of the president Mrs. Bates, Mrs. Lackey took charge of the devotional part for the W.M.S.

Mrs. Terry, president of the W.A. then took charge of the program. Roll call showed ten members and 13 visitors present. An invitation was received from the Zion association to meet with them. It was decided to accept this kind invitation. Mrs. Percy Charlesworth gave a delightful talk on the History of Music assisted by five girls who played pieces illustrating the different composers. Grace was sung and lunch was served by the hostess. The Mizpah benediction repeated in unison closed the meeting.

Mrs. Geo. Montgomery and Douglas have returned home after a couple of weeks holiday at Head Lake, Haliburton.

Leaders Agree Russia Will Hold Out

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Sifting the Roosevelt and Churchill war summaries for their dominant note, there can be no doubt that it is to be found in the conviction both men expressed that hard-pressed Russia can and will hold out to shatter Hitler's conquest dream.

That necessarily is the bedrock foundation of Anglo-American planning to destroy Hitler's power "on European battlefields," as President Roosevelt said. It is the keystone of the arch of offensive action being built; the vital element of decisions already taken in Washington and London.

"I can now say," Mr. Roosevelt said, "that all of the decisions are directed toward taking the offensive."

The element in the struggle in Russia, aside from Russian endurance and fighting genius, which appears to have made the biggest impression on President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill is the Nazi time loss.

"This is Sept. 8," Mr. Churchill commented.

"Millions of German troops seem doomed to spend another cruel and bitter winter on the Russian front," said President Roosevelt. "The Russians are killing more Germans and destroying more airplanes and tanks than are being smashed on any other front."

It so happens that the Churchill summary came on the first anniversary of Nazi investment of Leningrad. Berlin announced it had been "completely cut off on Sept. 8 last; yet today it is free of encirclement and its garrison ceaselessly on the attack.

The Germans were reported last September in the suburbs of Leningrad with only fifteen miles of flat country between them and their goal. They were as close to Leningrad and its embattled population as they now are to Stalingrad; but they never reached it.

That year general rains along the whole Russian front were reported by mid-September. The Nazi war machine ground forward, nevertheless, to take Kiev, closely threaten Moscow. On Oct. 2 Hitler bugled from his Russian headquarters that "today begins the last great decisive battle of this year." The next day in Berlin he uttered the famous boast that Russia was "already broken and will never rise again."

Twenty days later Hitler bulletins were noting snow and freezing weather to excuse failure to take Moscow, but he had overruled his generals to take supreme command himself and press on against all such winter portents. By Nov. 22 his troops were in Rostov, the "gateway to the Caucasus" now far behind them; but just a week later his armies were in general retreat before a Russia he said would "never rise again."

It is that bitter German experience of 1941 which best illustrates what both President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill had in mind in noting the time element in Russia. Hitler now is holding vastly more extended lines than he had last September or in November when the winter halted him. He needs more men, more planes and more supplies in Russia now than last year; nor is there any prospect he can disengage them for use in the west or in Egypt.

And in Egypt, although Mr. Churchill made only guarded references to it, the possibility of an annihilating counterblow at Rommel's African Corps is looming.

Coupled with Wendell Willkie's disclosure from Turkey that Rommel lost more than a third of his first-line tanks in his recent frustrated attempt to turn the British left flank in Egypt, Mr. Churchill's report of a completely rebuilt and strengthened British 8th Army there, poised to seize any opportunity, is significant. He seems to expect swift and favorable developments soon.

AT THE BELLE

"They Flew Alone"

Chronicling the amazing careers of Amy Johnson and Jim Mollison from their earliest days to the time of Johnnie's tragic death, "They Flew Alone" is the first production to team Anna Neagle and Robert Newton and is now on the Belle Theatre screen.

Emulating fiction in its graphic story of two great flyers whose temperaments and courage spurred them on to blazing great new airways, "They Flew Alone" offers fast-moving, dramatic entertainment.

Blending spectacle, romance and drama is his customary manner, Producer Herbert Wilcox has reconstructed "Johnnie's" and Jim's aerial feats as vital links in the penetrating, absorbing story of two people who failed to find happiness under the searching spotlight of fame.

"Powder Town"

Two scrambled love affairs which have a hard time unravelling themselves are an entertaining part of the theme of "Powder Town," RKO Radio's new dramatic thriller and the added feature attraction which uses America's gigantic defence effort as its stirring background.

Headed by Victor McLaglen, this powerful drama of murder and sabotage presents Edmund O'Brien and Dorothy Lovett, two of the screen's younger favorites, as a romantic pair.

The Belle latest Movietone Newsreel completes the program.

"Hatter's Castle"

What was the strange secret of "Hatter's Castle?" Why did it cast a shadow over an entire community and why was it spoken of only in whispers?

A. J. Cronin, the man who wrote "The Citadel" and "Keys of the Kingdom" gives you a story every inch as great as his greatest — a story whose shocking drama will remain in your memory long after you've left the theatre.

"Hatter's Castle" coming to the Belle Theatre is breaking "North West Mounted Police" records in London, England, and has completed three sensational weeks at the Eglinton Theatre, Toronto. Craig Wood, open golf champion in an entertaining Sportfilm, and Unusual Occupations in technicolor, precede the feature attraction.

AT THE CAPITOL

"I Am the Law"

A double action program starts next at the Capitol headed by Edward G. Robinson in "I Am the Law". "Little Caesar" turns fighting prosecutor to turn in his greatest performance in the story they said was too hot to handle. The story based upon Liberty Magazine serial by Fred Allhoff. Screen play by Jo Swerling; directed by Alexander Hall and produced by Everett Riskin. The fine supporting cast includes Barbara O'Neil, John Beal, Wendy Barrie and Otto Kruger.

"Return of Daniel Boone"

Marked with flashing action and blazing six-guns, Columbia's exciting western yarn, "The Return of Daniel Boone" opens next also. With Bill Elliott, husky outdoor action star, playing the title role, the film boasts an exceptionally talented cast including such favorites as Dub Taylor, Ray Bennett, Walter Soderling, Carl Stockdale and Bud Osborne.

The 5th. Chapter of the thrilling serial, "Spy Smashers" and a fun cartoon completes the weekend bill.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Pardon My Sarong"

They did it again — that just about relates the type of comedy that Bud Abbott and Lou Costello put over in their recent hit "Pardon My Sarong" now playing at the McCarthy Theatre along with support pictures that has prompted the management to continue the run of "Pardon My Sarong" the remainder of the week. Abbott and Costello seem to get funnier each picture and as they start out their latest flicker as Chicago bus drivers and wind up on an unchartered island among natives there is nothing in comedy left to the imagination — Abbott and Costello provide that. It was due to the fact that "Pardon My Sarong" has literally left the McCarthy Theatre patrons clutching their sides in the aisles that the show has been continued for an additional period.

It is not all comedy in this feature picture, as Robert Paige and Virginia Bruce provide the romance and there are plenty of hit songs and catchy music tones for the lovers of music, entertaining specialties being provided by the "Tip Taps", a trio of tap dancers that provide a new style of entertainment in dancing the equal of which is seldom seen on Broadway itself, while the "Ink Spots" and Sarong dancing girls are also feature attractions in modern entertainment.

A variety short featuring Al Donahue's orchestra and a supporting imitating radio broadcast show adds to the evening's performance along with a cartoon that promises to please

In the McCarthy Theatre newsreel can be seen shots of the Canadian Commando troops at "The Battle of Dieppe", giving the patrons a vivid word-picture of the heroic work of Canada's fighting forces overseas in their initial major war engagement. It's an all-around pleasing show at the McCarthy Theatre for the rest of the week.

Thorold Residents Oppose Curtailment Of Paper Industry

Thorold, Ont., Sept. 9—(CP)—A mass meeting of 1,000 men and women of this area interested in continued operation of the Ontario Paper Company's mill and other local pulp and paper mills last night agreed to continue to oppose any curtailment of the industry through restrictions on power, at least until all types of luxury lighting have been abolished.

The meeting, called to protest recent reduction in the electric power supply to the Ontario Paper Mill, was presided over by Harvey Raymond of St. Catharines, representative of the papermakers' union. Some speakers criticized Federal Labor Minister Humphrey Mitchell for failing to accept an invitation to attend the meeting, and a second invitation was extended to him to attend another meeting at the earliest date.

Union members marched to the Thorold arena behind the Thorold Reed Band and the Canadian Corps Boys' trumpet band to hear a long list of speakers including mayor Charles Daley of St. Catharines, Mayor W.A. Hutt of Thorold, Mayor F.O. Leeson of Merriton, Mayor George Inglis of Niagara Falls and Reeve A.R. Booth of Thorold township.

CHAPTER 21

Home Again

In the station, the noisy, brightly-lighted arc with its crowds of hurrying, busy people, Linda waited beside smart pigskin luggage while Steve purchased her tickets and wired her father that she was coming.

"The train is in, Steve", she said when he returned. "Perhaps I'd better get on".

"All right, Linda." So she didn't want him to be with her, even for a little while? He motioned a redcap to take her bags, and the boy hurried away before them. Pausing before her car, Linda turned swiftly to Steve, trying to smile with tears shinning in her eyes.

"Would you like me to go with you?" he asked suddenly. "I will if you want me to".

If only he would! Linda caught her breath, wanting to says yes, but then she knew he hadn't meant that. He was only trying to be helpful in her hour of anxiety.

"No, I believe Id better go alone", she answered, heart-sick. "You've been wonderful to me, already, Steve'. Tears were beginning to course down her cheeks. "If it had not been for you—"

"I've not done half enough".

Linda stared at Steve's handsome, bronzed face filled with compassion as he looked down at her. Then, suddenly, she was sobbing, her arms around his neck.

"Steve—Im afraid to go back. Terribly afraid!"

"Courage . . . courage, dear," he said gently. "She'll be all right you'll see."

The sobbing subsided, and Linda relaxed wearily against him, oblivious of others in the station. Then, still holding her gently in his arms, Steve said huskily:

"There's something I've been waiting to say to you, Linda, for a long time".

Tear-filled eyes were lifted to his. "Yes"?

Steve hesitated. Was this the proper time, when Linda was beside herself with worry—when she was going to her mother's sickbed, to tell her that he loved her?

"It can wait,' he decided aloud, smiling a little, "until you come home".

Home! Linda smiled wistfully. How good it sounded from Steve's lips. Their home! It thrilled and delighted her just to dwell on the thought, she was still smiling at him when Steve kissed her; caught her up hard against him and kissed her until she was breathless, and dizzy.

"Good-bye, Linda", he said gently, releasing her. "Let me know if you need me."

He turned abruptly and left. Stars were in Linda's eyes, music in her heart as she clambored onto the train. Steve had kissed her! He had declared there was something he wished to say. With that knowledge, Linda was again strong and confident. Somehow everything would be all right!

Linda could not refrain from smiling at the irony of her return to Prairievale. Less than a year before she had been a shy, shabbily dressed girl riding a dusty day coach to an uncertain destiny. Now, a wife of a celebrated novelist, dressed in the height of fashion, she returned —a visitor, summoned by illness.

As the train neared her destination, Linda peered anxiously from her drawing-room window to see her father waiting patiently on the station platform. With a final glance in the mirror to make sure her hat was set at the correct angle Linda approached the door, waving at John Phillips.

"Dad', she said when she was in his arms. There was a lump in her throat. Her eyes misted with tears. "It's so good to see you again!"

"My little girl," he answered huskily. "I was afraid you might not come".

"Is . . . is mother very . . . ill?" Linda was half afraid to speak, afraid her father's answer might prove that her trip home had come too late.

"She's much better now", he replied. "he doctor said she was out of danger and getting along fine".

"I—I understood she was gravely ill", Linda was puzzled. "Your telegram—"

"We were afraid you might not want to come unless you thought it was urgent." He was placing her bags in the car.

Linda was weak with relief. "I guess I had that coming, Dad", che admitted. "I have neglected you, I'm afraid. I—I wanted to come home so many times, but I thought you might not want me".

"We—we've hoped you'd come for a long time now, honey", John Phillips cleared his throat. "W—well, we're sorry about everything We didn't understand. . ." His voice trailed into silence. It was the closest to an apology that the proud, old man had ever come, and Linda was content.

There were tears in Mary Phillips eyes as she greeted her daughter; tears of weakness. Happiness! Linda tried futily to swallow the strange lump in her throat. She had not known she could experience such happiness at her home-coming.

"You had me worried to death," she scolded when she could speak naturally. "Father said you nearly had a nervous breakdown."

"I'm feeling much better now", her mother answered, gazing at Linda's radiant face.

Hours later, seated at her mother's bedside, Linda attempted to explain her own marital mixup, knowing she could not reveal the whole truth to these simple middle-western people whose lives had been so placid and devoid of treachery and intrigue.

"I—I thought I loved Greg." Linda admitted in reply to her mother's inquiry, "but after I met Steve, I knew he was the only man in the world for me. Steve was leaving, to spend the Winter on his farm, and I married him so I could go with him. It was sudden—surprising, I'll admit, but not a mistake."

It had been exactly like that, but no one hearing the lilt in the girl's confident young voice, or seeing the sparkle in her eyes, could doubt her present sincerity.

"Then—you are happy?" Mary Phillips asked anxiously.

Linda hesitated. She could not honestly say the last few months had been entirely happy ones, and yet, with the remembrance of Steve's arms around her and the tenderness in his eyes as they said good-bye still fresh and vivid in her mind, all the disappointment she had known seemed petty now.

"Of course I'm happy."

"You're not—sorry you left home and went to Chicago?"

A thousand times Linda had wished that she had stayed in Prairievale. "I would never have met Steve, had I stayed at home," she told her mother.

"I've never been able to understand it", Mary Phillips said. "You were happy here, Linda. You and Kyle had been engaged for four years. Your hope chest has never been touched and Kyle is hoping you've come back to stay".

"I'm sorry, dear", Linda was strongly touched. "Kyle can't bear defeat".

"He has a good job now", her mother went on. "He could even build a little home and you would not have to work. Kyle could take good care of you".

A smile played about Linda's mouth as she remembered her own lovely apartment overlooking the lake; the beautiful, rambling farm house with its rows of stables; the cars; her jewels. She realized for the first time that her parents could not understand her new wealth and position. Perhaps news of Steve's best-seller novel had not reached Prairievale.

"When you are stronger," she said kindly, "you and Father must come and stay with Steve and me on the farm for a while."

"But you were never meant for farm life," her mother fretted, weakly, "and with the burden of two more on your hands—"

"I have two housekeepers, a man and his wife, to take care of the farm, and a personal maid for the lighter work."

For a moment Mary Phillips lay silent, and then, cautiously, she whispered, "Then—you .... really have ... lots of money?"

Linda patted the hand lying frail and white on the coverlet. "Steve has been very successful," she answered.

Linda spent a week in Prairieville. Contrary to her first thought news of Steve's book had reached the village, and the wife of its author was feted at luncheons and teas, and a dinner by the Literary Society of Prairieville, at which she was slated to deliver a speech.

Sally had arranged it. The same bubbling, good-natured Sally, still loyal, still unquestioning. Her warm friendliness made Linda ashamed that she had ever neglected her friend by allowing so much time to elapse between letters. She despised herself even more for giving Sally the same explanation that had sufficed for her parents, . but Sally accepted it in good faith and with the airy comment, "I always said there's nothing as unpredictable as love."

Substantial Improvement in Operating Costs Reported by Local Gas Plant

Operational loss of the Belleville Public Utilities gas plant from January 1st to July 31st this year amounted to $5,121 according to a report submitted to the Utilities Commission at its opening fall and winter meeting Tuesday.

The situation, however, does not look as gloomy as it would appear.

It was pointed out to the Commission by Manager O. H. Scott that the greater part of this loss was incurred during the months previous to the relining of the gas plant retorts when water gas was being used and naturally no residuals. Now, however, coke gas is being built up and now the plant has residuals on hand.

Substantiating the manager's statement that operational loss is being gradually cut down is the fact that during the month of July it amounted to $263.95.

Quality Improves

Quality of the gas is showing a definite improvement it was stated. Average of British thermal units for 1941 amounted to 368 as compared to 472.6 for this year.

Also offsetting this operating loss is the fact that material and stores such as coal, coke, tar, etc. amounting to $3,000 are on hand. The plant was working under extreme difficulties during the pre-relining operation, but these have now been eliminated.

The Commission will urge those of the general public who are confronted with the problem of inability to procure fuel oil for furnaces, to consider the question of changing to gas heating.

Special Rate

A special rate of 70 cents net per thousand cubic feet for heating purposes only, has been set by the commission and already three Front Street business men have availed themselves of the opportunity.

Apropos of this, the Commission moved unanimously to instal gas-heating equipment in the Hydro office at a total cost of $1,023. This includes the erection of a new chimney, and purchase and installation of new equipment.

Power Consumption Up

No word from the Federal authorities has been received as yet regarding the reported restriction of power. The commissioners were told that power consumption in the city has been increasing steadily and recently reached a load peak. This is not due, it was pointed out to new industrial construction but rather to expansion of present industry. It was intimated at the meeting that information had been received to the effect that Ontario faced no immediate shortage of electric power.

On motion of Commissioner Morley Duff, the commission moved to refund to the city the sum of $2,482, accumulated surplus from the hydro utility.

Members of the Commission will attend the annual convention of the Ontario Municipal Electrical Association being held in Brockville, Sept. 16th. The manager was given authority to borrow up to $5,000 as it was needed, from the waterworks utility fund to carry on the work of the gas plant.

THE WAR TODAY

By DE WITT MacKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Those war speeches by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill impress one as being in the nature of cutting the Allies' 21st birthday cake, that is, a signalling that the United Nations are verging on military maturity.

Both declarations displayed a tone of certainty—or so it strikes me—that could only be based on achievements which, although they lag far short of what they ought to be, still are leading surely to victory. Facts warranting such calculation aren't hard to find for these points stand out clearly:—

1. War production has reached a point where its tremendous weight is making itself felt. Its momentum is increasing steadily. Movement of troops and equipment pyramids.

2. July, August and thus far in September we've (knock wood) vastly reduced the depredations of U-boats. That is to say we have at least temporarily regained that control of the sea which is vital to the movement of resources and men to the theatres of war.

3. The blockade of Europe still holds tight—one of the greatest of the Allied assets — and the Axis strength is on the down-grade, due to lack of resources of all kinds. Hitler's war industries are slipping.

4. Intensification of the bombing of Germany is raising havoc with Hitler's factories and transport. There's no question now about Allied superiority in the air over Europe.

5. Thus far Hitler has failed to reach the objectives of his mammoth assault on the Caucasus and Middle East. He has achieved much, but still that magnificent Red line remains unbroken although it has had to pull back and it has sagged.

With the fall rains already falling, every day that the Bolshevists keep Hitler out of his garden of Eden brings nearer the hell of winter which soon will clamp down again on the unhappy armies of the man who would be tyrant over the world.

And it's almost axiomatic that if the Fuehrer doesn't get his hands on the resources, and the strategic bases, of the Caucasus and Middle East this fall, his hide surely will be nailed on the old barn door. His waning resources won't permit him to duplicate this great offensive again come another spring.

All this gives the Allies something concrete to go on with. So what next?

Well, it means that we must swing definitely into the offensive. The birthday cake has been cut. And both President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill promised action.

Now on it must be bullets and not words. —Announcement of intention to assume the offensive undoubtedly was calculated to give further assurance to a Russia which has indicated that it felt Uncle Sam and John Bull ought to be doing more on the actual battle field. Mr. Churchill's report to the Commons seemed to make it clear that one of his chief reasons for visiting Stalin in Moscow recently was to convince the Soviet chief that his Allies do mean business.

Mr. Churchill's description of his meeting with this "man of massive and strong personality, suitable to the stormy times in which he has lived," gives the impression that Stalin, "a man direct and even blunt in speech," definitely had felt that the Allies could have done much more than they had. Apparently Mr. Churchill and his host had a real heart-to-heart talk. It would have been interesting to listen in, for Stalin has a habit of stripping all skeletons of trimmings and getting down to the rattling bones, while Churchill himself is about as out-spoken as you find 'em. Anyway, the prime minister says:

"I believe I made him feel we are good and faithful comrades in this war, but that deeds and not words will prove that."

Need for Stricter Control of Liquor Stressed by General Council Speaker

"Every province in Canada has its liquor problem, but the United Church in Canada feels that there is an urgent need for Dominion Government action", Rev. J. R. Mutchmor, M.A., D.D., secretary of Evangelism and Social Service Committee of the United Church told one hundred commissioners at a pre-council meeting in Albert College, Tuesday night.

The commissioners were members of the Committees for Missionary Education and the Department of Christian Education, here for the opening of Tenth General Council which took place this afternoon.

The Church, Dr. Mutchmor said, will recommend the banning of advertisements of liquor, and the export of beer. Rationing of liquor along similar lines to that of tea, coffee and sugar will be asked for. An extensive Dominion-provincial program on temperance education will be called for.

Layman's Responsibility

Referring to the church proper, Dr. Mutchmor stated that in future evangelism must come from the congregation. Every layman has his responsibility as there must be creative group within the church. The trend must revert to the congregation and the layman from the pulpits.

Speaking of the problem confronting the General Council, Rev. Gordon A. Sisco, secretary of the General Council, told the commissioners that these problems had been created since union. Discussions on ministerial shortage; settlement; lack of co-operation between departments; falling off of revenue, and problems of adjustment.

"The church is in a critical position", he said, "and we must face and attempt to solve these problems during the present Council. He dealt at some length with his own experiences with other churches in his capacity as secretary.

In Strategic Position

The United Church, he said, because of its affiliations with the Methodist Church; the Presbyterian World Alliance; the Congregational Union of Churches in England and the Federal Council of the Christian Churches in America is in a strategical place to lead the Oecumenical movement that is rapidly spreading in Protestant Christendom.

Speaking to the same groups Mr. Basil Matthews, noted author and professor of World Relations, Boston University, stated that the Church in India would definitely not be ground under by pressure with the rise of National Independence, because of its historical background.

The Hindus and Mohammedans were intolerant of other faiths, he pointed out, but, he said, there were 15,000 accessions monthly to the church, which is the most rapid rate of growth in the world. "The Church", he said, "was grounded so strongly in India that it can outlive any outside pressure.

The Rev. R. M. Clark, lately returned from India, concurred with Professor Matthews.

Some Restaurants Forced to Close Monday Evening for Lack of Supplies

Trenton (Special)—Several local restaurants were forced to close their doors on Monday evening when a shortage of foodstuffs made it impossible to serve the large numbers during the holiday weekend and late couples returning from dances, and still maintain a stock in order to meet the remand. Bread was the major problem and one restaurant was forced to discontinue their menu and serve ice cream and sodas only.

A marked increase in the traffic on Trenton streets over the holiday was noted, largely due to the Field Day at the Trenton R.C.A.F. Station.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Taylor and family have returned to Detroit following enjoyment of the summer months at their cottage, Lake Ontario.

Charged With Reckless Driving

Police were quickly summoned to Marmora Street late Monday evening following an accident. The driver of a car had put his vehicle over a curb and boulevard and then in loud and abusive language argued with the owner of a parked auto, claiming the responsibility was his. Upon arrival of the police, Claude Waddell, Trenton, was arrested on a charge of reckless driving. The damage to the Waddell car was extensive—three blown out tires.

Hit-and-Run Driver Apprehended

LAC. Frederick Bruce, R.C.A.F., Trenton, was arrested while proceeding east through Trenton late Monday evening, and returned to Cobourg by Prov. Constable D. Wilson where he will appear in court charged with reckless driving and leaving the scene of an accident.

Bruce while proceeding east rear Lock's Hill, between Wicklow and Grafton sideswiped a west-bound auto owned and driven by Roy B. Trumpour, R.C.A.F., Galt. Considerable damage was done to the Trumpour car, tire torn and damage to front end and bumper. Stopping another eastbound car Trumpour gave chase and overtook Bruce at Grafton forcing him to stop. It is claimed that another occupant of the Bruce car showed fight and they drove on.

Police were notified and the auto was stopped in Trenton by Constable C. E. McColl and P. J. Taylor. The left front end of Bruce's car was badly damaged and it was only with difficulty that it could be driven.

Police Court

Magistrate Lloyd presided at the Trenton Police Court Tuesday afternoon when only four cases were presented.

Sidney Fearn, Dundas Street, pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance and was assessed fine and costs of $7.50. Fearn was arrested following a disturbance at a Dundas Street East boarding house.

Frank Lawson, West Street, paid the customary $13 fine and costs when he appeared on a charge of intoxication in a public place.

G. B. Hamilton pleaded guilty to a charge of speeding under the War Measures Act and paid the minimum fine of $15 and $2.50 costs.

Edward Rice was given a suspended sentence of one month and ordered to pay the costs amounting to $12.20, as well as restitution. He was charged with obtaining food and lodging, knowingly making false statements to obtain credit.

Claims Building Moved Slightly off Base By Collision by Truck

Complaining that a truck had collided with the corner of his place of business shifting the buildsome six or seven inches, O. A. Richards, manager of the local branch of the Provincial Tire Company, East Dundas St., reported the matter to police on Tuesday. Investigations by P.C. Taylor revealed the building had apparently been struck by a truck or large motor vehicle at the northeast corner shifting it slightly from the foundation. Afterwards Mr. Richards admitted the damage had taken place late last week, but not reported until yesterday, giving police little basis for further investigation.

Bicycle Stolen

Edward Dobbs, 223 Coleman St., awoke this morning to find his bicycle had been stolen from the rear of his home. It was the third bike to be reported stolen in Belleville within 48 hours. In the majority of cases the bicycles are recovered when found left abandoned, but cause police considerable effort.

Soldier Allowed Off

A soldier lad was apprehended driving a motor car after apparently consuming too freely of "wobble water" which resulted in a minor accident at the intersection of Victoria Ave. and Front St., Tuesday afternoon. As the soldier was home on embarkation leave and due back at his base last night, he was detained until train time and placed aboard an east-bound train by police. The motor car was returned to his brother, who resides in Frankford.

40,000 LIVE IN KINGSTON

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 9 (CP) — Kingston's population today is the largest in history. Assessment Commissioner W. D. Dick announced today that Kingston's population is now 31,703, an increase of 2,155 over last year. This figure of population does not take into account several thousand soldiers and airmen, as well as students of Queen's University, so that there are now more than 40,000 persons living in the city.

Prices on Top-Grade Eggs Little Firmer

Country dealer prices on top-grade eggs A large and A medium advanced half a cent on the Toronto open produce market Tuesday. Prices to the retail trade remained unchanged from the previous level. The market was firm under a better enquiry.

Offerings were weak on the butter market under a steady demand by the buyers. Trading was limited due to the light offerings. Ontario No. 1 creamery solids were reported sold at the same level of 35 1-4c a pound.

The cheese market continued dull and draggy with only the occasional small sale reported. The current white make was offered at 20c a pound.

Fire of unknown origin completely destroyed the frame residence of Mrs. Dennis Gillen on Monday evening. The house was occupied by two families, Messrs. Mike and John Quinn and their families. The flames spread so rapidly that they were unable to get anything out of the house. There is insurance on the contents but it is presumed that the owner, Mrs. Gillen who resides in Toronto, has insurance on the residence.

THE WAR IS ON THE WIRES

On Local Calls

1. Be brief . . . clear the line for the next call.
2. Consult your directory before you call "Information" for a number.
3. Urge your family—especially its younger members—to avoid unnecessary calls.
4. Be a "good neighbour" to the family which shares your party line.

On Long Distance Calls

1. Avoid all unnecessary calls.
2. Whenever possible, use off-peak hours: before 9 A.M.; 1-2 P.M.; 5-7 P.M.; after 9 P.M.
3. Plan your conversation before you lift the receiver—you'll save time and expense.
4. Call by number whenever you can.

These things may look trifling, but on 6,600,000 daily telephone calls, they are very important.

Keep them clear for ESSENTIAL CALLS

MINUTES COUNT; war calls must go through without delay.

But how? Increased local and long distance traffic is already taxing facilities to the limit. And further extension of telephone equipment is ruled out by shortages of copper, aluminum, rubber.

There is just one way out. Every one of us must learn to use his telephone more carefully. We must voluntarily "ration" our talks. We must remember, always, that urgent war calls can't wait.

BUDAPEST AND EASTERN GERMANY BOMBED

British Offensive On W. Madagascar Reported

STALINGRAD DEFENCES STIFFEN AGAINST NAZIS

Russian Air Force Keeps Allied Aerial Offensive Rolling

Stockholm Asserts Berlin Also Had Small-Scale Raid During Night

R. A. F. GROUNDED

London, Sept. 10. — (CP— The Russian Air Force kept the Allied aerial offensive in Europe rolling last night by bombing Eastern Germany and the Hungarian capital of Budapest during a lull in R.A.F. operations — presumably caused by unfavorable weather in the west.

The Soviet attacks were reported by the Berlin radio which—in characteristic fashion—described them as "nuisance raids" and minimized their effectiveness.

Subsequently both the German and Italian radios broadcast dispatches from Budapest attributing the raids on Budapest to "English planes" and reported there were a number of civilian casualties.

A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Stockholm asserted Berlin had a small-scale air raid during the night, presumably carried out by Soviet bombers, but there was no such mention in Berlin broadcasts heard up to mid-day.

The only overnight activity attributed to the R.A.F. by the Air Ministry was a bombing attack on a German convoy off the Netherlands coast, which a communique said had resulted in one ship, the largest of the convoy, being set afire.

Many Stations Off Air

Indicative of the tenseness inspired by the whipsaw offensive which the British and Russian air forces have been conducting was the fact that the Berlin radio, as well as transmitters in Budapest, Paris and old Czecho-Slovakia, went off the air abruptly during the night.

The regular program on the Budapest long-wave band was interrupted shortly before ten p.m. when a Hungarian announcer broke in with an excited "attention, anti-air raid defence"!

Then followed instructions to air-raid precautions groups, repeated at brief intervals.

Stations in Berlin, Prague, Bratislava and elsewhere in German-occupied territory went off the air about the same time.

The attack upon Budapest was the second which the Hungarian capital has undergone since start of the war. Russian planes bombed the city for the first time last Friday night and were reported to have set many fires.

No Activity Over Britain

The Berlin radio said other points in Hungary also were attacked. It asserted all the raids were by single planes.

Despite the precautions taken by the Berlin radio there was no indication the German capital had been bombed.

Last night was only the third time this month that R.A.F. bombers had not been over Germany during the hours of darkness, British raiders having spread their wings over Germany on six of the preceeding eight nights.

There was no German aerial activity over Britain last night. The Ministeries of Air and Home Security dismissed the situation with a laconic "nothing to report".

RELATIVES HEAR OF BRAVE ACTION OF THE CAMERONS

Winnipeg Regiment Saw More of France Then Any Other Regiment in Raid

MUNRO TELLS STORY

Winnipeg, Sept. 10 —(CP)— The story of the gallant role played by Winnipeg's fighting "Scotties," the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders of Canada, in the battle of Dieppe was brought to their homefolk last night by Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent.

The 28-year-old war correspondent, who shared the dangers of his fellow-Canadians, and the fire of the German guns to reach the beach of the French coastal town, addressed a meeting in the civic auditorium.

More than three thousand persons, many of them relatives and friends of the Cameron men, heard him relate a tale of bravery of the men and officers.

Simply and effectively, Mr. Munro described the raid in detail, and said it was "part of the pattern of the second front."

To the skirl of bagpipes, the Camerons crossed the beach, and in the face of intense fire, scrambled over a 10-foot, barbed wire sea wall.

"The attack inland started almost at once," he said.

Fought Along River

"The Camerons fought along the Scie River, knocking out pill boxes here and there.

"The Camerons saw more of France than any of the other boys who took part," added Mr. Munro. "They advanced three and a half miles."

They lost their commanding officer, Lt.-Col. A. C. Gostling of Winnipeg, early in the action, but it was on the "way out" that the Camerons, fighting a rear-guard battle, suffered heavy casualties.

Mr. Munro told many stories of kept playing the pipes under the in the raid.

There was Piper G. B. (Red) Campbell of Transcona, Man. He his bagpipes out of commission. heaviest of fire. Then a bhllet put his bagpipes out of commission.

The meeting was sponsored by the Winnipeg Members of The Canadian Press. J. W. Dafoe, president of the Winnipeg Free Press, and John Bird, editor of the Winnipeg Tribune, represented their papers. Brigadier H. J. Riley, officer commanding Md. No. 10, was chairman.

New Restrictions Curtail Extension Of All Public Utility Services

Ottawa, Sept. 10. (CP)— The insatiable demand for raw materials to feed Canada's hungry war machine led today to new and drastic curtailment in use of copper or other non-ferrous metals for extension of Public Utility Services.

Meantime informed quarters in Ottawa anticipated curtailment of use of electricity in Ontario and Quebec homes to make more power power available for essential war industries.

The metals curtailment move was announced in an order issued last night by Metals Controller G. C. Bateman, and made public by the Munitions and Supply Department.

The order prohibits the following:

Any new installation of electric, gas, water or telephone service in summer cottages and other seasonal residences;

New installations of electric advertising or display signs;

New lighting for city streets and highways;

Public Utility Service extensions to refreshment booth, seasonal places of business, carnivals, lawn socials, sports grounds or arenas, and other civilian places of entertainment;

It prevents any home owner, whose home is more than 250 feet from water and gas mains or power and telephone lines, from obtaining electricity, gas, or other public service connections without a permit.

Mr. Bateman warned that the public should make certain that Utility services could be provided before building new homes or buying new electric stoves or other equipment.

"If you expect to obtain gas, electrical or other utility services you should first consult your utility company," he said.

BRITAIN DECIDES ON OPERATIONS, U. S. APPROVES

Vichy Says General Offensive Began At Dawn With Heavy Shelling

REASON FOR ACTION

Vichy, Sept. 10. (AP)—British forces opened a general offensive against the West Coast of Madagascar at dawn today, attacking the Ports of Majunga, Ambanja and Morondava with planes and 18 warships, it was reported tonight.

Concentrated shelling ushered in the offensive, a renewal of hostilities on the big French island in the Western Indian Ocean which lightened after British forces captured the big naval base of Diego Suarez at the northern tip of the island May 8.

The 18 warships poured salvo after salvo of shells into Majunga Harbor, 320 miles southwest of Diego Suarez, while planes bombed and strafed French troop concentrations as far inland as 100 miles.

The shelling continued tonight, apparently preparing for a general troop landing.

The Vichy government claimed the attack came two days after an unsuccessful attempted landing by fighting French forces.

Vichy said the British commanders at Majunga "had means at their disposal at least as powerful as those used at Diego Suarez".

U.S. Approves Operation

Washington, Sept. 10 (AP)—The United States State Department announced today that Great Britain, with the full approval of the United States, had decided to undertake "further military operations" in the Madagascar area.

Pointing out that the penetration or occupation of any part of Madagascar by the Axis powers would constitute a definite and serious danger to the United Nations, the announcement added:

"The full military occupation of the island by British forces will therefore not only contribute to the successful conduct of the war against the Axis forces but will be in the interest of the United Nations."

Madagascar, a big island off the east coast of Africa, is French.

A British force some months ago took over the port and naval base of Diego Suarez in the northern part of the island.

The announcement explained that devolpments in Madgascar subsequent to the British occupation of Diego Suarez "have not resulted in adequate safeguards against Axis pentration in other parts of the island."

Churchill Charges Jap Fifth-Column Activity Cause of Indian Trouble

LONDON, Sept. 10 — (CP) — Prime Minister Churchill charged today that widespread Japanese fifth-column activity may have been behind the All-India Congress Party's drive for immediate independence, but he told the House of Commons that the course of events in India had been improving "and is, on the whole, reassuring."

The Prime Minister's review of the Indian situation laid special emphasis on the turbulent events of the past two months and their bearing on the United Nations' war effort.

Mr. Churchill rejected a proposal for a vote to show whether the House approved his statement but suggested that a full-dress debate with a vote might be arranged later.

Minimises Influence of Congress

He minimized the influence of the Congress, which he accused of discarding Mohandas K. Gandhi's non-violence principles, and declared that 90,000,000 Moslems were "fundamentally opposed" to it.

As a measure of the Congress Party's influence, Mr. Churchill mentioned that more than 1,000,000 Indians have volunteered for war service and that 40,000 volunteers in the last two months made an enlistment record.

When he finished, Emanuel Shinwell, labor member for Seaham, told the House Mr. Churchill's statement would "profoundly disappoint and shock millions of people."

The Prime Minister said the principles of the government's declaration — basically, Dominion status — which formed the basis of Sir Stafford Cripps' mission to India "must be taken as representing the settled policy" of Britain.

He told questioners later, however, that he had no information to indicate any Indian tendency to accept the once-rejected proposals and added that "in the present state of affairs in India, with invasion not far off, these constitu-

JAPANESE GAIN IN DRIVE FOR PORT MORESBY

Fight Way Across Mountain Range by Series of Outflanking Movements

POUNDED FROM AIR

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Sept. 10. (CP) — By a series of outflanking movements, Japanese troops have fought their way across the summit of the rugged Owen Stanley Mountains in New Guinea and are pushing down the southern slopes within 44 miles airline and between 50 and 60 miles by road of Port Moresby, Allied headquarters announced today.

Australian forces, the announcement said, are battling gallantly to halt the enemy advance along a narrow trail traversing a series of ridges which still lie between the invaders and their goal.

The fighting is proceeding under conditions of "extraordinary hardship and difficulty," the bulletin added.

Allied air units were said to be playing an important role in the battle, bombing and machine-gunning the Japanese continually.

No Indication of Size

There was no official indication of the size of the forces which the Japanese had thrown into the offensive, but it was evident they were employing seasoned jungle fighters trained in the infiltration tactics which played such a large part in their successes in Malaya.

SLASHING ATTACK ON ENEMY SHIPS MADE BY R.C.A.F.

Direct Hit Scored on Merchant Vessel Near Frisian Islands

SCOURGE OF NAZIS

(By ALAN RANDAL)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F., Somewhere in England, Sept. 10 (C.P. Cable)— The all-Canadian demon squadron of the R.C.A.F. made a slashing attack on enemy merchant shipping off the Frisian Islands last night.

These boys have been a constant scourge to Nazi merchantmen and a crew captained by FO. Floyd Ellans of Montreal, scored a direct hit on a large enemy merchant vessel. The explosion flash was so great it was seen by other fliers 30 miles away. PO. Cam Taylor of Winnipeg and his crew scored a near miss.

FO. Johnny Arnott, of Edmonton, led the attack but went scoreless.

Ellan's navigator, Flt. Sgt. J. L. Gaucher of Codere, Sask. picked out the largest vessel for a target and guided his skipper over the ship and then let the lethal load drop right onto the vessel's centre.

Made Two Attempts

This crew had to make two attempts. On the first they were obliged to return to base on account of engine trouble but obtained another aircraft and took off again.

U. S. LAUNCHES NEW OFFENSIVE AT SOLOMONS

Enemy Troops And Installations on Gizo Island Bombed By Aerial Forces

STRATEGIC AREA

Washington, Sept. 10 —(AP)— A new American offensive to drive the Japanese out of the Solomon Islands apparently was under way today — launched by an aerial assault on enemy troops and installations at Gizo Island.

With the United States-captured base on Guadalcanal, 215 miles to the southeast, evidently the springboard for the attack, American air forces bombed and strafed the small, heavily-wooded island, the Navy Department announced last night.

The attack was carried out last Sunday without enemy resistance, the Navy said, as the marines continued to mop up Japanese units which had fled to Guadalcanal jungles at the first American landing more than a month ago.

These Japanese detachments, the Navy added, may have been reinforced by a few troops which managed to land on the island under cover of darkness.

Large Plane Destroyed

The Navy communique also reported destruction of a large Japanese four-engined flying boat by a naval patrol plane northeast of the Solomons Sept. 5. The loss boosted to 123 the number of Japanese planes destroyed in the Solomons thus far.

Chief significance of the blow at Gizo was regarded as indication of a new phase of offensive activity in the strategic Pacific islands and evidence that the American forces had consolidated their positions in the southeastern Solomons.

Until the Gizo attack the troops in the Guadalcanal-Tulagi area were mainly on the defensive against Japanese sea and air attacks while strengthening their positions and presumably building a bomber base on the Guadalcanal airfield.

Prime Minister King On Radio Tonight at 9

Ottawa, Sept. 10 (CP)—The far-reaching changes wrought by three years of war are scheduled for review tonight by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, still leader of Canada's Wartime Government as the Dominion enters today its fourth year of participation in the world conflict.

Speaking over the National Network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation from 9:00 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., E.S.T., the Prime Minister was expected to touch on such major Canadian contributions to the war effort as the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, the rapidly-expanded war industries and the mobilization of manpower and supplies which has taken place since Sept. 10, 1939, when a hastily-summoned parliament formally approved a declaration of war on Nazi Germany.

Dutch Keep Full Record of Lootings, Confiscation by Germans, Dutch Nazis

London, Sept. 10. (CP) — The people of the Occupied Netherlands were instructed by The Netherlands Government here to keep a detailed record of all cases of looting and confiscation of property by the Germans and their Dutch Nazi followers.

The instructions, broadcast by radio Orange, Netherlands station in Great Britain, specifically ordered that the serials numbers of all securities and other documents taken from their rightful owners be noted.

Only in this way, said the broadcast, would it be possible for The Netherlands Government to restore such securities and other seized property to their legitimate owners after the war.

The broadcast assured The Netherlands people that Germans and Dutch Nazis responsible for the confiscation and theft of property would be "severely dealt with", but added that justice "would only be complete" when full restitution to robbed individuals had been made.

Although the Dutch Nazis are "good pupils" of their German masters, Radio Orange said, most stolen property in The Netherlands goes to the Germans.

Reds Exact Deadly Toll After Germans Overrun 2 Cities

73 Axis Divisions Broken and Routed By Reds From May 1st To Aug. 31st

RAIN SWEEPS FRONT

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

MOSCOW, Sept. 10 — (AP) — Cold rains swept the Stalingrad battlefields today and Red Army defences stiffened again to exact a deadly toll after repeated German power drives had over-run two more villages west of the city.

A similar dramatic revival of Soviet resistance — even a counter-attack which cost the Germans more than 1,000 killed and destruction of nine tanks — was reported from the Novorossisk front, where the invaders had wedged dangerously into defence positions.

Front-line developments of the day were coupled with an official declaration that 73 Axis divisions had been broken and routed by the Red Army from May 1 to Aug. 31.

The rains ended a heat wave which had attended the Battle of Stalingrad and presaged the approach of wintry conditions which might hamper Hitler's huge mechanized forces.

But Field Marshal Fedor Von Bock obviously was manoeuvring in an effort to obtain a quick knock-out. New German forces were concentrated west of Stalingrad, Red Star, the Soviet military newspaper, said one of his wedges was threatened by a flanking blow.

Bayonet Clashes Frequent

Field dispatches said Russian withdrawals had been orderly and Izvestia reported that the soldiers, "fully conscious of the danger hanging over Stalingrad, are defending every inch of their dear land."

Bayonet clashes were frequent.

From sun-up to sundown the Russians fought beneath waves of German bombers, attacking in formations of six to eight.

Ability of the German command to replace worn veterans with reserves permitted unceasing pressure on the ground.

Ban Steeplechase

London, Sept. 10 (CP)—Steeplechases were banned by the Ministry of Home Security as a measure for further economy in feed and to eliminate unnecessary travel to meets.

It meant there will be no Grand National or other smaller steeplechase meets this year and probably for the duration.

5 MISSING TIRES NO DREAM

Elberton, Ga., Sept. 10 — (AP)— C. H. Joiner thinks there may be something to dreams, after all. He says he was dreaming he was buying a bicycle when a knock on the door of his home awakened him. A policeman told him his car had been found several blocks away with all five tires missing.

TOMMY ATKINS MADE HAPPIER BY PAY INCREASE

Cripps Says All Men Below Commissioned Ranks to Get 70 Cents Extra Weekly

TO COST $190,000,000

LONDON, Sept. 10 — (CP) —Sir Stafford Cripps announced increases today in the basic pay of British armed forces at an annual cost of £43,000,000 ($190,000,000) after the House of Commons had heard the lament of an anonymous Tommy Atkins over his scale as compared with that in the United States army.

The pay increase will be about 70 cents a week for all men in the armed services below commissioned ranks and about 45 cents for women, Sir Stafford said.

The government also boosted about 20 cents a week the allowances for each of the soldiers' minor dependents. The first child now receives about $1.70 a week.

Allowances for officers' dependents were raised on a similar scale.

The Lord Privy Seal referred to the high wages paid American soldiers and sailors and added:

"I would like to take this opportunity of expressing our gratitude to the American soldiers, sailors and airmen for the most helpful way in which they are doing their utmost to diminish in every way they can the incidence of this difference of pay in this country"

Capt. Frederick Bellenger, Labor, asserted that the British soldier with proficiency pay receives about 50 cents a day in contrast with about $2 for American soldiers.

He read to the House from a soldier's letter: "I have been asked by my officers to treat the Yanks as good pals and make them feel at home . . . but as we are now in two different spheres or standards of life financially this makes our intentions hopeless to fulfil unless we want to resort to sponging and generally speaking Tommy Atkins is not a sponger."

CALL HEARSE 'PLEASURE VEHICLE'

San Jose, Calif., Sept. 10—(AP)— The customers might argue if they could, but — the San Jose tire-rationing board turned down an undertaker's application for a tire for his hearse. Ruled the board: "It is a pleasure vehicle."

SPOKE ABSENT - MINDEDLY

Portland, Ore., Sept. 10 — (AP) —"I have a case coming up. Could you put it over until next week?" said the voice over the phone to deputy City Attorney Don Eva. "Why, I suppose so," Eva replied. Now he's wondering whose case he put over."

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

ALL SESSIONS OF GENERAL COUNCIL IN BRIDGE ST. CHURCH

The General Sessions of the Tenth General Council of the United Church of Canada are being held in Bridge Street United Church and not at Albert College, as was inadvertently reported in yesterdays edition.

These sessions are open to the general public, it is pointed out, and a cordial invitation to attend any or all is extended by Dr. James Semple, and Commissioners of the Council.

CHEESE PRODUCERS TO MEET AT PERTH

The regular monthly meeting of the Directorate of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association will be held in Perth, Lanark County, on Monday afternoon, it was announced this morning by Secretary S. L. Joss.

The day is expected to be a red-letter one on the part of Lanark County cheese producers in that they are celebrating the success of their National War Services committee campaign through which factory patrons went all out in subscribing for war savings certificates. The event will be marked by a special dinner at Perth in the evening at which the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association directors will be guests.

STIRLING FARMHAND TOOK CAR WITHOUT OWNER'S CONSENT

Arrested in Peterboro by Provincial Police on a charge of taking a motor car without the owner's consent, Donald Pinch, Stirling farmhand, was returned to Belleville for trial today. Pinch is alleged by Provincial Police here to have taken his employer's 1928 Chevrolet coach and later abandoning it on Highway No. 7, east of Peterboro. The vehicle is the property of F. J. Doughty of Stirling, and was returned to him by Provincial Police last night having been gone less than 12 hours. Pinch was arrested as he walked into Peterboro. The accused youth will appear in County Police Court for trial here.

POLICE PICK UP BOY WHO ESCAPED FROM BOWMANVILE SCHOOL

Belleville police apprehended a 13-year-old lad in the city yesterday after receiving information that he had escaped from the Bowmanville Boys' Training School. The lad had been committed to the institution from a Belleville court. When apprehended the boy was riding a stolen bicycle, police stated after identifying the bike at the police station. He was returned to Bowmanville and the bicycle given to its rightful owner today.

RAINS WILL HELP FALL PLOWING

With all but power cultivation held up owing to the hardness of the ground due to lack of rain, the recent generous rainfall will enable farmers to get ahead with their fall plowing, it was stated by farmers visiting the city this morning. Owing to the hardness of the ground horse-power cultivation is many cases was almost impossible, it was stated. The heavy rainfall, however, will soak into the ground and make after-harvest cultivation considerably easier.

TRAINING STATION HOLDS ROUTE MARCH

Arms and legs swinging with the characteristic smartness of the Royal Canadian Air Force, the entire station personnel of No. 5 Initial Training School, led by Wing Commander A. J. Snetsinger, officer commanding the station, paraded through the streets of the city this morning in the second route march to be seen by local residents in the past two weeks.

Leaving the station shortly after eight o'clock, the parade arrived at the intersection of Bridge and Front Streets at eight-thirty and was viewed by many early-morning spectators. The station trumpet band provided accompaniment to the airmen's marching feet. Route of the march was the same as two weeks ago being up Bridge to Charles, then to Victoria to Front, south on Front and over the lower bridge, south on Coleman and then west to the station.

Obituary

Late Miss Elizabeth McCaffrey

MADOC — (Special — The funeral of the late Elizabeth McCaffrey who died in Vancouver Hospital on Aug. 31st took place on Monday afternoon Sept. 7 on the arrival of the body via train at Ivanhoe. The funeral cortege proceeded to Lakeview Cemetery, Madoc, where the Rev. Eric Larson conducted a short service at the graveside. Many neighbors and friends from Madoc and vicinity attended. The bearers were Messrs. John Trotter, James Laffin, D. Blakely, P. Feeney, W. Blakely and John Curtis. Mr. and Mrs. Walter McCaffrey of Toronto, Mrs. Windover of Frankford, Mrs. John Kingston and Mrs. J. L. Newton of Tweed also attended the funeral.

GEORGE GIBSON
(Formerly of Belleville)

The death of a former resident of this city occurred on Monday, September 7th., at Charlotte, N.Y., when George Gibson, eldest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Gibson, Belleville, passed away after an illness of about two months' duration. Deceased was well known to the older residents of this city, having been a member of the Belleville baseball team years ago. He was also a member of the Ashley Carriage nine, which was famous in days gone by.

Deceased followed the occupation of painter and decorator and was held in high esteem by a large circle of friends.

He is survived by his wife, one son, also by his three sisters and one brother, Frederick. Mr. J. Fahey, Mr. Wm. Britton and Miss Geraldine Geary of this city, and Mrs. May Wilson of Hamilton, are cousins of the deceased.

Mrs. Violette Christine Belcher

Madoc — (Special) — The death occurred on Tuesday, Sept. 8th, in Kingston General Hospital of Mrs. Violette Christine Belcher, a resident of Madoc for the past fourteen years. The late Mrs. Belcher was born in Hungerford Township thirty-four years ago, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ash. Death took place after an illness of about ten months' duration.

The late Mrs. Belcher was a member of the Presbyterian Church. She leaves to mourn her passing, her parents, her husband, Pte. W. T. Belcher of the H. and P. E. Regiment, recently returned from overseas duty, three children, Ruth Constance, 14, Jeanette Goldie, 12, and Ivan Albert, 7. Six brothers and two sisters also survive: Pte. T. R. Ash and Pte. Ruben Ash, both overseas, Pte. Don Ash, Kingston, Joe Ash and Philip Ash of Madoc Twp.; Mrs. A. Holmes and Miss Ioline Ash of Madoc The funeral service will take place on Friday.

Rev. Dr. Sclater, Toronto, Elected Moderator at Opening Session of General Council

Six Nominations for High and Moderator Elected on Third Ballot

TENURE DEFERRED

The Rev. J. R. P. Sclater, M. A., D. D. of Old St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, was elected Moderator of the United Church of Canada at the opening business session of the Tenth General Council in Bridge Street United Church here Wednesday night.

He succeeds the Very Rev. Aubrey S. Tuttle, minister of St. Stephen's Church, Edmonton.

Dr. Sclater was elected on the third ballot defeating Dr. Willard E. Brewing, St. George's Church, Toronto, and the Rev. E. Leslie Pidgeon, M. A., D. D., of Erskine American United Church, Montreal, after close voting in the first two ballots.

Tenure of Office Will Be Decided Later

The Rev. W. H. Sedgewick, B.A., D.D., Westminster-Central, Toronto, and the Rev. C. J. L. Bates, former principal of the Japanese College, Tokyo, and now of Ottawa stood after nomination. The Rev. J. C. Cochrane, Secretary for Home Missions, North Bay, withdrew his name before voting started.

Formally Gowned

Two hundred and fifty commissioners from Canada, Bermuda, and Newfoundland saw the new moderator gowned and installed by the retiring moderator the Right Rev. Aubrey S. Tuttle, M. A., D. D., following the announcement of the final voting. After the second ballot several candidates for the moderatorship asked to be allowed to withdraw to facilitate the election. This was refused by the Council.

In a brief address to the Council the new moderator in expressing his thanks for the honor, stated it was twenty years ago to the day that he first set foot on Canadian soil. Forty years ago next Wednesday he was ordained in the Presbyterian ministry in the Birmingham Presbytery at Greenhill Presbyterian Church, Derbyshire. He went from there to Edinburgh, later coming to Canada.

"I have no claim whatever to the generous treatment accorded me by the United Church," he said, "but I rejoice in it deeply, partly for the reason, that many friends across the sea will be given genuine delight. One old man, who is more to me than I can tell will be given a real pleasure in his old age. My appointment is a fine gesture to the Old Land and the old church now going through a period of extreme suffering and I know they will appreciate your generous gesture in taking one of their sons as one of your sons.

"It means a great deal to me" he concluded. "I have not much to offer you. Silver and gold have I none but what little I have giveth I unto thee."

Defer Length of Tenure

What threatened to develop into a strenuous debate was forestalled by G. W. Mason, K. C., Toronto, United Church legal adviser, when he moved deferment of the length of tenure of office of the moderator after Dr. Lloyd Smith, Montreal, moved or the election of two moderators to act one year consecutively.

Dr. Smith stated that never in the history of the church was a pastor needed in his own congregation as he is at the present. "It is a mistake", he said, "to take a minister from his congregation for two years and expect him to do his duty as a minister and a moderator.

Mr. Malcolf Strachan moved the motion be tabled.

The General Council voted the motion lost and a debate seemed imminent, when Dr. Smith withdrew his motion after the Mason amendment to defer length of tenure and to elect a moderator immediately.

A resolution of loyalty to His Majesty the King received the unanimous support of the Council. Embodied in the resolution was an expression of sympathy to the Royal Family in the loss of the Duke of Kent. The motion was made by Principal George Kilpatrick, United College, Montreal, and the Rev. R. Edis, Fairbairn, Windermere, Ont.

Many in Attendance

Several members of other congregations and visitors lined the balcony of the church, when the evening session began at sharp eight o'clock. The commissioners nearly filled the auditorium of the church and stood in tribute as the retiring Moderator Dr. Tuttle entered the church accompanied by the General Council Secretary, the Rev. Gordon A. Sisco. The Bridge Street United Church choir under the direction of Miss Leona Riggs and Alec Gordon at the organ added to the musical part of the session.

A colorful patriotic touch was added in the folds of the Union Jack placed at the left hand side of the pulpit with the American, Chinese and Canadian flags in a similar position on the opposite sides.

Dr. Semple Introduced

Dr. James Semple, Bridge Street Church minister introduced by the presiding moderator as the "hard-working pastor of the host church," officially welcomed the visiting commissioners on behalf of his church and congregation and the Tabernacle and Holloway Street United churches of the city.

He paid tribute to his hard working committees and explained, that due to the fact, that as so many residents of the city had opened their homes to the airmen of the district, billetting of the commissioners had been made extremely difficult. Dr. Semple spoke in glowing terms of the airmen and the church chaplains in the services. "It has been a delight for us to serve them," he said.

He adjured the commissioners to be patient as regards billetting and meals and assured them every effort would be made to look after their comfort. He urged the commissioners to attend Albert College, the Y. M. C. A. and those churches of the city where meals were being prepared for them.

Senator Haig, Winnipeg, voiced an eloquent protest regarding the procedure of the Council in laying over important problems from day to day before final decision was made. He suggested the Council adopt a program whereby the next day's agenda would be dealt with before any further work was carried out. His suggestion was accepted by the Council after another commissioner had seconded the motion adding that it include the minimizing of many special orders and more time being taken with general problems.

The Moderator injected a touch of humor into the proceedings when, after Dr. Semple had risen and stated that it had been brought to his attention that there was much hot air in the church, he gravely remarked with a twinkle in his eye, "You have just spoken, air."

New Moderator of United Church Has Had Distinguished Career

Following is a thumbnail sketch of the Right Reverend J. R. P. Sclater, M.A., D.D., of Old St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, newly elected Moderator of the United Church of Canada. Dr. Sclater was elected to his important post Wednesday night at the evening session of the opening day of the Tenth General Council now sitting at Bridge Street United Church:

Born in Manchester

An Orkadian (Orkney Islands) by descent, born in Manchester, England, where his father was a Presbyterian Minister.

Graduate of Hulme Grammar School; two years Owens College (now Manchester University); seven years at Cambridge—four years in Emmanual College graduating M.A. with Honors in Philosophy—three years in Theology at Westminster College.

At Cambridge was Editor of both university papers—"The Cambridge Review" and "Granta' the undergraduate paper and was president of the Union. D.D. of St Andrew's University, Scotland and of Queen's University, Kingston

PASTORAL CHARGES—

After five years at the English Presbyterian Church, Manchester, and Green Hill Presbyterian Church, Derby, he was called in 1907 to succeed Dr. Hohn Kelman at the New North Church, Edinburgh, the Church largely attended by students, where he also took over the work Kelman had taken over from Henry Drummond (among students), a ministry of 16 years.

He came to Canada in 1922 to conduct preaching missions in Ottawa and Hamilton and was greatly charmed with Canada. A breakdown in health brought him gain to Canada for a holiday and rest in 1923 when from September 1923 to May 1924 he was minister of Parkdale Presbyterian Church succeeding A. Logan Geggie. He was then caled to St. Andrew's and has been there since.

HOBBIES—

Golf and travel. He has kept in touch with the Old Land, making frequent visits in normal times—gets great reception at his former church in Edinburgh.

FAMILY—

Mrs. Sclater, daughter of Surgeon General Turnbull of Indian Army, Hon. Surgeon to the King...were married in Edinburgh in 1904, the city of which Mrs. Sclater is a native. Has two sons and a daughter. Younger son Gilbert, a Canadian artist of note, died in 1929 and a chapel in Old St. Andrew's has been dedicated to his memory. Elder son, Arthur is in employ of Marconi Company, daughter Molly on Toronto Conservatory staff and organist of Perth Avenue United Church, Toronto.

AVOCATIONS—

Dr. Sclater has devoted himself to his pulpit and pastoral duties and has not been a "Joiner" of societies or holder of office. He has however, been a member of the sub executive of the United Church of Canada for some years and is much in demand as a preacher, writer and speaker to ministerial groups. He is a writer of devotional series and articles in religious journals.

Outstanding among many lectureships in Homiletics, Theology and Literature has been: The Warrack Lectures on Preaching given in all Scottish Theological colleges; The Lyman Beecher Lectures at Yale; The Dailly Lecturer at Harvard and University preacher and member of the Board of Preachers for some years, a rare honor for any but a United States lecturer. The Doctor regards Harvard as his "second home" so highly does he appreciate his connections there.

He has also lectured at Queen's University.

Thursday Morning Session Of United Church Council

Thursday morning's session was opened by a devotional address by the new Moderator who spoke from Ephesians 4: "Strengthened with Might in the Inner Man".

Assistant secretaries appointed were Rev. J. Passmore, Govan, Sask., and Rev. James A. Fraser, Scotsburn, N.S.

Rev. E. Leslie Pidgeon, M.A., D.D., of Montreal, was elected chairman of the Law and Legislation Committee, which included Gershom W. Mason, K.C., legal adviser to the Council and others. All lawyers and judges present were added.

The General Secretary gave a digest of the Minutes of the Executive and Sub. Executive meetings of General Council for confirmation. Especially in their action in temporarily filling vacancies caused by deaths in office of Dr. Laird, treasurer; Dr. Frank Langford, secretary of Christian Education; in whose place Harold L. Arnup, B.Comm., and Rev. C. A. Mayers were asked to act until appointments made at this Council.

It was reported that the remit sent down to Presbyteries as to whether or not student ministers should serve a full twelve consecutive months on a Mission Field instead of several summers as now. Figures were thirty-one Presbyteries for, fifty-six against and twenty-eight didn't report action. Council took no action.

The retiring allowance of $600 a year granted to the lay assistant treasurer, W. H. Barker, who came into Union from the Congregational Church and acted after the death of Dr. Laird until Mr. Arnup's appointment was confirmed.

Rev. W. Harold Young, D.D., of Toronto, Chairman of the War Service Committee of the United Church, presented the Committee's report. The United Church has 300 sewing groups now making 90,000 articles of comfort for the troops per month, a total of over 2 and a half millions since organized. The work is done in co-operation with the Red Cross who supply the materials. Tribute was paid to that organization, who also act as distributing agency. He quoted Howard Park United Church as entertaining the forces every Tuesday evening. In two and a half years 12,000 have enjoyed it. Also eulogized work of Halifax St. John's Church for the Navy.

The United Church has 135 chaplains in full time service, 20 in part time, 20 in the auxiliary services and Legion services, total 175 whose withdrawal from the active ministry at home makes a serious problem which the church gladly assume. There are 20 ministers in the combatant forces. This committee appoints chaplains, and is the only way recognized for becoming a chaplain. The Government was praised for it co-operation and fair dealing in the matter. The committee had added a sub-committee to deal with women in the services with Dr. Peter Bryce of Metropolitan Church, Toronto, as Chairman.

This committee is doing two things which are hoped will be demonstration units to be copied. The Women's Associations in Toronto entertained the men and women of the air force and friends every Sunday afternoon. The Moderator's Parish House across from No. 6 School for Women in the R.C.A.F. is doing special service in this regard in connection with the Y.W.C.A.

General Council Highlights

The tenth General Council of the United Church of Canada opened its sessions yesterday afternoon in Bridge Street United Church with the Right Reverend Aubrey S Tuttle, M.A., D.D., Principal of St. Stephen's College, Edmonton, presiding as Moderator. The Moderator administered the Communion Service assisted by the General Secretary, Rev. Gordon A. Sisco, M.A., D.D., of Toronto and the pastor of the church, Rev. James Semple, D.D. The Elders of Bridge Street Church dispensed the elements under the direction of the Clerks of Session Fred S. Deacon and Ald. H. G. Clarke. The church choir sang "God so Loved the World" as the anthem.

The Moderator's sermon was on the Centrality of the Cross in all redemptive effort necessary in individual transformation and even more so in the larger field of human relations. The Cross he said, was a historic fact, central in Christianity, and its ethical aspects make for emancipation of the human soul. It must be central in domestic life, home life, and in the cultural units of civilization. This principle applied to political and economic situations means voluntary surrender of privilege, and more equitable distribution of the fruits of industry. Sovereign nations must sacrifice power to create a world organization of Government and trade regulations that will make available to the needs of all the total resources of the earth.

The Cross with its elements of sacrifice and serving, mutual understanding and good-will, is the only power than can heal the hurt of humanity. This is the opportunity and responsibility of the Church, which can transcend divisions and harmonize them. To do this it must heal its own divisions first and provide through co-operation the ground for a super-national order or law and justice a real fellowship among the nations and within each of them.

One of the sidelights of this great assembly is the problem of transportation. With many of the commissioners arriving at the north station a mile north, and being billeted at Albert College a mile west, it made a lot of inconvenience, when the Oil Controller wouldn't permit the running of a bus to transport them. Private cars and taxis carried the traffic; but at a much greater waste of gasoline. Rev. James Semple, D. D., the pastor and chairman of local arrangements humorously remarked that the pioneer preachers who laid the foundation of religious life here 140 years ago walked all the way from New York. What's a mile!

The pulpit in the church is flanked by flags. The Union Jack on one side and on the other the Canadian flag with the Stars and Stripes and the Flag of the Rising Sun immediately lower. The Chinese Ambassador is expected here to address the Coucil next Monday.

Among the Commissioners interviewed today were The Hon. the Reverend W. G. Martin, formerly Minister of Welfare of the Conservative Government of Ontario, Minister of Grace Church, Winnipeg. Dr. Florence Murray, of Korea, one of the recent arrivals from the East; Hon. Leland Barnes, lay representative from St. George's Bermuda, where he is a member of the Colonial Parliament for St. George's, Bermuda. Recording Steward of the Church there for 15 years, connected with the Maritime Presbytery, who flew to New York, has a vital job as head of a great shipping agency; Hon. Sir John Puddester, Vice-Chairman of the Trustee Board of George Street United Church, St. John's Newfoundland. He is the senior Newfoundland representative and Vice-Chairman of the Commission of Government in Newfoundland of which Sir Humphrey Walwyn is Governor. He is accompanied by his wife, and will return to Newfoundland by air.

One of the women delegates, Mrs. B. C. Berry, of Beatty, Sask., will celebrate her silver wedding at the Council on Saturday, though her husband will be at home in the Prairie Province. Rev. E. Davidge of Ponoka, Alberta, will also celebrate his next week under similar conditions. Three delegates have their sons with them. The Moderator's son, George, is Young People's Secretary of the Board of Christian Education; Roy Stafford of Coaticook, Que., has his father, well known in Ottawa. Rev. George Stafford, with him, and Rev. F. J. Baine of Copper Cliff, brought the boy along for the ride . . . and visit.

The Secretary for Missionary Education, Rev. Kenneth J. Beaton, B.A., has a fine young Chinese girl in charge of a book exhibit. She is Miss Vera Ko, and is employed in the department's office at Toronto.

Farthest west delegate is G. W. Fiddes, Medical Doctor in the United Church Mission Hospital at Port Simpson, on the B. C. coast. He is the son of Rev. W. J. Fiddes, of Princess Street Church, Kingston. Rev. H. F. Kemp of Trinidad, comes from the farthest south.

H. B. Fetterly, former Principal of the Ontario School for the Deaf is in charge of the billeting arrangement. With 286 commissioners and extra departmental officers it is a great task in the City of Belleville, 15,000 population, the smallest city ever to have the Council. 30 go back and forth to Albert College a mile west, delegates go to 150 private homes, some of other denominations, which are gladly co-operating, and 60 to the Y.M.C.A. The Laymen are holding meetings in the Tabernacle United Church, formerly the M. E. Church and the Old Albert College Church in the days of Bishop Carman, who was first principal in 1857. This church will supply some evening meals, but commissioners are left to their own devices. Committees will meet in the St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, and the County Buildings. The furnishings of the writing and rest room in the Sunday School Buildings are supplied free by a member of the Jewish Faith. Belleville is a great Convention City. As far back as 1891 when there was difficulty about billeting delegates and it was suggested that it be discontinued. William Johnston, great Sunday School leader of this Church is on record as saying "Belleville is as happy as ever to entertain the delegates. They haven't changed in the last fifty years."

Bridge Street is a great historic congregation. Here was held the last Methodist Conference of 1925; and within its walls were heard the historic debate and consummation of the Union of the various Methodist Bodies in 1883. It is also the centre of United Empire Loyalist Methodism, and as far back as 1830 the Conference that separated Canadian Methodism from the United States Church was held there. History is being made again in this Conference, which will see more changes in policy and procedure than any of its predecessors Wednesday night it saw the election of a Presbyterian to the highest office.

Retiring Moderator Declares Nazism "Full-Blown Religion"

Dr. A. S. Tuttle Says War Will be Won by Deeper, Truer Religion

MANY PRESENT

Declaring Nazism to be a "full-blown religion" the Right Rev. Aubrey S. Tuttle, M.A., D.D., retiring Moderator of the United Church of Canada, stated here Wednesday night, that it is the religious aspect of the war that constitutes its greatest peril. "Not that we fear the spread of this beyond the range of the German race and blood, but the fact remains that it has gripped and motivated the German people and has sent them into this conflict with a fantical seal and the spirit of crusaders."

Speaking at Bridge Street United Church before the commissioners of the Tenth General Council at its first evening session, Dr. Tuttle in his retiring address said the question is, how to meet this threat?

It is clear, he averred, that the only immediate way is, in the language of the Scripture, to cause those who have chosen the sword to perish by the sword. This is the urgent task of the Allies. But this alone will not achieve the thing that must be achieved if Christian civilization is to be served, and lasting peace secured for mankind.

"If it is true that this conflict is essentially religious in its nature", the Moderator said, "then ultimate victory can be achieved only in terms of the spiritual and religious."

Meet Same With Better Religion

"We can only meet the threat of this world peril with its new religious passion by a better religion and a more absorbing passion—a religion, which shall function in every phase of our modern complicated life, and presented in such a way, that it will appeal to the latent elements of heroism sleeping in our souls. A religion, that will call into activity the spirit of devotion and sacrifice that will be more than a match for the fanatical zeal of our opponents."

Present civilization is a magnificent structure, Dr. Tuttle declared, a marvellous material civilization, brilliant dust built on dust without God to guard. Too great an emphasis has been laid upon scientific secularism, which cannot survive the challenge and trust of the new totalitarianism unless it is made more secure on a Christian foundation.

"The will of a righteous God must be made regnant in every social, political and international relationship of mankind. The true end of the incarnation of God is that Christ and His spirit must be formed in all men and in all institutions and nations.

The third element of religion, Dr. Tuttle pointed out, is a goal of history, commanding enough to captivate and to draw out our loyalty to the point of sacrifice and suffering and which is exemplified in the establishment of the Kingdom of God—a world-wide community transcending nation, race and class—a world order in which God shall have His rightful place.

Speaks on New Order

"It is heartening to note," the speaker said, "that leading statesmen on both sides of the Atlantic are now speaking in these terms. He quoted Mr. Anthony Eden as saying—"Never again must we tolerate chronic unemployment, the extremes of wealth and poverty and the slum areas which have disfigured our national life in the past." In the United States, President Roosevelt and Mr. Cordell Hull have expressed similar sentiments and all strike the same note and recognize, that the new order must be built on religious foundations.

Here then, Dr. Tuttle concluded, is a goal infinitely above anything that Nazism has to offer. "All that we need is to get a proper vision of it, to believe in it, to let it stir our emotional depths, enthrall our wills and then give ourselves to it with abandon. The false passion of our enemies can only be met by a truer, purer passion; their false idealism only by a true idealism.

The Christian Church which is the chief organization on earth especially designed to propagate these virtues must give leadership in moving towards this glorious goal.

MOUNTAIN VIEW W. I.

The Mountain View Women's Institute held their monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Alfred Poste on September 2nd.

Mrs. L. Wallbridge, president, was in charge of the business. Mrs. J. Cretney, convener for Citizenship, prepared the program for the afternoon on "How to be a good citizen", with Mrs. Brice, Mrs. Lucas and Mrs. Wilson taking part.

Mrs. J. Cretney closed with a few remarks about these three papers.

Mrs. B. Anderson capably prepared and read the current events of the last month's happenings, both locally and world wide. All joined in singing a couple of songs. A contest prepared by Mrs. C. Sprung proved very interesting, the prize winners being Mrs. B. Anderson and Mrs. E. E. Wallbridge. Little Miss Yvonne Poste served candies and the meeting closed with "God Save the King".

MOSQUITO'S DARE "HEIL CHURCHILL"

London, Sept. 10—(CP)—A daring motor launch of the Royal Navy literally thumbed her nose at the Germans during a patrol close to the French coast. German sentries caught a brief glimpse of a small ship coasting three miles off shore and flashed a challenge. The British craft replied in morse —"Heil Churchill"—and then scooted out of range before the Nazis could recover from their surprise.

Mills to Make 950,000 Tons Synthetic Rubber By Nov. 1 Next Year

Buffalo, N.Y., Sept. 10—(AP) — More than 250,000 tons of synthetic rubber will be rolling out of new United States plants by Nov. 1 next year, a war production board report on butadiene to the American Chemical Society disclosed today.

Butadiene forms three-fourths of the synthetic rubber and styrene the rest. Only two or three days are required to complete the transformation from butadiene to rubber.

The report, made by Dr. Albert L. Elder of the W. P. B., showed that butadiene production will be scattered through seven states, 11 cities and towns and one Canadian city. It will be divided among 12 companies.

The report did not include Dupont's Neoprene, Standard Oil of New Jersey's butyl and Dow Chemical's thiokal.

The butadiene production starts this month, Dr. Elder said, with 13,300 tons coming in. November will add 9,500 tons; January, 20,000; February, 20,000; March, 165,000; April, 135,000; May, 40,000; June 170,000; July 40,000; August, 55,000 and October, 50,000 for a total of 717,800 tons.

Oxide Plant at Deloro Wins Safety Star

Marmora — The regular monthly meeting of Deloro Safety Committee was held in the Electric Shop on Tuesday afternoon under presidency of R. A. Elliott. Five suggestions were read by the Suggestions Committee while the Competitive Committee report showed that four were given an award. The star was awarded the Oxide Plant. W. L. Rigg gave the report of the Inspection Committee. H. C. Barlow was appointed floating member. C. H. Buskard gave the monthly statement of the Benevolent Relief funds. J. A. Rice reported for the Health and Investigation Committee and J. H. Hemphill for the Publicity Committee.

Mr. Vernon Green of Ottawa spent the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. Green.

Mr. William Archer of Ottawa spent the weekend at his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Cronkright of Toronto spent the weekend with relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hazlett visited relatives in Toronto over the weekend.

Mrs. V. Pringle and daughter, Miss Verna Pringle of Hollywood, Calif., and Mr. Fred Eastwood of Toronto, are visiting the former's sister, Mrs. F. Bonter and Mrs. Bonter at Crowe Lake.

Allied Anti-Sub Campaign Under Way

London, Sept. 10. (CP)— Official circles said a new Allied anti-submarine campaign is under way, aimed at subjecting each Nazi underwater raider to constant attacks from the surface and the air during the whole time it is at sea.

"We must destroy U-boats faster than Germany can commission them", a source said. "We are building up an offensive against the U-boat which we hope will produce the results we want".

He termed fantastic a proposal to divert all shipment of war materials to air freighters as a means of defeating the submarines.

"Certain specialized equipment can and has been transported by air", he said, "but the great bulk of the material must go by ships".

The present predicament of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel in the North African Desert was attributed in part to the difficulties besetting Axis shipping in the Mediterranean.

The source said the Germans and Italians had lost half the vessels available in the Mediterranean since the war began and "probably will not be able to replace" more than one-quarter of them.

$50,000 Dionne Home To be Completed Soon

Callander, Ont., Sept. 10. (CP) —The $50,000 home for the family of the Dionne Quintuplets will be completed by Christmas, it was learned here.

Now under construction, the House will have a living room, dining room, music room, library and kitchen on the main floor a play room in the basement and seven upstairs bedrooms. Besides the five little sisters, the large stone and brick building will be the home of their parents and seven other children.

The structure was raised near the Quints' nursery and the old Dionne farmhouse.

War Moves in Our Favor

The view which the people hold that the tendencies of the war continue to move in favor of the United Nations has the support of Prime Minister Churchill who on Tuesday spoke of the increasing strength of the Allied Nations. "We can say that not only our own power has grown but the weight of the United States becomes increasingly effective in the struggle."

The growing United Nations power in the Mediterranean and elsewhere, the greatly improved situation in Egypt which Mr. Churchill said is now such that Britain "may be confident in our ability to maintain a successful defence not for days or weeks but for several months ahead." The Egyptian army is more powerful than ever before and Malta he termed "a gem as bright as shines is the King's crown" whose effectiveness was vital to the Allied strategy in the Middle East. Of the assault on Dieppe, when he mentioned amid cheers of the members of the House Canadians as forming five-sixths of the attacking force in this reconnaissance in force and the British navy as providing the seapower, he declared that this action was "an indispensible preliminary to full-scale operations." He touched the great success of the Allied shipbuilding program. The Prime Minister naturally did not disclose details of the deliberations during the Moscow visit but he paid great tribute to the genius of the head of the Russian Empire, Premier Stalin, and the resolution of the Russian people and their armies and remarked that Hitler has yet to gain his objective against the Soviet and that another winter is not far behind the Axis armies.

Mr. Churchill covered many phases and developments of the war since his last report to the Commons.

Britain's Way

As Canada is beginning to pay its new taxes for the year 1942 which do not seem so high as at first expected Canadians might well look at the situation in Britain, where war expenditures have in recent weeks climbed to an average of twelve and a quarter million pounds a day, an increase of half a million pounds daily since June.

In three years of struggle the cost of war has been ten billion pounds sterling and including debt cost and normal services of peacetime the total outlay has been over twelve billion pounds.

This is a huge bill but forty per cent has been paid on this out of taxation.

This shows how Britishers are bearing the burden of heavy taxes. This is a proof of the vitality and energy of the British people, since though expenditure has jumped one third, the government is raising 45 per cent of the outlay as compared with thirty-three per cent in the years 1940-41.

The debt of Britain has reached £14,073,483,259 as of the thirty-first of March this year. This means a jump of £2,674,000,000 for the year. The national debt is now nearly £6,000,000,000 above the pre-war debt as of 1939.

The manner in which the British people have girded themselves for the struggle and their accomplishments in the past three years show the stoutness of the British race, their ability to defend themselves and give help and leadership, to furnish an amazing performance of productibity as every phase of British national life is harnessed to the task of crushing the enemies of democracy. Britons have demonstrated how to endure, and something that is very important, how to pay the bills, by taxing themselves so that they may not in future days be crushed by taxation, but be able to take a large part in leading the world into the fruits of the victory that will endure and guarantee freedom and security in peace. They have manifested to mankind how to brace themselves under their burdens and to surmount them.

To Canadians as to others the inspiration of Britain has been a source of great strength as the Dominion tackles and solves her problems.

Good nature and evenness of temper will give you an easy companion for life; virtue and good sense an agreeable friend; love and constancy a good wife or husband.—The Spectator.

THE COMMON FIGHTING MAN

Let generals and Admirals
  Gather glory as they can,
The backbone of the nation
  Is her common fighting man.

The gallant old foot-slogger
  With his bayonet and his gun
Is the man who'll do the fighting
  Ere our final victory's won.

He's the heart of every army,
  The core of every plan;
He's the backbone of the nation,
  Is the common fighting man.

He's only Private Someone,
  He may be low in rank,
But after this is over
  It's him we'll have to thank.

He'll keep our Empire's glory safe
  From the Hun or yellow man;
So let us give the credit due
  The common fighting man.

HOW TO MAKE TEA

Bill Wong, intelligent young Chinese proprietor of the Paragon Cafe, sat at a table last night and slowly stirred a lump of sugar in his tea-cup.

Bill was born in China, but was educated in Canada. He speaks English fluently, with scarcely a trace of accent—and incidentally knows his tea. He should, for his ancestors drank the brew as far back as the sixth century.

"Canadians," said Bill, "waste a lot of the goodness of the tea. It is because, perhaps, they are in too big a hurry to drink it, do not take the time to make it properly or for other reasons. Potatoes, cabbage and other vegetables are supposed to cook a certain time. Other foods need time to prepare. It is the same with tea. A lot of people throw the tea in the pot, pour some hot water on it, shake it like they do their cocktails, and expect to have a tasty beverage. Then they squawk and say the tea is no good; the wife does not know how to make it, or raise a dozen and one other excuses."

Not being wise in the mysticism of things Oriental, we cocked a quizzical eye at our bland-faced pal, and gently murmured, "So what?"

"Your ejaculation, sir," softly replied Bill, not a smile disturbing the serenity of his features, "is most inopportune, not to mention impolite and unbecoming to a gentleman of your journalistic standing in this community."

"Speak English, William," we asked.

"Okay, kid, shoot your questions," he smiled.

"No questions," we came back. "Just keep on telling us how Canadians can stretch an ounce of tea into fifty-seven cups, and not only ourselves but every housewife in the village will bless you—and mebbe sneak a snack in your restaurant."

"Seriously," Bill said, "Canadians can make their tea go further. And it is only common sense.

"First," he went on, "the water should be freshly boiled. Use fresh water and not the kind that has boiled and cooled. Second, use a large teapot. Individual pots do not bring out the flavor. Rinse the pot with boiling water first, put in your tea and pour boiling water over it slowly. If the water turns a brownish color instantly, you know your tea will be good."

"And most important of all," Bill said, "for the luvamike, let it steep. Don't be in a hurry to pour. The longer it stands the better it is. There you are, sir, you have the secret. Remember the three essential points, freshly boiled water, and see that it is boiling, a large teapot, and let it steep. You will find your tea will go farther and you will get all the flavor."

"Thanks, William," we smiled as we rose to leave.

"Thank you," he grinned.

"Hey," he said as we moved away. "You forgot something. We give advice free, but not meals."

He handed us the check.

CHIP SHOP PLEA VOICED

Advancement of the social status of the fish and chip shop is sought in London by the President of the National Federation of Fish Fryers, who protests the undignified practice of selling newspaper-wrapped fish over the counter, the Montreal Herald writes. Shops which "the best people in town could patronize with dignity" are proposed by the NFFF president.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

SEPT. 10th., 1922.

Col. M. J. Hendrick, a former resident of Belleville, being United States Consul here for about fifteen years, died in Windsor, Ontario, yesterday. He was about seventy five years of age. On leaving Belleville, Col. Hendrick was stationed at Moncton, N. B., later going to Norway. During the past war he was a U. S. Consul in Germany and underwent the sufferings experienced in that country at that time.

Mr. J. W. Holmes, City Clerk, is spending a few days at Oak Lake.

Mrs. Adam Green of this city is visiting friends in Deseronto.

The fine brick residence of Mr. Christopher Buckett, 11th concession of Rawdon Township, was completely destroyed by fire recently.

30 YEARS AGO

SEPT. 10th., 1912.

Belleville's Big Fair opened today. Entries are far in excess of any previous year, and there are many attractions for sight seers.

Mr. and Mrs. David Price have returned home after visiting friends in Moose Jaw, Sask., and Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Mr. James Cooper, Albion Street, has returned home after a trip to the Old Country.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Beamish have left for their home in Birmingham, Alabama, after spending the summer here.

Police Officer Corrigan has returned from Toronto.

Mr. Edgar Foster of the Legal Department of the G. T. R., Montreal, formerly of Belleville, is here on a short visit.

40 YEARS AGO

SEPT. 10th., 1902.

In Sept. 1887, just fifteen years ago, a stranger in a strange land arrived in Belleville without funds. A local merchant, who is still in business, gave the man financial assistance upon the understanding that if he could ever return the money he was to do so. Time went on and the merchant forgot all about the matter. Yesterday, however, he was surprised when the man, now a farmer in the northern part of the county walked into the merchant's place of business and handed him the amount of his indebtedness.

Mr. J. W. Pearce, M. P. P., Marmora, was in town to day.

Major W. W. Pope of the 15th. Regiment, has received the long service medal.

50 YEARS AGO

SEPT. 10th., 1892.

At the annual meeting of the Women's Christian Association the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Nash; Vice President, Mrs. Lews; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Ritchie; Corresponding Secretary, Miss Holden; Treasurer, Miss Gibson.

The annual Harvest Festival will be held in St. Thomas' Church on Sunday. The special preacher will be the Rev. A. W. Sprague, Rector of Cobourg.

The following Belleville residents will exhibit at the Toronto Exhibition: Mr. Phil. Harte will show St. Bernard dogs; Mr. T. H. B. Purdy will show a two-year-old colt, and Mr. H. Parker Thomas will exhibit a fine cocker spaniel dog.

DAHLIAS

Tender and fragile, should the frost
  For one brief nighttime early call,
The work of all the weeks is lost,
  The dahlias, blackened, stricken fall.

The cold north wind will chill them through,
  No heart have they to fight their foes,
They lack the will to dare and do,
  They find no joy exchanging blows.

Though strong the dahlia blooms appear,
  Their courage doesn't match their size,
They dread the hazards of the year,
  With one brief frost their bravest dies.

And there are men so finely made,
  So tender, and so lightly stirred,
Like dahlias, of life's frosts afraid,
  They cannot stand one cruel word.

tional solutions and agreements are very difficult to come to."

Party Don't Represent India

He declared that the congress party, Hindu organization which was influential in the rejection of Sir Stafford's proposal of Dominion status for India after the war in return for increased aid in the Allied war effort, does not represent all India.

"Mohandas Gandhi and his followers will be kept out of harm's way until the troubles subside," the Prime Minister said.

Mr. Churchill declared it might well be that recent activities of the all-India congress "have been aided by Japanese fifth-column work on a widely-extended scale and with special attention to strategic points."

He said that although the congress party rejected Sir Stafford's representations, "this does not end the matter." He contended that it failed to represent a majority of India's millions.

"Large reinforcements have reached India and the number of white soldiers now in India is larger than at any time in the British connection," Mr. Churchill said.

He said the government intended to give all the necessary support to the viceroy and executive "in firm but temperate measures by which they are protecting the life of Indian communities and leaving the Indian and British armies free to defend the soil of India from the Japanese."

Less than 500 persons have been killed in India since the disturbances started a month ago, he said.

No Cause for Alarm

"The situation in India at this moment gives no occasion for undue despondency or alarm," Mr. Churchill continued.

The Prime Minister spoke after L. S. Amery, Secretary of State for India, told questioners in Commons that "there is no room for negotiations in the circumstances which Mr. Gandhi has described as open rebellion."

Mr. Churchill said the Congress had "come into the open as a revolutionary movement," but has been revealed as "impotent in seducing the Indian army and drawing away from their duty an enormous body of Indian officials."

The Congress does not even represent the Hindu masses, he said. He declared it to be "a political organization built around a party machine and sustained by certain manufacturing and financial interests."

Many Indians Enlist

Someone in the House cried "nonsense" when the Prime Minister said that outside the Congress "and fundamentally opposed to it are 90,000,000 Moslems."

Mr. Churchill declared that the Congress had abandoned "in many respects" Gandhi's non-violence policy and cited sporadic lootings and attack on police "accompanied from time to time by revolting atrocities."

Concerning the possibility that the Congress had been aided by Japanese fifth columnists, the Prime Minister told the House that "it is noteworthy, for instance, that communications of Indian forces defending Bengal and on the Assam frontier had been especially attacked."

He said that "upwards of a million Indians" had volunteered to serve the cause of the United Nations, adding that all enlistment records had been broken with more than 40,000 volunteers for the army in the past two months "when the Congress has been measuring strength against the government of India."

THE WAR TODAY

(By DeWITT MacKENZIE)

The battle of Stalingrad is rushing towards its climax under a weight of arms probably never before involved in the siege of a single city, and with a ferocity which marks it as one of the bloodiest combats of all time.

The denouement of this great drama must come soon. Today's reports from Moscow give a picture of Nazi attack and Red counter-attack which sway the lines violently but have left the overnight position without great change.

Nazi Field Marshal Von Bock is lashing his million-man army on for a quick kill, as the fall rains already mud the battlefield and warn of the approach of dread Winter. One of the most efficient but cold-blooded of Hitler's generals, the marshal is pouring men into the bottomless pit with the abandon he would display in flipping beans off his thumb.

Similarly, though on a smaller scale, the Reds again are counter-attacking at Novorossisk against Hitlerite forces which had driven into the very defences of this important Black Sea naval base—the last big port left to the Russians here. Control of that great inland water is the stake for which Hitler is playing.

Can the Bolshevists withstand this terrific onslaught against the Caucasus? W. Averell Harriman, who was President Roosevelt's representative at the recent conference in Moscow between Premier Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill, summed the position up well at a Russian relief dinner in New York last night.

"I cannot predict where the line of the front will be this winter," he said, "but I can assure you there will be tough fighting—tough for the Germans and their satellite Allies."

No man, be he military expert or soothsayer, can see into the future further than that. It isn't a foregone conclusion that Hitler will capture Stalingrad or Novorossisk, or drive farther down the Caucasus. But neither is there any certainty that he won't. That's how delicately the scales are balanced.

Prime Minister Churchill in his report to the House of Commons Tuesday appeared to note tacitly the dangers of the position when he spoke of the British 10th army in Iran. He said it "is being rapidly strengthened and, with the substantial air forces which it will require, may eventually give support to the Russian left flank and will, in any case, defend the soil of Persia."

Of course, that doesn't mean Mr. Churchill believes the Huns are going to break through the Russian line along the Caucasus Mountain Range. It obviously does mean, however, that the Allies are preparing for the contingencies.

The mount of space Mr. Churchill devoted to recounting the reorganization of the British forces in the Middle East, not only in Iran, Iraq, Syria and Palestine, but in Egypt, was highly significant of the importance which the Allies attach to this theatre.

FRENCH HUGUENOTS

The French Huguenots who settled in America probably contributed more persons of distinction to their adopted country than any other group of immigrants in proportion to their numbers.

It is estimated that during the century following the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, which had guaranteed toleration to Protestants in France, some 400,000 Huguenots left their mother country and found homes in Switzerland, the Lowlands, England, the English colonies in America and other parts of the world.

In America the Huguenots settled particularly in South Carolina, Virginia, Massachusetts and New York.

Wherever they went the Huguenots intermingled with the general population and acted as a sort of racial yeast.

The result is that there are only two Huguenot churches in the United States. They are in Charleston, South Carolina, and on Staten Island, New York.

Even as early as 1562—45 years before Jamestown — a French Huguenot colony under Jean Ribault established itself at Port Royal in what is now South Carolina, but this colony was wiped out by the Spanish.

In the United States many leading statesmen, soldiers, merchants, philanthropists and literary men sprang from Huguenot stock.

There have been the Hugers and Laurenses of South Carolina, the Bayards of Delaware, the Reveres, Faneuils and Bowdoins of Massachusetts, and many others.

Exactly why the Protestants of France who corresponded to the Lutherans of Germany and the Calvinists of Switzerland were called Huguenots has never been adequately explained.

A half dozen or more theories have been offered to explain the term.

However the name originated it is probable that Huguenot was first applied to the French Lutherans by their enemies in contempt and was later adopted by them as a badge of honor.

Oddly enough a group of Huguenots who immigrated to the United States from Artois France, were called Walloons, a name generally given to the Catholic inhabitants of Belgium.

The Walloon church in the Netherlands is a Protestant denomination and the members are descendants of persons of the Reformed or Lutheran faith who fled from France and the Walloon provinces to Holland about the time of the Spanish war in the Netherlands during the latter half of the 16th century.

Essentially it is an offshoot of the French Protestant or Huguenot church using the Geneva catechism and the French language in its services.

Most of the 30 families who settled New Amsterdam (New York) in 1623 were Walloons sent out under the protection of the Dutch East India company. They were really Huguenots who had established themselves in Holland. In 1923 the U. S. government issued a special postage stamp commemorating the 300th anniversary of their arrival.

FIVE-PER-CENT "VICTORY" LEVY IMPOSED IN U. S.

Money Will be Collected From Earnings in Excess of $624

COLLECT AT SOURCE

Washington, Sept. 10 — (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee stood committed Wed., to a minimum of $7,675,000,000 in new taxes —about $1,025,000,000 short of the treasury's goal—as a result of its vote, 13 to 6, to adopt a five-percent "Victory" levy on all individual earnings in the United States in excess of $624 a year.

In addition, the committee action proposed to segregate $1,100,000,000 in individual income from any form of inflationary spending by channeling it into insurance payments, debt retirement, bond purchases or post-war rebates.

With treasury officials scheduled to report on the possibility of combining this new "Victory" impost, with the regular income tax in the new revenue bill, committee members said the net results in any event might be to increase the country's annual tax yield to more than $25,000,000,000 compared with slightly more than $17,000,000,000 collected under present laws.

Collected at Source

As approved by the committee yesterday, the "Victory" tax would constitute a five-per-cent impost, collected at the source where possible, on all incomes above $624 a year derived from wages, salaries, interest, dividends and other common sources.

While it would be collected alike from single and married persons, the latter could accumulate greater credits against the tax during the year.

Credits of 25 per cent of the tax, or a maximum of $500, could be accumulated by single persons for payments they had made on life insurance, debts incurred before Jan. 1, 1942 or government bond purchases. The remainder of the unused credit would be represented in non-negotiable, non-interest-bearing government bonds they could cash after the war.

Some Exemptions

Married persons could claim similar credits up to 40 per cent of the tax, a maximum of $1,000, with two per cent, or a maximum of $100 allowed for each dependent.

Debt and post-war rebate credits would range from $2.20 in the $800 annual income class to a maximum of $500 a year for a single person. A married person with two dependents would have a credit of $3.87 in the $800 annual income class, ranging up to the $1,200 maximum as income mounted above $50,000 a year.

Barlow to Head Steel Probe

Toronto, Sept. 10—(CP)—F. H. Barlow, Master of the Supreme Court of Ontario, has been appointed chairman of the Commission which will investigate demands of steelworkers at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and Sydney, N.S., for a basic labor wage rate of 55 cents an hour, it was announced here Wednesday.

Mr. Barlow who announced that the commission would meet at Sault Ste. Marie and Sydney, has served on a number of Royal Commissions including the one which recently conducted an investigation of shipbuilding in Ontario and Quebec. He is also judge of the Admiralty Division of the Exchequer Court of Canada.

R.C.A.F. Issues First Communique At London Hdqtrs.

London, Sept. 10—(CP Cable)—R.C.A.F. headquarters Wednesday adopted the practice of issuing communiques on operations of Canadian aerial squadrons. They will be issued through the Ministry of Information under the authority of Air Marshal Harold Edwards and will be supplemented by weekly official summaries of the operations of the Dominion's fliers.

The first communique dealt with the Frankfurt raid and said:

"Last night R.C.A.F. bomber squadrons formed part of a strong force which attacked objectives in the Rhineland, particularly Frankfurt. Many large fires were started.

"Aircraft of the Canadian fighter squadrons also carried out intruder operations over occupied territory".

INDIAN STATEMENT TO BE GIVEN

London, Sept. 10 — (CP) — Sir Stafford Cripps, Lord Privy Seal, told the House of Commons Wed., that Prime Minister Churchill's statement on India will be made at the next sitting of the House.

Sir Stafford said the Prime Minister would "not be in a position" to make a statement today as scheduled but gave no further explanation for the delay.

It is now ILLEGAL to HOARD scrap steel or UNUSABLE machinery

The Steel Controller has ordered that, after September 15, 1942, no person may retain in his possession scrap iron or steel weighing a total of 500 pounds or more unless he has a permit.

(For the purposes of the new regulations, scrap metal includes machinery, structural steel, or any other article or commodity containing iron or steel, which is not serving an immediate vital purpose.)

The order also provides:

That anyone, coming into possession after September 15 of scrap iron or steel weighing 500 pounds or more, must dispose of it within 20 days.

That any person having a valid reason for not disposing of scrap metal as scrap metal or who believes that it can serve some essential purpose, must send in a report by September 15 to the Used Goods Administrator of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Lumsden Building, Toronto. His report must reveal the exact description, quantity, and location of his scrap metal.

The provisions of the order do not apply to scrap dealers who are already subject to previous orders; nor do they affect metal fabricators and processors who are in legal possession of metal to be used in manufacturing.

A copy of the order, S.C. 16, may be obtained from the Steel Controller, Department of Munitions and Supply, Ottawa.

Infractions of the new regulations are subject to a fine of up to $5,000, or imprisonment of up to five years, or both fine and imprisonment.

Navy Marks Up Impressive Record Of Service in War

(By DOUGLAS AMARON)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 9 (CP) — The Royal Navy has marked up an impressive record of service in the Second Great War since its sailors first went to action stations in September, 1939.

Since the war began more than 100,000 British and Allied vessels have been convoyed, with losses, up to March, 1942, of less than one-half of one per cent.

Six hundred British naval vessels are at sea at any given moment. Some of them stay at sea for periods undreamed of in pre-war days.

H.M.S. Cumberland sailed 206 days out of 213 from November, 1940. The cruiser Shropshire had steamed 167,700 miles by the end of December, 1941, and the destroyer Forster had steamed 172,000 miles and had been at sea 601 days. One destroyer flotilla of eight ships passed the 1,000,000-mile mark in June, 1941.

During 1941, 2,500,000 tons of Axis shipping were captured, sunk or seriously damaged. The Navy and the Royal Air Force, to June 30, 1942, had sunk, captured or damaged 6,178,681 tons of German and Italian merchant shipping. In addition three Axis battleships, 15 cruisers, 59 destroyers, many submarines and still more naval auxiliaries were sent to the bottom of the sea.

Submarines, up to February, 1942, had sunk or damaged 326 enemy ships, 64 of them warships of various kinds.

In the Mediterranean the Royal Navy has won all major actions, including those at Taranto and Cape Matapan. It is calculated the Italians lost one battleship, 11 cruisers, 40 destroyers and a large number of submarines.

Apart from operations in the Far East, 86 per cent of Axis surface warships destroyed, sunk, or captured by May, 1942, 89 per cent of all enemy merchant ships put out of action, and 94 per cent of all enemy submarines destroyed by the Allies had been sunk by United Kingdom forces.

Says Italians Have Had Time to Complete Battleship Roma

London, Sept. 10 (CP)—The possibility of a new menace to Allied operations in the Mediterranean was indicated Wed., with the authoritative statement that the Italian battleship Roma "could be in commission" by now.

This source, who must remain unidentified, said that the latest information available in London is that the Italians have had time and opportunity to complete the 35,000-ton Littorio Class battleship which was laid down Sept. 18, 1938, launched June 12, 1940, and scheduled for completion last year.

Turn in Old Tube When Purchasing Paste, S. Cream

Ottawa, Sept. 9 —(CP)— From now on you'll have to turn in an empty metal tube before you can buy a tube of tooth paste or shaving cream.

The Wartime Prices and Trade Board announced the new regulation—a step taken some time ago in the United States. The order now is in effect.

Retailers are prohibited from selling any tooth paste or shaving cream in a collapsible metal tube "except on surrender of a used tube at the time of sale or delivery," a board statement said. It added:

"A use tube of any kind may be turned in, not necessarily one which has contained shaving cream or tooth paste."

Exceptions include sales by a retailer where tooth paste or shaving cream preparations in collapsible metal tubes form part but not more than 25 per cent of the value of a gift kit or combination of goods.

Needs of the armed services are met by a provision that a used tube will not be required from any one who sells from stores or supplies of any canteen or mess within the limits of naval, military or air force camp, barracks, dockyard, vessel or similar establishment, or by any one operating a store or canteen within the limits of a military hospital or similar establishment.

Earlier Order Recalled.

An earlier order effective June 1, prohibited destruction or throwing away of used tubes and required consumers to deliver them to a retail store, cigar store, general store or department store.

"While it is expected that most of these tubes now will be turned in, in exchange for new tubes of tooth paste or shaving cream, the public is still required to deal with used tubes as before, and to avoid destroying or throwing them away," the board said.

"They are to be brought in to the drug stores. The new order provides, as did the previous one, that all the tubes are the property of Wartime Salvage Ltd., Government-owned company, and that all moneys received from the sale of tubes to smelters will be received by this company."

Purchase orders addressed to a retailer and sent through the mail, postmarked prior to Sept. 30, are not affected by the new order. After that date, however, mail order establishments are also prohibited from selling tooth paste and shaving cream in collapsible tubes unless a used tube is sent with the order.

The tube caps are not important to salvage, so tubes may be flattened out and mailed in envelopes with the order.

Weekly Deliveries.

Under an order by S. Godfrey, Administrator of Used Goods, every retailer except the operator of a drug store must deliver once a week to the nearest retail drug store all used collapsible metal tubes collected in his store.

Wholesale drug companies in Sydney, N.S.; Halifax, Saint John, N.B.; Charlottetown, Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, London, Ont.; Fort William, Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver have been made "authorized collectors," and will pick up the used tubes on regular calls. Where more than one authorized collector has been appointed for a trading area, the district may be divided among them by mutual agreement.

A retailer remote from a retail drug store is required to deliver his metal tubes to an outhorzied collector or a drug store in the quickest and most convenient manner, whenever he has accumulated fifty used tubes.

14 Orillia Residents Taken Into Custody Bail Set at $1,000 Each

Orillia, Ont., Sept. 10 — (CP) — Fourteen Orillia residents were taken into custody Tuesday by Provincial Police in connection with a riot last Friday night on the streets of nearby Brechin.

Those taken into custody, including one 16-year-old girl, four soldiers, a member of the Royal Canadian Air Force and eight civilians, are charged with obstructing police in performance of their duties. Bail was set at $1,000 each.

The riot, believed to have started when Provincial Constables George Yulle of Beaverton and Ronald Hewat of Sunderland arrested a soldier during a fracas in a Brechin beverage room, ended in a free-for-all melee on the streets of the village.

An intensified police investigation was still under way and it was expected more arrests will follow. Those already arrested will appear in Brechin police court next Monday.

News Reel on Dieppe Raid Slights Canada's Part in The Assault

Toronto, Sept. 10 (CP) — The Toronto Globe and Mail said in a newspage story Wed., that newsreel emphasis in "United States participation in the recent Dieppe raid and resultant minimizing of Canada's part in it has fanned local indignation."

The Globe and Mail said the general reaction was that the commentary with Dieppe newsreels running in Toronto "gives the impression that this imposing Canadian exploit was principally an American event."

Stating that all newsreels shown in Canada are edited in New York, the story adds: "That such films, when they are shown in Canada, should be edited for Canadians and accompanied by a Canadian commentary is almost too obvious to have to be pointed out."

Successful Dance Held at No. 5 ITS

At the first dance of the Fall season at No. 5 ITS last night, a most enjoyable evening was spent by the guests whose numbers included members of the Hospitality Club, St. Michaels Club and about forty girls of the R.C.A.F. (Women's Division), Mountain View. The well planned affair was a complete success, everything being provided for the entertainment of the guests. The dance hall was very effectively decorated with red, white and blue streamers. Music for dancing was provided in excellent style by the Trenton R.C.A.F. orchestra.

A highlight of the evening was the singing, of John McCullough whose very fine voice was heard to advantage in two numbers composed by a fellow-airman on the Station, Jock Spence, who also played the accompaniment for the solos. The numbers were "Something I Can Dream About" composed by Spence and "The Stars Were Playing Violins", written by Jock Spence and Berny Yuffy and now published by the Southern Publishers of New York City, the melodies and clever lyrics of which should make them instant hits with the public as they were with the guests last evening.

The visitors were welcomed to the dance by the Commanding Officer, Wing Commander Snetsinger, in a cordial address to the gathering. The program under the direction of Flight Lieutenant MacPherson and Reg. Hackett, Y Supervisor, introduced many prize and novelty numbers. The most original of these was the number which began with six couples who, after a few turns, had to select new partners, the group of dancers growing until it took in the entire attendance. The lucky number prize was presented by Wing Commander Snetsinger and the other prizes by Mrs. Weatherall and Mrs. Dickson. A very delicious supper was served during the evening.

A vote of appreciation was extended to the guests for their presence at the function, to those in charge and particularly to Reg. Hackett of the Y, for his efforts in making the party such a success. The dance committee included Flight Lieut. MacPherson, Flight Lieut. Standing, Flight Lieut. Dickson, Reg. Hackett, Y Supervisor, Flight Officer Crichton, Sgt. Hughes, WO1 Collins, Flight Sgt. James, Sgt. Samain, Cpl. Fodey, AC1 Paley.

WEDDINGS

ARMSTRONG—REID

An interesting wedding took place recently at the residence of the Rev. Mr. Dilts, when Marjorie A. Reid, became the bride of Nesbitt T. Armstrong of Frankford, Ont.

The young couple were attended by Miss Margaret Miles of Belleville and Mr. Kenneth R. Jackson of Frankford.

After a short trip east Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong will reside at Frankford.

CORMIER—WAY

At Emmanuel Church rectory at noon on Saturday, a very pretty wedding took place when Irene Alberta, daughter of Mr. Wesley Way and the late Mrs. Way, became the bride of Francis Charles Cormier, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cormier. The ceremony was performed by Rev. S. R. Foreman.

The bride was charming in a champion blue suit with black picture hat and matching accessories with corsage of red roses. She was attended by Miss June Lowry, as bridesmaid, wearing a brown suit with brown hat and accessories and corsage of yellow roses. Mr. Harry McConnell was groomsman.

Following the ceremony a luncheon was held at the Quinte Hotel. The bride's table was centred with pink roses and with a handsome wedding cake the gift of the bride's uncle, Mayor Glencoe Thompson. The groom's gift to the bride was a ring set with her birthstone, to the bridesmaid, a pearl necklace and bracelet and to the best man a billfold.

Mr. and Mrs. Cormier left on a wedding trip to Toronto and Niagara Falls and upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

Conservative Women Continue Work to Equip Mobile Kitchen Units

The Conservative Women's Mobile Kitchen Campaign, in which the members of the local association took an active part, has been brought to a successful conclusion with the presentation by Viscount Bennett of seven mobile kitchens to Her Majesty The Queen for use in the bombed areas in Britain.

The presentation was made at the Canadian Red Cross Headquarters in London on July 29th., by Viscount Bennett, who stated that the Conservative Women of Canada offered them "as a practical evidence of their sympathy and pride in the heroic conduct of their fellow subjects in Britain".

Warm congratulations have been extended by Viscount Bennett to the Associations throughout Canada for their co-operation.

Belleville members raised the sum of $250.00, the proceeds of an auction sale. This money was sent on to headquarters and the proceeds of the campaign in Canada were forwarded to Lord Bennett, who arranged for the purchase of the kitchens in England.

This amount placed the Belleville organization among the five highest contributors of the Dominion and a letter of congratulation from George A. Stokes, M.P., complimented the Conservative women of Belleville for this outstanding achievement.

The local organization is now engaged in the project of keeping the kitchens equipped with food. For this purpose the 'Can-A-Month' Club was established and about twenty-five dollars is collected monthly for keeping the kitchens supplied.

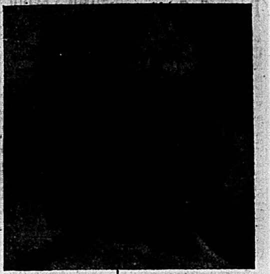
Restoring the Neck's Beauty



Hildegarde has a lovely smooth throat

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHEN THE neck tuckers out and folds itself into plaits, a woman suspects that she is getting along. Hair can be made attractive no matter how thin it may be. Complexions can be brightened with counterfeit blushes and the flattering lipstick. If eyebrows are pale, mascara serves as first aid. But what can be done with a neck that has gone to seed? Hang a necklace around it and it looks just that much more forlorn and crestfallen.

When the face is happily lapping up cold cream or being refreshed with tonics and astringents the poor neck doesn't get even the leavings. It is often forgotten.

Take out an insurance against fiddle strings. Don't wait until the cross lines appear. Apply as much cream as you can force into the flesh. Start on the neck; then you won't forget and overlook its needs. Slap and pat. Smooth up and down with flattened fingers. In the morning dash on cold water.

Practice carrying the head splendidly, always on the level, never thrown forward. The forward pose relaxes muscles and tissues.

A plump, short neck gets wider and fatter if the head droops forward. The thin neck gets thinner under the same condition because fibres have no work to do

The cure for neck troubles is found in a spirited body pose and such exercises as well assist the functions of glands, tissues, muscle and blood streams.

Stand erect, hand on hips. Tilt the head back slowly, forcing the under lip up over the upper one, pulling up the flesh of the chin until chin and neck are smooth and firm. Send the head back as far as it will go, then turn it slowly from side to side. There will be a pull on muscles way down on the chest and the shoulders. This pulling will make them strong and will stimulate circulation.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Woman Next Door Interferes With Home Buying

Dear Miss Fairfax,—

We're buying our own home, as is, unfortunately, our next-door neighbor. I'll not go into this neighbor's past or present. Suffice to say that my husband and I were happily married until she began making excuses to invite him over. She's married and has a mysterious "gentleman friend" who calls when her husband is out. I wouldn't like to lose the payments we made on our house, but anything would be preferable to this nerve-wracking existence.

Home Body

You are confronted with two difficult alternatives. You would not, of course, wish to give up the payments you have already made on the house, unless you have some sort of arrangement which would entitle you to rent the house and move elsewhere. And while it's childish to have an outright quarrel with a neighbor, the next best thing you can do is to completely break off relations with this person.

Your husband if he's a sensible man isn't going to get mixed up with a woman already provided with a husband and a "gentleman friend". That sort of thing is apt to prove to be expensive on all counts.

Husband's Family Are "Chatterbugs"

Dear Miss Fairfax,—

Reading an article of yours about mother-in-law has prompted me to write to you not only about my mother-in-law but also about her daughters, other daughters-in-law, nieces, and then some. My husband is a splendid fellow, 27 years of age, but he was so tangled up in his mother's apron-strings that he never had a chance to grow up.

He is in the army now, but will probably go overseas. Meanwhile the "chatterbugs' are all busy disposing of me. I'm never consulted about what I'm to do when my husband is away. If I take a job, it must be the job they want me to have. At first I confided my woes to a couple of sisters-in-laws but they made as much trouble as the others. If I didn't love my husband so much, I'd divorce him.

Repent

Wouldn't you be cutting off your nose to spite your face, to use a homely figure of speech, if you divorced your husband because his women folk are "chatterbugs"? The great lesson for you to learn is not to confide in any of them. Keep your own counsel. If you decide to work while your husband is away, you're certainly entitled to pick out our job. Meanwhile, put a padlock on your mouth. Be polite, but don't confide.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Wishes Church Wedding

Dear Miss Beeckman,—

My fiance and I are of no religious denomination which extends the right to be married in a church. We have, however, attended services in various churches. Now we are going to be married quite soon, and my wish has always been to be married in church.

Is there any possible way for me to have a church wedding? If so, will you please tell me how to go about it?

Katherine

I am sure, you can find a church which will gladly welcome you there to have your wedding. Most churches will do this, even though you and your fiance are not members, although many denominations will not permit this if either of you is divorced.

Choose one or two churches that have especially appealed to you, and then you and your mother or you and your mother and your fiance go to consult with the minister or the minister's assistant about the possibility of having your wedding in that church. Have no hesitation about this appeal to a church. You will find that in many churches the privilege of having the wedding there is not limited to members of the congregation.

Give Reason for Declining Invitation

Dear Miss Beeckman,—

Is it always necessary to give a reason why one is "regretting" an invitation?

Sally

When you are regretting a formal invitation it is not strictly necessary to give a reason for declining. However, many people make it their practice to give a reason. But when you write a note saying that you are unable to accept an informal invitation, it is courteous to give a reason for declining the invitation. Otherwise the note will sound ungracious. This is true too of a telephone invitation.

Black Dress Incorrect for Wedding

Dear Miss Beeckman,—

I would like to know if it is correct for a mother to wear a black dressy suit at her son's wedding.

A. L.

It is not considered good taste for either the bride's mother or the bridegroom's mother to wear a black dress at the wedding. The mothers, even though informally dressed, should choose a becoming color, not too vivid and not too sombre. The bridegroom's mother, since she is the woman guest of honor at the wedding, should be especially careful about abiding by the conventionally accepted attire.

HEALTH CHATS

By Dr. Herman N. Bundesen
President, Chicago Board of Health

Child's Habits Can Cause Crooked Teeth or Jaw

No mother need be urged to do everything possible to prevent deformity from developing in her child. She wants her child to be normal and attractive. Needless to say, she wants her child to have perfectly formed teeth and jaws. She knows that they are a valuable asset to health and appearance.

Malformed jaws may often be due to neglect. Such jaws cause a condition that is called "malocclusion" or malposition of the teeth, where in they cannot chew properly.

According to Dr. Claude R. Wood of Knoxville, Tenn., to keep malocclusion from developing, too early pulling out of the baby teeth should be avoided, particularly the second molars or grinding teeth. If some of these teeth are lost too early it causes the teeth to move out of their normal positions so that the second teeth are forced out of line.

There are instances in which the baby teeth do not fall out as soon as they should. Why this happens is not known. Undernormal conditions the roots of the baby teeth are absorbed and disappear so that the tooth falls out. When this does not happen the tooth may be retained in place too long and must then be pulled out. Failure to pull these teeth in children at the proper time may cause the second teeth to come in out of their normal position.

While thumb-sucking is blamed for more deformities of the teeth than it actually causes, there are other factors which may play a part in causing crooked teeth. Pushing the teeth forward with the tongue is one of these bad habits. Sleeping with the head pillowed on the arm may also cause abnormal conditions. Resting the chin on the hands, if followed for a long period of time by the young child, may cause a crooked jaw.

It has been shown that proper diet is necessary for normal development of the teeth and jaws, so to assure straight teeth and a normal bite the diet must contain all the necessary vitamins, minerals and other food parts.

When a tooth is missing, the space left by this tooth must be filled or maintained because the other teeth will drift out of position if the space is allowed to persist. For this purpose a device known as a "space maintainer" is employed until the tooth comes in to fill the space.

Another condition which may lead to bad bite is an abnormality of the frenum, which is the small band of tissue connecting the upper lip to the gum. Hence, when an abnormal condition is present it must be corrected by the dentist.

It is important for mothers to take their children to the dentist early so that conditions which may lead to malocclusion may be recognised and overcome.

WALLBRIDGE W.A.

The September meeting of Wallbridge L. A. was held at the home of Mrs. Chas. Fisher on Wednesday afternoon with a good attendance.

In the absence of the president, the meeting was presided over by the Vice President, Mrs. F. Shorey and was opened by singing and prayer. Letters of thanks were sent by Mrs. Barton Hinchliffe and Mrs. Frank Phillips for plants sent them while sick. Some bills were paid by the treasurer and some business matters discussed.

The W. M. S. meeting immediately followed and was opened by the president, Mrs. Elliott with singing hymn 380.

The theme for this month's meeting is "The Church in My Community" and everyone should do all he or she can do to help the church work. Mrs. Elliott gave a short reading along this line and Mrs. W. Badgley led in prayer. A discussion followed "What can we do to raise the standard of recreation for our boys and girls" and also "Where do our children get most of their religious education?" It was decided that the president call on the trustees of the school to ask if the pastor might give religious instruction in the school occasionally.

A Temperance reading was given by Mrs. E. Lane, proving from historical events of former years that soldiers endured great hardships, long desert marches and almost unparrelled transport difficulties with no alcoholic drinks of any kind and were able to endure much better than if they had had it. Beer creates thirst, water allays thirst.

In the South African conflict there were some drinkers but they fell out exhausted while the nondrinkers were able to continue on the march.

Collection was taken and the meeting closed with singing and prayer led by Mrs. W. Badgley.

Group of Children Raises $16 For B. W. V. Fund by Holding Rummage Sale And Concert

Picton —(Special)— A group of young children showed a commendable spirit when they staged a concert, rummage sale and draws in aid of the British War Victims' Fund. The sum of $16 was realized as a result of their efforts.

The event was held in the Gibson barn and the youngsters' performance won high praise from all attending. The program included songs, tap dances and a short play.

Many articles were sold in the rummage sale and lemonade added to the funds.

Draws were held on a rug donated by Miss Betty Johnson won by Mrs. Harry Emorey; cushion donated by Miss Christie Cameron, won by Miss Nora Rorke.

Those responsible for the event were Harold, Donna and Alice Gibson, Susan Darrell and Tony Cavers, Shirley Head, Athelia Gibson, Catherine Johnson, also Ilene Commery of Belleville.

Worthy Work

The wonderful work being done by the various War Emergency Committees throughout Prince Edward County is shown in the large bales of clothing and knitted goods being sent each month from headquarters in Picton. Not only is the work very fine but the quantity is also large, quotas always being filled despite other duties.

This week the August shipment was prepared and included were 105 quilts, 12 complete layettes each containing 35 items, 10 women's night gowns, 3 dressing gowns, 5 pairs women's slippers, 12 knitted dresses for children, 6 boys' suits, 8 children's dresses, 1 afghan, 8 little girls' dresses, 4 child's waists, 35 T-neck sweaters, 30 army sweaters, 5 scarves, 180 pairs of socks, 10 helmets, 20 pairs mitts, 20 pairs of gloves, 25 V-neck sweaters, 10 cardigans, 30 pairs knickers, 5 calots.

Picton, Sept. 10—Mrs. Ted Manlow and Miss Marguerite Dever were joint hostesses of an enjoyable miscellaneous shower for Miss Florence Sayers, bride-to-be on Friday evening.

Mrs. Frances Kelner is spending some time at her home in Picton after returning from Connecticut.

Mr. Don Losee who has been spending some time with his mother Mrs. Wm. Johnson at Northport is returning to his home in England.

Master Jim Storey leaves this week for Ottawa where he will enter St. Patricks School.

Tom Turpin is on leave at his home in Picton from Prince Rupert, B.C.

Mrs. Paul Wycott has returned to Prescott after a visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Wycott and family.

Stewart Wilson and Adrian Tuttle were among those returning from overseas this week.

Picton friends attended the funeral of Mrs. William Lyons at her home on the High Shore Road on Wednesday afternoon. Death had occurred on Sunday. The deceased who was in her eighty-third year was previous to her marriage Miss Ella Roblin. Mr. Perry Lyons is a son.

The Cooper family secured their sixth 'lunge on Sunday when Billy landed an eighteen pound one near Picton Manor.

Miss Donna Cooper has accepted a position in the local Hydro office.

75-Piece Chest Of Silver Stolen

Home of P. E. Doyle, Chatham St., Entered While Family Away

Buglars entered the home of P. E. Doyle, 66 Chatham Street, late Wednesday night and stole a 75-piece chest of silverware and an electric toaster during the absence of the family. The robbery was discovered by Mrs. Doyle when she returned home after spending the evening with friends. Police were notified and Constables Ellis and Thomson investigated.

Entrance was gained by means of removing a screen from a rear window and climbing into the kitchen. When Mrs. Doyle entered her home and switched on the living room lights she was welcomed with the sight of furniture being strewn about the rooms. Dresser drawers and the contents of drawers were literally strewn all about the dining and living room, as the marauders had thoroughly searched all rooms downstairs. The family radio had been disconnected, but apparently the burglars had been interrupted before they had an opportunity to steal the radio.

The 75-piece set of silverware was one of considerable value, as was the electric toaster missing. Police scoured the surrounding district but found no signs of suspicious characters.

Local O. E. S. Chapters To Complete Fund For Second Canteen

Eastern Star Chapters of this district have already raised sufficient funds for one mobile canteen for the bombed areas in Britain which has been presented by the Hon. Vincent Massey, and now have almost enough money collected for a second canteen. In order to raise the rest of the necessary amount, the two local Chapters, Belleville Chapter No. 55, and Minerva Chapter, No. 138, are undertaking a joint tag day this Saturday and hope to realize sufficient funds to complete the project for the district, the fund being closed the 19th. of September.

Under the leadership of Mrs. Arthur Nayler, convener of the Patriotic Committee of the district, the chapters have done a very outstanding work not only in arranging for two canteens but in every phase of patriotic endeavour for the men overseas. It is hoped that the Belleville public will display on Tag Day the same whole-hearted generosity as on former occasions.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolphus Roblin, Green Point, Honored by Family On 50th Wedding Anniversary

Picton (Special)—Mr. and Mrs. Adolphus Roblin celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding at their Green Point home on Monday. The event was marked by a family gathering, some 26 persons gathering to do honor to the esteemed couple on this auspicious occasion.

Dinner was served at a long table centred with a wedding cake, gold flowers and other decorations.

A pleasant social time was spent in visiting and music and many lovely gifts were presented to Mr. and Mrs. Roblin who also received many messages of congratulations.

Among out-of-town guests present were Mr. and Mrs. Ormond Roblin and family, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Roblin, Elmer Clarke all of Rochester; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Foster, Mrs. Foster and daughter of Moscow; Mrs. Hagerman, Foxboro; Mrs. R. H. Bogard and Mrs. Burgess, Woodstock; Miss Mabel Ruttan, Syracuse, A. B. Bogard, Deseronto, also Rev. and Mrs. Steers, Northport.

Mrs. Roblin was formerly Augusta Ruttan and she and Adolphus Roblin were married at Mount Carmel Church by Rev. W. Down, Sept. 7, 1892. Both are life-long residents of that community and descendants of pioneer families. Both are valued members of the United Church, Mr. Roblin serving on the Board and Mrs. Roblin assisting the various organizations. Their friendly and helpful acts have won them a host of friends who rejoice with them on passing a notable milestone in their lives.

Mr. Roblin has farmed all his life and though in good health at 76 is taking it easier; Mrs. Roblin, 75, has not been in the best of health but does all her own work. They have an only son, Ormond of Rochester.

TRAVEL RATIONING FOR CANADIANS IS CERTAINTY

Transit Controller Says Rationing Will Hurt Like Rubber Shortage

NO NEW FACILITIES

Chicago, Sept. 10. (CP)—Travel rationing for Canadians is a certainty, George S. Gray, Canadian Transit Controller, said Wednesday in an address to the American Transit Association.

"The travel honeymoon is over", Mr. Gray said. "Travel rationing is as sure as tea rationing and will hurt like the rubber shortage".

Mr. Gray outlined a Wartime Industrial Transit plan which will soon be applied to all workers in essential industry, determining the number of private cars to be permitted to be used for the transportation of workers not served by public facilities.

Further restrictions on taxicabs were also predicted by Mr. Gray.

"There is much still to be done but I have no fears that we will not be ready when the going gets tough', the Controller said in speaking of Canada's transportation problems as a whole.

"We now are working on the assumption that the facilities which we now have must see us through for the duration. If no more street cars or buses are to be built, our transit utilities will make the best of what they have".

8-Point Program To Boost Lumber Production

OTTAWA, Sept. 10 — (CP) — Canada's huge lumber and logging business was officially placed in the essential industry class today as the government outlined an eight-point program with the dual purpose of stepping up production to meet war needs and curtailing civilian use.

Announcing the new program, Munitions Minister Howe said Canada faces "the gravest timber shortage in her history." This was due to "enormous war demands from the United Nations" and to a drop in production this year compared with 1941.

Classification as an essential industry means that steps will be taken to see that lack of labor will not cripple the timber business.

In an accompanying statement, addressed to the Canadian lumber industry, Timber Controller A. S. Nicholson said the figure for exports to the United States was approximately double Canada's maximum efforts to that country in any previous year.

Situation Surveyed.

Surveying the lumber situation, Mr. Nicholson said in the Pacific coast region production recently had fallen from 180,000,000 feet a month to 140,000,000 or less. Log production in the first quarter of 1942 showed a drop of 102,000,000 feet and in the second quarter 142,000,000 feet "and is continuing to drop while the industry in this area is short approximately 3,400 men."

His survey gave this picture for timber regions across the Dominion:

Southern interior British Columbia: production holding up fairly well;

Northern British Columbia and Northern Alberta: production somewhat below normal as a result of labor shortage;

Northern Saskatchewan and Northern Manitoba: production somewhat below normal;

Ontario and Quebec: production somewhat below normal with stocks low; burst as I was too busy evading flak," said Ellans. Other crew members were Sgt. G. Gojocar of Regina, and PO. C. W. Woodward, of Toronto.

Taylor dropped bombs so close to a medium-sized vessel that some damage undoubtedly was caused. His crew included Sgt. Jim Banting of Richlea, Sask.

The only crew seeing an enemy night fighter was captained by PO. D. J. Urquhart, of Sydney, N.S., but the enemy kept at a distance. Members of this crew were PO. Johnny Thain of Sarnia, Ont., and Sgt. A. C. Gauthier of Toronto.

Russian infantry, mortarmen and machine-gun crews left more than 550 German and Rumanian dead strewed upon the sector west of Stalingrad in repulsing a series of attacks, the mid-day communique reported.

Nazis Turned Back at Mozdok

"Southwest of Stalingrad," it said, "our troops repulsed attacks by the enemy and inflicted heavy losses. In one sector alone eight German tanks were destroyed and about a company of enemy infantry was wiped out."

Russian troops were reported crowding lethally at the heels of Germans turned back in the Mozdok area of the central Caucasus, wiping out more than a regiment of infantry and 53 German tanks in three days of fighting.

Gains were recorded also west of Moscow.

deafened after fighting off Stuka bombers, massed tanks and infantry for 40 hours withdrew yesterday from two settlements in the western arc of Stalingrad's heavily-hammered defences.

Not Identified

(The settlements were not identified, but they apparently were among suburban villages clustered along the Stalingrad-Donskaya railway and Sarena Creek for eight miles from the western limits of the Volga River industrial centre.)

The midnight communique said that Germans and Rumanians striking down the Black Sea coast of the Caucasus, despite tremendous losses afield, "broke into the north-western outskirts" of Novorossisk.

"Our troops, by counter-attacks," it reported, "are holding back the advancing enemy."

Ground gunners immobilized five heavy Nazi tanks, killed several hundred men and dispersed two infantry battalions and Soviet fliers destroyed a motorised column as it approached defence positions in the region of the formed Red naval station, the Russians said.

Nazi Losses Stressed

German losses were stressed also in the 16-day-old battle of Stalingrad, where Field Marshal Fedor Von Bock concentrated 25 picked divisions of a 1,000,000-man army in an effort to sever Moscow's contact with the Caucasus and wreck war plants and communications along the lower Volga.

"Guardsmen of a rifle unit repelled a number of attacks, destroyed 10 German tanks and 14 guns and killed 300 officers and men," it was announced. "Large losses are being inflicted on the enemy's equipment by our tank men."

Seven German tanks and three companies of infantry were reported expended in vain attacks upon the southwestern defences.

Russian troops pressed counter-attacks against retreating German detachments in the Mozdok area of the Central Caucasus yesterday, the Government Information Bureau said.

One Red army formation destroyed three tanks and seven guns and killed 200 invaders.

Swear to Rout Nazis

A special communique said Soviet divisions and 25 brigades (which perhaps would equal another 12 divisions) had suffered "considerable losses" in the widespread fighting from May through Aug. 31.

Against this toll, however, declared that in the same period 73 enemy divisions—54 of them made up of Germans—were "completely routed," a phrase which was said to mean that more than 70 per cent of their effectives were annihilated.

"The time is not long ahead when the remainder of the Hitlerite divisions and those of his vassals will meet the same end," it was declared. "The Soviet people will give every German, Hungarian, Italian, Slovak and Finn who invaded Soviet lands a bullet and two yards of earth."

It was announced the comparison of losses was issued to refute a claim by the German High Command Monday that the invaders had destroyed 56 divisions and 39 brigades of the Red army in the four months.

Domestic Users of Hydro Power To be Asked to Curtail Consumption

Belleville users of electric power will be asked, with those of other Ontario centres, to curtail consumption for all purposes in the immediate future.

Weather conditions have precipitated a power shortage which has cut 100,000 horse power from war industry in the district south of Huntsville between Sarnia, Ottawa and Cornwall. The heaviest cut occurred on the Niagara Peninsula.

While no instructions have been received as yet regarding power restrictions here, officials of the Belleville Public Utilities stated today that the situation here is extremely serious.

Belleville, like the majority of other municipalities yesterday, struck the highest power consumption peak in the history of the city. The consumption increased ten per cent or 700 horse power over the same period of the month last year, and 300 horse power over the highest peak heretofore attained.

Dark weather, necessitating increased use of lights and appliances together with the stepped-up necessities of war industry is given as the reason for the high peak.

With reference to the proposed power restrictions, non-essential industries may find their power sharply cut.

All domestic users in the affected area, and that includes Belleville will be called upon to use electricity as sparingly as possible, and only for essential purposes only.

Dr. T. H. Hogg, Ontario Hydro chairman stated yesterday that it will be left to the various municipalities to decide on how best to accomplish the power savings.

"If we find that the voluntary system is not producing the necessary results we may have to abandon it in favor of restrictions which will involve penalties for breaches of this measure," he said.

Traffic Cases Feature County Police Court

Traffic cases featured Thursday morning's county police court held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd at the Court House when over a dozen cases were disposed of before the noon hour recess.

Pte. Martin Hicks, of the R.C.S., stationed at Kingston, pleaded guilty to the theft of a motor car and was remanded for sentence until tomorrow. "It might be an idea to ascertain if this young man is of any value to the service," suggested His Worship. Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., introduced Hicks' list of previous convictions which showed he had been sentenced for stealing a motor car in St. Louis, Mo., in 1938, and later deported to Canada.

Charge Reduced

"This man had a permit, but it wasn't with him," revealed Mr. Donnan, when Pte. Geo. Willshaw, of Peterborough, appeared on a charge of having no driver's permit. The charge was reduced to failing to produce and Willshaw paid $1.00 and costs.

Convicted of speeding under the War Measures Act, Junior Graham, Trenton; James Duesberry, and Clarence Poole of Belleville, all paid $17.50, including costs, before the court opened and therefore did not appear.

Other traffic cases included convictions registered against William Ruttan, Rednersville, who paid a total of $13 for failing to purchase a driver's permit, while Wellington McMurter, Trenton, paid a total of $12 upon being convicted on counts of driving with no lights and careless driving. Ralph G. Leeman, of Trenton, couldn't produce a chauffeur's licence while driving for gain and was fined $12.50 including costs and Alex Gordon, Eldorado, paid a fine for driving his truck with a load in excess to the Highway Traffic regulations, while Floyd Corsline, Deseronto, paid $5 and costs for failing to place flares on the highway while his truck was out of commission.

Twelve Persons Injured in Fire

Toronto, Sept. 10 (CP)—Twelve persons were injured and between $400,000 and $500,000 damage was done here last night when fire destroyed two hardware stores and warehouses in north central Toronto.

Street car traffic was immobilized while firemen fought the first three-alarm blaze this year in Toronto. Leaping flames attracted thousands of persons, complicating the job of checking the spread of the blaze, which swept through two three-storey buildings.

None of the 11 firemen overcome by smoke and burned in the spectacular fire, or the night watchman dragged from a smoke-filled building, had to be admitted to hospital.

The buildings destroyed were the White Hardware Company 1,228 Yonge Street and the adjoining North Hardware Company.

Medical Officer And Padre Established Red Cross Base

Featured in a recent dispatch from London, following the Dieppe raid were Capt. (Dr.) Wesley Clare, R.C.A.M.C. and Capt. Rev. John Foote, who remained with the boys who were wounded in order to minister to them. Capt. Clare had been hit in the forehead during the attack so the dispatch says, but he and Capt. Foote established a Red Cross base at the beach and proceeded to look after the wounded.

Capt. Foote was formerly minister of St Paul's Presbyterian Church at Port Hope and Capt. Clare's ancestry belongs to Hungerford Township, he being a nephew of the late Sheriff Clare of Hastings county and also of Mr. W. E. Gartley of 177 Pinnacle Street, this city.

Engage Small Parties of Axis Tanks

Cairo, Sept. 10 (AP) — British mobile columns and artillery engaged small parties of Axis tanks yesterday in the southern sector of the Egyptian desert front west of El Himeimat, headquarters announced today.

Activity Tuesday night was reported limited to general patrol work and artillery exchanges in the northern and central sectors.

"Air activity over the battle area was on a reduced scale," the communique said, "although our light bombers scored hits on lorries in the Sidi Barrani-Matruh road."

Long-range British fighters shot a Messerschmitt 109 into the Mediterranean and Malta fliers downed two Axis fighters over Sicily, it was announced.

REMANDED ON CHARGE

Cobourg, Ont., Sept. 10 (CP) — Wilfred Burley, of Castleton, Ont., was remanded when he appeared in police court here today on charge of damaging telephone lines.

Police said Burley fired a shotgun into a maze of telephone wires leading into the telephone office at Castleton and disrupted service for 17 hours.

PLUG CAUSES POWER SHORTAGE

Lowville, N.Y., Sept. 10 (AP)—The water was fine—for swimmin'—but not for generating electric power. Sheriff Albert Scholf, investigating a power shortage, discovered a plug had been inserted in a feeder pond by an 18-year-old to make the water deep enough for swimming.

NATIONWIDE GAS RATIONING IN U. S. UNDER PROPOSAL

35 M. P. H. Speed Limit And 5,000 Miles Yearly per Car Also Suggested

MUST SAVE RUBBER

Washington, Sept. 10 — (AP) — President Roosevelt said today he would put into effect "as rapidly as arrangements can be made" a set of recommendations from his special rubber committee which included nationwide gasoline rationing and drastic restrictions on civilian motoring.

He praised the committee's far-reaching report as excellent. He transmitted copies to Congress for its information.

The committee submitted its report to the president with a blunt declaration that there was no middle course in solving the rubber problem, that it was "discomfort or defeat."

In addition to recommending an expansion of the present synthetic rubber production program from an annual total now of 705,000 tons to a contemplated figure of 1,100,000 the committee proposed these additional steps:

1. That no speed above 35 miles an hour be permitted for passenger cars and trucks, so as to prolong the life of tires by nearly 40 per cent.

2. That the average annual mileage per car be held to approximately 5,000 miles, and this to be permitted only for "necessary driving."

3. That more rubber be released to the public through recapping old tires, or the issuance of new ones, so as to maintain fully necessary civilian driving.

4. That a new gasoline rationing sytem be devised to save tires, based on 5,000 miles a year of driving per car.

5. That "the restrictions as to gasoline be national in their application."

6. That compulsory periodic tire inspections be instituted.

7. That a voluntary tire conservative program be put into effect pending establishment of gas rationing, which the committe said was "the only way of saving rubber."

The committee, appointed August 6, consisted of Bernard M. Baruch, who was chairman of the War Industries Board in the last war; Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard University, and Dr. Karl F. Compton, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Coal Situation In U. K. Called Serious

Blaenavon, Wales, Sept. 10 (CP)—Fuel Minister Gwilym Lloyd George said in an address here today that Britain's position in regard to coal is serious.

"Either we are going to inflict hardship on our people, who must use less fuel this winter, or some of our war factories will have to close down," he said.

Sir Million Chinese Killed and Wounded In Two Years of War

London, Sept. 10 (CP) — China has lost about 6,000,000 in killed and wounded against Japan's 2,500,000 in five years of war, Dr. George Yeh, London Director of the Chinese Information Ministry, estimated today.

He put Chinese army strength now at roughly 13,000,000 men and said a twenty per cent bigger harvest than in 1941 had averted any food problem.

25 JAP WARSHIPS, TRANSPORTS SUNK WITHIN 5 MONTHS

300 and Possibly 500 Enemy Planes Destroyed, Review Indicates

FOE LOSSES DETAILED

Melbourne, Sept. 10 (CP) — Allied forces have definitely sunk 25 Japanese warships and transports and destroyed 300 enemy planes and perhaps 500 in less than five months, a review of communiques from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters showed today.

Forty-one additional warships and transports were damaged, and a total of 177 enemy planes severely damaged or "probably damaged," making the aerial toll 477.

The real total of enemy airplanes, it was believed, probably exceeds 500 planes since on many occasions when bombs were dropped on parked aircraft there was no means of determining the exact results.

Of the 300 aircraft definitely reported 202 were fighters, 60 bombers, 11 float planes, seven flying boats, and 11 unspecified types. They were destroyed either in combat, by anti-aircraft fire, or by bombing of enemy air bases.

Allied plane losses for the same period cannot be given with any degree of accuracy because many of the early communiques issued by the Southwest Pacific command, beginning April 21, did not give them. The highest Allied loss given in a single operation was 4 planes.

The tabulation since April 21st shows these Japanese shipping losses, exclusive of many landing barges destroyed and damaged.

SUNK:—3 cruisers, 1 aircraft carrier, 2 destroyers, 3 large submarines, 4 midget submarines, 12 transport or cargo ships. 25 total.

DAMAGED:—4 cruisers, 1 aircraft carrier, 3 destroyers, 2 submarines (damaged or destroyed), 3 tankers, 5 gunboats, 23 other vessels. 41 total.

4 Parliamentarians To Visit Chungking

New York, Sept. 10 (CP) — A 4-man delegation from the British Parliament will visit Chungking this Fall at the request of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek, BBC said today in a broadcast heard here by CBS.

The delegation will consist of two members from each House.

Says Japan Waits Outcome in Battle At Stalingrad

Chungking, Sept. 10 (AP) — An authoritative Chinese commentator said today that whether open conflict breaks out between Japan and Russia may depend upon the outcome at Stalingrad.

"Japan might move against Siberia if the Germans overcame Soviet resistance at Stalingrad," the commentator said, "but she might stay her hand if the Nazi drive collapses."

Japanese leaders are finding it difficult to decide upon their next move he added, but he predicted the estimated six divisions in Burma are more likely to be used against China than India.

"India can be ruled out at present," he said.

A high command communique was confined to the report of a clash in Hupeh Province in which, it said an attacking enemy force was "hurled back with severe losses" when it tried to drive southwestward along the Yangtze River toward Kuanyingchow.

Planter's Wife Tells of Her Escape From Japs in Malaya

A typical story of escape from the oncoming invading Japanese armies is told by Edna Percival, who describes herself as "an ordinary woman", appeared in the the Western Mail, Perth, Australia, and is reproduced here in condensed form.

I was an ordinary planter's wife living on the mainland not very far from Penang. We were lying off after lunch when the "boy" knocked at our door, "Letter, sir, urgent". It was the mobilisation order on December 1. My husband was an officer in the Volunteer Force. We hurriedly packed suitcases, and necessities and bundled the twins of two years old into the car and went to Taiping to report for duty.

I stayed at the Rest House and did not see my husband again. He was preparing the defence of the aerodrome, but after a few days Air Force people arrived, having been bombed out of Alor Star, and refugees from Thailand. One woman came in the middle of the night wearing nothing but a housecoat. She had actually escaped from the Japs on a Sikh policeman's bicycle. I gave her clothes and shoes, not knowing that I too would soon be in her plight myself.

The telephone ang in the middle of the night. One of the Air Force wives answered it. She came and whispered to me to pack up immediately and move south the Japs had crossed the hills by jungle tracks and were on the main road, only 30 miles away.

We packed by torchlight, amah crying, and by 3.30 the driver of my car was ready and we started toward Ipoh (I had a suitcase of tinned food and milk all ready) and all through the rest of the night we slowly crept along and arrived at Ipoh by morning. No panic, no news, so I went to the hotel, and had breakfast and was just trying to telephone my husband when bombs were dropped.

I ran to amah and the babes and we ran to the back garden near the garages. Here my driver was sleeping in the car. He pushed us in a near-by drain and I lay on top of my twins. Twenty-five aeroplanes came over in formation of five, flying very low and dropping bombs all around us—smoke was everywhere, fires were started, buildings shook, then the planes came around again very low and flew along the main road, machine-gunning the people.

We slowly crept along until we were under the shelter of a tree and not visible. Again they came around in another wave—pom, pom, pom, pom. This was the most terrifying experience of all. I was terrified and trembling—no planes of ours to defend us, none to go up! During the next lull my driver said, "Jump in the car and we will go into the rubber". I grabbed the babies and amah and dashed into the car, which was parked just near. Then, as we started, three Eurasions and five children ran up and said, "Please God, save us", and crowded in on top of amah, the twins and myself. We drove off and sat in the rubber a few miles away until we heard that the "All Clear" had gone.

We were advised to go south, so we decided to carry on through the night. We met convoys of troops, guns and lorries all heading north to the firing line. We had to move aside each time we met a convoy, and were challenged many times to show passports. The miles were endless, creeping on under the shade of the rubber. By morning we had not done more than sixty miles.

We drank coffee and I gave the twins tinned milk and whipped-up eggs in it. Two hundred miles to Kuala Lumpur. We carried on and then we saw cars from Perak (our own State) overtaking us. Friends I knew from our district passed us at top speed. Government officials, police—all heading south with their families. No one would stop, no one would tell me where they were going, so we too carried on as fast as our car would go.

Six o'clock, the sun going down, and we had no black-out light in the car—30 miles to go—and then a puncture. The driver was dead, and said, "Men, I can go no further", so we stopped at a wayside Chinese shop and amah explained our difficulties. The old owner said their daughter had just had a baby, and so we could not use their bed. We were too tired to object and amah and the babes and myself all slept on the bare boards with no sheets or pillows.

Next morning, as soon as the driver had changed the wheel, we were off and arrived in K.L. about 11 o'clock. We went to the evacuation office to find 100 or more European women and children all waiting some had slept on sofas, some on the floor. None had had food, babes were crying, older children screaming, and chaos everywhere. The poor evacuation officer was demented; he had not known Perak had evacuated and so was not prepared.

He had to find homes for more than 200 people at a moment's notice. After a wait of four hours I was eventually given a bed for the night and next morning pushed on to Serenban.

A few days later I was in the town shopping with a friend when the wail of the siren sounded. I asked my friend to drive me back to my babes and we were just passing the station when an A.R.P. warden said, "Take cover". Against all principles I refused and we carried on, and lucky we did as that very spot was hit by an incendiary bomb and the warehouse went up in flames.

We were told to push on to Singapore. My driver had run away, so I had to abandon my car and most of my belongings and we started on the mail train for Singapore. The evacuation was still voluntary, we were told, but everyone advised us to get to Singapore. After sitting up all night with a twin asleep in each arm, we arrived hungry and tired and dirty, five hours late. Then we were taken by bus to a large school where all the previous Penang and Kedah evacuees were living —300 of us one bathroom for women and children and across the other side one for men and boys.

Here I stayed five days. Every night there were two or three air-raid warnings and we all got up and went below the stairs or under the pillars. We heard the planes—we saw the planes it was so gloriously moonlight. We were crouching down silently and heard the bombs and then, crack on the roof. "Our own shrapnel from gunfire," said a voice. Then more bombs in the distance. "Thank God they have missed us!" Then someone screamed, "Look at the fire!" A petrol dump was on fire only a mile away and the flames were spreading. At four o'clock, when the next air raid began, the flames were just abating.

I next went to an avacuee hotel—an ex-Japanese hotel taken over by the Government. After ten days I got a passage for Australia. Evacuation was still not compulsory we were told, and so we had to pay our passages before the shipping company would take us. Eight of us in two-berth cabin, five children and three grown-ups. Others less lucky were given only mattresses on the deck.

We had to queue up for the children's food and help ourselves. The ship was a troopship and so had very few stewards. It was dirty, the black-out and no port holes open made it smell of human bodies and dirt. There were 2,000 on board, children and babies screaming, nerve racked mothers yelling at children but in spite of it all everyone tried their best.

Everyone grumbled, but realized it was all we could get and after the bombing and ordeal of the past weeks Australia seemed like heaven.

Calgary Tank Regiment Fought "Until Ammunition All Gone" Ross Munro Tells Calgarians

Calgary, Sept. 9 — (CP) — Relatives of men of the Calgary Tank Regiment of the Canadian Army Tank Brigade heard from Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, how the battle was fought on the beach of Dieppe "until the ammunition was all gone."

Before a crowd of 3,000, Mr. Munro, speaking from a flower-decked platform at Victoria Park, last night said the tankmen blasted their way "clean through" Dieppe.

"They put up a gallant and a fierce fight . . . and they fought on the bloody beach until their ammunition was all gone."

He mentioned numerous Calgary officers and men who took part in the raid, August 19, and he had high praise for the deeds of all. Some did not come back.

Mr. Munro was introduced by D. W. Clapperton, K. C., whose son, Lieut. Dave Clapperton, was one of the tank officers in the raid. Mayor Andrew Davison of Calgary was chairman.

Mr. Munro said the tanks went clean through Dieppe and emerged on the south side of the town, although he had not realised this until he was flying back to Canada after his return from the raid.

An air force officer had explained this to him, saying he almost mistook the tanks for enemy vehicles and attacked them. They were attacking the town's defenders from the rear.

District Represented

Relatives of the men came from Edmonton, Stettler, Drumheller, Red Deer, Olds and from many rural sections to hear Mr. Munro's eye-witness account of the Dieppe battle.

"The Calgary tanks came right up to the beach and it was really miraculous how the craft got so close in," he said. "The fire was tremendous there, and the whole place was lit up with a criss-cross of tracers."

He said the Germans had the beach fairly well covered, using some coastal guns captured in France. However, a considerable number of tanks were beached and the tanks started up.

"Some of the boys told me after, they were firing guns as they were going down the ramps, quite a feat, indeed."

He said there were a couple of tanks with the treads shot off and these were left stationary.

"They had considerable ammunition, and the infantrymen said they took out several pillboxes."

The meeting was sponsored by the Calgary Albertan and the Calgary Herald, members of The Canadian Press.

5 Million Pounds Of Meat Taken By Hunters Yearly

Equivalent to 10,000 Head of Steers on Hoof, Says Deputy Minister of Ontario

Toronto, Sept. 10 (CP)—Five million pounds of meat are taken annually by hunters in Ontario, according to an estimate by D. J. Taylor, Ontario Deputy Minister of Game and Fisheries, in considering the meat shortage situation.

"That is equivalent to 10,000 head of steers on the hoof", said Mr. Taylor as he pointed out that there should be no curtailment of hunting. "It certainly does help the meat shortage at the present time."

Mr. Taylor said that in the United States duck shooting had been extended to seventy days while in England they are encouraging the shooting of rabbits and game for food, and the Federal Government here has extended the season for shooting of migratory birds to 75 days.

No Reason to Cut Deer Season

"Taking their example there is no reason why we should cut down the different hunting seasons", he said.

In addition to the Pelee Island pheasant shoot which is to be held on October 28, 29, and 30 there will be an open season for pheasants in 70 regulated townships for three days, October 23, 24 and 28, Counties of Essex and Kent, three days October 29, 30 and 31; County of Lambton, one day, Oct. 31. The hours of shooting except on Pelee Island will be from 8 a.m. to 5.30 p.m. Daylight Saving Time.

Duck shooting opens in the northern zone Sept. 15 to Nov. 30 and in the southern zone October 1 to December 15.

MUNICIPALITIES ORDERED TO CUT DOWN HYDRO LOAD

No Power Will be Available for Non-Essential Purposes

100,000 H.P. ELIMINATED

Toronto, Sept. 10 —(CP)— A request that the municipalities under an emergency order cut down the Hydro load for non-essential purposes was issued yesterday by Dr. T. H. Hogg, chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, after a power shortage which eliminated 100,000 horsepower from Southern Ontario war plants Tuesday and yesterday.

For the first time since the start of war, power requirements for industrial purposes have not been obtainable for periods longer than a few minutes, although an occasional breakdown has temporarily crippled war industries. The trouble was not due to a power shortage, officials said.

Stressing the seriousness of the situation, Dr. Hogg said the power controller's word of restrictions of power would mean the Ontario Commission would have to reduce its load by some 200,000 horsepower during the winter months.

700,000 H. P. Added

Dr. Hogg said approximately 700,000 horsepower have been added to the Commission's resources since the start of the war.

Ontario will have to find ways and means of saving 200,000 horsepower in addition to the saving which will go into effect Sept. 20, Dr. Hogg announced.

Dr. Hogg warned that if voluntary cooperation failed to achieve the desired results, retrictive measures might have to be applied, including provisions for penalties.

"Any situation which affects the power load for war industries is very serious," said Dr. Hogg. "The power controller's order restricting the use of power for non-essential purposes comes into effect Sept. 20 and these emergency measures are designed to help out now . . ."

All New H.P. Absorbed

Approximately 700,000 horsepower have been added to the commission's resources since the beginning of the war, but all of it has been absorbed by the rapid development of war industries, public transportation systems and other consumers.

"We are asking the municipalities in southern Ontario to request the co-operation of their consumers," said Dr. Hogg. "It is left to them to decide on how best to accomplish savings in the use of electrical energy. But if we find that the voluntary system is not producing the necessary results, we may have to abandon it in favor of restrictions which will involve penalties for breaches of these measures."

Dr. Hogg intimated that factories in the non-essential categories may find their power load cut sharply. He said the public use of power could not be curtailed and it was virtually impossible to put a quota system into effect.

Unusual weather conditions precipitated a power shortage anticipated later this month. The area affected by the shortage is south of Huntsville between Sarnia, Ottawa and Cornwall and the heaviest cut occurred in the Niagara Peninsula.

Dr. Hogg said when the Dominion Power Controller's order becomes effective it will limit and restrict the use of electricity for certain non-essential purposes. The seasonal load growth during the first of September has been greater than expected and shortages are developing which were not expected until later in the month.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating liver and onions in pop's honor and ma said, William, I haven't asked you to play bridge for a week, so when I tell you that the Hewses expect us around there for a few rubbers this evening, I know you cant have a single valid objection.

I'm all ready to be led to the slawter, my dear, but just the same I feel it is my duty to warn you, pop said, and ma said, Warn me of what for land sakes?

Of the possible consequences, pop said. I've been feeling very nervous and skittish about bridge ever since I read the other day that Hitler's Napoleonic complex has been traced directly to bridge, he said, and ma said, Now where did you read any such nonsensical drivel as that preposterous nonsense?

That's neither here nor there suffice it to say I saw it in black and white, pop said. It happened in the days when Hitler was still a house painter. He used to see the other house painters sit down to a quick rubber of bridge whenever the foreman's back was turned, so Hitler, always a prize chiseler, took up the game himself. Then followed the daily procedure, familiar to all bridge players, of sitting hour after hour suffering —under the delusion that his partner was making a mistake in every bid and in at least 3 out of every four plays. In a short time this delusion had spread to every other aspect of life until he came to believe that nobody in all Germany excepting himself could do anything correctly, culminating in the fatal morning when Hitler woke up biting his blankets and howling that he alone knew all the answers and he alone could make the world safe for Germany. Well my dear, every time I play bridge I feel that same delusion of superiority taking deeper hold of me. Are you willing to risk the possible consequences? pop said.

Ma claiming she was, the result being they went around to the Hewses with pop still feeling against it.

German Film Version Of Dieppe Raid Panned By Lisbon Paper Critic

Lisbon, Sept. 10 —(AP)—Neither the scenes nor the commentary of the German propaganda film, "How We Dealt With the British at Dieppe," impressed a single movie critic in this Portuguese capital, one of whom called it "poor show which cannot convince even those who know little about movies."

Many residents of Lisbon had been invited by the Nazi legation to the premier showing Tuesday night.

"In my opinion," summed up Augusto Fraga, one of Lisbon's leading movie critics, "at least their cameramen were taken by surprise and unable to produce one of their first class newsreels.

"In order to produce this film they had to bring in a lot of clever studio work and make-ups which no longer pass unnoticed by movie fans."

The narrative was particularly unconvincing to Fraga who compared a picture of a British tank captured in a street fight in the heart of Dieppe and the script which said, "all their tanks never passed the beach defences . . . the majority fell in the water."

"The only real things actually shown," he said, "were British prisoners being marched in the streets—some in underwear—and the tremendous destruction the raiders did until their re-embarkation . . .

He described as the most impressive scene "the gloomy sight of scores of men—probably hundreds —who fell dead on barbed wire fences."

"The commentator did not explain how they were killed," he added, "but the general impression was that the barbed wire carried a strong electric current because some were holding the wires tight with both hands."

Germans Drive Closer To Stalingrad

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Berlin's claim that the Nazis have taken dominating heights west of Stalingrad is undenied from Moscow and has ominous implications. It indicates that Nazi forces have driven to within five to seven miles of the centre of the city and that no natural barriers now block their road.

Available topographical maps of the Stalingrad area show three dominating heights within that distance due west of the river bank city. They crown a rocky upland, the Studuno-Yablonocki hills, which in German hands means a downhill fire for even field guns into the heart of the city. Twin highways lead through them to Stalingrad from the west and northwest; and the whole hill mass is within the perimeter of the belt line interconnecting all four railroads converging on the city.

Those hills, and a trio of 600-foot peaks that dominate them, unquestionably were the key to Stalingrad's defence system. They provided the only formidable natural barriers to invaders approaching directly from the west. It was primarily to evade a costly frontal attack on that strongest segment of the Stalingrad defence line that Nazi commanders first sought to seize it by a pincer movement from the northwest and southwest simultaneously.

Foe Pays Heavily.

It follows that if the hill bastion west of the city has been lost, there is only a meagre chance that the Russians can prevent a breakthrough into the city itself that might cut its defence forces in half in the centre. It also follows, however, that the foe probably has paid more heavily for an advance by frontal attack in that sector than he has at any other point, tremendous as has been the blood cost to Hitler for every foot gained.

The fact that his generals were driven to that frontal attack from the west when Russian die-hard resistance foiled their north-south squeeze effort is strong evidence that the time loss at Stalingrad is driving Hitler to desperate measures. He could not risk further delay. By every indication he is buying time with blood, German blood and that of his Rumanian and Italian allies.

This blood cost bids fair to outweigh the strategic values Hitler can gain immediately from the city's capture. His troops were already on the Volga both above and below the city, according to German claims. His planes were blasting at Russian transportation along the river from the Caspain and the Baku oil fields. Possession of Stalingrad could not do much more to interrupt that river traffic.

The city is not a bridgehead for pushing the attack eastward, beyond the Volga. Its fall would add little to the perils of Astrakan at the mouth of the Volga. The Volga Delta below Stalingrad on both sides still is a formidabe barrier to a Nazi sweep southward down the river.

Halt for Winter.

Stalingrad's fall could not greatly increase the Nazi threat to the Baku oil field. It is already virtually cut off, dependent upon its own defence resources and the Caucasus range, but with a newly created British Army in Persia and Iraq ready to go to its aid. Then why the German frontal attacks, regardless of losses to finish off the Volga River city quickly?

It has been said repeatedly by Berlin commentators that once he reached the Lower Volga as well as the Don line, Hitler would order a halt for the winter on that front. The implication is that he planned shifting his main attack forces swiftly to some other front.

It could be southward into the Central Caucasu, where the Nazi prong driven down the Rostov-Baku railway seems dangerously narrow for its length. At this distance however, it seems more logical that Hitler expected to reach the Don-Volga line weeks ago and then throw his attack strength northward against Moscow or even Leningrad.

If that is true, Stalingrad is proving a Russian Verdun in the time sense if no other. It has already upset the Hitler schedule as badly as the French stand at Verdun, a glorious page in French history, upset the Kaiser's conquest dream in the first Great War.

JAPANESE GAIN

The brief announcement disclosing the Japanese advance said the invaders had successfully outflanked Australian positions at Myola on the north side of the towering Owen Stanley range, pushed through a pass and again outflanked defences at Efogi on the southern side of the summit, 12 miles nearer Port Moresby.

Japs Travel 16 Miles

The invaders thus have traversed approximately 16 miles since they launched their push from Kokoda several days ago and now are considerably more than halfway across the 120-mile-wide arm of south-eastern New Guinea.

The gap through which the Japanese fought their way across the summit of the Owen Stanley Range is about 8,000 feet above sea level, while the elevation of Efogi is about 4,600 feet.

This means the invaders have conquered the most formidable portion of the mountain barrier barring their way to Port Moresby. They still must cross several ridges, none of which is less than 2,640 feet above the sea.

Three-quarters of a mile beyond Efogi is the head of a road which winds downward through the mountains for 25 or 30 miles before reaching the comparatively level ground immediately north of Port Moresby.

Port Moresby, lying only 325 miles from the northeast tip of Australia, is regarded as a vital link in the defences of this continent. Should it fall to the Japanese they would be in possession of an important base from which to bomb Australia and a potential jumping-off place from which to launch an outright invasion attempt.

Australian troops defending the approaches to Port Moresby are under the command of Lt.-Gen. S. F. Rowell, former deputy chief of the Australian General Staff.
